The REAL War Is Against Humanity

10/24/01—#1 (15-069)

RE: "WAR" ON HUMANITY, NOT TERROR! NOW THAT YOU HAVE BEEN TOLD WHO, HOW, WHAT, WHY AND WHERE EVEN WITH AN INKLING OF WHEN—WHAT ARE YOU GOING TO DO WHILE THE WORLD ECONOMY IS IN THE PITS AND YOU ARE NOW DYING OF ANTIBIOTIC-RESISTANT MICROBES (MAN MADE)?

ROTTEN AND HOPELESS COMMENTS?

Hatonn—No, it is simply a fact, readers, that you can beat a dog into the ground and know the "scoop". HOWEVER, THE BIG QUESTION IS: WHAT IS THE TREATMENT AND CURE (AND AVAILABILITY OF SAME) FOR YOU, YOU AND ALL THE OTHER YOUZE?

Oh, the bounders know the answers and you note that they deny that which you need to attend yourselves—deliberately, criminally and with full manipulation and control. They just go bomb into oblivion a target they have created and now murder. But, along with those murdered "victims", YOU ARE ALSO ON THE LIST. And, while the drug/chemical companies argue over who gets the loot—YOU ARE LEFT OPEN TO PERISH.

I can admire the truth-bringers or even the truth repeaters—but how are you going to "fix" this mess, pilgrims?

Oh, you expect God or Aton to do it FOR YOU? Well, the facts are that we have been given the way, the program, the product and the solutions. I consider THOSE a rather big GIFT for mankind.

YOU MUST HAVE WORKABLE PROGRAMS BACKED BY THAT WHICH IS UNDISPUTED IN SOLUTION-PHYSICAL HARDWARE. "SOFTWARE" WILL NOT CUT THIS PHYSICALLY MANIFESTED PROBLEM IN "YOUR WORLD" ENVIRONMENT. BUT WE CAN BEAT, DRAG, PUSH OR SHOVE THE HORSE'S HEAD BENEATH THE WATER—BUT WE "SHALL NOT" MAKE HIM DRINK. THAT IS THE PROBLEM "YOU" MUST HANDLE. AND YES, I'M SURE THAT THE DEADNIKS HAVE PRESENTED OTHERWISE, AS IN "PRAY AND GOD WILL FIX IT". NOBODY USES WHAT GOD SENDS FORTH IN RESPONSE—EXCEPT TO HAVE FURTHER AND BIGGER GRAFT AND CORRUPTION IF AT ALL POSSIBLE.

What happens is that YOU want somebody else to have to face the courts and puppet-masters while you protect your assets. You will even point your finger and even give incorrect information to cover selves. This is "human", chelas, but not very pleasant for the "victim" of the finger-pointing when deliberate and intentional criminal acts were taken to "set up" the chosen "fall guy". You see it right now on a global scale while the bankers back home make five times more on the demolition of those Trade Centers, at their own hands, than they ever invested to build the thing. The builder, in fact, RIGHT NOW TODAY is fighting to cause the building to be considered as two separate structures (although it is only one with two wing-towers)—IN ORDER TO GET PAID DOUBLE IN INSURANCE PAYOUT. That will eventually be charged off and paid by YOU-THE-PEOPLE in a major bailout of Insurance companies—the second largest scam on the people.

Oh indeed the Feds and FED can do it. It COSTS NOTHING save running the presses, for the value of the currency is BASED ON ABSOLUTELY NOTHING and what you-the-people pay is only a collection of the Bankers' Banks—NOT TO RUN YOUR COUNTRY.

And yes indeed, it is both gripping and fun to run and re-run and chatter and act shocked and deceived as realization strikes in interruption of this or that activity—but what is solved by rehashing the truth when our time might well be spent, at least a part of it, IN CONFIRMATIONS AND SOLUTIONS?

I cannot recommend strongly enough the works and presentations of the authors who have spoken right out, Eustace Mullins, Rodney Stich, Dr. Horowitz, Phillips-O'Brien, Icke, and on and on. But they don't hold the ANSWER as to WHAT TO DO OR HOW TO DO IT.

YES, INDEED, YOU MUST KNOW HOW THIS CAME ABOUT AND RECOGNIZE THE TRUTH FROM THE LIES—BUT TO CHANGE THINGS, READERS, YOU HAVE TO HAVE SOLUTIONS AND CAPABILITY OF RECOVERY. WAR ONLY SERVES THE MANIPULATORS AND NEW WORLD GLOBAL ORDER OF YES, THAT WHICH WAS CALLED BASICALLY IN YOUR TIME, THE ILLUMINATI HIERARCHY.

So, the background had to be revealed and told and yes we did it in thousands upon thousands of pages and talks and more authors pouring it on again and again—proving the facts laid forth so that it is no longer secret except to a few manipulated pods of relatively DISINTERESTED people just trying to continue to do whatever feels good to them at any expense of a brother.

And no, don't tell me that "knowing" is enough and somehow it will set you free if it perchance borders on, or IS, Truth. Just as a DNA readout to tell you who to call Mom or Pop might be good to know—what difference does it REALLY make in your singular position?

And now "yes", we do have to be very careful in the human arena that our own projects aren't usurped to make some people rich beyond accounting and others take the load. Sorry to the "angry young men" (and women)—GOD DOES NOT PLAY THOSE GAMES. In addition, when you get totally out of sorts with God and claim Him to be your personal ENEMY, it is not very wise, for those choices are very definitely YOUR OWN. Our efforts are for MANKIND and not to allow for individuals who happen to serve to gold-plate their Mercedes. And yes indeed, the testing of the mettle of individuals is put through fire and then the ice so that we KNOW with what and with whom we have to work.

This does not mean that rewards and returns in kind and in great abundance will not be forthcoming. That return is ASSURED, for when we open the doors, it is done. And yes we will weep over those who chose against us, but that is life and living in a Free-Will global dimension. It is never TOO LATE with God—but it often gets to be too late for revision with your fellowman. Especially if you have worked to damage or destroy him and deprive him of his own assets, property and very life.

I find it quite amusing that when we offer a number for someone or entity in the Philippines or elsewhere for you readers, that number receives repeated negative (and anonymous) calls, faxes, e-mails, etc. It is fine, for EVERY contact is worthy of bearing a message which says: "Important, take note...". We do NOT hide, we are in everyone's face—and it's all on the table for anyone to see and/or use. Our agreements are not bent nor broken. They remain the same and the fundamental plan is always THE SAME. We can negotiate "times", deliveries, and circumstances—not the PLAN as laid forth. If there is graft or corruption involved, IT IS NOT AND WILL NOT BE FROM COMPROMISE TO OUR PROGRAM.

We are apolitical and, therefore, if there are political payoffs, it will NOT BE FROM ANY COMPROMISE ON OUR PART. We have no way or inclination to run anyone's business or program. Our documents state it clearly and succinctly—AND PROTECT THOSE OTHER PARTIES IN SECURITY AND BACKUP, FOR WE LEAVE OUR PORTION IN SAID FUNDING BANK TO PROTECT THE TRANSACTION AND FOR NO OTHER REASON.

That asset can be "borrowed" against and when agreements are mature, then other negotiations are available. The joint venture ENDS with the original parties (project) at closure of banking arrangements suitably established and the joint venture agreements concluded.

We do not hold stock or interests in the projects themselves, unless we set forth additional agreements for some type of involvement separate and apart from anything up to that point.

Earned funds will first be poured back into the funding "nation" or joint-alliance members.

We reserve the right, when funds are cleared, to borrow some funds for our purposes elsewhere but that is not up for discussion at this time for it is purely hypothetical in fact and speculation.

We will obviously need funds to offer some products on the open market—and since that is now disallowed in the United States, then the obvious will be to structure such "industrial" production elsewhere. Someone should, at the least, check out Native Americans, Canadians, etc. Remember the nasty old invaders into the United States almost wiped out the Native population with "just" smallpox.

This is basically where "A pox upon your house/people" came to be—from the curse of curses against an enemy—and YOU citizens ARE THE ENEMY OF THE GLOBAL MASTERS.

I would imagine that even Silver Colloid could be considered simply an "Old Native natural tonic" when structured properly. And yes indeed, indeed, there are some of those Native American Sovereign spots right in and around Las Vegas and other points scattered hither and yon where it would be quite LEGAL, even in the eyes of the FDA regulators, to have legal, honorable and safe shipping. Yes, WE DO know some of those people who could do this and no, it isn't Little Crow, although he is by far our closest friend and colleague.

Jack, please have a conference with Ron, for we don't want any more problems with raids in the warehouse but need a place, obviously, for books, etc. There is a very nice area AS A RESERVATION site right in Las Vegas and, as you grow, you could certainly use that kind of a relationship, location and offer jobs. I'm confident Carlos would do well, teach the routines well and, even starting with a smaller place, could easily grow while you are still small from the raids and closures. Just something to seriously consider. If you don't have creative ideas, family, and act on them, we will sit in "want" for a long time. Remember that our only stand and goal is total transparency—and we gain that by using our creative heads to prosper. I suggest that probably you would find a real break in costs, for most things could be handled out of a "house" environment approved by the tribe counsel. THIS IS WHERE WE ARE HEADED AND LO AND BEHOLD, THERE ARE OTHER TRIBAL AREAS AROUND, HANDY, AND NEEDING SOME JOBS.

Those Natives excel in silver jewelry and forging of same for all sorts of purposes including turquoise ornament mountings. If you are denied participation, fine, go somewhere else, for there are some very nice casinos on some of those sovereign lands where people would surely enjoy some occupation—right out of the casino as a matter of fact, where they could set up their own little "Nature" shop. Before the criminals get through with you, there will be need of those colloids right up through the full spectrum (pun intended). If you do your business right—where you can open as in a sort of "franchise" arrangement—they will honor their agreements and pay the agreed upon "royalties". It is the U.S. Government that has no honor or integrity. Handle it like a business and then make sure you have input on product. It needs to be a "business" and not a scatter-to-the-winds game of some sort—THIS IS SERIOUS TIME AND IT IS TIME THE NATIVE TRIBES RECOGNIZE THE SERIOUSNESS OF THEIR, AND YOUR, PLIGHT.

A LOT OF PEOPLE ARE GOING TO BE DEAD FROM THIS ATROCITY BEING FOISTED OFF ON YOU UNCONSCIOUS PEOPLE. AND YES, GOD ALWAYS OFFERS "A WAY" AND "A PATH"—YOU HAVE TO WALK IT. But do not hop, skip and jump your way down the yellow brick road to Wonderland.

Teri is representing some equipment that will also be made unavailable as soon as the Big Boys can figure a way to accomplish it. We need to get some of those ideas, ASAP, into security in ability to use—offshore where the laws do not kill the citizens. I know this is hard for you to fathom, but it has come to pass. You will be able to grow and prosper during this time of insanity—but you have to stay "free" and go where you are not restricted. I cherish each of you and you will both prosper and achieve. KNOW IT! BUT, you have to use the lessons, shelters and information we have offered so freely that you are staggered and turn away just to breathe from the overload. Mentally sort and discuss the assets and move immediately to meet the challenges. This in no way suggests, even, that any move locations. You can use all locations without moving a foot in either direction from the telephone.

Am I suggesting anything? Quite frankly, YES. I can't imagine that you fail to use the very security blankets provided right in the Nevada Corporate Laws and the Sovereign positive protection of Native America. And yes, get a resource developed and we will, by then, be having returns enough to advertise our own special and blessed "outlets".

We will be very wise to move our business (of the paper) to Native American Sovereign Territory while leaving our incorporation in Nevada—until and in addition to, the new incorporation opportunities in the United States of Native America. In the Philippines those tribal areas are referred to quite appropriately as “Indigenous”.

Am I suggesting you go global from your little spot somewhere in or near Las Vegas? No, I am suggesting you get a new address, not even a new phone number. Surely you can find a Native American who would want to rent you space. Indeed Ron knows several persons who can at least “pull Native strings” and surely so could Little Crow, especially in Henderson.

Do you want to stay ALIVE or perish with the new microbes tampered to destroy on contact?

You are never helpless unless you choose to be. I salute (Salu) you who do not choose to be. Perhaps in the meanwhile some of those phony and false Native Americans will also have to give up the sham. It is time for change in all people—lest you go down in a final act of terror far greater than the World Trade Center.

If you can begin to shift your own addresses and begin to assist in the Brother’s efforts for banking establishments, we can move on through here as the true (united) States of America under that Constitution which was also STOLEN from the Native American Councils.

ADAM DRIVE PROPERTY

Now, some of you have asked what you can do about that 21512 Adam Drive house going up, AGAIN, for auction, especially since there has been no return recognition from legal counsel or requested action apparently taken.

There is something terribly wrong with the numbers, tax claims, etc., as presented—in other words, collusion.

I ask that the Public Notice instruction portion as to phones and e-mail contact information be run in THIS ISSUE OF THE PAPER, ALONG WITH THE SPECIFIC ITEM LISTING OF THE ADAM DRIVE PROPERTY, UNDER MILLER’S NAME.

THEN I ASK THAT EVERYONE WITH ACCESS TO WIRE, PHONE AND/OR E-MAIL SEND YOUR OBJECTIONS [MM: or visit their office in person] TO THIS MISCARRIAGE OF JUSTICE. THE ACTIVITIES ARE A CONSPIRACY SET FORTH TO “CLEAR A VERY CLOUDED TITLE” AND THIS IS JUST ONE MORE INSTANCE OF COLLUSION TO DEFRAUD YOU-THE-PEOPLE AND STEAL YOUR PROPERTIES.

THIS IS A SHAM WAY TO CLEAR THE TITLE, UNDER THE GUISE OF TAX-SEIZURE PROCEEDINGS, AND UNLESS YOU-THE-PEOPLE FROM ANYWHERE AND EVERYWHERE, MAKE A STATEMENT, THESE THINGS WILL CONTINUE UNTIL ALL OF YOU HAVE NOTHING LEFT TO HOLD OR HAVE.

You continually ask “what can I do, I’m just a nobody...”. No, YOU are a somebody and everyone who can—be on that scene on auction day as well—objecting.

You can’t know how many others on the list are working in the same conspiracy scheme—but you can know about the Adam Drive property—because it is a big theft from Ekkers, and every reader of CONTACT should, by now, know Ekkers and that they are in Manila, Philippines without privilege of being available to protect selves from anyone. The SPECTRUM GROUPIE set this up and now you have another attack. Yes indeed, I DO ASK THAT “YOU”, WRITE, WIRE, CALL AND E-MAIL OBJECTIONS. DEMAND THAT MILLERS PAY THOSE OUTSTANDING TAXES AND THAT HOUSE BE RETAINED AS IS UNTIL PROPER LEGAL PROCEDURES CAN BE BROUGHT FORTH. THANK YOU.

NO CERTIFIED NOTICES OF ANY PROBLEMS WITH TAXES AND ONE OF THE LOCAL CORPORATIONS, AUTHORIZED TO DO BUSINESS IN CALIFORNIA, IS A REGISTERED OWNER OF A FIRST MORTGAGE ON THE PROPERTY, SO THIS IS EVIDENT FRAUDULENT CONSPIRACY. The Notice is found in the issue of October 10 of the Tehachapi News on page C3.

I further ask that friends of Ekkers have the information immediately by E-MAIL or Fax so that contacts will be appropriately timely. The auction is scheduled for November 5th next.

You want to do something to share in the recovery of your own space on planet Earth? Then here is where you start, or continue, to make the most impact—right in your own circle of people, location and in behalf of a Brother who cannot help self.

STOP READING AND GO DO THIS “NOW”, PLEASE. YOU CAN CHEW IT AT LEISURE. IT IS TIME SOMEBODY BEGINS TO PUT A STOP TO THESE INCREDIBLE ACTIONS WHICH ARE SOMEHOW SUMMED UP LATER AS “NOTHING PERSONAL BUT JUST GOOD BUSINESS”. LET THE MISCREANTS KNOW THAT THEY ARE BEING WATCHED AT EVERY THING AND EVERY GAME THEY PLAY AND COMMIT.

Under no legal circumstances could the taxes in arrears be more than $6,000 maximum. In addition, that property, with a title so clouded by other interested parties that the holder listed in this notice, was recently (within the last month to six weeks) advertised for sale by local realtors at something near $100,000 in excess of prior assessments, along with incorrect information regarding the dwelling itself.

[QUOTING COPY, The TEHACHAPI NEWS, Wednesday, October 10, 2001. PUBLIC NOTICES, pg. C3:]

NOTICE OF PUBLIC AUCTION ON November 5, 2001 to November 7, 2001, OF TAX DEFAULTED PROPERTY FOR DELINQUENT TAXES.

On August 21, 2001, I, Phil Franey, Kern County Treasurer-Tax Collector, was directed by Kern County Board of Supervisors Resolution #2001-324 to conduct a public auction sale in accordance with the provisions of Division 1, Part 6, Chapter 7 of the California Revenue and Taxation Code. The tax-defaulted properties listed below are subject to the Treasurer-Tax collector’s power of sale.

This is public notice that I will sell the properties beginning at 6:00 P.M.P.S.T. on November 5, 2001 on our Website at www.kcttc.com.

The sale will be conducted as a public auction to the highest bidder for cash in lawful money of the United States or negotiable paper, for not less than the minimum bid as shown in this notice. Any parcel remaining unsold at the conclusion of the auction may be resold within a 90-day period.

Properties that are redeemed (paid) in full by 5:00 P.M.P.S.T., Monday, November 5, 2001, will not be sold. The right of redemption will cease at that time. Properties not redeemed will be sold.

If the properties are sold, parties of interest (as defined in California Revenue and Taxation Code Section 4675) have a right to file a claim with the county for any excess proceeds from the sale. Excess proceeds are the amount of the highest bid in excess of the liens and costs of the sale that are paid from the sale price. Notice will be given to parties of interest, pursuant to law, if excess proceeds result from the sale.

The following is a partial list, a complete list may be obtained by calling our internet advertiser, Bid4Assets.com toll-free at 1-877-427-7387 or by viewing the list at www.bid4assets.com.

The Assessor’s parcel number, when used to describe the property in this list, refers to the Assessor’s map book, the map page, the block on the map (if applicable) and the individual parcel on the map page or in the block. The Assessor’s maps and further explanation of the parcel numbering system are available in the Assessor’s office.

I declare under penalty of perjury, that the foregoing is true and correct.

Phil Franey

Kern County Treasurer-Tax Collector

Executed at Bakersfield, Kern County on October 10, 2001.

The properties that are the subject of this notice are situated in Kern County, California and are described as follows.

[We will only list the one:]

#40 290-150-01-00-2/125-031

21512 Adam Dr., Tehachapi

Last Assessee: Miller, Edward & Marilyn

[END OF QUOTING]

You can refer back to paragraph 5 and see what the game is here. Any excess will be picked up by the Millers. However, the notation regarding liens is the key phrase. There are liens against the property which have not been cleared and thus legally cloud the title of said property.

There is a lawsuit pending resulting from the major and massive thefts of property, damages, and unlawful seizure. These charges have all been given through counsel to Miller’s counsel and to which there has been no reply in some year and a half. There was an original claim of “abandonment” by the Ekkers and the rest is history. This was not so and in business damages and thefts alone, cannot be measured.

The suit was not filed in order to hopefully resolve the problems presented by these actions which were obviously approved knowingly by Mr. and Mrs. Miller at the time of the incidents noted.

At this writing Ekkers have not been able to reach counsel for discussion regarding this issue as to actions available. [MM: At press time, due to the diligent and greatly appreciated efforts of many, the Adam Drive property has been removed from the “auction block”!]

I believe I will close this now, my team here has to go and again struggle with the visa (immigration) extension people here and before tomorrow.

I’m sure you have plenty to think about and your survival is among the topics to be considered. I repeat: The physician spokesman in this Health disaster is talking the misery to be experienced as they find no treatment for these manmade and sent organisms. THIS IS YOUR LIFE, BROTHERS AND SISTERS.

YOU are cherished and beloved while as well, blessed by and unto God. God loves you “absolutely”—KNOW IT.

If YOU have “conditions”, I suggest you get them cleared-up NOW.

A Sign That Something Works: It Is Purposely Kept From Us

RE: POINTS FOR TODAY: ANTHRAX (DEATHS? OF), OTHER KILLERS, HOW DO YOU TEST? YOU CAN'T. NUCLEAR BOMBS AND LIES IN TALIBAN-WASHINGTON D.C./LONDON ALLIANCE, INTRODUCTION TO WET CELL APPLIANCES AND "PAPIMI" APPARATUS

MISSING BODIES

Hatonn—I suppose next will come "Alien Abductions Already" (AAA) or (the big "triple A") out of New York.

It has now circulated through the international press that, surely enough—TOTAL SECRECY is the name of the game out of Washington, D.C. and most of the 50 States of the U.S.—SO "YOU" WILL NOT KNOW WHAT "THEY" ARE DOING.

That is the name of the game even in Afghanistan, proud Americans, in what is happening in the WAR ZONES of "everywhere".

A landing gear off of a U.S. helicopter held by the Taliban is in TATTERS and the U.S. says "no sweat", viewers. The copter and people are fine but they "must have" struck "something" which knocked off the landing gear.

Struck something hard enough to knock off heavy-duty landing gear? People, are you nuts? Even striking a power wire will pull down a chopper but here you have a strike that just knocks off a full landing gear and the chopper goes on home to land, unload and resume fighting on its humanitarian missions? Oh well. Neither have you SEEN any such craft with such damage! Wake up, sleepyheads, winter is coming and the talking heads are promising you worse anthrax and any number of other plagues (all manmade) upon your house. This is for Thanksgiving and Christmas yet! So, Merry Christmas little elves and Satan Claws.

The people are coming out of Afghanistan with NOTHING, not even shoes. Afghanistan is NOT lovely Bali or Manila where it is ALWAYS at least 86 degrees minimum—in the deep shade. If this is not GENOCIDE, then someone tell me what other label the U.S./London give the atrocities which are yet SECRET?

Now consider this one: The Feds are talking about giving Diane 9 years and $250,000 X 3 counts, fines for distributing colloids which she neither made nor knew much about as products.

The FDA can't find any side-effects from anything, even in the literature except that silver salts (not relevant at all) "could" if taken over a very long time and in huge quantities MIGHT tinge the skin blue.

Diane held NO POSITION in the company at all other than simply "sort of" managing some of the distribution services of a little "aka" New Gaia.

So there you have it, readers. The major drug and chemical houses can put ANYTHING at all on the market, kill a bunch of people in the process until someone says "Oops, it's poison" and whammo, they change the name to protect the guilty and call it the only product effective against "you name it".

You are only NOW finding out that there are OTHER antibiotics open for use on JUST anthrax alone. Vibramycin is one and it has been around for nearly half a century.

Ah but: what of the people who have died right in the hospitals while being treated with this "drug" from Bayer? Obviously it is not working, is it? After all, those are the FIRST TWO!

Now the amazing scientists are finding something else in the "powder" carrying the anthrax but that at present IS A SECRET to "prevent panic".

Ah yes indeed, and millions of Christmas cards are due to very soon start hitting the mail routes along with all sorts of Christmas packages, even unto, yes, the troops over yon.

IT MUST GET WORSE, READERS, FOR 2001 ENDS ON DECEMBER 31ST NEXT.

REASON IN TESTING

The big claim that is also floating about Diane's head and neck is that there is no current proof of value and yet it is claimed a catalog (little brochure) "may" have indicated a claim of being a "cure" by gold colloids.

The fact is that gold was THE TREATMENT OF CHOICE, just prior to MERCURY USE, for Syphilis. Of course this was prior to 1938 when it simply went out of favor. It was considered, AFTER THAT, to not qualify as a "drug". However, NOW comes a "new" clause to keep you from having anything you need that WORKS, is a NEW classification as a "new drug" needing research, new studies, and "it doesn't work, anyway" they say.

OK, let us look forward to today where supposedly all OLD RESEARCH is unacceptable. HOW PERCHANCE IS A PARTY TO "TEST" NASTY MICROBES? WHERE ARE YOU GOING TO GET THEM TO TEST? ANYONE TODAY WHO WOULD HAVE ORDERED UP SOME ANTHRAX FOR TESTING OF SILVER-COLLOID WOULD BE UP FOR TERRORIST PROBABILITY. THIS HOLDS TRUE FOR ANY AND ALL OF THE CHOSEN "PLAGUE" MICROBES.

Doesn't anyone remember a short few years back some "patriot" near Las Vegas had bought something (perhaps even anthrax) from a major source approved and operated by the U.S. Government. Please also note that Osama bin Laden, (an old family friend of Bush) did get some (THEY REPORT) directly from laboratories also under the gaze of the FDA and CDC and it supposedly cost him $10,000.

But indeed, the picture that went with the story was the same one they have engraved into your mind.

THE MINUTE AN EFFORT IS MADE TO KEEP SOMETHING FROM YOU-THE-PEOPLE—"KNOW" THAT IT WORKS, CHELAS.

The big component of any metallic colloid by electric-mode of production IS THE POSITIVE IONIZATION of the solution itself.

Well, there are several small systems that can be utilized to produce that ionization directly to the body—IF THE PROPER ELEMENTS ARE IN THE BODY TO BEGIN. Over a long period of time it will work anyway, but not so effectively after the first parasitic "kill off".

There are now very expensive pieces of equipment which produce the same thing more rapidly and with exceptionally good REPORTED results—but will run around $50,000 and need, for meeting required regulations, a physician if the "clinic" is in a public-access place.

There is, actually, one of those machines here north of Manila but the machine is being recalled to the U.S. because the demand is greater in the U.S.—especially now.

Good business? Yes indeed, but $50,000 is outrageous as the concept is but a "Cayce-like device" dubbed the "wet cell appliance".

Can I offer you information? By the ton!

The first thing I suggest, however, E.J., is to connect Teri to George in Athens and if around Athens, track down the Hellenic inventor.

Also get Bob J. on the deck as soon as we can, along with participation in the loop of New Zealand's Lester.

It is perfectly legal to make this apparatus and use same IF YOU DON'T CLAIM ANYTHING AT ALL. You can even use testimonials of people (CLIENTS, NOT PATIENTS) that is...! You do not in any way encroach on anything related to the medical profession OR which would conjure "medical treatment without a license"—or in any way an alternative to DRUG-COMPANY products. THIS IS THE FIRST RULE OF INTELLIGENT WISDOM!

Yes, E.J. is having to fend off the parties here in Manila wanting to make Silver [colloid] and some reports are coming from ones in Greece, with self-fabricated apparatus.

MY INPUT IS THAT TO BE OUTSIDE ALL PROBLEMS OF REGULATIONS IN FACT, IS TO USE INTELLIGENCE AND FOR PUBLIC PRESENCE AT THE LEAST, USE ONLY "GOOD" DISTILLED WATER FOR THE SOLUTION BASE. (I DON'T PARTICULARLY CARE BECAUSE SILVER SALTS ARE NOT DETRIMENTAL AND AT THE VERY WORST MIGHT CONJURE "BLUE" TINGES ON THE SKIN.) MY FURTHER RECOMMENDATION IS TO USE 0.999-FINE ELECTRODES (IT'S A NICE NUMBER ANYWAY, BEING THE OPPOSITE OF 666 FOR YOU NUMBERS PLAYERS). I certainly don't want to be the one to tell you, even remotely in code, that a bit of alloy wouldn't hurt you. DO IT RIGHT AND LIVE TO STRUGGLE ANOTHER DAY IS A GOOD MOTTO.

IN PLACES WHERE UNQUESTIONED DISTRIBUTION IS AVAILABLE, USE ONLY THE PERFECT MATERIALS, FOR CARELESS USE WILL NO LONGER BE ALLOWED TO ENDANGER "MY FRIENDS AND FAMILIES".

NOW, I remind you of my recent writings—you are moving uphill unless you realize that starting with ionized Gaiandriana (Drias) you will have a much slower rate of "help" effects.

Even with the apparatus that "does it for you", if you have positively-charged particulate IN YOU, the loop is then available.

What would I say about that? Well even a half ounce of silver colloid—or even better, gold colloid and/or a bit of added copper colloid (superb electric conduits) in the presence of DRIAS already immune-perfected and ionized, "might" just kick start any relaxation and "time" required assistance.

Believe me, the people, however, offering these things and opportunities MUST BE PAID OR THEY CANNOT FUNCTION. People have long wanted all MY products for, somehow, FREE. No, it is not even feasible—for there is great expense involved in developing, manufacturing, packaging and shipping any such products.

So, what can you do? Well, see if you can find some still available, for instance, colloids, and get a bottle of lotion of any kind and add a portion of, especially silver, to the lotion, mix well and use on your body. Or, spray it on but know that exposed skin is better in a CARRIER which will cause it to adhere to the skin and form a barrier.

Oh, and by the way, readers, I am writing this primarily for the foreign readers where the products are not regulated away from them as they are in the current U.S.A.—check with Diane about those nasty repercussions of being “ignorant of the regulations” on recognized “health products” with NOW SECRET rules.

Of course, it is OK to kill you all with Aspartame—but then that is BIG BUSINESS, isn’t it?

When you are starving it is amazing what the body will stand just to get some food into itself.

Will I back people into this business? (???) Yes, but they will produce the funds and there will be agreements to pay us something in return as a donation if nothing else—so that we can finish this job underway which has nothing to do with the products. The products were available prior to now through New Gaia to keep the paper and staff paid. The supporting loans were through the Phoenix Institute and in California through a fully registered corporation in the State. The corporations themselves are/were Nevada corporations. This, in addition, is the sad part of Diane’s story, that she never had anything to do with these corporations except to handle some of the distribution and mostly as just a volunteer participant. It IS indeed a hard life for you people where individuals who care enough to do the very best they can are allowed to be convicted in an unjust system and literally go to jail/prison as “examples” of what happens when you face the Khazarian-Pharisee COURTS of “justice”. The prosecutors will use ANY trick they can find including denial of representation, hiding of documents (FBI), and you name it. Win the case at the total destruction of everyone else is the name of the game. God alone can help you if the Judge is having a bad-hair day on trial day.

GAIA certainly WILL provide funding if and when we can ever get the people to stop lying and move forward with their own promises and commitments. Until then, YOU will have to assist, for there is nothing at this time more important, even silver colloids, than getting this program started—then it is easy to turn attention to these other projects, or as the case is here in our loop, BACK to these projects.

There are so many ways to handle this, for other countries than the U.S., by simply going to a sovereign place where the silly regulations on natural supplements and restrictions on use are not present. I don’t think ANYONE would have trouble, for instance, with Silver Colloid in Papua New Guinea or lower Tawi-Tawi or Sulu or even in West Borneo.

I would suggest, however, that in the heart of Native Reservations (sovereign lands) in Arizona and New Mexico, just to name two places out of HUNDREDS, there would be a welcome industry—even if just for use within the tribes.

I told you long, long ago that you can only prevail if you are as shrewd as the foxes and as gentle as the dove. Why is it God’s people always walk “behind” Satan? Because you have been trained to do so—by Satan.

So, we still have to beg and borrow FROM YOU WHO WILL HELP to keep us alive and able to attend our tasks.

Rumor is again that this hotel where Ekkers are staying and whose staff has become “family”, is up for sale.

This is the prime location in Makati even though the talk is of tearing down the building that is this hotel. But today not even the tearing-down can be afforded. It would be a prime location with facilities for available rooms for a PAPIMI center that would beat the Fat Centers for location, comfort and distant visitors who would need to stay over a day or so.

It could also serve as a place where colloids could be produced, business offices could be structured and, at the least, apartments for temporary housing of consultants. These are the visions which allow for growth and if changes need to be made, so be it. GAIA will always need an office in the Philippines because WE SHALL get this task accomplished.

We can’t do anything prior to that, however, because grapevine doesn’t cut it at this time of kickbacks and payoffs. Even the advertising or “announcements” can’t be afforded and that just happens to be the way it IS, not choice.

It can’t work in the hotel as is for regulations have to be met (for hotel use) and that is “kickback” prohibitive.

THIS IS ALL GOING TO HAVE TO REST ON YOU WHO WANT TO MAKE A DIFFERENCE—AND OTHERS WHO JUST WOULD LIKE TO SAVE THEIR LIVES. YOU WANT MAGIC, MY FRIENDS, AND ARE TOO IMPATIENT FOR MIRACLES.

FOOD LIES

Turning again to Afghanistan, you will find the U.S. claiming that possibly Taliban is “poisoning” some of the food being dumped (literally) onto the people. No, readers, some of the first PACKETS were intentionally contaminated by the U.S. and when found to be so with death of several people, the word went out to not trust the food. It was gathered and BURNED where possible. HUNDREDS of people got very sick. NOW, AS IS TYPICAL, THE PRONOUNCEMENT IS MADE PUBLIC BLAMING THE INNOCENT FOR THE ATROCITIES UPON THEMSELVES.

TURN TO NUCLEAR WAR

The new Talking Heads ARE REPORTING probable use of nuclear warheads which would be placed and detonated in caves where bin Laden “might be” hiding. Elusive, isn’t he? This would seal the caves and keep them too radioactive to use for “a thousand years”. Where, perchance, do they come up with a thousand years when the half-life of the product used is 10,000 years?

And what do you think, now, about Sodom and Gomorrah? And yes, THIS IS THE HUMANITARIAN UNITED STATES OF AMERICAN AIDED AND ABETTED BY BRITISH-ISRAEL AND YEA, NOW JOINED BY NATO AND THE UNITED NATIONS. This is surely a nice global community of One World Order you have developed!

NUMBERS OUT OF TRADE CENTER

Well SIR (British Knight now) Guiliani is going to publicly forbid questioning of charity funds distribution and random “counting” reports of dead, even to death certificates, FROM THE TERRORIST DISASTER.

The accounting of EITHER (funds or people) is in such chaos as to be totally absurd. WHERE ARE THE BODIES and WHY aren’t the charity organizations FOR THAT PURPOSE OF HELPING FAMILIES, unable to locate very many who actually need help because their loved one somehow “escaped” that day. Others are rushing to get death certificates to CASH IN but with only a name change to insure legal “assistance”. There were so many “illegal” immigrants in service as workers as to probably allow for most of the “missing” whose families know they will be deported (except for Israelis) if they report any missing persons.

Oh the government tells the suspicious and frightened people “not to worry”. (!!!) Come on, Americans.

They also tell Diane that if she pleads guilty to three Criminal Felony counts of distributing some colloids FOR A COMPANY IN/OR WHICH SHE HAS NO CONNECTION, they will only give her lesser PUNISHMENT—“IF” the judge agrees with the plea bargain.

Then, the private attorney won’t participate without $50,000 for the case. So, better yet, the court has to provide her with a Public Defender—BUT, THE CASE CAN BE HEARD. Otherwise, there are nothing but SECRET counsel agreements foisted off under threat of worse backlash onto the young Mother of very small children. Indeed, world, you have really, really come a long way DOWN THE DRAIN.

THE ONE THING WE CAN PROMISE DIANE, HOWEVER, IS PUBLICATION OF THE ENTIRE MESS, WITH CATCH-UP.

And just HOW IS your day as you near Thanksgiving and Christmas? How about Halloween? That is a really biggie day, creepers. In the Philippines it is a 3-4 day holiday for honoring the dead and lighting candles to burn down the squatters’ houses and light up the cemeteries where people move in to spend the nights and have parties. AMAZING! It truly is called “All Saints” (and yea, “sinners”) celebration of the DEAD.

Tell me again, what, exactly ARE “YOUR” PROBLEMS? Oh, you don’t like your neighbor? Poor Baby!

You want GOD to help you? WHY? I would think God would have little patience when a “wipe-out” coalition of advanced-weaponed thugs and bullies dumps on the POOREST OF THE POOR in WINTER (Siberian no less), women and babies. Do YOU really want us of the Hosts to bless your evil?

Well, it is up to you—we only offer. Furthermore, when you stop blaming God for your insanity, we can all perhaps move forward into a “better way and world”. Otherwise you are going down according to Plan as you near that day of Armageddon/Apocalypse—if you live long enough for either.

HOW CAN IT BE, THOSE ELECTRIC CELLS?

As I mentioned, and got a barrage of questions, the ancients had “batteries” which produced enough current, especially in WINE, to colloidalize metal. The silver, copper or pewter container acted as one electrode and the battery itself as the other (some metal strip would always be present). In other instances coins were drilled and attached by gold or silver wire to the “battery” itself. The little devices were submerged in the container of wine and gee whiz—colloids. The voltage was so low that the end product was a totally perfect positive-ionized particulate as is produced by use of LOW VOLTAGE apparatus. It took very little power and used very, very little of the element. The people didn’t know why or what happened—but it sure cured whatever was sick and made everybody feel wonderful. Fruit BRANDY worked even better and intoxication happened more quickly with the old “aged” juice. The hangover was LESS from the “treated” wine—and at that time old barleycorn was not around except by total accident and very “secret”. As whisky entered the picture in distilled form, it was used as anesthetic and for simply getting drunk. The “die-hards” continued with WINE because you didn’t get sick with the killer dis-eases. Grapes were highly regarded in every form of serving.

Now, readers, are we having fun yet?

When the Pharisees set forth to REWRITE history, they certainly did miss a lot of things—THIS being one. You are going to uncover bunches and boodles MORE.

Don’t be surprised when your whole government is away from their offices, buildings closed, etc., with total shutdown of the Postal Service on one excuse or another.

Why won’t the government go broke? It is already broke!

HOWEVER, the Pharisees have a lock on printing-press NOTES. They are meaningless and just more and more debt is automatically added to the “bill” and then THEY OWN EVERYTHING. They are now collecting from the foreclosures that you supported. YOU DO NOT OWN ANYTHING, INCLUDING YOURSELF!

I ask my own teams to put your heads together and FIND A WAY. You will have to work TOGETHER or you will be excluded in the loop, for that is the way of community service after the Feds get through bashing you, incarcerating innocent people—and your own brothers get—through turning you in on fraudulent charges—to DISTRACT FROM THEIR OWN CRIMINAL ACTIONS.

How can you trust the ones remaining? YOU DO NOTHING WHICH IS QUESTIONABLE OR AGAINST REGULATIONS. And, if there is shipping involved—DO NOT USE THE MAIL SERVICES! Use fully accredited private carriers at ALL times, even to distributors. Don’t interfere with their laws and assumed regulations—switch rather than fight is a pretty good motto for the day.

The next is as much for Sovereign Native America shipping and distribution as downtown Burbank. You have to get with the programs, look for shelters as with Nevada incorporation while meeting Tribal Council requirements. Example: A tribal distributor “company” CAN in turn contract with a “foreign” shipping corporation and right on down the line of doing good business. If you are concerned, in addition, with banking—keep it simple, open and in corporation shelters. Soon there will also be Sovereign State banks in service as our program enlarges to include opportunities already waiting with such as Little Crow’s contacts.

We have fully licensed individuals already in place and in business for well over 15 years, fully approved and protected, who can ship directly to these said sovereign locations under full shelter of International Laws and regulations. WE WILL THRIVE ON TRANSPARENCY REGULATIONS.

Any shipping of anything would be better monitored by NOT using the mail services but other private package services where signature, checking of items, packaging, etc., is routine and mandatory.

But, you might ask: “How do we make it through the regulators now?”

VERY CAREFULLY AND TOTALLY WITHIN ALL LAWS—AND JUST KEEP RIGHT ON PUSHING THROUGH THE FOG.

Isn’t the price of precious metals apt to rise if this gets started in real-events? Yes, so it would behoove us to get a supply ASAP when we have funding to do so. It can also serve as “reserves” so the value will only become more recognized.

This will, at best, be a passing thing but if you don’t somehow help to fill this “need”, you are not thinking well.

WET CELL APPLIANCES

Before we move off into “brand-named” appliances or apparatus, let us first look at least as far back as your respected Edgar Cayce. That will be less confusing and you will be able to better evaluate the new apparatus as several are presented for your attention.

There is no need for big and bulky equipment but there needs to be some more feasible apparatus than is on the market, say, through Dr. Beck and this in NO WAY puts down in any measure, his work. We did indeed support his apparatus and then had to quickly withdraw support because the regulators claimed it to be a “Quack” device without merit. That withdrawal would have been, and was, the immediate response to any KNOWN regulations regarding ANY THING. THAT has always been our stance in all things from income tax regulations (voluntary), to ionized water or frequency/light apparatus, to privacy suggestions.

Example: For a long time it was good to wrap things in or sandwich important papers or money or whatever, for mail, in foil. That is going to NOW get your items confiscated under the guise of possible terroristic materials. You will note that even packages or envelopes WITH OVERABUNDANT SEALING TAPES, ETC. are suspect. The U.S. Postal Service (note the private corporation title—no longer the U.S. Mail Department) is sending forth notices to all citizens—NOW!

By the way, they plan to have fully operational the individual-ID-cards system before Thanksgiving, immediately this year.

Do we try to escape that move? Not if you wish to work with me. If you have reason (unlawful country entry or something of such) get your card and KEEP IT CLEAN. You WILL need it to do business, market, shop, use the mails, and all services.

Am I on “their” side? No, but you don’t win through fighting them until they kill you. ONLY ISRAELIS ARE WRITTEN INTO THE SYSTEM OF NOT HAVING TO REPORT ILLEGAL IMMIGRANT STATUS. THEY WILL ALL BE GIVEN CROSS-NATIONAL CITIZENSHIP. YES, YOU CAN MARK IT ON YOUR CALENDARS. It’s because of that nasty holocaust, you know.

The point, good readers, is to catch people with unlawful documents, forged driver’s license, ID cards, incorrect or forged passports and any other thing requiring regulation licensing.

AGAIN, LET ME WELCOME YOU TO HELL!

Be good little slaves and you might just live to experience another day in your own homeland. And yes, some will be caught away from home base and may indeed be stuck wherever they ARE. Therefore, we certainly do need potential livelihood fallback for any of our “away” persons and any who might join or visit later who might get caught in a closed airline or flight-capability interruption.

If you are from anywhere, such as a Philippine worker overseas, keep those passports and visas clear and if you have family overseas, keep those passports unencumbered. Sometimes it is far better to fight than to pay a lifetime of consequences of negative choices in what is offered and appears the easier route to harassment cases. NOTHING IS LONGER SIMPLE NOR CAN THE ADVERSARY BE TRUSTED—THEY LIE, CHEAT AND STEAL WHILE SETTING YOU UP SOUNDLY AND IRRETRIEVABLY.

So, on with wet cell information:

THE WET CELL APPLIANCE

By Deborah Seymour Taylor

Three years ago in the summer of 1990, 35-year-old Norfolk resident Jess Belcher had to come to terms with the fact that something was dreadfully wrong. For nearly a decade she had been plagued with strange aching sensations in her legs, but lately that had gotten worse. The entire left side of her body often felt numb and she would lose her balance and crumple to the floor. Or she would look down to see her fingers and toes pull—suddenly, dramatically—to the left. And then there were the headaches and the constant fatigue.

In October, when she fell asleep at the wheel of her car and awoke disoriented—but unhurt—at the side of the road, she decided it was time to seek help. The diagnosis? Multiple sclerosis. The prognosis? A decidedly bleak future—that is, until she took the problem into her own hands and began regular prayer, meditation, a host of dietary changes, and she accidentally happened upon the wet cell appliance, a device recommended by Edgar Cayce.

Ten months after learning she had MS, she began using the appliance daily. She did so for nine months religiously. Today she is symptom-free and has “never felt better”. [H: Please recognize that the term “cure” is NOT used here.]

The wet cell appliance is simply a wet cell battery that produces a small but measurable electrical current that, according to Cayce, could be used to stimulate the growth of nerve tissue and balance the glandular system. Recommended in nearly 1000 Cayce readings for more than 150 different ailments, the wet cell was most often recommended for incoordination between the sympathetic and the cerebrospinal nervous system, retardation in children and adults, mental disorders, arthritis, paralysis, deafness, Parkinson’s disease, and multiple sclerosis.

Today, the appliance is attracting a following as part of a growing movement of aficionados of “Energy Medicine”. And according to some healthcare practitioners, it is clearly an idea whose time has come. Virginia Beach chiropractor Dr. Paul R. Thompson, who uses the appliance in his practice, explains: “At the beginning of the last century, new information about the smaller world of bacteria and such changed the face of medicine. In this century, the same thing is occurring as more and more people learn about the electric body. The result will be a dramatic change in the practice of medicine over the next 25 years. Eventually, physicians will look to the electric body to diagnose illness. And we will see more and more practitioners using appliances like the wet cell that introduce low-frequency, low-amperage wave forms to heal the body.”

The appliance consists of positive and negative rods, or poles, of copper and nickel immersed in an electrolyte “soup” of copper sulfate, sulfuric acid, zinc, charcoal, and distilled water. The copper and nickel poles are fitted with terminals to which are attached both a copper and nickel plate. When the user is ready to use the device, they simply fit the nickel attachment around the waist like a belt, with the nickel cup snug against the lacteal duct plexus, located just above and to the right of the navel. The lacteal ducts are lymphatic vessels that extend into the villi of the small intestine. The copper attachment is placed at one of various nerve centers along the spinal column, locations that vary according to the specific physical disorder, but most often involving the third cervical, ninth dorsal and/or fourth lumbar. The impulse of the low electrical current is then sent directly to the center needing attention, working through the nervous system.

In most cases, the appliance is utilized with a specific solution that is used to supply certain elements to the body and bypass digestion and are simply transmitted into the body through the electrical forces of the wet cell. Most commonly recommended were gold chloride, spirits of camphor, silver nitrate, and Atomidine.

How does it work? According to William A. McGarey, M.D., co-founder of the A.R.E. Clinic in Phoenix, Arizona, “Energy—whether electrical, electronic, electromagnetic, or magnetic—is simply life energy itself, the manifestation of the God-force. And whether it is generated inside or outside of the body, it brings life to the human body and healing when things are out of accord.” “This was the basic foundation of Cayce’s original concept of what is now known as Energy Medicine,” he continued. “Every cell in the body has an electrical vibration—is vibration. As Cayce said, ‘Electricity or vibration is the same energy, same power, ye call God.’ [Reading 1967-1] And since man is created in the image of God, all living creatures are electrical in nature and this positive/negative activity creates an electromagnetic field in and around the body. When we are injured, or when we allow ourselves to become unbalanced by our thoughts—since thoughts are an electrical impulse that moves through the body—or through overexposure to external sources of electromagnetic energy, cells become deficient in the energy needed to reproduce and maintain balance. This deficiency is the beginning of physical weakness and disease. The wet cell simply supplies the necessary electrical vibration needed for healing.”

Though it is still considered revolutionary, physicians and medical researchers began working with electrical therapies as early as the turn of the century.

In 1905, Clarence Edward Skinner, M.D. wrote in Therapeutics of Dry Hot Air about “the so-called ‘physiological’ forces: heat, cold, electricity, the various forms of radiant energy, etc.” as new forces in the medical world that were clearly destined to “revolutionize the current methods of treating many disease processes”.

In the late 1900s, Robert O. Becker, M.D., renowned pioneer in the field and author of The Body Electric, demonstrated the healing potential of electrical circuits while exploring the unusual ability of the salamander to regenerate nearly all parts of its body—a phenomenon scientists have puzzled over for centuries. Becker discovered that the regeneration of a salamander’s limb actually occurs as a result of a weak electrical current that alters the cells in the damaged area. This current then “reprograms” the cells to produce the specific type of tissue necessary for rebuilding the lost limb. Today, surgeons in the field of orthopedics are successfully applying the principle, using electromagnetic radiation to treat bone injuries.

Some, says Gary Price Todd, M.D., author of Nutrition, Health & Disease, predict that within the next decade it may well be possible to regenerate human amputated arms and legs. [H: Beats your silly cloning, citizens.]

Of course, chiropractors have been practicing electric medicine as well as manual medicine for years. When they manipulate the spine, for example, their objective is more than simply alleviating pain. A misaligned vertebra impedes the flow of energy to the organ—energy that is vital to health.

Chiropractor Dr. Paul Thompson took the principle a step further last winter when he purchased a wet-cell appliance to use in his Virginia Beach office with patients who demonstrate a need. Though it is too soon to comment on specific cases, he has seen encouraging results with patients suffering with asthma, depression, and multiple sclerosis, and in energizing the body. When asked how the appliance works, Thompson offers some thought-provoking theories. “There is an energy field, called the etheric body, which substands the physical body rather like the metal framework of a building. Disturbances or illnesses come about when the etheric and physical bodies have become disconnected—as a result of trauma, emotions, karmic patterns or other factors. The result is that the physical body cannot be nourished from an energy standpoint and the nerve and blood supply can’t properly feed the body.”

[H: Speaking of buildings, I think I will here interrupt to remind all of you good people that should you want to inquire, as so many do, as to just what happened to the World Trade Centers in New York—IT IS NOW CLASSIFIED AND ALL RECORDS SEALED—to protect the privacy of families who have paid in pain so dearly already”. It is planned that you NEVER know what happened there with all those MULTIPLE explosions. Furthermore, it prohibits a count of actual bodies. WILL YOU EVER LEARN, PEOPLE? EVERYTHING NOW FALLS UNDER NATIONAL SECURITY THROUGH THE WAR POWERS ACT. YOU DON’T EVEN HAVE A USE FOR YOUR CONGRESS ANY LONGER—IT IS ALL DICTATORIAL POWER. WOW, IS IT REALLY A NICE DAY AFTER ALL?]

According to Thompson, this etheric body, an exact replica of the physical body, extends in and through the dense physical body where energy moves in and out of vortexes, commonly called chakras. Simply put, these chakras are places where the lines of force from the etheric body cross 21 times. There are 7 major vortexes all located along the length of the spine and head, and each is associated with a specific gland. For example, the energy vortex at the base of the spine has a direct connection with the efficient functioning of the adrenal glands.

Thompson theorizes that the wet cell does not affect the physical body directly, but instead affects the etheric body. Simply put, the device and the various solutions—gold, camphor, silver nitrate, which he believes are, on an etheric level, particular vibrations of light—introduce a higher vibration of energy into the physical body, stimulating the endocrine glands to work together in a balanced fashion. “If all the endocrine glands are operating properly—all of the necessary hormones are flowing—you are an integrated personality,” he adds.

The wet cell appliance is not found in any appliance store. Nor is it manufactured on a factory assembly line. For the past six decades, it has been made in the workshops of several enterprising entrepreneurs who have created their own versions of the appliance. Marston Godfrey, the original wet cell manufacturer, actually made the appliance for Cayce, although it was said to have been a crude version of what is presently available. A later generation obtained their appliances from Lester Babcoke of Phoenix, Arizona, who moved to Virginia Beach to work for the A.R.E. (Cayce Institute, basically), but built wet cell appliances in his home workshop until his death in 1983. According to his wife, Billie Babcoke, they were “as near to Cayce’s recommendations as anyone has ever made”.

In recent years, the wet cell has been made by Phil Thomas of Virginia Beach and Bruce Baar of Downingtown, Pennsylvania, both of whom claim to have apprenticed with Babcoke. Each has his own version of the device—and his own customers who are very partial to one or the other. The A.R.E. doesn’t sell the appliance but refers inquiries to the A.R.E. clinic in Phoenix (phone (602) 955-9206), which does sell it, or to Baar (phone 1-800-269-2502). Prices for different models range from $145 to $200. Baar began building the appliances in 1963 as a hobby. After Babcoke’s death, he purchased Lester’s tools and materials from Babcoke’s family and turned his hobby into a business. Still, says Baar, research remains his primary focus. “I’ve been working with a number of doctors—Dr. Pagano, for example, a chiropractor who utilizes Cayce materials in his practice—to study the readings in-depth and begin to define and document very specifically the solutions necessary for the particular ailments.”

For the past year and a half, Baar has been working closely with one of Pagano’s patients with scleroderma. Called the disease that turns people to stone, scleroderma is a progressive hardening of the body’s connective tissue that can eventually lead to hardening of the skin and the vital organs. In advanced stages, it can render victims helpless to perform the simplest task. Although there is said to be no known cure, Cayce often recommended the wet cell for healing the source of the disease.

According to Baar, when the woman first came to Pagano, she was “lifeless, with the tips of her fingers literally falling off. Today, she is getting better, her skin is soft and supple again, her energy is back. It’s phenomenal. And this is just one of the success stories among many.”

Thomas began building the appliance quite by accident after meeting Babcoke on his yearly “pilgrimage to the A.R.E.” from his home in upstate New York. In 1987, he began building the devices and experimenting with different clients. “Two people in particular made me recognize the wet cell’s untapped potential. First, I began regularly working with an epileptic child in West Virginia. In a very short time, his mother was able to take him off seizure medication. Then, I worked with a woman crippled with rheumatoid arthritis. Over the course of five months, she was also able to get off all medication and walk up and down stairs for the first time in years.”

Thomas opened a wet cell therapy center in Virginia Beach last year to allow people to experience the device and to study its applications. “Some people have had phenomenal results, and other have not. Clients with multiple sclerosis and those with rheumatoid arthritis, for example, have had extremely positive results. But what is important is that in this type of setting, I am able to more closely monitor clients’ progress and assist them in determining specific locations on the spine where the attachment can be placed to give the best results.”

Today, Thomas markets his appliances across the country, but he maintains that he has just scratched the surface in actually understanding the exact workings of the device. “Unfortunately, Cayce never explained why he suggested that the wet cell user introduce a specific solution at a particular place on the spinal column.

Although I am constantly cross-referencing the readings to try to understand the correlation in what he suggested in terms of placement and solutions for the various ailments, it will take many years and much research to actually arrive at a particular wet cell prescription for specific ailments. Still, after witnessing many wet cell users successfully recovering from a host of disorders, there is no longer any question that its therapeutic benefits are virtually unlimited.

Though many questions remain unanswered about the mysterious energy that flows through the living body—questions that have thus far only been touched upon—one thing is for certain: energy medicine—one of the basic tenets of Cayce’s theory of healing—is sure to revolutionize medicine as we know it today.

This last statement is NOT true nor shall it be true until somehow the manipulators, bankers and drug houses, are brought into and under control. There is NO MONEY in good health!

Untrue Attacks On Colloidal Silver Use

PROOF OF INTENTIONAL ACTION TO DAMAGE

Hatonn—We can address a couple of things here that required proper sequence of events as regards the above topic of “colloids” in general.

Prior to seizure of CONTACT newspaper (yes, this one) the staff was structured to receive funds from a small distributing company called New Gaia. New Gaia, however, was only a small distributing branch of another corporation structured for business of which, we repeat, was named Unlimited Movement (1990 incorporation), State of Nevada.

This corporation was sold or turned over to allow for the offering of products through such as New Gaia.

Mr. Cort Christie of Nevada Corporate Headquarters did all the necessary incorporation work and was (and we have to assume, still is) the listed responsible party for the corporation. New Gaia was established by the same parties and all records, tax reports, bookkeeping, etc., were done by Mr. Brent Moorhead who had also managed the financial records and physical responsibilities of office space, phone connections, etc., in Tehachapi.

Mr. Moorhead received remuneration via a contracting corporation. This was a time of good management and well-accepted responsibility. Mr. Moorhead later moved to Las Vegas and did then join the Staff as comptroller of Nevada Corporate Headquarters. He continued to be paid as a contract person or through a corporation for keeping the books of New Gaia.

In New Gaia-Unlimited Movement were MANY participants who did in fact create and develop products and who held suitable credentials for the positions of product categorization. Rick Martin, for instance, was the original business party who dealt with products to be acquired by New Gaia. Products were acquired from a very scattered distribution area of producers nationwide and, as well, Hawaii for such as Noni. Many herbs were from International resources.

Diane Kunick, for instance, who was not an officer in New Gaia or Unlimited Movement, was ONLY a manager of the order-taking and processing in a small office in Tehachapi, California. Fulfillment and shipping were all done from Las Vegas.

At the time CONTACT was seized (actually taken over through theft), New Gaia had been basically supporting several parties through loans of funds structured for said purposes of assisting such as CONTACT. This was arranged through Mr. Moorhead and Mr. Christie as to how best to handle such business. The exchange was advertising. CONTACT was the only real advertising resource of any great measure.

Small catalogs were created as inserts to CONTACT and those were handled by Jack and Sandy Tulanian. They were simple and it was the responsibility of said Tulanians to keep up with FDA product regulations.

Mr. Moorhead, since he had just moved from Tehachapi, was given all mail and notices for New Gaia directly through the Las Vegas Office where it is assumed Mr. Moorhead acted FOR New Gaia since his corporation, and thus he personally, received payments for services. He would get mail, sort it and send it to pertinent parties handling whatever business was under his service contract. Any notices of changes in any LAW would have to go through the NCH mail system, including Mr. Moorhead, to be forwarded to the clients.

It is KNOWN that the Phoenix Institute for Research and Education Ltd. was caused to “default” in renewal—deliberately through resignations of Mr. Cort Christie and then the paperwork billings destroyed. There was a lapse of coverage of the Institute for quite a while to allow it to show on public listings as defaulted.

Strangely enough, Mr. Ed Young, Rick Martin and Brent Moorhead knew this and did publish that information in Spectrum, which also went on the International Internet.

Still feel safe in your own home, citizen?

The next thing that happened was that, and we finally get there, the FDA got into the “STOP COLLOIDS” MOVEMENT.

Not having the foggiest notion that colloids were even questioned, little New Gaia was dumped on Diane to attend, no bookkeepers and yet no resignations—just a hit and run. So came the bad days to follow.

These same parties [from Spectrum, etc.] did write affidavits to the FDA, Federal agents, and stated that the operation (remember: “I have personal knowledge...” the affidavit read) was distributing, at the least, drugs and those were also moved “interstate”, so the Postal Service was also sucked into the information flow—all without any notice or discussion until July 14, 2000, when Federal agents raided, seized equipment and whatever they wanted AT GUNPOINT charging ONLY Diane with “unknown” and “unannounced” crimes. The agents hit in two states where they had been instructed to go, three places in California and one in Nevada.

Now, the interesting thing was that at site of these raids, were WAITING, the local newspaper reporters, Mrs. Ray Bilger (the MK-Ultra wife of Ray Bilger) and in Las Vegas, the former Bakersfield (Calif.) reporter who had done Ray Bilger’s big set-up “gun” show on TV at the farm where he lived free with expenses paid while he also, we understand, collected welfare.

On the day of the raids, however, most of the miscreants who had set forth the plan, made sure they had coverage by making sure they were SEEN elsewhere that day. However, as with all non-dependable government witness programs—there was at first a denial to release names, etc., of informants or as with journalists, sources. It certainly does not require rocket scientists to name the culprits and “good friends”.

These same people set up Ekkers by establishing with the major mortgage holder of Ekkers’ property that they could bring damages by somehow declaring the property abandoned.

Abandoned? The house was used EVERY DAY with a caretaker living in the house and aviaries housing “exotic” parrots worth thousands of dollars. These same parties then came to the premises and did in fact, STEAL-LOOT the premises and tried to prevent moving of any property. Mainly present from the moment of the move were Rick Martin, Gail Irwin (both directing operations) and at least Janet Bilger.

An entire solar-energy system with batteries was literally ripped out of the installations and stolen, garden tractors, fireplace inserts, microwaves, patio heaters, mowers and RECORDS BY THE BOX LOADS, AND CORPORATION BOOKS (LATER DUMPED IN THE RAIN ON A VACANT LOT). ALL of the birds were lost to Ekkers and ALL household furnishing and goods have been lost as well.

Yes, I would say that the point is to, as Rick Martin published, “get the Ekkers” for disallowing the theft of the Paper which was totally controlled by Dr. Ed Young and the Rick Martins—being the only bank account signers of the three publishing organizations and press offices rental parties. All three were managed and accounted by Brent Moorhead, Rick and Gail Martin-Cortright and Dr. Ed Young. The explanation of why they did these things? Oh, it turned out that somehow Commander Yeorgos Ceres Hatonn made them do it.

Now how can we know that trouble came to “River City” via that route? Well, poor Dr. Overholt was partly the fall guy and then as only miscreants in ego-press can move, they told the whole story of COLLOIDS, specifically Silver, in the edition of SPECTRUM, February 1, 2000.

“They” thought nobody would figure it out through the tangled web woven—but the whole plan then became a nightmare for such as unsuspecting Cort Christie who got caught just as tightly as the others.

Oh, we are quite sure that Dr. Young and gang thought that they would simply knock out any business for their new enemy New Gaia—but wow, they really did a service on February 1, 2000. By the way, that particular monthly issue of Spectrum banners a headline of an article by Rick Martin: “What if Everything You Thought YOU KNEW ABOUT AIDS WAS WRONG? An interview with Christine Maggiore.”

Martin begins: “If objective and unbiased medical research is important to you, then you owe it to yourself to consider the facts summarized in this book. It dares to present a wide range of research findings that raise critical questions about commonly accepted HIV/AIDS theory. You may never think about AIDS the same way again.”—Anthony Robbins, Author: Awaken The Giant Within and Unlimited Power.

Now, we ALL know about that terrible Anthony Robbins as proclaimed to be some “evil” source of contact by Diane of New Gaia as she became associated with him.

I’m sure that Mr. Martin would not agree with Dr. Young’s observations of said Mr. Robbins, especially after being in Malaysia where Anthony Robbins’ books were all but “Required Reading” in that particular area of the bookstores. It is further interesting that, at that very time, Diane was attending Robbins’ seminar and we sent a personal message regarding what we found in Malaysia—to that meeting.

Tiny, tiny world, my friends, and TRUTH WILL OUT, if given long enough to work through the entropy piled atop it. I believe that Mr. Robbins was commenting on a book by Christine Maggiore which brings some bright information but some very WRONG conclusions about the “spread” potential of AIDS.

I only refer to this here because, among the things effectively treated with Silver Colloid, as listed in Spectrum, is AIDS.

The claim against Diane is that she personally advertised in the New Gaia information some cure potentials. Well, friends, even the brochure of products was compiled and written by others and Diane simply had it printed and mailed. How is this for a friendly and concerned government?

NEVER was anyone told to stop business or stop anything. But rather it was stated that some labels bore lack of supplement information. A year and a half later, this is one case to follow for you inquiring minds.

NOW TO COLLOIDS:

Since the SPECTRUM staff and paper was bought and paid for by CONTACT, we will avail ourselves of their policy: "Permission is hereby granted to anyone to quote The SPECTRUM in whole or in part, so long as full credit of this source is given, including contacting address and phone number."

OK: No phone number listed but: The SPECTRUM is published by The Spectrum Newspaper, Inc., at 9101 West Sahara Ave., and oh my goodness: that looks like the same address of Nevada Corporate Headquarters and prior address of CONTACT. The Website address: <spectrumnews10.com.> as very often PRINTED by Patrick H. Bellringer on International Internet. Isn't this an interesting circle of intrigue, readers? Well, this is for educational use only and since most of the material was taken, actually, from our prior writings in CONTACT, we enjoy seeing approval to this extent offered in this edition of SPECTRUM.

What is more important, perhaps, is FULL recognition of Dr. Young and Norey Latona who have presented this material and certainly did so without credit to any such "non-reality"-based writer as myself WHOM MR. LATONA CLAIMS TO RECEIVE FOR EDITING DIRECTLY FROM ME. Of course, one of my objections is that Mr. Latona fails to EVER identify himself and that is due to a decision made by equal-opportunity controller, Dr. Ed Young who appears to control, entirely, the person named here and the paper in point, as well as everything Mr. Martin writes. This is a really good job for a Ph.D. from Stanford.

The point may well be taken that Dr. Overholt and thus Spectrum KNEW that there was trouble over colloids such as silver, as far back as September 1999.

ANTHRAX, ET AL. TERRORISM

It really doesn't seem to be quite enough when I write and tell you something, so take a look at this next article from TODAY in the Orlando Sentinel which arrived within the minute from Two-by just to share with us. Perhaps you will all feel differently and I want to do this article before I run anything otherwise.

This is so appropriate because of the long distance call just experienced with Diane regarding the FELONY CRIMINAL charges offered against her by such as Ed Young, Rick Martin, etc., for somehow having something to do with selling silver colloid. Not that silver colloid isn't still on Health Store shelves and "makers" widespread and easy to get. This has become a nightmare experience for total non-involvement in the product itself. The ONLY silver colloid product distributed through New Gaia was MADE BY CHARLES NEIL AND NOREY LATONA.

Now people, if this is not "frame-up" time, then I suggest YOU start rethinking how far down some of you citizens have come. Without more fuss:

[QUOTING Orlando Sentinel, October 19, 2001:]

[H: In reference to the two new cases of anthrax in New York and the total fear scattered around the globe AND the fights among the drug companies along with the incredible expense of $2 PER TABLET of the antibiotic used, here comes some rather intelligent and interesting news:]

HOWEY COUNCIL TOUTS SILVER TONIC
AS ANTHRAX 'CURE'

By STEPHANIE ERICKSON, Sentinel staff writer.

HOWEY-IN-THE-HILLS—The magical elixir is supposed to cure all sorts of ailments: gonorrhea, leukemia, sleepwalking, AIDS, arthritis, athlete's foot—even anthrax.

And now, thanks to Howey-in-the-Hills Mayor Greg Bittner and the Town Council, colloidal silver is the officially endorsed "simple solution" for anthrax or any other malady that might strike the 950 residents of the quiet Lake County village.

Bittner, definitely not taking his cue from medical science, told a council meeting last week: "This is the greatest medicinal item that has ever come along. It wipes out virtually every virus."

Wishful thinking.

Federal health officials in 1999 prohibited the marketing of colloidal silver AS A REMEDY for any disease because it turns human skin blue and gray—permanently.

[H: WRONG! Can't do such a thing in colloidal form—period. Silver COLLOID presents as a beautiful GOLDEN color. Therefore, whatever might turn her ladyship BLUE is NOT colloidal silver. And, furthermore, it can't be gold colloid or the lady would be PURPLE. Somebody ought to do something about their FDA research staff.]

And they say the fluid—actually, tiny particles of silver suspended in distilled water—doesn't cure a thing. [H: Don't you wonder who "they" might be?]

Officials at the Food and Drug Administration and the Federal Trade Administration and the Federal Trade Commission were horrified to learn that any government would promote what they consider a scam.

Said FDA spokeswoman Laura Bradford, "That's absolutely amazing." Added senior attorney Rich Cleland of the FTC: "There is no scientific evidence that suggests it will be effective against any bacteria."

And Dr. Stephen Barrett, vice president of the National Council Against Health Fraud and head of a Website called Quackwatch.com, all but laughed out loud when told of Bitner's endorsement.

"Is he going to be re-elected as buffoon of the year?" Barrett said.

But the 67-year-old mayor, who researched colloidal silver on the Internet, where it's described as "Nature's most powerful antibiotic", predicted it could "sweep the country".

Bittner brought colloidal silver to the attention of the Town Council on Oct. 8 just as an anthrax case in South Florida was beginning to generate talk of bioterrorism. Just in case, Bittner said the town should spend $100 to buy a colloidal-silver "generator" that produces a gallon of the stuff for about a nickel. That way, he said, residents will have enough for their families and "you can take care of your neighbors, too".

Council member Joanne Gaskill was the only one to question whether there is any medical proof that the silver solution works.

"I just don't want a Howey medicine show," she said.

Regardless, the latest edition of Council Talk, the town newsletter that arrived in mailboxes this week, told residents of the "simple solution" to fight anthrax and provided police Chief Curtis Robbins' number as a contact for more information. The chief has said a friend of his with cancer WAS HELPED BY THE STUFF. [H: Oh my goodness, could it be?]

Colloidal silver actually is NOTHING NEW. Silver was, indeed, used through the 1930s as a preservative, especially in milk, and it was routinely added to nose drops for allergies through the 1950s.

That's when doctors began to notice that people using Silver for a long period were turning ashen-grey or blue, a condition called argyria. So manufacturers stopped using silver in the mixtures.

[H: Now let us look at that paragraph. There is no evidence given here of two things—one, that it was NOT colloidalized silver and two, there is no mention of the ashen-grey to blue color of a body having died of anthrax or any other disease process, including murder. I believe that is unduly sloppy research on the part of "THEM".]

As diseases became more resistant to antibiotics, however, some alternative-medicine advocates began encouraging use of colloidal silver and selling generators to make it. [H: That is because SILVER COLLOID does not cause strains of microbes or viruses to become resistant.] The devices use silver rods (wires) as electrodes, which are inserted into a container of water. When the electrodes are hooked to batteries or an electrical transformer, electrolysis causes tiny particles of silver to become suspended in the fluid. The amount of time the generator runs determines the strength of the silver in the mixture.

[H: At home with these generators, there will most often show no color change at all and yet will still serve the purpose. Commercial product will be beautiful golden color and a tiny bit goes a VERY LONG WAY. GOLD colloid of a professional grade will be a beautiful St. Germain alchemist LAVENDER-VIOLET.]

By the mid-1990s, the FDA had begun warning colloidal-silver marketers to stop selling it as a medicine; last year, at least 18 Web-based marketers got such warnings.

[H: NEVER DID DIANE OR NEW GAIA GET ANY WARNING WHATSOEVER FROM ANYONE, AND FRANKLY, NOTHING WAS EVER SOLD "AS A MEDICINE"—PERIOD AND END OF STORY.]

Also last year, as part of "Operation Cure-ALL" the FTC charged a Central Florida company, Palm Bay-based Aaron Co., with fraudulent marketing of the stuff on the Web.

Without admitting it violated any law, the company paid fines and refunded money to customers.

[H: Now doesn't that just cut it? This is also a fraud foisted off by the Feds onto innocent people. The man would have signed a lesser plea-bargain because the THREAT THAT SHROUDS ALL ARE "FELONY CRIMINAL CHARGES" WITH THREE YEARS INCARCERATION IN A FEDERAL PRISON ON EACH "COUNT" AND UP TO $250,000 ON EACH COUNT. So, if you LIE and agree to this "bargain" you might escape with your life. The word MAY is very carefully to be considered because they warn you that they have life-death control of your being. Diane should publish the “bargain agreement offered to her”—THIS WEEK, and she would have to lie on every point just to sign the documents for which she would then agree to a Felony conviction and still would not be free—forevermore—ever. It certainly makes a good case of anthrax look pretty good to the Feds’ victims.]

STILL, SALES OF COLLOIDAL SILVER ARE RISING.

Since the Sept. 11 attacks, business is up 10 percent, said Yvonne Hengst, who sells it from Delaware via her Website. Indeed, since the terrorist acts, she herself has been drinking a half-ounce a day of the elixir.

“This is something that people really need and use, especially now with the anthrax scare,” Hengst said. “You’re crazy not to.”

What does the FDA say?

Colloidal silver can’t be considered safe.

(Stephanie Erickson can be reached at serickson@orlandosentinel.com or 352-742-5921)

[END OF QUOTING]

Now, readers, I think all or each of you might want to tell Ms. Erickson to follow up on this with “New Gaia” regarding the case of Diane Kunick through the CONTACT newspaper. Someone there might also be able to tell you how to locate Silver information as well as other related information.

Why “other” information? Because the most compatible product to make sure of cellular exchange, even on the skin, is through DRIAS. In fact “Drias” added by just a drop or two will completely consume any colloid within a couple of days, producing a totally transparent elixir from a deeply colored source. But, you do not want to MIX the two unless using the product to allow for “carrying” the elixir for cellular merging. Something has to get the particulate INTO AND WITHIN the target cells.

This DOES NOT mean that the colloid is not working on its own but it does mean that, to be totally effective, it has to be merged INSIDE the cell carrying the virus or microbe.

And NO, the drias are a simple “water”-based (converted) liquid which after maturing would only show as “water”. I tell you this because that product has NOT fallen prey to the killer Feds. But, the product has been written up by the adversary in such a way as to produce a putrefaction element from overuse of Aloe Vera. That was a Spectrum-group offering for the poor people of the world to make their own solution. DO NOT DO THAT!

We do have people working on that to clear the hoops.

I tell you now, as to these colloidalizers—do not use other than silver or gold of at least 99.9 purity. You do not want alloys. And NO, if you turn blue it is not from either colloid. I can’t report on sucking on raw silver, however, for I cannot imagine why in this day and age of electricity anyone would resort to such silliness. These are not NEW in any sense of the term; they have been around as long as the Earth and humans.

Now, please, let us look at one more gift from Two-by today:

[H: YOU SHOULD REALLY PAY CLOSE ATTENTION TO THIS NEXT BECAUSE YOU SIT ON BOMBS, CITIZENS, AND A LITTLE SILVER COLLOID OR BLUE SKIN MIGHT ACTUALLY LOOK GOOD AS AN ALTERNATIVE.]

TOUGH GERMS IN MEAT STIR ANTIBIOTICS DEBATE By Jeff Donn, ASSOCIATED PRESS

Animals may transfer drug-resistance to humans.

BOSTON—One in five samples of supermarket ground meat and poultry bought for a study was contaminated with salmonella, and most of the strains were RESISTANT to antibiotics.

The findings—generally in line with what the Food and Drug Administration has seen in previous surveys of the food-poisoning bacteria—spurred calls for stronger restrictions on the use of antibiotics in livestock.

Overuse of antibiotics in humans and farm animals contributes to the rise of drug-resistant bacteria.

The study and two others on livestock and antibiotic resistance were published in today’s New England Journal of Medicine.

For decades, farmers have given antibiotics to animals raised for food. The Animal Health Institute, which represents makers of animal drugs, says more than 20 million pounds of antibiotics are used yearly in animals, mostly to treat or prevent disease. The Union of Concerned Scientists estimates that as little as 2 million pounds go to sick animals, while the rest is meant largely to shield animals from disease and promote growth. By contrast, humans take an estimated 3 million pounds.

Scientists worry that powerful animal germs can sicken people through their food and transfer antibiotic resistance to humans.

In the salmonella study, researchers at the University of Maryland and the FDA collected 200 samples of ground beef, ground chicken, ground turkey and ground pork from three supermarkets in Washington. Forty-one samples, or 20 percent, were contaminated with salmonella, a bacterium blamed for about 1.4 million cases of food poisoning each year in the United States. Of the strains isolated, 84 percent were resistant to at least one antibiotic, and 53 percent to three or more.

Biologist Margaret Mellon, director of food programs at the Union of Concerned Scientists, blamed heavy use of antibiotics in livestock. “We need to take action now to reduce the unnecessary use in animals,” she said.

In one of the other studies, researchers at the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention found that MORE THAN HALF of 407 supermarket chickens brought from 26 stores in four states—Georgia, Maryland, Minnesota and Oregon—carried the sometimes fatal germ Enterococcus faecium in a form resistant to Synercid, one of the few drugs of LAST RESORT against the infection.

[END OF QUOTING]

Yes indeed, IT IS REPORTED that Silver colloid works on that nasty germ as well—with absolutely NO side-effects, not even blue lips.

People, your governments, in the name of commercial greed, are killing citizens every way they can conjure and now they even want to take away your “water” resources and vitamins. So be it, it is truly up to you, for just a few people turned-in yet—by their own friends to get even for some OTHER and unrelated problem—can’t do it FOR YOU.

As a matter of fact, New Gaia GAVE AWAY enough health products free of charge as to be staggering. Perhaps those people who dealt through New Gaia, and Diane, would write to CONTACT and we will ask to have the letters run. We would also be happy to forward copies to SPECTRUM who has deprived them of products, paper information flow, and property.

You will have freedom only to the extent you demand it, people. And, believe me, you are in for far worse than anthrax.

Dharma, this has gotten too long to start on the LATONA report, so we will just offer segments as we can get to the topic over the next few days. We will, however, ask Mr. Moore to try and present them in a consolidated offering in the paper to have it all available, if possible, in one issue. The topic itself will continue indefinitely.

Thank you, GCH

RE: COLLOIDAL SILVER: EXPLORING A GREAT HEALING LEGACY—CONT’D

OPIUM IN AFGHANISTAN

Hatonn—Right up top here before going on with Dr. Young’s and Norey Latona’s silver offerings (perhaps even 30-pieces of...) let us look at another confirmation.

We write, Dharma gets blamed but rarely given credit which she also likes equally as much. But, we spoke of a far greater cause for interference in Afghanistan, perhaps running back to Opium trade and Oil—not to mention even an oil pipeline for UNOCAL across Afghanistan.

Far-fetched was a retort of one in favor of terrorism eradication of some poor man called bin Laden, a former business partner of George W. Bush.

OK, so be it, but here is a little short article, again picked up by Two-by.

DEFIANT AFGHAN FARMERS MAY PLANT POPPIES AGAIN

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan—A year after a Taliban ban virtually wiped out opium production in Afghanistan, Afghan farmers are defying the order and preparing their fields for planting poppies, a U.N. official said Wednesday. Bernard Frahi, the U.N. Drug Control Program representative for Pakistan and Afghanistan, said reports from major poppy-growing areas of southern and eastern Afghanistan indicate fields have been tilled in a manner that suggest farmers will be planting poppies.

[END OF QUOTING]

Now what do you think?

But back to Silver Colloid.

[QUOTING The SPECTRUM, February 1, 2000, starting on page 17:]

COLLOIDAL SILVER: EXPLORING A GREAT HEALING LEGACY.

Editor’s note [Dr. Ed Young]: If you’ve been paying attention to the news lately, emergency rooms in many locations are filled to overflowing with people suffering from “resistant strains of super-bugs” which conventional antibiotic treatments “won’t even touch” according to the candid admissions of the panicky physicians themselves. Even people who normally “never get sick” are coming down with, especially, upper respiratory (and sometimes cardiac) problems of a quite severe or persistent nature.

Some people are simply “run down” and don’t know why they have no energy. Others say they just have “the flu” as a way to dismiss a vague array of aches and pains and fevers and other discomforting symptoms.

Our immune systems are trying to do their best in a very hostile environment compounded over the past year and a half by mysterious aerial chemical/pathogenic “contrail” or “chemtrail” sprayings going on. That hostile environment in which our immune systems are expected to still function has long included: diminished nutritional content of food (through demineralized soil, irradiation, genetic manipulations, and the generally deplorable methods of modern agribusiness), chemical additives, artificial sweeteners, nasty air and water pollutions, purposeful (secret) electronic bombardments denying many people a good night’s sleep, and a generally more intense pace of living (due to those who control our economy) that sees more and more people under increasing amounts of job and home stress with little time to unwind and enjoy life.

Along with vitamins, trace minerals have long been known to play a critical role in maintaining good health. Food products—particularly fruits and vegetables—once supplied all of the trace minerals and other trace elements in easily assimilated forms. But not anymore. How can they when so many fruits and veggies are themselves “starving” due to the artificial and aggressive farming methods of modern agribusiness?

If you could dig out the research on any vegetable’s food-value analysis for the years of, say, 1910-1940-1970-1999, you would be alarmed at how “empty” our foods have gradually become since the turn of the century—and especially since modern agribusiness has replaced “old-fashioned” farming techniques. Thus, there is an ever-increasing need for supplements in order to achieve and maintain nutritional balance from which our bodies can further synthesize its wide range of specific needs.

A subset of these trace minerals or elements have long been known and used (before antibiotics were forced onto the scene by the large pharmaceutical companies) to combat illnesses and infections of many kinds. Elemental silver is the most well known and outstanding among this category and deserves a closer examination—especially as those emergency rooms fill up and the doctors wring their hands and shake their heads in bewildered panic.

After all, most modern physicians have been well trained (or better yet, mind controlled) by the pharmaceutical companies to follow a specific path which heavily utilizes their expensive products—and heaven help the doctors if they stray from that path of Big Medicine. No wonder so many people are taking health matters back into their own hands and are searching for alternatives to the conventional “wisdom” of “Dr. Drugs”. Go back and read Dr. Richard Schulze’s comments in our December 1999 issue of The SPECTRUM for excellent background on this subject of alternative healing modalities and the true miracles which can often be achieved through that route. Or as Dr. Schulze put it: “There’s no cure for so many diseases today. Medicine has been a big failure.” Oops!

We are sharing the following information with you as a “do it yourself” refuge should you have a need for such. Or even if you simply have a curiosity concerning this subject. After all, it is a most practical avenue of healing which seems to have been purposely hidden from public awareness many decades ago as part of a larger, darkly motivated agenda having little to do with promoting good health and much to do with making money while indirectly decreasing the population—as has been one of the New World Order gang’s goals, stated all the way back in their secret Club of Rome reports from the early 1950s.

NOREY LATONA, 1/15/00:

Many of you regular readers will recall, maybe with a feeling of some alarm or anger, the short article Dr. Overholt ran in his News Desk column in the September 1999 issue of The SPECTRUM (page 9) regarding the Food & Drug Administration’s “crackdown” on colloidal silver. After several years of begrudging tolerance, the FDA has taken steps to classify colloidal silver as a drug. This—in conjunction with other devious tactics—will, in all likelihood, lead to making colloidal silver very difficult to obtain and the price going up through the roof. This seems to be an ongoing goal of the FDA—ever since colloidal silver was rediscovered in recent years and has become steadily more popular.

For the complete report, go to the Federal Register Online via GPO Access (http://www.access.gpo.gov/su_docs/aces/aces140.html) and search the words “colloidal silver” in the 1999 records. Open the text document titled “fr17au99R, Over-the-Counter Drug Products Containing Colloidal Silver”. Federal Register: August 17, 1999 (Volume 64, Number 158): Rules and Regulations, Page 44653-44658.

Keep in mind that the following information on colloidal silver is being offered as educational material only. Neither The SPECTRUM newspaper nor myself make any claims or accept any liability regarding one’s personal choice to make or use colloidal products. The reader may want to consult with professional medical advice prior to taking any health-related product. [H: Ah indeed, Mr. Latona.]

Before we get into the specific details of making your own colloidal silver, let me set the stage of introducing this subject by offering the following good article. Other articles are available on the Internet (mostly being used by ones selling colloidal silver) and can be found by searching “colloidal silver”. This article provides a short but detailed and well-documented (with references included) history of usage of colloidal silver. I am sharing this important background information for those of you who may not be familiar with colloidal silver or its many remarkable attributes.

[H: As we move through these pages it is so obvious that The SPECTRUM even copies the DIRECT format of CONTACT IN EVERY WAY.]

[SUB-QUOTING:]

REPORT ON COLLOIDAL SILVER

By Dr. Dellyn Hansen of Orem, Utah

Silver is a powerful, natural prophylactic/antibiotic, used for thousands of years, with no side effects. It is a catalyst, disabling the particular enzyme that all one-celled bacteria, funguses, and viruses use for their oxygen metabolism; they suffocate.

Yet it is of no harm to human enzymes or any part of the human body chemistry. And it kills all disease-causing organisms, in six minutes or less, upon contact—even those pleomorphic, no matter how they mutate. Resistant strains fail to develop, and the body doesn’t develop a tolerance.

Colloidal silver is both a remedy and a prevention of infections of any kind. Having sufficient colloidal silver in your body is to have a superior, second immune system.

It was in common use until 1938. Great grandma put a silver dollar in the milk to keep it fresh at room temperature. (Ref: 1,9)

ESTABLISHED USAGE

Oral Formula (4-oz bottle): After taking one teaspoon daily for four days, take one half-teaspoon daily, as adults (and proportional, by body weight, for children), or apply directly to cuts, scrapes and open sores, or put a few drops on a small Band-Aid and wear over warts, cuts, abrasions, or any open sore, or dab directly onto eczema or such itchy areas, or acne, mosquito bites, or any skin problem.

Water is purified by adding one half-teaspoon per gallon, shake well, wait six minutes, and shake again, wait six minutes, and drink. Mix it this way (it’s tasteless) and drink two quarts, over a day’s time, especially with meals, as a great digestive aid, because it eliminates fermentation.

It is the ideal food preservative, because it is also good for you. Use in canning at one-quarter teaspoon per quart.

Those already using colloidal silver report that they catch milder, and fewer if any, colds or flu. The emphasis is on the prevention of all infections.

There are never any side effects. It never does any harm to the liver, kidneys, and other organ, system, or any part of the body.

No one has ever overdosed, regardless of the amount, as it is not at all an allopathic poison.

The Intravenous Formula (1/2-oz. bottle/adult, proportional) is often preferred as it is more long-lasting and, for some people, works better. Syringes are available from veterinary suppliers, like IFA. (Ref: 1,7,9)

RECOGNIZED REMEDIES

The following is a partial list of the more than 650 diseases that colloidal silver has been used successfully against: acne, acne rosacea, AIDS (Ref: 2), allergies, appendicitis, arthritis, athlete’s foot, tuberculosis, bladder inflammation, blood parasites (cause gray hair), blood poisoning, boils, bubonic plague, burns, cancer (Ref: 7,8), candida, chilblains, cholera, colitis, conjunctivitis, cystitis, diabetes (Ref: 1), dysentery, eczema, fibrositis, gastritis, gonorrhea, hay fever, herpes, impetigo, indigestion, keratitis, leprosy, leukemia, lupus, lymphangitis, lyme disease, malaria, meningitis, neurasthenia, parasitic infections (both viral and fungal), pneumonia, pleurisy, prostate, pruritus ani, psoriasis, purulent ophthalmia, rhinitis, rheumatism, ringworm, scarlet fever, septic conditions of the eyes, ears, mouth and throat, seborrhea, septicemia, shingles, skin cancer, staph infections, strep infections, syphilis, thyroid, tonsillitis, toxemia, trachoma, trenchfoot, dermatitis, all forms of virus, warts, whooping cough, yeast infections, stomach ulcers, and also canine parvovirus and other veterinary uses. Also in all bacterial, fungal, and viral attacks on plants. Simply spray diluted silver on the leaves and add to soil water. (Ref: 1,2,3,4,7,8)

ADDITIONALLY

There has never been a drug interaction with any other medication. Colloidal silver has been found to be both a remedy and a prevention for all colds, all flu, all infections, and all fermentation due to any bacteria, fungus, or virus, especially staph and strep, which are found present in every disease condition.

Through simple high school biology studies we learn that all living things exist in the colloidal form. The body can more readily use medications already in the colloidal form, as opposed to crystalline. Colloidal silver is the most useable form of the most effective disease fighter there is. The body actually needs colloidal silver to fight disease-causing organisms, and to aid healing.

The adult RDA for silver is 400 milligrams. [H: You see, there actually IS a recommended daily allowance as is denied by the naysayers.] Taken orally each day, it's like having a second immune system. Older folks feel younger because their body energies are used for something other than fighting disease, and digestion is better.

Medical research has proven that silver promotes rapid healing, with less scar tissue, even in the case of severe burns. Silver aids the developing fetus in growth, health, and eases the delivery and recovery. Fantastic successes have been reported in many cases previously given up by establishment doctors. Colloidal silver is tasteless and won't sting, even baby's eyes, and won't upset the stomach.

It is produced today by a modernized original process, at a tiny fraction of the pre-1938 cost, and is more concentrated. The product contains no free radicals, as the silver acts only as a catalyst, and is stabilized. This is not a chemical compound containing silver, but pure metallic silver of submicroscopic cluster of just a few atoms, held in suspension, in pure water, by the tiny electric charge on each atom.

It is absolutely non-toxic (except to some one-celled plants and animals) and non-addicting. Colloidal silver is the remedy for all infections, even the non-apparent, low-grade general body infections most people have. Parasites are also killed, as they have an egg-stage in their reproductive cycle which is one-celled and therefore killed in six minutes or less.

It is a good idea to keep colloids from freezing, and in a cool, dark place. (Ref: 1,2,0)

Ref. 1: Use of Colloids In Health And Disease. Colloidal silver is proven particularly effective in cases of intestinal troubles. Dr. Henry Crooks found that silver in the colloidal state is highly germicidal, quite harmless to humans, and absolutely non-toxic. Rather than in chemical compounds, the silver in the colloidal state may be applied in a much more concentrated form, with correspondingly better results. All fungus, virus, bacterium, streptococcus, staphylococcus, and other pathogenic organisms are killed in three or four minutes; in fact, there is no microbe known that is not killed by colloidal silver in six minutes or less, at a dilution of as weak as 5 parts per million, though there are no side effects whatsoever from high concentrations.

Ref. 2: Provo Herald, 13 Feb. 92, pg. D1: "Colloidal Silver As A Cure For AIDS".

Ref. 3: American Drug Index, the section on Inorganic Pharmaceutical Chemistry recognized silver for its germicidal action, calling a stabilized form "mild silver protein". There are several forms of mild silver protein.

Ref. 4: The Condensed Chemical Dictionary, 6th Edition: mild silver protein is listed for medical use (the "protein" is the trace used as a stabilizer).

Ref. 5: The FDA has stated that because colloidal silver is (by fifty years) a pre-1938 drug, it may continue to be marketed. A 13 Sept. 1991 letter received from consumer safety officer Harold Davis, U.S. Food & Drug Administration. Moreover, the FDA has no jurisdiction regarding a pure, mineral element.

Ref. 6: The Environmental Protection Agency's Poison Control Center reports no toxicity listing for colloidal silver, considering it harmless in any concentration.

Ref. 7: Dr. Robert Becker, author of The Body Electric, recognized a correlation between low silver levels and sickness. He said the silver deficiency was responsible for the improper functioning of the immune system. Dr. Becker's experiments conclude that silver works on the full spectrum of pathogens of the body. He also states that the silver was doing something more than killing disease-causing organisms. It was also causing major growth stimulation of injured tissues. Burn patients and even elderly patients noticed more rapid healing. And he discovered that all cancer cells change back to normal cells. All strains of pathogens resistant to other antibiotics are killed by silver. Yet at that time he couldn't find a silver supplement on the market.

Ref. 8: Dr. Bjorn Nordstrom, of the Karolinska Institute, Sweden, has used silver in his cancer cure method for many years. He says the whole thing is quite simple. This brought rapid remission in patients given up on by other doctors.

Ref. 9: "Silver, Our Mightiest Germ Fighter", Science Digest, March 1978. As an antibiotic, silver kills over 650 disease-causing organisms; resistant strains fail to develop. Silver is absolutely non-toxic. Silver is the best all around germ-fighter we have. Doctors are reporting that, taken internally, it works against syphilis, cholera and malaria, diabetes, and severe burns. Richard L. Davies, executive director of the Silver Institute, which monitors silver technology in 37 countries, reports: "In four years we've described 87 important new medical uses for silver."

Ref. 10: "Colloidal Preparations Of Silver in Pharmacy", British Medical Journal, Feb. 1923. Pure silver is entirely non-irritant. In tests, at very high dilution rates, exceeding two-hundred to one, it has been shown repeatedly that the rapidly exerted disinfectant action is of considerable therapeutic value.

A very important note: There are some manufacturers who have come out with a colloidal silver product of greater concentration in an attempt to improve its effectiveness. They are operating under a false premise; the reverse is true. It is less effective and, in some cases, could even lead to toxicity. Please don't be fooled by claims of the benefits of greater concentration.

[END OF SUB-QUOTING]

While the above is just one of many, many articles available on the subject of colloidal silver, it is representative of the general attributes being reported.

Another article from the Internet (<http://www.eurekaweb.com/col-s.htm>) includes more background research about colloidal silver including what the U.S. Navy and the FDA (yes, the same FDA now going after colloidal silver) had to say about the subject years ago. It will be interesting to see how the crooks trying to take colloidal silver away from the public are going to contend with the already available scientific information praising silver. Here are some excerpts from that article.

SUPPRESSED HEALTH REMEDY RE-DISCOVERED

Silver has been used in healing as far back in recorded time as 4000 BC. Persian records mention the practice of keeping water in silver vessels. The ancient Babylonian and Greek civilizations were aware of silver's ability to disinfect. Colloidal silver was used as a remedy as far back as ancient Egypt. It continued to be used in the Middle Ages to treat wounds.

The Romans reported the use of silver compounds for medical treatment. Before the days of refrigeration, silverware or a silver coin was kept in the drinking water and the milk to retard spoilage. Silverware became prized for the preparation, serving, and storage of foods because it was recognized that food processed in silver vessels stored longer and was less likely to cause illness.

According to the 1991 Grolier Encyclopedia: "The element silver exhibits bacterial properties not fully understood, although these are thought to be a result of its ability to absorb oxygen. Colloidal silver is used as an antiseptic, germicide, astringent, caustic, and for water sterilization and to arrest hemorrhaging by coagulating the blood. Astringents act by shrinking tissues and reducing the permeability (passage of gas or liquid) of membranes. They may be used internally to diminish mucous secretion in a sore throat, check diarrhea, or reduce stomach acid secretion. Externally, they are used for conditions such as cold sores, poison ivy, or hemorrhoids and as antiseptic deodorizers eliminating odor-causing microorganisms."

A sol is a colloidal system consisting of a solid dispersed in a liquid. If the dispersing medium is water, it may be called a hydrosol. The colloidal state is a condition in which one substance is dispersed in another.

Colloids are distinguished from suspensions essentially by the small size of the dispersed particles: colloidal particulate size is approximately 0.5 to 0.001 microns. Colloidal particles do not settle and cannot be filtered by ordinary techniques (as is the case with suspensions). Because of their size, colloid particles diffuse slowly. Between suspensions and solutions lies the colloidal state; no clear distinction can be made between fine suspensions and systems of colloid particles that are close to the upper limit of the colloid range.

The Handbook Of The Hospital Corps of the United States Navy, 1953, published by the Bureau of Medicine And Surgery under the authority of the Secretary of the Navy, NavMed P-5004, United States Government Printing Office, page 417, stated:

"Silver compounds have a wide variety of uses as caustics, astringents, antiseptics, and germicides. Their activity resides in the silver ion, which is a protein precipitant. It is toxic to bacteria by precipitating the protein in the bacteria protoplasm. Colloidal silver preparations, in which the silver does not exist to any large extent as free ions, act by the milder and sustained antiseptic effect brought about by the formation of a protein silver compound which slowly liberates small amounts of ionic silver. Colloidal silver compounds contain very little ionizable silver. Use of any silver preparation over a long period may cause permanent blue discoloration of the skin and mucous membrane, known as Argyria. The colloidal silver preparations contain high concentrations of silver, largely in non-ionized form. Their antiseptic value depends on the activity of the free silver ions and not on their content. They do not precipitate protein but penetrate the tissues. Those mentioned here are silver proteins and silver halides.

“Colloidal silver preparations are used as antiseptics, particularly for application to the mucous membranes of the eye, nose, throat, urethra, bladder, and colon. They are commonly used for infections of the upper respiratory tract. They are also effective as prophylaxis against gonorrhea, in urethral irrigations about 1 hour after exposure. They are prepared in the form of solutions, ointments, swabs, suppositories, and tampons.”

It is known that prior to 1938 colloidal silver was administered in just about every way that modern drugs are used today. These uses included intravenously, orally, and topically, i.e., throat gargle, eye drops, douche, open wounds, and burns—for which it is particularly effective due to its combined disinfectant and astringent properties. It protects the highly susceptible burn tissue from infection while promoting rapid healing.

A partial list of documented, pre-1938 uses of colloidal silver include: acne, athlete's foot, burns, cancer (Dr. Bjorn Nordstrom of the Karolinska Institute, Sweden, has used silver in his cancer cure method for many years. Dr. Robert O. Becker MD, in extensive research and experiments with silver, discovered that all cancer cells changed back to normal.), conjunctivitis, diphtheria, diabetes, ear “affections”, eczema, gastritis, impetigo, intestinal ailments, leprosy, lymphagitis, Menier's symptoms, neurasthenia, canine parvo virus, pleurisy, prunitis ani, ringworm, scarlet fever, septicemia, shingles, staph infections, syphilis, tonsillitis, trachoma, ulcers, whooping cough, arthritis, bladder inflammation, blood poisoning, cholera, cystitis, dermatitis, dysentery, fibrositis, gonorrheal herpes, influenza, keratitis, lupus, malaria, meningitis, pneumonia, prostate problems, rheumatism, rhinitis, seborrhea, skin cancer, soft sores, strep infections, tuberculosis, toxemia, trench foot, viral warts, yeast infections (i.e. candida), and many others.

Though there is no known (to this author) data regarding A.I.D.S. (Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome), Dr. Gary Smith, a medical researcher, suggest that silver may be linked to the proper functioning of the immune system. While analyzing hair samples, Dr. Robert Becker noticed a correlation between low silver levels and sickness. He believed that a silver deficiency was the reason for the improper functioning of the immune system. Dr. Becker's experiments concluded that silver works on a wide range of bacteria without any adverse side effects and without damage to the cells of the body.

Dr. Becker also states that, in the presence of the silver ion, cancer cells change back to normal cells, regardless of their location in the body.

The March 1978 issue of Science Digest had an article called “Silver, Our Mightiest Germ Fighter” in which they stated that more than half of the world's airlines use silver-treated water as the method of choice for protecting passengers from water-born disease.” Additionally, the article quoted Dr. Harry Margraf, St. Louis Missouri, as saying, “Thanks to eye opening research, silver is emerging as a wonder of modern medicine. An antibiotic kills perhaps half a dozen different disease organisms, but silver kills some 650. Resistant strains fail to develop... silver is the best all around germ fighter we have.”

Indeed no known bacteria have developed an immunity to silver. The comeback of silver in medicine began in the 1970s. The late Dr. Carl Moyer, chairman of Washington University's department of surgery, received a grant to develop better treatment for burn victims. He and Dr. Margraf sought an antiseptic strong enough, yet safe enough, to use over large areas of the body without reacting violently with body tissues. As a result of their efforts, many important new medical uses for silver were discovered.

Colloidal silver has been used successfully against 650 diseases. Colloidal silver can be applied to cuts, scrapes, bug bites, and skin conditions such as acne and eczema, and is so safe that it is a common practice in American hospitals for doctors to put a few drops in the eyes of newborn babies to kill bacteria that can cause blindness.

Bacteria are developing immunities to modern specialized antibiotics at an alarming rate. The medical community has acknowledged this publicly for years. The Los Angeles Times reported, in an article titled “Arsenal Of Antibiotics Failing As Resistant Bacteria Develop” for October 23, 1994: “But in the last decade, a broad resistance to antibiotics has begun to emerge. And because bacteria can transfer genes among themselves, experts only expect the resistance to grow. The potential nightmare is an Andromeda Strain, a super-microbe immune to all antibiotics that could wreak havoc.” UCLA Medical Center has reported that “colloidal silver... killed every virus that was tested in the lab.”

Colloidal silver is considered by the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) to be a pre-1938 drug. As stated in a September 13, 1991 letter by Food and Drug Administration consumer safety officer Harold Davies, the FDA has no jurisdiction regarding a pure, mineral element.

[H: Now, since one of the counts against Diane was somehow regarding “New Drugs”, I think the case might be closed right in the statement above. These colloids are hardly NEW DRUGS! And frankly, friends, any substance on the market in any form approved can be colloidalized and it changes not the product at all. (Another claim regarding DHEA in the charge count.)]

Contemporary medical tests indicate no known adverse effects, including Argyria, from the use of properly prepared colloidal silver. Argyria is the only known side effect of prolonged ingestion of large particles of silver, such as was experienced by workers in the mining and photography industry. Argyria is a cosmetic condition resulting in the permanent blue discoloration of the mucous membranes. There are no known adverse health effects of Argyria.

There has never been a recorded case of drug interaction or reaction with any other medication. Colloidal silver successfully reduces the length and severity of infectious disorders. This is of immense importance in view of recent reports that infectious disease is the third largest killer on the planet.

Silver occurs naturally in the soil as a trace mineral and is one of the essential elements required by plants, animals, and man. In the past we obtained silver and other necessary minerals from the food we ate. This is no longer the case. With most of our crops grown on highly depleted, chemically fertilized soils, these minerals are no longer readily available to us except through the use of mineral supplements.

Colloidal silver consists of molecules of pure silver suspended electrically in clean drinking water. Today it is made by driving electricity into fine silver. This process tears the silver molecules apart and deposits them with high electrical charge into the water. The highest grade colloidal silver is made from 0.999 silver in 99% distilled water.

[Editor's note: Don't be confused by the mixed terminology used here, where one parameter is specified in parts-per-thousand and the other is in percent. The 0.999 silver is what is called in the industry “fine” and translates into 99.9% pure silver.]

[H: By the way, ALL of the colloids produced or ever distributed by Diane Kunick and New Gaia were fully passed through the inspection of Dr. Young (the Editor-In-Chief in point) who holds a Ph.D. in, at the least, electrical engineering.]

Colloidal silver destroys bacteria and simple infections, viruses, yeast, fungi, and parasites (in their egg stage) while protecting the natural enzymes of the body.

It is accepted fact that the best (and usually the most expensive) water treatment system filters contain silver. Recent advancements in water treatment systems for the booming home spa and pool industry incorporate silver in the filter element in the intake, as well as a device which utilizes a floating solar photovoltaic cell which energizes silver elements to make colloidal silver continuously while exposed to the Sun's rays. While both of these methods dramatically reduce the cost of pool upkeep, they are unsuitable for our purposes, due to the use of ALLOY elements.

Today, with advances in technology, the manufacture of colloidal silver is far advanced and superior to the antiquated “grind” method that was most popular pre-1938. The ONLY form of silver that can be used safely as a dietary supplement is colloidal silver. The most advantageous and highest quality colloidal silver is a result of the electro-colloidal non-chemical procedure using the electric current technique. This method allows for the concentration of colloidal silver to be measured in parts per million (PPM). The best way to ascertain if a product is a true colloidal silver is by reviewing the ingredients. Additives or stabilizers may make the product unsuitable. Refrigeration may indicate that there is an ingredient (additive) that might spoil at room temperature. Long-term stability is an important aspect of colloidal silver.

Trying to impress the public, some companies go for a higher concentration (thousands of parts per million) of the silver, but then necessity requires that they use stabilizers or a protein to bond the silver. The major problem with the use of stabilizers and proteins is that they reduce the antimicrobial benefits by bonding to the silver, and so therefore require higher levels of silver to compensate for this reduced effectiveness. This is where great caution should be taken. Consuming hundreds of times the recommended amount of stabilized silver may result in Argyria, a cosmetic condition with no known ill-health effects.

There are no known documented cases of Argyria from the use of pure (no stabilizers or additives) electro-colloidal silver. Of special note: there is an inherent electrical charge in the hydro-carbon molecule of plastic containers. This draws the silver out of solution, binding it to the walls of the container, though this effect is slow. Plastic containers are suitable for short term storage of high potency colloidal silver. It is also sensitive to light and heat. Therefore storage of colloidal silver should be in colored glass, in a cool, dark place, but not necessarily in the refrigerator. Our preliminary tests indicate amber glass or other dark glass containers to be the most suitable.

Colloidal silver is not “germ specific” like the prescription antibiotics available today. It has a long shelf life (as long as it is stored properly), and possibly the best thing about colloidal silver is that it is available without a visit to your doctor!

[H: Comment, please: Its life in storage in ANY container is almost infinite unless exposed to electrical or magnetic pulses which cause the particulate to fall out of colloid. Facts are it can be easily stored in plastic, clear or colored and left anywhere convenient.]

[END OF SUB-QUOTE]

That last point in the above article probably has a lot to do with the FDA’s renewed attack on colloidal silver.

INTERRUPTION FOR TODAY, PLEASE. WE WILL TAKE UP DIRECTLY WHERE WE HAVE LEFT OFF HERE, DHARMA.

TO MARK: We will leave the hard-to-arrange segments, diagrams and illustrations for you to pick up and enter where appropriate to complete our respectful copy of these presentations, which, of course, were simply taken from the Internet sites, directly.

One last comment about storage bottles, etc., is that with colloids of both silver and gold, there is a very definite COLOR to the solution. Some providers are known to just add a bit of yellow coloring to the solution. This does not mean the solution is no good, it just means that the color is NOT from silver particulate. It is undetectable in dark glass bottles. We like it right out there advertising for itself.

Thank you and “to your health”.

Hatonn—“IF GOD HAD LONG AGO BEEN DEFINABLE, THERE WOULD BE BUT ONE CONCEPT OF GOD INSTEAD OF MANY RELIGIONS BECAUSE OF THE MANY CONCEPTS OF GOD”—ME!

To you who are troubled in LIFE, today: Truth is the best remover of fear to be found—anywhere. Remember, the past is history and the future is a mystery, the present is the gift and the reality.

I can only offer what is mine TO offer, friends, which would be a “way” through the chaos, a reminder of Truth being the only “way” to arrive at and achieve resolution of that which comes against you. It is good to hope for a “better” future, but it is truly sad to simply sit and wait for it to hit you. If you do not care enough to do whatever you can to build the will to resist evil, then I ask you why would God “interfere”?

Since that which is sent out will come back as surely as there is God—and THERE IS GOD—then it really pays in good rewards to only send forth that which is good, truth and lighted life.

You have to envision God as that which is important enough and worthy enough for yourself to achieve. To know what you ARE is the first step—you are God’s breath. He has breathed you into being and now He is breathing you back unto Himself.

This is a wonderful time and it is important that WE do not distress and despair and fall away from the path as we near our destination. Salu.

As we move on with our coverage of colloids, specifically silver in this particular series, we must do so in a politically correct way in which our brothers and sisters receive no harm from those who would destroy and literally mislead you in your soul journey.

This means for you personally that it is wise to, yes, mentally dwell with God, for it is quite good. However, you tend to forget a most important reality: God dwells with you! That means that as long as you exist in the aspect of physical form, that experience is also God’s chosen experience. So be most careful, for what most often happens is that man mistakes “thinking” and accepts only concepts which may well be worthy but are most often quite weak and broken.

Man experiences and “thought” is the instigator of all things real or imagined and often many cannot tell the difference. Thinking is but an electric awareness of things sensed and recorded with the cells of the brain for repetitive usage through what is termed “memories”. Experience builds those memories into reality of conscious realization. The only way to utilize those thoughts is through action and it turns out then that the only desirable path would be one in which WISDOM is the guide.

We must always try to combine worthy “memories” of each and all, combine them into a “reality” within worthy “thought” and then through the processes of “action” we can “achieve” together that which serves best the “cause” of Man AND CREATOR.

It is Sunday here in Manila and that fact means, literally, NOTHING. It simply is a designation or identification of a cycle man has labeled “a day”. YOU designate whether or not it is good, bad, neutral, or boring. EVERYTHING is only what YOU make of it to be!

We will turn back to the copywork now, of material regarding, specifically, Silver colloids. The facts are true for any electrical colloidalizing of any mineral substance—in this case, we focus on metallic minerals which can be utilized “as” electrodes.

Each element bears a frequency in its own state of being. Sometimes elements are bound with another and since that is difficult to manage in the simple form of colloidalizing, we only choose to deal with one at a time. Each element, however, has its own frequency, light-ray identification and wavelength. We utilize the ion for the electric charge to the particle in focus.

As an example of what I mean, as a professor here: A virus is but a crystalline life-form which is DNA-identifiable. These can combine, recombine and be broken into fragments, each of which can reproduce itself, as individual fragments are “holographic” in concept of reproduction capability. Each one, however, can mutate as easily if introduced particulate is present. This means that any virus moving within a body CAN mutate according to the frequency presence of cells encountered.

Since immune cells function to encounter and remove “invaders”, then it is the immune system of cells which will carry the mutation capability and characteristics. In other words, to best destroy the host organism the invader organism, parasitic virus as example, must destroy the host’s immune system. It is a totally simplistic concept. So, interrupt the process, knock out the molecule in the virus itself that acts as the neck holding the cap (brains) of the crystalline form (body), and you have both salvaged the remaining immune system and have actually, in most diseases, built a resistance to being again attacked by the same DNA-virus. But, with recombined bodies it becomes very difficult to directly neutralize a mutation or “man-tampered” creature. So, you must consider the type of molecule (neck) you might confront and have a “frequency” introduction of that in which it cannot remain intact. Frankly, silver will best suit the MOST numbers of debilitating microbes.

Since viruses have a neck of, usually, zinc, then you must have at LEAST the “frequency” of zinc to effectively terminate the virus itself. The other cells present will remain undamaged.

As the viruses themselves work to protect their own life-form and being parasitic in themselves, sometimes you must reach for a higher frequency to terminate them. Again, however, in almost all instances silver is capable of the task.

In some disease processes, however, as in spirochetes, the frequency of gold (Au) is the effective choice against said microbe. So far we only work up through titanium as a practical use element because you then must move into the invisible rays and it is unnecessary. Furthermore the invisible rays (radiation) are damaging to all cellular structures and will cause further mutation capabilities. Platinum offers a good alternative but a more expensive one so keep that in mind when at first you don’t succeed with the program of the moment.

Will this work every time? I am not permitted to predict such a conclusion. I can and will say, for your information only, that any suitable colloidal solution properly created and used, IS TOTALLY HARMLESS AND CANNOT BE OVERDOSED.

Since colloids are still on the open market, yea even in health product stores, I suggest that CONTACT find a resource and I invite you to ALL/EACH call for possibly still-available source not yet pulled from the market.

You probably want product, not apparatus, at this emergency-established TIME.

I AM ALSO ASKING THAT OUR PEOPLE GET A COMPATIBLE RESOURCE FOR APPARATUS TO PLAY WITH AS ANYONE WISHES—BUT YOU DON’T NEED THE LOCK FOR THE BARN “AFTER” THE HORSE IS GONE AND DEAD.

My suggestion to my friends and readers? Well, since Mr. Neil and Mr. Latona were the responsible parties who made the stock on hand, I suggest that it is outstanding product. I certainly do NOT suggest Diane be further involved with such as New Gaia but there surely must be ability to utilize product, for there has been no cease nor desist order.

Since DIANE is NOT New Gaia or any other company, she is not under discussion here. Anyone can purchase product from any resource in business. Has everyone become immobilized by FEAR and TERROR? Well, I suggest anthrax, et al., is far more deadly than a distant war in Afghanistan.

YOU HAVE ASKED FOR HELP—THERE IT IS!

I EVEN SUGGEST SOMETHING LIKE A THREE-FOR-TWO SALE OR SOMETHING WHICH GIVES A GOOD BREAK IN PRICING FOR THIS INCREDIBLE TIME OF STRESS AND NEED.

Please remember that “I” recommend Gaiandriana as a separate daily solution to better utilize any “other” supplement introduced for the body’s use.

Surely there can be a solution and it is not yet unlawful to consult on such matters. Medical drug houses have resource consultants—even for anthrax products.

Any residual product should be carefully labeled as “no approved therapeutic value established” and “supplemental use only”, “food supplement” (mineral) and satisfy all laws.

In the case of New Gaia—New Gaia isn’t even named although it no longer exists—but only Diane is named in the Federal suit not yet even established, heard or filed.

You people run in FEAR and you will NOT have that which can literally SAVE your life and well-being.

Facts are: There was not even a warning regarding New Gaia, nor to Diane. The problem was that she is accused, somehow, of mentioning the term “cure”. SHE HAS BEEN CHARGED WITH NOTHING. INTERESTING ISN’T IT THAT THE CHARGES SOMEHOW NOW COME AFTER THE BARGAINING FOR AN AGREEABLE CHARGE WHICH ALLOWS, SOMEHOW, THE LAWYERS TO GET A “WIN” AND THE OPPONENT CITIZEN TO GET THE “LOSS”. THERE IS TRULY SOMETHING QUITE WRONG WITH YOUR JUDICIARY SYSTEM, PEOPLE.

It is as simple as using your brains. If you plug a 110-volt electrically run appliance into a 220-240 circuit, you will certainly blow the system of the appliance. That does not, however, mean that the appliance is pulled from the market because you didn’t read your instructions for use. And my goodness, in such misuse as just described, you WILL turn very greyish-blue in the process if exposed to the electrocution properties introduced.

IT IS IMPORTANT FOR DIANE TO REALIZE THAT ALTHOUGH SHE IS CHARGED WITH SEVERAL COUNTS OF “NEW DRUG” DISTRIBUTION, NOTE IT IS ALL IN THE FORM OF COLLOIDS. HOW INTERESTING, IN THAT THE ONLY ONE ACKNOWLEDGED HAS TO BE THE ONLY ONE UNDER THE MICROSCOPE—SILVER. WOW, WHAT HAVE I JUST TOLD YOU, CHELAS? ALL THE REST OF THEIR NONSENSE REVOLVES AROUND WHAT “SOMEONE ELSE” WROTE REGARDING SOMETHING LIKE “CURE”. WELL, THIS IS OBVIOUSLY A DISAGREEABLE WORD OF THE ROBOTS OF THE STRING-MANIPULATORS. AND BY THE WAY, DHEA IS NOT A METALLIC ELEMENT AND IT IS NAMED. IT IS ON THE OPEN MARKET AND EASILY AVAILABLE “EVERYWHERE”.

REMEMBER THAT THE ACCUSERS HAVE TO “PROVE, BEYOND A SHADOW OF A DOUBT, INTENT TO DEFRAUD. THEY CANNOT ACHIEVE THAT CONCLUSION—AND ALSO REMEMBER, THE ACCUSED IN A FEDERAL CASE “CRIME” TRIAL HAS TO “PROVE” NOTHING.

REMEMBER THAT NOBODY SAYS YOU CAN’T SUCK ON YOUR GOLD WEDDING BAND. SO, WHAT IS THIS PROBLEM WITH COLLOIDALIZATION? THERE IS NOT A PROBLEM—KEEP “THEIR” LIMITATIONS IN MIND

WHILE THEY TRY TO SOCK IT TO YOU!

NOW CONSIDER, IS THERE SOME “LAW” THAT SAYS YOU CAN’T HOOK UP YOUR WEDDING RING TO A D-CELL BATTERY, STICK IT IN WATER AND THEN DRINK THE WATER? WELL, BLOW ME PIPES! IF YOU DID THIS VERY THING, YOU WOULD HAVE A COLLOID OF WHATEVER YOU USED AS AN ELEMENT SOURCE. ALL YOU HAVE ARE CHARGED IONS ADDED TO THE WATER. THINK ABOUT IT AND YES, YOU CAN CERTAINLY USE MY REPORT ON THE TOPIC.

We are talking here about “old as the ages”, people.

Do you hearken back, ever, to “finds” in tombs and debris fields of ancient ruins which are obviously some type of batteries? Well, now you know what those were “for”. They were used to “electrically” colloidalize the precious elements to preserve the lives of the Elite. By the time of Sir Nostradamus, scientists, there was capability of producing that amount of energy required to “colloidalize”. They just didn’t have electricity contained as you enjoy today—it was yet “undiscovered”—NOT ABSENT.

We will now turn to a continuation of the presentation in progress, October 21, 2001. Actually, this is a very good year, friends, in spite what it “appears to be”.

[QUOTING The SPECTRUM, February 1, 2000, Norey Latona compiled report on Silver Colloids:]

The following article is excerpted from the http://www.fordsmtn.com/why_use_colloidal_silver.htm Website. It addresses several commonly asked questions, provides some useful tips for using colloidal silver, and at the end, relates a most dramatic example of silver’s effectiveness in tackling nasty challenges.

[QUOTING:]

COLLOIDAL SILVER: THE REDISCOVERY OF A SUPER ANTIBIOTIC

[H: This is truly quite fun, readers, because we don’t have to even use that politically incorrect term of “anti-“ anything. We could just call this particular colloid a “Silver Bullet”, or is that too much as well? You have allowed the very adversary in high places to change your language and the meanings of words, friends, and so you have to develop, I suppose, your own code of terms.]

Why use silver as opposed to other antibiotics?

Pain! In the burn ward of any hospital, the number-one priority is fighting infection. Because other disinfectants are too painful when applied to large areas, and because of silver’s long-lasting properties, silver sulfadiazine is the most used disinfectant for treating burns in hospitals.

Alcohol, iodine, and hydrogen peroxide are other substances used to disinfect wounds. All of them have one distinct disadvantage as a disinfectant when compared to silver: the STING!

Imagine you have fallen on pavement while bicycling or running, and the skin on the palms of both hands as well as your knees is completely raw to the point that the wounds throb with your pulse. Now imagine how much worse it would feel to pour iodine or alcohol over your tender flesh! Colloidal silver will spare you the extra agony!

In addition, a fairly large percentage of people are allergic to iodine, although they may not have become aware of it yet. Alcohol is useful for sterilizing objects, but it is just plain poisonous to humans and germs alike! By comparison, silver is toxic to microbes but actually beneficial to humans.

Why is colloidal silver so popular?

Interest in colloidal silver has increased recently because illness-causing organisms do not build up a resistance to colloidal silver the way they do to antibiotics. Antibiotics are becoming less effective as pathogenic organisms develop increasing resistance to them. Because of something called “phage” transfer of antibiotic resistance, reported more than 20 years ago, researchers expect this trend of pathogens’ resistance to antibiotics to continue to grow.

Fortunately, the timely re-emergence of colloidal silver due to new technology and greatly reduced costs of production, may prove to be one of the best developments in modern medicine.

Why silver?

Dr. Robert Becker noticed a correlation between low silver levels and sickness. People who had low levels of silver were frequently sick, had innumerable colds, flu, fevers, and other maladies. He believes a silver deficiency is the reason for the improper functioning of the immune system.

[Editor’s note: This statement is widely quoted by those promoting colloidal silver products, and it may well be exactly what Dr. Becker believes. However, a more comprehensive hypothesis would be that, with silver present in the body to help with the control of invading “bugs”, there is less of a load upon the immune system’s machinery, and thus the immune system can get around to dealing with healing/repair projects that otherwise have to sit on the “back burner” while it fights invading bugs. Therefore, silver may help the immune system, not by acting as some sort of “vitamins” to charge-up the immune system, but by taking-on some of the load that the immune system would otherwise have to deal with.]

Silver has benefited mankind’s health for literally thousands of years. In ancient Greece and Rome, people used silver to keep liquids fresh. American settlers traveling across the West put a silver dollar in milk to delay its spoiling. A silver compound, silver sulfadiazine (Silvadene [reg. trademark]), is used in all major burn centers in the United States.

Colloidal silver is non-toxic, non-addictive, and has no known side effects. The body develops no tolerance and one cannot overdose. Colloidal silver cannot cause harm to the liver, kidneys, or any other organ in the body.

It is safe for pregnant and nursing women and even aids the developing fetus in growth and health, as well as easing the mother’s delivery and recovery. Colloidal silver is odorless, tasteless, non-stinging, harmless to the eyes, contains no free radicals, is harmless to human enzymes, and has no reaction with traditional medications.

Colloidal silver improves digestion, aids in the regeneration of damaged cells and tissues, and helps prevent colds, flu, and other diseases caused by pathogenic organisms.

What does colloidal silver NOT do?

Silver does not interact with other medications. It does not upset the stomach, but rather is a digestive aid. Ulcers have been shown to be caused in many cases by a bacteria, which would be destroyed by colloidal silver.

Medical journal reports of documented studies spanning more than 100 years indicate no known side effects from oral or intravenous administration of colloidal silver in animal or human testing. Colloidal silver has been used with good results in the most demanding of healthcare circumstances.

If silver is so effective as a germ fighter, why hasn't it been used before now?

Wrapping wounds in silver foil was a common treatment around the turn of the century. Doctors and scientists have long been aware of the germ-fighting properties of silver compounds. Most of these compounds are known as “silver salts” or silver combined with another chemical that gives it a positive charge. Silver salts can be irritating and bring various side effects, such as staining the skin. Pure colloidal silver attacks germs in the same fashion that silver salts do, but without the side effects.

Much of the attention that silver received as an antibiotic was diverted with the advent of a penicillin-type drug, coupled with the fact that the process of making colloidal silver used to be very expensive.

PRODUCT QUALITY

Many brands of colloidal silver are inferior. The highest grade is produced by the electro-colloidal/non-chemical method where the silver particles and water have been colloidized, i.e., dispersed within and bound to each other by an electric current. The super-fine silver particles are suspended indefinitely in demineralized water.

The ideal color of colloidal silver is a golden yellow. Darker colors indicate larger silver particles, which tend to collect at the bottom of the container and are not true colloids. If a product contains a stabilizer or lists trace elements other than silver, or if it needs to be shaken, it is inferior. If a product requires refrigeration, some other ingredient is present that could spoil. The container and dropper must be glass, as plastic cannot preserve the silver in liquid suspension for any length of time. Some brands are actually unsafe. High concentrations of silver do not kill disease germs more effectively than the safe range of 3 to 5 parts per million (ppm).

[H: Here again, is erroneous information which bears some reason in the conclusions, but plastic IS perfectly safe and this is evidenced by such a nebulous statement of time preservation of “for any length of time” with NONE given. Glass is certainly not the shipping container of choice and dark coloration of the bottle is deceptive. If you get a solution in a clear plastic bottle you can SEE what you have, have security in the shipping and then if YOU wish, you can transfer to a dark glass container. This is totally trivial and should be noted as container of choice, not worthy of much consideration.]

Darker colors do not necessarily indicate “larger” particles. It only indicates POSSIBLY larger particles or MORE particulate. The point here is that if you are colloidalizing properly, you simply do not NEED more particulate so my recommendation is that you keep with some color or on the very light side or be prepared to dilute in a water spray for misting the skin, mouthwash, etc. A little goes a long way and here is one product where “overkill” is not an advantage but frankly, will not hurt you or discolor you.

What I find most notably important is that as you move to “do-it-yourself” you have a problem because of getting the wrong wires/rods for the processing and will possibly end up with an alloy effect. This could be true of producers of product referred to as “brands” above. However, capable hands can produce a good product if they understand electricity and colloidalization processing.

Is this to keep you from playing with some apparatus? Perchance, if you don't find any other way to get product. Those choices are certainly up to you but like cheap watches set forth as some wondrous Tesla apparatus and Spiritual energizer—you will have garbage if you are not careful in your wish to gain a “cheaper” way or consider probabilities of being unable to properly utilize some apparatus. These not only SHOULD BE your choices, but must be your choices.]

INGESTING COLLOIDAL SILVER

Taken orally, the silver solution is absorbed from the mouth into the bloodstream, then transported quickly to the body cells. Swishing the solution under the tongue briefly before swallowing ensures fast absorption. In three to four days the silver will have accumulated in tissues sufficiently for benefits to begin. Since colloidal silver is eliminated by the kidneys, lymph system, and bowel after three weeks, a regular daily intake is recommended as a protection against dangerous pathogens.

[H: This writer is just covering his legal bases, readers, so please understand his caution.]

In cases of minor burns, an accumulation of colloidal silver can hasten healing, reducing scar tissue and infection. The lives of millions of people susceptible to chronic low-grade infections can be enhanced by this powerful preventative health measure.

CHRONIC OR SERIOUS CONDITIONS

Take double or triple the recommended amount for 30 to 45 days, then drop to the maintenance dose. If your body is extremely ill or toxic, do not be in a hurry to clear up everything at once. If pathogens are killed off too quickly, the body's five eliminatory channels, i.e., the liver, kidneys, skin, lungs, and bowel, may be temporarily overloaded, causing flu-like conditions, headache, extreme fatigue, dizziness, nausea, or aching muscles. Ease-off on the colloidal silver to the maintenance amount and increase your distilled water intake. Regular bowel movements are a must in order to relieve the discomforts of detoxification. Resolve to reduce sugar and saturated fats from the diet, and exercise more. Given the opportunity, the body's natural ability to heal will amaze you.

[H: Use your heads—the symptoms above are not from overload of silver. At worst it is truly a “kill-off” response. It also may well be simply due to getting rid of too many of your friendly microbes NECESSARY TO GOOD DIGESTION AND INTESTINAL HEALTH. Better diet and exercise may well be healthy but have NOTHING to do with silver, colloidal or otherwise, and for that reason “I” would not have chosen this article as a prime offering. SPECTRUM can choose whatever they find on the Internet for their presentations—JUST AS CAN ANY ONE OF YOU!]

TOLERANCE TO DISEASE ORGANISMS

It is impossible for single-celled germs to mutate into silver-resistant forms, as happens with conventional antibiotics. Therefore, no tolerance to colloidal silver ever develops. Also, colloidal silver cannot interact or interfere with other medicine being taken. Inside the body, silver forms no toxic compounds, nor reacts with anything other than a germ's oxygen-metabolizing enzyme. Colloidal silver is truly a safe, natural remedy for many of mankind's ills.

Satisfied users have taken one tablespoon daily, for four days, to establish a level, then one teaspoon daily for maintenance (proportional to body weight for children). Also, colloidal silver can be applied directly to cuts, scrapes, and open sores, or on a bandage for warts. It can be applied on eczema, itches, acne, or bug bites.

To purify water, add one tablespoon per gallon, shake well, and wait six minutes. Mixed this way, it's tasteless. It is not an allopathic poison.

COLLOIDAL SILVER IN ADVANCE OF ILLNESS

When taken orally each day, and applied topically when there is a skin problem, it's like having a second immune system. Older folks feel younger because their body energies are used for other than fighting disease, and digestion is better. Medical research has shown that silver promotes rapid healing, with less scar tissue, even in the case of severe burns. Fantastic successes have been reported in many cases previously given up by established doctors. Colloidal silver is tasteless and won't sting even a baby's eyes, and won't upset your stomach. It is produced today by a modernized, original process, at a tiny fraction of the pre-1938 cost, and is more concentrated. The silver acts only as a catalyst and is stabilized. It is absolutely non-toxic, except to one-cell plants and animals, and is non-addicting. It also kills parasites because they have a one-cell egg stage in their reproductive cycle.

COLLOIDAL SILVER:

THE REDISCOVERY OF A SUPER ANTIBIOTIC, KILLS BACTERIA, VIRUSES, AND FUNGI

Since the 1940s the human immune system has been gradually breaking down. A good immune system should be able to withstand common ailments of a cold, flu, or candidiasis. Even the more serious illnesses of cancer, chronic fatigue syndrome, and AIDS could be deterred if the human immune system were strong and vital.

The modern immune system is overtaxed daily with the constant bombardment of chemical pollutants in the air, water, and even our food. Before 1940, most of our food was grown using organic, natural fertilizer. The soil and natural fertilizer contained many trace chemicals necessary to the human body which supported its natural defense system.

Today, the soil itself is far less vital and the fertilizers are synthetic, chemical versions which have none of the trace elements found in organic fertilizer. One of those elements which have been disappearing from our food supply is silver.

A cancer researcher named Dr. Gary Smith stated, in an unpublished paper: “While analyzing hair samples and questioning the parties involved, I noticed the correlation between low silver levels and sickness. People who showed low silver levels in their hair analyses were frequently sick. They seemed to have innumerable colds, flu, fevers, and various other sickness. I believe that a silver deficiency may be the key to the improper function of the immune system.”

[Editor's (Dr. Ed Young) note: If Dr. Smith's paper on this subject is STILL unpublished in the medical research literature, one can assume there is an interesting story behind its denial into print!

In the late 1970s, while an inmate at the Stanford University asylum, I (E.Y.) had submitted a scientific paper to the top science journal in the world for new phenomena, NATURE, describing a device I had invented. It was something like a Geiger Counter, which actually was responsive as a detector of MENTAL energies, especially those associated with healing. It evolved from original work with Kirin Photography. The data was overwhelmingly and astonishingly convincing, else I would not have even submitted the paper. It's (sic) publication was denied, and the reason for denying publication was—get this: “clearly what you state is not possible, therefore you must have done something wrong.” And the Earth is flat, don't you know?!

I learned an important lesson at that time about the “religion” of science—especially when the TRUE agenda (of keeping important discoveries suppressed) is controlled from behind the scenes—just as in the case of all the other “churches” both within and without the arena of so-called “higher” education.]

So, over time, our immune systems have been getting weaker. At the same time that our bodies' natural defense system has weakened, the destructive, illness-causing microbes have been getting stronger due to the overuse of prescribed antibiotics.

An antibiotic kills the harmful bacteria. However, some of the bacteria survive to breed stronger cells, which then become resistant to the antibiotic. There are now strains of super-microbes that are unkillable by any known prescribed antibiotic.

[Editor's (Dr. Ed Young) note: The above is true and fine and scary enough—as far as it goes as an explanation. But regular readers of this newspaper [H: WHAT NEWSPAPER, DR. YOUNG, WOULD THAT PERCHANCE BE?] will be quick to point out how much the assault situation has been helped along by “superbugs” purposely engineered to be unleashed at this time upon a mostly unsuspecting world populace.

After all, population control and a massive depopulation of the planet have long been agenda items of the so-called “elite” New World Order gang. The trick is to accomplish this goal without waking up too many of the sleeping public to a state of actually taking action against these crooks in high places. Remember the frog in the pot of nice, warm water who doesn't know he is being boiled into soup because the temperature is being turned-up ever so slowly!]

Obviously, there is a crisis brewing in the condition of the human body. We no longer have a strong enough internal immune system to fight off disease, and the external support we've relied upon for decades is now realized to be doing more harm than good. The drugs we've been treating ourselves with have actually created stronger strains of bacteria that are resistant to common antibiotic treatment.

There is a solution to both problems—known as liquid colloidal silver. Silver is one of the 92 natural, chemically-pure elements. It was a medical remedy used in both Britain and the U.S. until the late 1930s. In articles published in the prestigious medical journals of the time, silver was found to be effective against many different infectious diseases. It was toxic to all species of bacteria, fungi, protozoa, parasites, and many viruses. However, it was not found to be toxic to the human body.

A letter from the University of California, Los Angeles Medical Center, written in 1988, outlined their findings on colloidal silver research. Dr. Larry Ford states:

“With regards to the silver solutions that you sent me, I tested them without dilutions, using standard antimicrobial tests for disinfectants. The silver solutions were antibacterial, for concentrations of ten to the fifth; that's one hundred thousand organisms per milliliter of streptococcus, pyogenese, staphylococcus aureus, neasorheae gonorrhea, gardnerilla, vaginalis, salmonella, and other enteric pathogens and fungicidals for Candida albicans and Candida globata.” Because of its wide-spread effectiveness, silver could be looked upon as a secondary immune system.

SOME TIPS FOR USING COLLOIDAL SILVER

1. Take a daily dose of colloidal silver in 8 oz. of water for prevention against all types of infections. One half to one teaspoon a day is a good long-term preventative dose.

[H: Actually, better would be just that amount or a few drops in the mouth directly is better. It has opportunity to serve the mouth as well as not be considered an internal DRUG of some kind. It will find its mark and you will be “free” to use another day. It can also be used as some “purification” of that glass of water but do not treat as a “dose” of anything other than to refer to an amount. The FDA has a fixation about those things when, in fact, they know nothing whatsoever about that of which they speak or assault.]

2. When applying to a wart, cut, etc., moisten a bandage with colloidal silver and apply to the desired surface. This will make the effects of the silver longer lasting.

3. Take colloidal silver on camping trips to treat drinking water. Allow several minutes after adding the silver before drinking.

4. Put colloidal silver in emergency storage water to prevent the growth of algae and bacteria.

5. Use colloidal silver in home canning or freezing as a food preservative. This will vastly improve the shelf life and freshness of the food.

[H: Carry a small atomizer with you and add a few drops to your soups, salads, water, etc., when away from home and/or if you are unsure of the quality of your food product at home. A spritz in time saves nine—hours of pain and agony of food poisoning. Another good idea when it was not questioned at every spoonful of intake was simply to take a quarter-ounce sip as you begin to eat, or even immediately following a meal. It will work right in that tummy-tum-tum.]

THE HEALING “CRISIS” VERY IMPORTANT

After using colloidal silver, many people experience what is called the “healing crisis”. The healing crisis is from the result of your body detoxifying. You may experience rashes or similar things of this nature.

Your personal symptoms may seem like they are getting worse, but this is not the case. Your body is actually clearing up that problem and it will usually only last for a short time. Example: Eczema sufferers experience their rash getting worse, but then clearing up for good. Expect your body to cleanse from taking this product.

HERE'S A DRAMATIC EXAMPLE OF WHAT SILVER CAN DO

In a demonstration that took place in Nebraska in 1978, fifty gallons of raw sewage was pumped into a swimming pool that contained no disinfectant. A bacteria count was taken, measuring 7000 E. Coli cells per milliliter of water. Swallowing any amount of this water would have resulted in severe illness resembling food poisoning. The water was then flushed through silver plates that carried a small electrical charge. Within three hours, the water was completely free of E. Coli bacteria! [END OF QUOTING]

I need to leave this writing, please, lest we swamp the segment. However, I need to address the issue of doing-it-yourself.

As long as there is reference to CONTACT, AND THE SPECTRUM PEOPLE SHOULD TAKE CARE IN THEIR ADVERTISING AS WELL. It is far more dangerous to start passing out advice and instructions to PRODUCE a substance in the process of pressure to suppress, than to simply have somehow distributed something without “supplement” on the label.

Yes, you CAN make colloids yourself but WE WILL NOT OFFER THOSE DIAGRAMS FOR YOUR ATTENTION. THE APPARATUS ITSELF IS FINE BUT I REMIND YOU THAT IT IS FAR MORE DANGEROUS TO GIVE INSTRUCTIONS AND GROW “POT WEED” THAN TO ACTUALLY NIP A BIT.

All the information you could possibly use to tinker and toy is around, just as are directions to build home-made bombs (even atomic). I repeat that making a safe and good colloid depends on the electrodes used—not an alignment of proper sized batteries. I ask the paper staff to be discerning.

If anyone wishes to discuss resources, fine, but it will NOT be through this publication under the approval of myself, please.

Now, the next question might well be: “Why use Spectrum's presentation of this topic?”

Because Spectrum is a stolen paper and I need to point that out to you AGAIN. The very ones that precipitated four simultaneous raids with 40 ARMED Fed agents WERE FROM SPECTRUM ASSOCIATIONS WHICH HAVE PUBLISHED THIS VERY INFORMATION.

The information is ALL pulled from the Internet and therefore KNOW that every last sentence is available to anyone on the globe with a hookup.

It is necessary that YOU understand the hands-on participation with THIS VERY PRODUCT of the ones who did, in fact, steal CONTACT, the paper, and continue to use format, writings and other people's proprietary property while bringing damage as much as possible on their newly accused “enemies”. Well, people, I am the enemy of those miscreants who even publish under MY IDENTIFICATION. It is NOT alright—and as for Dr. Young's Stanford “inventions” and “papers for publication”: So what?! Perhaps Dr. Young's tour of that “Stanford asylum” (his term and not mine) speaks well of possibilities.

I believe, Mark, that we won't offer more from that source although we are open to any and all other discussions and information on same. [MM: Just enter “colloidal silver” in any decent search engine (Google produced 32,600 links) to learn everything anyone could possibly ever want to know about same.]

We have research going on the laws as well as corporation laws which are under the glass stemming from those Raids of a year ago.

Appropriate to the topic might well be: “What a tangled web you weave, when first you practice to deceive.”

And yes indeed, I certainly DO suggest you get as large a supply of, especially, silver colloid as you can muster—and get some into storage. It is incredibly less expensive than $2.00++ a tablet of an enhanced penicillin product with a brand stamp in it.

THIS IS NOT TO BE IN ANY WAY PRACTICING MEDICINE OR “CURING” ANYTHING.

Thank you for sharing and caring enough about yourself to send self the very best.—GCH

RE: COLLOIDAL SILVER: DISCLAIMER AND WARNING TO ALL READERS. THE LAW STATED CLEARLY WITH REGULATORY LIMITATIONS IN FORCE

CLARIFICATION OF INFORMATION REGARDING SILVER (OR ANY)
COLLOIDAL MINERAL SUPPLEMENTS
ON THE MARKET OR OTHERWISE DISCUSSED.

After some 12++ hours of searching the laws in the U.S. Federal Register, the following small article was found and will be offered to this viewing audience. There were found, however, a minimum listing on the Internet of hundreds of articles regarding the term itself, Colloidal Silver. However, there were some articles, like this one (if it would be on the Internet which it should not even be unless presented by one, Bellringer or Young (SPECTRUM, which articles used recently by CONTACT, are already on Internet) would bear a disclaimer. Example: Dr. Becker (Body Electric) does not recommend Silver as in the “treatment” of anything. These will be all-inclusive but when referenced as to “silver”, Colloidal silver, etc., would present hundreds more.

Now, with the thousands of Internet businesses offering supplements, inclusive of Silver Colloids, “... at least 18 Web-based marketers got such warnings.” Eighteen? How many supplement companies and major outlets are in business, do you suppose? IS IT ACTUALLY TOO MUCH TO ASK THAT THE FDA (FEDS) NOTIFY “EVERYBODY”? OR DO WE JUST WAIT, HAVE A FINK-INFORMER FIX A DEAL FOR RAIDS, CONFISCATION OF ANYTHING AND EVERYTHING, AND “EVERYWHERE”? This IS the route taken by Rick and Gail Martin-Cortright and Dr. Ed Young-Norey Latona. This is not exactly trust-your-brother week, readers.

These people KNEW about the regulation problems and in spite of that presented incredible articles in behalf of Silver Colloids and even HOW TO MAKE IT YOURSELF instructions. Therefore, I would guess that something went wrong in “River City”.

Well, CONTACT will make an effort to run all articles it can carry on the topic of Anthrax and other diseases of terrorists, and anyone wishing to may write “substantial” information on these topics IN THE PAPER with full credit to original authors and privacy to all “senders” as is journalistic shelter.

Mr. Ekker was also under oath to protect the business interests of any lender to Phoenix Institute. Not for “secrecy” but to protect the privacy of individual corporations making loans to said Institute.

An example: In a legal deposition Mr. Ekker refused to give information regarding records and loan-gold information for some corporations. The lawyers took that refusal as contempt to the Judge. Said Judge then ORDERED the information to be brought to him. Mr. Ekker complied by handing the private information to the Judge requesting privacy. The Judge then got angry, had copies made, and that private information was handed directly to George Green, the adversary party involved, having stolen gold from the Institute—and before evening of THAT day Mr. Green had mailed that information to everyone on his mailing list.

Another example: In Bakersfield at the settlement of legal consideration regarding legal counsel, the Judge ordered the “settlement” maintained as “Secret” and divulging that information could be handled as contempt of court with all the charges listed, i.e., jail time, fines, etc.

Before even getting home, the lawyers had divulged the full extent of the information and the resolution of the case was entered into the public records of the court proceedings. Just “Ekkers”, it seems, would be held in contempt for speaking of the settlement. All of that is quite another story, however, and shouldn’t be bogging down this writing. However, we do claim right of Freedom of the Press and Journalistic freedom to non-disclosure of source.

You will note that “sources”, especially anyone around government, will invariably be listed as “an insider source”, a “high-level person asking to not be identified” and/or “anonymous source”. SO, WE CLAIM ALL THOSE AS WELL.

Since Mr. Rick Martin-Cortright is the identified and only journalist-writer of journalistic interviews and correspondent for said SPECTRUM—AND—since he is also a primary informer regarding the case regarding Silver colloids and Federal Raids, it is obvious that SPECTRUM DID KNOW, BEFORE FEBRUARY 1, 2000, THAT SILVER COLLOIDS WERE IN SERIOUS FEDERAL FDA YOGURT. THAT IS WHEN SPECTRUM NOT ONLY PUBLISHED ALL THE PRO-INFORMATION ABOUT SILVER COLLOID BUT HOW TO PRODUCE IT AS WELL.

We will deal with other “counts” later because this is the one that pins the miscreants to the board as having been the “informant” under oath affidavits and “frame-up” (as you are wont to call “ratting”—on) of innocent parties under cloak of witness protection and actual PAYOFF for capture and conviction (which includes a guilty plea even if you are not guilty).

Ekkers, for instance, are BOTH card-carrying journalists, with Press Cards (even attended the APEC meeting in Malaysia, as such a representative of the Press corps). We do not, even under court order, divulge sources if asked not to do so. This is a long-standing privilege and worthy journalists have gone to prison for honoring that time-allowed shelter.

In these discussion-types of focus, however, it is suitable to name contributors in general format, for we are only dealing with information references. We state these facts because we are now flooded with exceptional material and we shall certainly attempt to share as much as is possible.

With all the problems with Silver colloids, or ANY colloid, we state the following:

IN THAT LINE OF PRESENTATION: WE DO

NOT RECOMMEND SILVER FOR ANYTHING EXCEPT COINAGE AND WATCH BRACELETS OR TO HANG AS ORNAMENTS ON THE CHRISTMAS TREE FOR WATCH AMULETS AND/OR CHAINS. PLEASE PUT THIS ON THE RECORD. CERTAINLY CONTACT TAKES NO RESPONSIBILITY NOR DOES IT NECESSARILY AGREE WITH ANY INFORMATION PUBLISHED THEREIN, AND MR. MARK MOORE SHOULD MAKE A MORE CANDID STATEMENT ABOUT THE POSITION OF THE PAPER ITSELF. [MM: The “Editorial Policy” of CONTACT newspaper is published at the bottom, lower-left-hand corner of the last page of every issue of same. In addition, full credit and contact information is always given when provided. Anything more candid than the latter disclaimer should rightfully be stated by the legal owners of aforesaid publication. Of course, I stand firmly behind all commentary subsequent to my “MM” designation.]

YOU, CITIZEN, LIVE IN A POLICE STATE WITH NO CONSTITUTIONAL PROTECTION—ESPECIALLY UNDER THE LAWS OF SAID CONSTITUTION. AND THAT IS PURELY MY OWN OBSERVATION AND THE EXPERIENCE OF MY FRIENDS WHO HAVE EXPERIENCED THIS INCREDIBLE REMOVAL OF CIVIL RIGHTS UNDER THAT CONSTITUTION.

I MAKE THESE STATEMENTS ALSO IN BEHALF OF THE AMERICAN FREE PRESS WHO WAS LITERALLY BANKRUPTED, RUN OUT OF BUSINESS (AS SPOTLIGHT) BY THESE SAME PROCESSES. NOW YOU ARE IN A “WAR” WHICH ENFORCES THE ALREADY STATE OF AFFAIRS OF POWERS OVER EVERYTHING AND EVERY ONE OF YOU—UNDER MILITARY FORCE.

Back, however, to Colloids, and specifically Silver. None others are in point, only some claim that “Diane” espoused such as gold to have “cure” properties for some things. It is charged that she did, in fact, create and mail through the U.S. Postal Service statements of same. The products themselves were listed but not named in the charges as such.

It is interesting to note, in addition to the following information, that Diane is accused as of November 24, 1999 of personally selling products as listed, including Silver Colloids. Well, if the law was not until August 17, 1999, then the dates are pretty incorrect in calculation. Moreover, “Diane” SOLD NOTHING AND THAT SHALL BE PROVEN IN A COURT OF LAW.

The point to be noted is August 17, 1999. (Entry date of 64 FR 44658, Aug. 17, 1999.) [Yes, interesting date.]

The articles as presented in SPECTRUM newspaper were offered and published on February 1, 2000, inclusive of information of how to make your own silver colloid (and thus, any colloid by electrical means).

Again: What a tangled web you weave when first you practice to DECEIVE—even your BROTHER. Cain and Abel might well HAVE BEEN WISE to pay attention.

On July 14, 2000 there were raids in two States on FOUR location on the basis of possible criminal (Felony) activities by ONE PARTY, Diane Kunick. The raids were in response to AFFIDAVITS claiming knowledge of criminal activities and were signed by people who are associated with SPECTRUM newspaper.

Interestingly enough ONLY SAID PARTY, DIANE ECKERT-KUNICK, is named in any or all negotiations (plea bargain) offerings. Her crime? That she INTENTIONALLY defrauded the public by distributing such products as Colloidal Silver.

Now, there is no record of this party being notified or warned in any way that there was unsuitable distribution of ANYTHING. That is number one. If corporation officials in Nevada were notified, it was NOT carried forth to any contractor, distributor or associated parties. It appears that this could possibly have happened intentionally, by either or both Cort Christie and/or Brent Moorhead. These are the responsible parties in the corporations associated with products and funds as Officers, Corporation Founders and Comptroller (accounting-bookkeeping). If there are errors, they are extremely minor in content and will be adequately corrected IN COURT.

All involved parties shall be named and a demand made for full testimony under oath by/through deposition or direct witness/participant testimony. This will be caused to insure that no witness, under oath, shall escape perjury charges for lying under said oath, this being a FEDERAL COURT. So be it.

Number two, there is no way, except through attorneys, seemingly, to meet and confer on the matter without PLEADING GUILTY to three FELONY CRIMINAL COUNTS in this presently referred to case.

Pleading guilty to any one of the counts is inclusive of all three and each bears a penalty of $250,000 and three years in prison. The minimum, for this court in the plea bargain MAY (MIGHT, OR COULD) settle for a signed Felony crime guilty plea, $100 and no prison time. However, that is not guaranteed; it is up to the whim of the accepting Judge.

I ask that the "Plea bargain" be run in CONTACT, please, as is. The legal counsel will be adequately sheltered since the papers reflect the INCORRECT name.

I restate that the final version is being rewritten by the Federal attorney and is not yet available but major changes are indeed expected. Believe me, the case itself is far more interesting and far-reaching than any silver colloid—or anthrax of a fabricated variety with billion-dollar "cures" through the chemical companies who are now arguing over rights to rip off all you global people—all of the time. (That, of course, came via an insider anonymous source asking to not be identified.)

We also do not wish to impact the new documents now being drawn up by the Federal attorneys in response to Diane's refusal to sign such an agreement; therefore we will return to the topic of the day—SPECTRUM and Silver Colloids.

We, further, intend to hold guilty SPECTRUM newspaper for encouraging the use of said "New Drugs", unapproved substances, and even presenting ways to MAKE said Silver Colloids for consumption by the public.

We will now find it necessary to run the remaining article from SPECTRUM newspaper presented by said staff thereof with comments and full recognition by ALL of the staff of said newspaper. This will be inclusive of Dr. Edwin Young, Norey Latona, Rick Martin-Cortright, Gail Irwin-Cortright, Dr. Al Overholt (who had followed the product debate), and John and Mary Does, one through 30.

We will not, however, name "advertisers" or apparatus sources unless they are within the article to be copied.

Am I stating that colloids are no good?

NO, I PERSONALLY CONSIDER THEM BOTH PRECIOUS AND WONDERFUL. However, that is an opinion which can be, most certainly, discounted. I base my own private opinion, however, on scientific studies presented in behalf of yes, Colloidal Silver.

This is simply a full recognition as to what you do to one another, in the instance of "informants" in the form of your very neighbor and partners, yea, even in business WITH you. And the neighborly good qualities invited in this modern age.

Since New Gaia is not named in the charges it is assumed that is, and was, part of the "informant" agreement in making the charges, to protect the informants, ALL of which were foundational in New Gaia and did receive direct remuneration from same.

Ekkers were not named in the charges, either. HOWEVER, in discussions between counsel(s) it was discussed that "probably Diane would not testify against her Mother" (Doris "Dharma"). What would "Mother" have to do with anything? She TYPES. In fact, "Mother" would not knowingly even walk into a room with electrodes dangling in a pot of water, even unplugged, for she is terrified of electricity. So too, therefore, is Diane who grew up with that fear. A friend of "Mother" at Children's Hospital of Los Angeles was making a cake using an electric hand-mixer and was electrocuted because of the wire slipping into water. Also a child was brought dead to that same hospital after a "small rechargeable" radio no bigger than a hand, but plugged in for recharging, fell into the bathtub with the child. That too is another story for another day.

It now begins to make sense, doesn't it? 1) When the Spectrum ran information regarding other purposes, it suggested that there were outstanding Federal warrants against Ekkers awaiting their return to the U.S. 2) Dr. Young stated in an editorial that Ekkers had somehow misused and abused the Phoenix Institute and there was a Federal Grand Jury indictment against them. That was published on international Internet, the entire and TOTALLY INCORRECT information from set-up news items, re-published even in a Mindanao, Philippine newspaper which stated in the first line that Ekkers were then "in Davao". No, Ekkers were not and never have been nor do they plan to be anywhere even near Davao, Philippines.

Dr. Young ran that erroneous article with an Editorial which stated that it was magnificent investigative wonderment.

Well, if that is good journalism, where there is no truth to be found from beginning to end, then it is truly worse in media than in the judicial system or, specifically, the FDA.

You are a sick society that will go with those who actually STOLE the CONTACT newspaper FOR THEMSELVES, took funds directly from the bank accounts FOR THEMSELVES, took mailing lists and still continue to mislead readers by, at the least, causing readers to THINK they are reading that which is presented through an Unidentified party, representing me, Gyeorgos Ceres Hatonn which is totally false, malicious and intentionally set forth to deceive and defraud their readers and subscribers.

LOOK AT FACTS

In the charges against Diane, who was a most insignificant person who VOLUNTEERED to function in a branch of a TINY little something called New Gaia, which was set up by Nevada Corporate Headquarters as something unrecognized until this "case" broke forth, Unlimited Movement. Diane was NOTHING to either entity.

Somehow, though, when "I" asked that funds be frozen in the "CONTACT" loop because of shyster, yea criminal activities, taking place within the circle of miscreants so that things could be sorted, the children of the 'hood started presenting REALLY BAD activities and even cried "evil and wrong doings" when expected to contribute to their OWN rents.

By the way, there was FULL intent to take the products of New Gaia and manage a full new company with those products claiming that THAT was what the funds from said New Gaia, were "for". There was also something about $40 million bequeathed to CONTACT by Russell Herman and if Ekkers could succeed with GAIA as a program, it would be paid from that estate. Ah yes, tangled webs.

ALL of the informants and staff of what is now Spectrum, including a whole staff at CONTACT (UNDER THE FULL MANAGEMENT OF DR. ED YOUNG, ET AL.), were receiving pay (funds) through THEIR contract corporations directly FROM the New Gaia resource. THAT WAS THE ORIGINAL AGREEMENT AND DR. YOUNG HAS NOTED THAT IN EDITORIALS AS BEING A WORTHY RECEIVER FROM THE PHOENIX INSTITUTE.

At the time of the "split" it was found that these persons' corporations were merged in with records of the Phoenix Institute and were paid for as in licenses and fees, by said Institute to NCH without cost or consequence to said parties.

Interestingly enough, one of the demands (and unknown to Phoenix Institute parties) was to get back "their" corporations.

When sorted it was established that each of those parties did, in fact, have corporations through which they received pay and expenses, etc. When located, those records (corporate books) were lawfully turned over and SIGNED FOR by "their" attorney of record. In fact, Dr. Young refused to sign the agreement until such time as he had his corporation books (which he had in his possession all the while of the confusion). That, I believe, establishes PUBLIC recognition of ownership but of which it is also quite probable that it was NOT reported to the IRS.

There was also no way to recover monies used by the Institute to Nevada Corporate Headquarters for the expenses paid for those corporations' ongoing registrations and fees. At the same time the entire group of miscreants were accusing others of abuse and misuse of Phoenix Institute funds and perhaps it should be noted here and now that other funds were stolen, used, and gold in hard metal, taken and yea, buried, in Nevada.

Indeed, a very nice bunch of people who came to be a part of some kind of "commune" setup. Sorry, there is not even a list of more than paper subscribers and friends who asked to be called if there would be an open reception of some kind on a Saturday or Sunday afternoon. All business was also taken up at those times so there would be NO SECRET GAMES, after finding that Mr. Ence/Enz skived off many thousands of dollars as PRESIDENT OF PHOENIX INSTITUTE. George Green managed to run off with half a million dollars in gold and more in books while being the business party running that Institute and publications.

People, if you abuse the gifts you HAVE, and the shelters you are offered, you will find consequences to wrong actions. We certainly DO now understand why the outrageous thefts of records, files and property right out of the offices and homes. It also makes sense, NOW, why the "raids" were scheduled after the files had been stolen and records destroyed.

Computers in the use and charge of several of the CONTACT staff and office were attempted to have information removed FROM THE HARD DRIVES before being returned to the office. This is evidence from the “raiders” who downloaded the computer drives.

THIS is why I warn you to always do transparent, clean and goodly business and you will not have to concern over BAD BUSINESS ACCUSATIONS.

It is also said that “someone” had tried to remove information from Mr. Ekker’s computer—but Mr. Ekker was in Manila 9000 miles distant and had NO ACCESS TO SAID COMPUTERS.

Kathy, the office secretary and administrator, did admit that she turned many records, etc., over to Mr. Rick Martin—personally. Then when things were quite tight, she resigned. Does anyone find this interesting?

NOW, AND ONLY AFTER PERMISSION IS GRANTED, PLEASE RUN THE DOCUMENTS FROM THE FEDERAL COURT, (GET FROM DIANE) SO YOU HAVE ORIGINALS, BECAUSE IT IS CERTAINLY NOT YET ENTERED INTO THE PUBLIC RECORDS (TO COVER THE ASSETS OF THE COURT, CHILDREN), PLEASE RUN IT HERE IN THIS POSITION IN THIS WRITING. IF SHE OBJECTS, THEN WE WILL HONOR HER POSITION.

It must be noted that at the first meeting with California FDA (also called in by miscreants of “that” groupie) all requirements WERE met and Diane followed up for a full year to make sure that everything was OK.

Having been told that everything would be OK, if she did not hear back, from the very nice visiting agent, things were fine.

In view of that, the first “caller” from California Health Department was sucked into the raids at which point when confronted with his own participation and statements, he was embarrassed and said, “It was already too late.” Too late for what? Well, the big “frame-up”, of course.

The other party in charge of the seizures on July 14th, 2000, referred to the incidents as “debacles”. That was on return of computer “hard” drives after downloading. Great lists of records, accounts, papers and everything desired was TAKEN and has yet to be returned. Nothing was found out of order in any way save these referenced accusations against Diane, personally.

There is blanket denial, even of the word “debacle” used in front of several witnesses. Oh well.

There was never offered even a cease-and-desist document and no “do not do business” reference—but all such activities were STOPPED instantly except for filling outstanding orders of unquestioned products, i.e., approved vitamins, minerals, etc. That, of course, also stopped income which was in fact, the precipitating first cause of the “theft gang”.

OF COURSE, THERE WERE “NO” “QUESTIONED” PRODUCTS AND, UNTIL THIS PLEA BARGAIN, NO INDICATION OF CHARGES.

So, readers, you have come a long way: You are now supposed to plea-bargain self into being a Felon Criminal under oath against charges you didn’t know existed and certainly BEFORE a hearing can be had to determine anything. If you don’t BLINDLY sign the admission form in full perjury, you will never be given another chance and the book will be thrown at you in the court. Ah but, you have to also sign under oath that there was NO COERCION, NO THREATS, NO PRESSURE ON THE PART OF ANY OFFICER OR AGENT OF THE COURT, inclusive of course, OF PROSECUTORS. Then of course, as with the FBI, records are withheld, evidence denied entry into the trial and restrictive orders given over to the jury.

By the way, YOU (A CITIZEN) CANNOT SUE THE GOVERNMENT AND THAT INCLUDES THE PEOPLE OF THE JUDICIAL SYSTEM! And once a plea agreement is signed it can NEVER be questioned again. It’s all right there in the paperwork which I do hope Diane will share—even if it is not the final document to be offered. Oh and by the way, again, the Judge does not have to abide by ANY agreement.

Freedom in America? Better check it out again, citizen.

I wish to now turn to the topic of Silver Colloids and wish you well, citizens. I withdraw any comments as to worthy use of said products in point, specifically Silver, and REPORT that it should only be utilized, as I have stated recently, as a topical application of “some kind” possibly helpful in the fatal world of warts and on wart-hogs. It is fine to use on plants, soil, plant sprays, pets, animal species other than human. And no, YOU can’t get a prescription from your local physician—LEGALLY. IN OTHER WORDS, TOUCH AT YOUR OWN RISK.

It has to be noted that the response from the FDA is pretty much the same guideline of, as published in the Howey, Fla. article: “It can’t be considered safe.” The only reference is that a person, only one named, turned blue.

By the way, that lady named will probably be found to have “silver fillings in her teeth” WHICH ARE A COMPOUND WHERE MERCURY IS UTILIZED. Blue coloration is recognized by every dentist worth his “silver salts”, as a visual signature of MERCURY. LONG, LONG AGO, we did in fact, recommend people, especially with that particular symptom, immediately get those fillings exchanged, for that is a symptom of mercury poisoning, called mercurialism.

As for other, less informed, the response is, “It won’t do any good,” when asked about the use of Silver colloid.

By the way, when you note the many named things offered as being present in silver colloids—HOW SO? Silver colloid is but the result of a process of placing into solution, microscopic particulate from SILVER. Wherefrom come the salts and yea, cyanide? Have you the public been hoodwinked or what? The sum of all its parts is SILVER particulate in solution. THAT IS BY PURE DEFINITION. Whatever the FDA “tested” it certainly was NOT reputable “silver colloid”.

ANY PRODUCT AVAILABLE SHOULD NOW HAVE A LABEL ATTACHED THAT STATES IT IS NOT ONLY AN UNAPPROVED PRODUCT WITH NO KNOWN THERAPEUTIC VALUE BUT OTHERWISE CARRY A DISCLAIMER FOR ANY USE AT ALL. IT SHOULD ALSO BEAR INFORMATION THAT IT IS ONLY OFFERED AS A POSSIBLE SUPPLEMENT FOR THE USES WITH “HOPEFULLY” CLEARING WATER FOR “POSSIBLE” “SOMETIMES FOUND TO BE BENEFICIAL” “additive” IN ANIMAL WATER SUPPLIES, WASHING WATER, TOPICAL EXTERNAL APPLICATIONS AND YEA (!), PLANT AND SOIL USE.

INDEED, AS FOR DIANE, LET US CONSIDER: “THIS IS A FAR BETTER THING THAT YOU DO THAN I HAVE EVER DONE (For Man)”. BUT DO NOT LIE ON A PLEA BARGAIN DOCUMENT, FOR IT WILL DESTROY YOUR FUTURE, FOR THEY HAVEN’T EVEN BEGUN THEIR DIRTY TRICKS. IT IS NOT YOU THEY WANT; IT IS “ME”, HATONN.

WE WILL NOW OFFER THE REGULATORY PUBLICATION.

bSubsection 310.548 Drug products containing colloidal silver ingredients or silver salts offered over-the-counter (OTC) for the treatment and/or prevention of disease.

(a) Colloidal silver ingredients and silver salts have been marketed in over-the-counter (OTC) drug products for the treatment and prevention of numerous disease conditions. There are serious and complicating aspects to many of the diseases these silver ingredients purport to treat or prevent. Further, there is a lack of adequate data to establish general recognition of the safety and effectiveness of colloidal silver ingredients or silver salts for OTC use in the treatment or prevention of any disease. These ingredients and salts include, but are not limited to, silver proteins, mild silver protein, strong silver protein, silver, silver ion, silver chloride, silver cyanide, silver iodide, silver oxide, and silver phosphate.

(b) Any OTC drug product containing colloidal silver ingredients or silver salts that is labeled, represented, or promoted for the treatment and/or prevention of any disease is regarded as a new drug within the meaning of section 201(p) of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act (the act) for which an approved application or abbreviated application under section 505 of the act and part 314 of this chapter is required for marketing. In the absence of an approved new drug application or abbreviated new drug application, such product is also misbranded under section 502 of the act.

(c) Clinical investigations designed to obtain evidence that any drug product containing colloidal silver or silver salts labeled, represented, or promoted for any OTC drug use is safe and effective for the purpose intended must comply with the requirements and procedures governing the use of investigational new drugs as set forth in part 312 of this chapter.

(d) After September 16, 1999, any such OTC drug product containing colloidal silver or silver salts initially introduced or initially delivered for introduction into interstate commerce that is not in compliance with this section is subject to regulatory action.

[END OF QUOTING]

This writing is too long to be able to offer in this same writing the SPECTRUM article on making your own supply of silver colloid and thus, any other colloid you choose if you can get electrodes/wires to use.

May the Saints not swoon in your stupor.

Ah indeed, Gyeorgos Ceres Hatonn—and yes, IN THE NAME OF GOD!

RE: COLLOIDAL SILVER: SPECTRUM INSTRUCTIONS FOR MAKING YOUR OWN. MASTER HILARION BY UNIDENTIFIED RECEIVERS: HOW TO USE RADIO SHACK FOR EL CHEAPO APPARATUS TO MAKE COLLOIDS

Hatonn—FIRST A COMMENT REGARDING THIS INFORMATION SHARED BY SPECTRUM. If Dr. Young, Editor-In-Chief and responsible publisher of “Spectrum” objects to this sharing of information, then I suggest he take it up with his staff, specifically Mr. and Mrs. Rick Martin as to their activities which likely seemed quite amusing and suitable at the time it happened, but may well be less than pleasing NOW.

Yes, I can identify the receiver reporting as Master Hilarion as being, at the least edited carefully for presentation by Dr. Ed Young—through and by, Norey Latona, who also CLAIMS to receive my direct communications.

Does this mean that the information is bad? No, it simply means that in this case you won't find Master Hilarion or an identification of receivers. You will find constant input and explanation given along the way by Dr. Ed Young (a Master wouldn't know, you know, how to present anything—especially from Radio Shack or the local hardware store).

[QUOTING The SPECTRUM, February 1, 2000, "Hilarion", 1/28/00 (no other information given of the author), page 40. Master Hilarion is also a usurpation of a "Cohen" of the Rays, as presented in Rainbow Masters, a Phoenix Journal. LETTING GROW BY LETTING GO

Good evening, old friend. It is I, Master Hilarion, come as a representative of the Emerald-Green Ray of The Creation. I come in, and I am of, The One Light of Creator God. Be still and find peace within your heart, for you know me well!

Your planet, along with all of its inhabitants, are in the Great Transformation process as we speak. The time is at hand for those who have earned same, through past and current practice, to graduate into the next level of learning.

This past Awakening Cycle has been to awaken the heart energy center within those experiencing on your planet. Many have successfully completed this work and are merely awaiting their next placement. Those who have not yet done so are, for the most part, the ones who are currently incarnate on your planet. This is so that those who have not yet done so may have the opportunity to awaken and understand the importance of balancing the energies associated with the heart energy center.

There is a great desire at this time by we of the Higher Realms to offer our support for those who continue to struggle with this "final exam" of sorts, wherein ones must demonstrate their understanding through ACTIONS taken, and not just through empty words and glibness of thought. In other words, the actions, along with the emotional energy content of same, are what will determine the future placement of many ones experiencing at this time.

Many are aware of the concepts stated above in terms of knowing what is the "right" thing to do, and yet still we see these very ones, who state that they "know" better, still acting according to the lower energies of the more primal, ego-centered, animalistic, survival-oriented focus.

This is not to be taken as an insult in any way. This is merely an observable phenomenon taking place on your planet.

The challenges associated with using the FINER energies is not in the least an "easy" task, nor is it a particularly difficult one. The biggest problem that we see ones encountering is related to the perception of time. By this I mean that for the most part ones want to see an "instant return" for their efforts, or they will quickly lose interest.

When operating in the more primal modes of animalistic experience, when you are hungry, you go and hunt food, and within a short time you are eating. When you are tired, you lay down and sleep, and so forth. It is a simple, "straight-line" path of desire and reactive behavior.

The higher, more intellectual evolutions of the third-density experience require the use of reason for survival, rather than reaction. This shift, for some, is a difficult one to make, as there is a struggle that naturally takes place as a species becomes self aware. The struggle is for freedom from the reactionary "mentality" and movement into one of reason. The struggle is a battle to tame the reactionary, ego-based energies that were at one time essential for the survival of the species, and balance those energies with reason, compassion, and understanding that comes with true awareness of self and the connection with others.

In your current environment this is indeed a difficult task. When the heart center is fully balanced and operating in optimal condition, there will naturally come the answers to the perplexing and seemingly contradictory events that you ones must eventually come to grips with. These include ideas like the fact that there are Greater Forces at work, that exist outside the physical senses, but which can be sensed consciously on a feeling (emotional wavelength) level. The heart is the gateway to opening the higher energy centers which will evolve more fully in the next level of learning and growth.

Those who have learned to balance the emotional (heart) energies will naturally begin to work on the higher levels of consciousness and will often be the ones who become the clairvoyants, seers, prophets and such. Many of those who have demonstrated their understanding through their actions are not in the physical so as to make room for those who have been reluctant students—so that as many as is possible will "graduate" with the rest of the class. [H: Balder Squash, readers!]

As we have spoken many times in past lessons, BALANCE is the key to mastering the challenges of the heart. Many of you ones "suffer" from a "broken heart". The perception of suffering is merely an indicator that you have not yet learned to take responsibility for your thoughts, actions, and choices. The perception of emotional pain ("heartache") is the magnificent bioelectric feedback mechanism of your internal guidance system doing its job to let you know that, when you dwell upon the subjects that result in the feeling of "heartache", you are moving in a direction counterproductive to understanding and growth. In reality, this most painful experience is due to STAGNATION. [H: More multiple Balder Squashii.]

Your primary objective is the same as for all of Creator's creations—go forth and experience newness and growth. Stagnation is in direct opposition to this primary, innate directive.

When ones incessantly dwell upon the past "mistakes" that resulted in pain, and insist upon living in the past where no real change can be effected, they are disconnecting from (ignoring) the yearnings of the heart to move forward. This stagnation is indeed painful and quite counterproductive to the soul's desire for experiencing newness and growth. [H: Hyper and Macro-Balder Squashii.]

How many times have we, of the Lighted Realms of Creation, suggested to you ones to "Let go of the past!"? We say these basic statements in an effort to help you to discover for yourselves the importance of doing so. It is for your personal well-being and happiness that we suggest these things, for we know that you, as a unique aspect of Creator, have a very real and purposeful contribution to make that will inevitably unfold and profoundly contribute to ALL aspects of The Creation!

[H: I can't let it pass, for this is supposedly from MY compatriot. NEVER "let go of the past" as stated in context here offered. Life is but a series of remembering and those lessons of the "past" are ALL you have with which to grow, learn and express. This lesson indicates a letting-go of past "memory" as in "forgive and FORGET". NO, no, and more no-nos. Forgiving has no meaning and forgetting is simply a way to cop-out on responsibilities. Until you make things RIGHT from past mistakes, you cannot expect either forgiveness or, frankly, forgetfulness.]

[Dr. Young's Editor's note: Many past messages by these Master Teachers from the Higher Realms are collected together in the two WISDOM OF THE RAYS volumes, with a third volume in production for publication later this year.]

We also know that within you lies part of us, and some of our eventual experiences of newness and growth are directly connected to yours. To assist you ones is truly to assist ourselves, and therein lies great value to all ones everywhere.

It is with great passion and compassion that we offer ideas that will help you to find answers that will eventually allow you to heal yourselves from past pains. The compassion comes from Knowing and Understanding, for we too have walked the path you are now on.

We know the healing power of Understanding—that it will help to realign energies in such a way as to allow your energies to flow uninhibited. The pain comes from unnatural energy pathways or severe constriction of the energy flows through you.

Many ones will rightfully explain how much more emotional pain hurts than does physical pain. If you can identify with this last statement, then know that there is truly no need to hold onto this sort of pain. It is, quite bluntly, a form of self-punishment and is quite counter-productive to what you are trying to accomplish there in the physical.

The key is to find understanding as to why these things are so difficult to let go of in the first place. For many, it is shame. Shame that you have hurt another. Shame that you weren't a better person. Shame that you could have been so ignorant as to not see what you were doing.

For those of you who believe you were the victim and did nothing wrong, and yet you were still "hurt" by another, I say to you that you need to look closely at what is truly "hurting". Most often the IDEA of having been judged (by another) as being somehow inadequate causes the greatest pain. Denial of your responsibility as a co-creator of any given experience will also add complications to an already unpleasant situation.

Please understand that the seeming bluntness of my statements is deemed appropriate at this time, as we see that many are simply choosing to ignore our offerings and denying that such have any relative importance to their situation. For a very few this may indeed be the case. However, this message is as much for the one who scribes it as for many of you ones who have come forth as Ground Crew. In general you ones are deeply caring beings who are very sensitive to the misuse of energy. Learn to forgive yourselves as you would naturally forgive others.

[H: Say what? The scribe here? Wow, and this scribe goes right on to present Germain of the Violet Ray on “Forgiveness”. Come now, we don’t identify writer or actually the Editor who places himself, literally, as a direct fragment of the Godhead, readers, and edits everything run in HIS paper. Hold your breath, TRUTH is difficult to handle sometimes and I can promise you that no compatriot or Cohan of the Higher Realms would utilize any persons for their scribe or representative who would deliberately lie, cheat and steal—and then “Forgive self and forget about it”.]

The greatest risk you ones take by coming into the physical as Ground Crew is that you may once again become part of the karmic condition (of the experiencing group of souls) that may need to be worked out in future incarnation cycles.

Embrace, if you will, the idea and knowing that you accepted this risk, knowing that it is well worth it. Please do not dwell upon past mistakes. Learn from them and move forward. The worst that can happen is that you will become part of a group karmic condition and have need to reincarnate with them at a future time—something that most of you would likely do anyway out of compassion and a desire to be of service to those in need. Let go of the past and learn to live in the now!

I am Master Hilarion. I represent the heart energy, the Emerald-Green Ray of Creator’s Spectral Expression of Love. I come in Service to THE One Light, Creator God, and as a member of the Brotherhood of Light, to assist those who desire such assistance.

In Love and Appreciation for ALL of God’s unique creations—Salu.

[END OF QUOTING]

Now to our readers, if you want to simply dance around the turnip patch in your delusion of acceptable irresponsibility, you do so, but when you do it in the name and with permission of the highest Masters in the Universe, it is a bit beyond acceptable behavior. And if you do so in the same context of offering “the way” as in connection with the very physical apparatus of offering unlawful and now regulated “drugs” it seems a bit much. And indeed, it is totally unacceptable to do these things in the name of stolen speakers. Hasn’t MAN suffered enough from these buffoon self-styled egotistical perpetrators? And yes indeed, when, in MY name false messages are sent forth as is a regular event with these miscreants at the thieved paper, SPECTRUM, I am most certainly irritated and quite annoyed because YOU read the rubbish and many choose to accept the easy-way-out, worn-out messages which lead directly to you-know-where—and it is NOT Heaven with milk and honey in the streets.

Will “I” somehow zap them? I don’t need to, for they already bear the SHAME (as indicated above) and all I shall ever do is tell the Truth. Everyone, including them, made their choices and continue in the LIE. So be it—and I AM Gyeorgos Ceres Hatonn Aton, THE One Light, brethren.

BACK TO SILVER AND “THIRTY PIECES” THEREOF.

Now, having addressed the interruption in writing and presentation in SPECTRUM we shall return to the next article on colloids and is stated to be “likewise from the Internet (the <http://www.elixa.com/silver/lindmn.htm> Website).”

[QUOTING The SPECTRUM, February 1, 2000, pg. 24:]

A CLOSER LOOK AT COLLOIDAL SILVER

By Peter A. Lindemann.

[Dr. Young’s Editor’s note: Lindemann is the developer of the CS-300C and CS-300D colloidal silver generators—commercially available...]

[H: I ask that the information not be given as either advertising or presentation, for we do not have permission from the author or manufacturer to present either.]

During the last two years, a number of books and articles have appeared in public on the subject of colloidal silver. Some of these include: the Bio-Tech News Special Report “Hi-Yo Silver”; Colloidal Silver, The Natural Antibiotic Alternative by Zane Baranowski; Colloidal Silver by Tonita d’Raye; and Banishing Disease With Three Nine-Volt Batteries, Parts I & II, by Mark Metcalf. Literally hundreds of other newsletters and small publications have repeated the information in these articles without checking the content for accuracy.

The appearance of these materials two years ago was the first wave of public education concerning colloidal silver. Today, most health food stores carry and sell several brands of colloidal silver, scores of companies have colloidal silver products in their lines, and prices are starting to drop. While it is still possible to spend as much as $10/oz for colloidal silver in health food stores, prices can be as low as $5/oz. Some mail order catalogs sell it for as little as $2.50/oz, and I have seen small classified ads selling it for under $1/oz. The trend is definitely toward a lower price.

[H: Is it just possible that herefrom comes the contamination of silver colloids with all those named salts, etc., as described by the FDA? People, if you do this to yourselves, who can help you maintain “rights” and “freedoms”?]

One of the phenomena driving the price down is the appearance of the devices that allow people to make their own colloidal silver. At this time (spring of 1997) the cottage industry of colloidal silver generators is starting to penetrate the larger market. This is starting to cause alarm in high places. One major commercial manufacturer of colloidal silver has recently issued a warning statement to its customers, alerting them to the dangers of “inferior quality” of colloidal silver made by these devices. CNN and other major media have also tried to scare the public away from colloidal silver by showing a blue-skinned person who “suffers” from Argyria, a cosmetic condition caused by the build-up of silver compounds under the skin. Even JAMA (the Journal Of The American Medical Association) has run articles warning of Argyria and the toxicity associated with “colloidal silver proteins”.

On January 16, 1997, new labeling guidelines concerning colloidal silver went into effect, issued by the FDA. Other FDA rulings on “safety and effectiveness” are still pending. With all of these developments, it doesn’t take a rocket scientist to see that the whole situation around colloidal silver is heating up!

The purpose of this article is to raise the level of public knowledge to a higher degree of accuracy. Knowledge is power, and the public needs to know the truth about colloidal silver.

The first thing people need to know is that there are at least FOUR different products on the market being called “colloidal silver”.

The first type of product is the classic, original kind, usually called “electro-colloidal silver”. This product is made either by the “electro-arc” method in deionized water, or by the “low-voltage electrolysis” method in distilled water. This product is usually found in concentrations between 3-5 ppm (parts per million), but sometimes as high as 100 ppm. Properly made, this product consists of microscopic particles of pure, elemental silver suspended in water, with no other elements present. Each particle of silver carries a positive electrical charge. Colloidal silver made this way appears either transparent-clear or transparent-light yellow.

[Dr. Young’s Editor’s note: Assuming you just have silver in the water, and not also impurities of one or several varieties, the color depends upon the size and density or concentration of the particles. The color goes from clear to light yellow as the concentration increases. Some people claim the yellow color is primarily due to the silver oxidizing. This may be true as it would be hard to imagine the silver remaining inert in the presence of the dissolved oxygen in the water.]

[Just a question from E.J.: Since we have clear plastic bottles of the stuff that are nearly 10 years old, why haven’t they become more yellow with all that time to “oxidize”?]

Incidentally, for you more technical readers inclined to pursue the matter out of curiosity, the subject of how such suspended particles produce colors is a fascinating—if scientifically involved—story which includes the answer to why the sky is blue. How’s that for a teaser?!]

The second is called “mild silver protein”. This product chemically binds microscopic particles of silver to a protein molecule. It is usually found in concentrations between 20-40 ppm. Its appearance may be transparent-clear or amber.

The third are “silver salts”. The products can be made either chemically or electro-chemically and usually create a form of silver that DISSOLVES in the water. Concentrations range between 50-500 ppm. Its appearance is transparent-clear. The silver particles do carry a POSITIVE electrical charge, but almost invariably these products contain elements or compounds other than silver.

The fourth is sometimes referred to as “powdered silver”. This product was developed by the Russians and is made when a pure silver wire is rapidly disintegrated by a high-voltage electrical discharge, similar to an old photographic flash bulb. The microscopic silver dust is collected, and either dissolved in water or added to salves and creams for topical use. Concentrations range from 100-500 ppm.

All of these products work, to one degree or another, as a broad-spectrum germicide, because they all contain microscopic particles of silver. That said, it is important to understand a number of things:

- 1) all of these products are not “colloidal suspensions” of silver,
- 2) these products DO NOT all behave the same in the body or in laboratory tests,

3) effectiveness and dosage varies from product to product.

4) quality varies from batch to batch with the same product, and

5) they are NOT all uniformly safe and non-toxic.

There are no industry standards that manufacturers voluntarily follow to assure quality control, and there is no governmental regulation of the industry.

On the other hand, there are millions and millions of satisfied colloidal silver users who would like to have continued, free access to the product, and a growing number of manufacturers entering the market with a wide variety of new products.

The critical factors that make a “good” colloidal silver product are particle size, purity, concentration, and cost. The only way to authoritatively determine the first three is by laboratory analysis. The best way to determine particle size is by electron microscope photograph. The best way to determine purity is by mass spectroscopy or by x-ray diffraction analysis. The best way to determine concentration is by chemical analysis of total dissolved solids. The cost of the product should be calculated in reference to the total quantity of silver present, such as: $5.00/oz of 100 ppm is equal to 25 cents of 5 ppm (the first has 20 times more silver by volume and costs 20 times more by volume).

MAKING YOUR OWN

The simplest way to control these factors is to make the colloidal silver yourself. By doing this, you will not know exactly what is there unless you do laboratory testing, but you will have a pretty good idea. (Even with laboratory testing of commercial products, you don’t know much more where they are concerned, either, because the quality control from batch to batch is loose with most brands.) Also, by making it yourself, you will end up with genuine “colloidal” silver, which is the product referred to in most of the literature.

If you are already making your own colloidal silver, please pay special attention to this section because much of the information you now have may be incorrect.

The simplest way to make real colloidal silver at home is by the “low-voltage electrolysis” method. A few batteries may be connected to some silver electrodes and placed in a glass of water. This process will cause small particles of silver to be sintered off the electrodes and enter the water. This deceptively simple method is very easy to do WRONG, and most people who are making colloidal silver at home are making an inferior product.

IT’S IN THE WATER

When you do this yourself, it is very important to control the purity of the water, because the purity of the water is one of the factors that controls how small the particles of silver will be. Only high quality DISTILLED water should be used. You cannot use purified or filtered water because it still has too many dissolved minerals in it. You cannot use deionized water because it doesn’t conduct electricity well enough to start the reaction. Distilled water is just perfect to start the reaction, slowly, and let it proceed properly.

Another variable that influences particle size is the water temperature. The warmer the water, the faster the reaction will take place, and the smaller the particles will be.

PLEASE PASS THE SALT

Regardless of what anyone has said to the contrary, silver chloride will ALWAYS form if any amount of salt is present. Never add anything to the water that will make the water conduct electricity better. Never add salt, sea salt, or Celtic sea salt to the distilled water because the salt puts chloride ions in the water that react with the silver to form silver chloride.

Another serious problem arises when making colloidal silver with salt in the water. The presence of salt increases the electrical conductivity of the water and this dramatically speeds up the reaction. As the reaction speeds up under these circumstances, it produces larger particles [not desirable—smaller is better]. The product so produced is invariably cloudy-white in appearance. Actual electron-microscope photographs of this material show silver particles in the range of 0.05 to 0.15 microns. These particles are TOO LARGE to form a colloidal suspension, and the proof is that the material will settle to the bottom of the container in a very short period of time. Therefore, this home-brewed “colloidal silver” product may be dangerous to consume internally for two reasons: the presence of silver chloride and the production of large particles.

THE BEST IS YET TO COME

The very best voltage for the reaction is about 30 volts, because the electrodes run the cleanest at this voltage. If you have a small power supply, set it for 30 volts. If you are running on batteries, it is best to start at 36 volts (three 12-volt batteries or four 9-volt batteries) and let the batteries drain down from there. Holding the silver electrodes at a uniform distance from each other yields a better product. [Dr. Young’s Editor’s note: See the diagram accompanying this article for a good picture of how to put your own colloidal silver generator together. Also see the photo of a quickly assembled version of the diagram’s apparatus which was used to make a batch of about 12 oz. of product in less than an hour.]

[H: For product information regarding New Gaia products. All colloids were made by this pure low-voltage method. ALL! In fact the products were made in conjunction with Dr. Young and PRODUCED directly by Charles Neil and Mr. Norey Latona. The silver was tested by commercial laboratories and spectrographic apparatus. Nothing was used except for testing as to color and dispersion and that was never in the product itself. Only pure distilled water was used and if a reaction time was indicating “too fast” a reaction or colloidalizing, it was discarded and new water was used. “Diane”, now being accused of distributing these products, had NOTHING WHATSOEVER to do with any such creation or manufacture of said products. The products, specifically silver colloids, were stopped at the Canadian Border in a shipment and then released as “good product” after testing.]

When 30 volts is applied across silver electrodes held uniformly apart in distilled water, a totally different event happens. First, the reaction proceeds very slowly. Often, for the first 15 minutes, nothing seems to be happening. [Dr. Young—emphasis added—be patient!] Then, finally, a faint yellow mist will begin to form. Within a few minutes, the reaction will speed up, but the particles produced will be a golden-yellow as viewed with a flashlight. Using this method, 8 ounces of distilled water at room temperature can be made into a 3-5 ppm colloidal silver preparation in 20-25 minutes.

Made this way, colloidal silver can cost under 10-cents/oz. Electron microscope photographs of this product show a silver particle size in the range 0.001 to 0.004 microns. During manufacturing, the particle cloud is a golden yellow. These particles will hang in the water at the level they are produced, and for the most part, will not fall to the bottom of the glass. This is what a “colloidal” preparation of silver looks like.

After the particles disperse, the water will look clear again, but may turn a light yellow if the concentration is high enough and after the particles have become evenly dispersed.

THE YELLOW COLOR

There has been a fair amount of controversy in the public literature concerning the appearance of the “yellow” color. A lot of well meaning people have told me that “yellow is bad”, “silver isn’t yellow”, “yellow is sulfur contamination”, “yellow is iron contamination”, and lots of other things. I finally found what I believe to be the answer to this question in a book titled Practical Colloid Chemistry, published in London in 1926. In the section on the “Colours of Colloidal Metals”, subsection on the “Polychromism of Silver Solutions” on page 69, I found the following statements: “The continuous change in colour from yellow to blue corresponds to the change in the absorption maximum of the shorter to longer wavelengths with a decreasing degree of dispersion. This is a general phenomenon in colloid chemistry illustrating the relation between colour and degree of dispersion.”

[Dr. Young’s Editors note: The above statement is correct and complete in describing the main phenomena involved in causing the colors that are noted. However, as I (E.Y.) commented in an earlier note about the matter (and what makes the sky blue), the underlying subject is quite complicated to deal with from a theoretical point of derivation from first principles and depends upon a number of factors not easily measured.]

[H: WRONG. It is quite easily explained. An element has a light wave frequency which is expressed as COLOR. That frequency, when charged as in the case of this processing, will express as the color of the frequency of the wave itself and can actually be measured quite easily with color-light apparatus.]

This section goes on to describe the colors that show in a wide variety of colloidal metal solutions. Interesting, they ALL have a yellow phase. For true “electro-colloidal” silver, the particle size range that can appear yellow is 0.01 to 0.001 microns (10 to 100 angstroms) because that is the size of silver particle that best absorbs the indigo light, leaving only its inverse color, yellow, to be observed. The final transparent-yellow appearance only shows up after the particles have become evenly dispersed.

THE BROWN GLASS BOTTLE

Once you have gone to the trouble of making colloidal silver particles as small as 0.001 microns, it is important to protect them. The particles stay away from each other in suspension because they each have a positive electrical charge (+) and these “like charges” repel each other. Anything that can strip this charge off the particles will degrade the quality of the colloidal silver by a process called recoagulation, where the particles clump together again to form larger aggregates. Ultraviolet light from the Sun, and many plastics can cause this process to occur. Therefore, colloidal silver is best stored in dark glass containers. The two kinds of glass container that are suitable for this are the dark amber and the cobalt blue.

[Dr. Young's Editor's note: This is a little “far out” from the subject under discussion here, but—if you can find cobalt blue (dark blue) bottles, they would be more desirable than amber because of the higher-frequency vibration of “etheric charge” imprinted upon the water due to their color. This is not something you are going to find in current physics books—but then, neither are you going to find the actual “tuning fork” frequency mechanism of operation of the silver which causes it to be germicidal!]

Some people claim amber is better than blue for the color of the dark bottles because the blue is supposed to make the silver “fall out” of suspension. Looks like it's time for some experimentation!]

[H: Why not leave it to the light, at least in the early stages of storage, and let FATHER LIGHT do HIS miracles? You will find that the frequency of the solution will raise dramatically when placed next to a higher frequency element. This only enhances the product. FALLOUT is caused by electroMAGNETIC waves which cause a neutralizing or negative “charge” to occur. Even in those cases of “fallout” the solution is still harmless if proper to begin because the particulate is so minute as to be totally non-toxic. Something as unexplained as solar flares can and often do send electromagnetic pulses which can accomplish this phenomenon and cause fallout. Some electronic checking devices will do the same.]

THE SAME DIFFERENCE

The biggest “secret” about the manufacture of high quality colloidal silver is that it is nearly impossible to standardize the product. Silver is apparently reactive to a number of natural forces that have yet to be identified. Even when the voltage, the water, and the water temperature are identical, different batches will proceed at different rates on different days. The speed of the reaction can vary by over 100% depending on the day. On “normal” days, the reaction is proceeding well after 15 minutes, with a visible cloud of particles. On “slow days” it may take 30 minutes before any visible production of yellow particles begins. [Dr. Young: Emphasis added—again, be patient.] Because of this variation, it is always wise to observe the reaction with a flashlight shining through the liquid so you can see how quickly the reaction is happening. Once the yellow cloud starts forming, time the batch for 5 more minutes. This is the best way to standardize your home-brewed colloidal silver.

COLLOIDAL OR IONIC?

Another big controversy surrounds the question of whether this method produces “colloidal” silver or “ionic” silver. Most people have been told that colloidal silver is “good” and ionic silver is “bad”. Once again, the truth might be unpopular.

The word “colloidal” refers to a condition where, in this case, a solid particle is SUSPENDED in a liquid (silver in water). The solid particles are too large to be considered DISSOLVED, but are too small to be filtered out.

This colloidal condition is most easily detected by what is called the “Tyndall effect”, where a narrow beam of light is shined through the liquid to produce a cone-shaped dispersion of the light. The particles so illuminated also exhibit a random, zig-zag activity called “Brownian motion” when observed under a microscope. When something is completely dissolved, both the Brownian and Tyndall effects disappear.

The word “ionic” refers to a condition where a particle has an electric charge. In the case of “electro-colloidal” silver is BOTH colloidal and ionic. It is considered colloidal because of the particle SIZE, and it is considered ionic because of the particle CHARGE.

In fact, most of the biological studies suggest it is colloidal silver's ionic characteristics that make it such a good germicide. It is also interesting to note that the old chemistry books make no distinction between the colloidal and ionic states of the electro-colloidal metals.

PURITY OF SILVER

The quality of your finished product depends entirely on the purity of the water you start with, and the purity of the silver you start with. Most of the current literature suggests that only 99.9999% pure silver can be used. Most home-brew systems use 99.9% pure silver. So, what is the difference?

To find out, I contacted Academy Metals, a company in Albuquerque, New Mexico, that produces commercial silver. The total allowable impurities in 99.9% (.999 fine) silver is 1000 ppm or 1 part in 1000. These impurities and their maximums are: (1) copper, 800 ppm; (2) lead, 250 ppm; (3) iron, 200 ppm; and (4) bismuth, 10 ppm. This product is readily available in wire form and costs about $3.00 above the market (spot) price of silver.

When this product is used to make electro-colloidal silver at a concentration of 5 ppm, the total impurities from the silver drop to 4 ppb (parts per billion) copper, 1.25 ppb lead, 1 ppb iron, 0.05 ppb bismuth. With all allowable impurities at these low levels, there is a reasonable argument for not being concerned.

Still, sometimes small things make a big difference. 99.99% silver (.9999 fine) has total allowable impurities of 100 ppm of the same metals in the same ratios, and costs (in wire form) between $50-$90 above the spot price of silver. 99.999% silver (.99999 fine) has total allowable impurities of 10 ppm, and in wire form costs about $250 above the spot price. 99.9999% silver, in wire form, costs more than gold, and is very difficult to find commercially.

In one sample of 10 ppm colloidal silver which we sent out for total analysis (made with 99.9% silver electrodes), the primary impurities found were: (1) sodium, 470 ppb; (2) calcium, 260 ppb; (3) manganese, 70 ppb; (4) potassium, 50 ppb; and (5) magnesium, 24 ppb. Since none of these impurities could have come from the silver, it suggests that the purity of the water should be of greater concern to the person making their own colloidal silver, than spending extra money on purer silver.

[H: I might also remind all of you that you are now talking about ionization as well as colloidalization. This, in fact, renders the solution to be NON-TOXIC at any case. An ionized colloidal solution will be utilized properly by the body or discarded still in suspension. The colloidalization itself is the miracle behind the product.]

The concentration of silver in the water is usually measured in parts per million, or ppm. While this is the standard convention, ppm is a “ratio” and not an indicator of quantity.

When a laboratory tests colloidal silver for concentration, they report the findings in milligrams per liter (mg/L). Milligrams per liter is an actual measurement of weight per volume, and therefore is a real quantity measurement. In the metric system, one liter of water weighs 1000 grams, and one milligram is one thousandth (1/1000) of a gram, so 1 mg/L is the same as 1 ppm, as long as we are talking about water. Silver weighs a little more than water, but the equivalence is very close, and the terms are often used interchangeably. With this in mind, we can calculate that one teaspoon of 5 ppm colloidal silver has about 25 mcg. (micrograms) of silver in it.

DOSAGE

In 1940, R.A. Kehoe reported that, under normal circumstances, the average daily intake of fruits and vegetables would provide between 50-100 mcg of silver as a trace element. Since that time, the commercial farm soils of this country have become extremely deficient in trace minerals. Although I do not have authoritative figures for silver, according to the Earth Summit Report, issued in 1992, the levels of oil-based minerals in North America have dropped over 85% in the last 100 years.

[Dr. Young's Editor's note: Rather alarming, isn't it?! A whole other article could be written regarding these last couple of sentences. And it would be extremely naive to come to the superficial conclusion that the soil depletion problem is merely a byproduct of modern, intensive agribusiness. How convenient for the power-and-control agenda of the so-called “elite” that we-the-people are slowly starving to death without realizing it. What does that do to our bodies and minds? Who makes money from our resulting illnesses? Consider, again, the analogy of the frogs in water where the temperature is being turned-up ever so slowly; those frogs never notice they're the prime ingredient in the soup pot!]

Assuming that our ancestors' diet used to contain trace silver, and that our diet probably has greatly reduced levels, there is a reasonable argument for supplementing with colloidal silver. Two teaspoons of 5 ppm colloidal silver provides about 50 mcg of silver and could be considered a “nutritional” amount, if taken on a daily basis. Any amount above four teaspoons a day (or 100 mcg) should be considered a “therapeutic” amount.

That said, it should not be assumed that electro-colloidal silver is equivalent to, or has the same metabolic effect as, receiving trace silver from dietary plant sources. But since there are very few plant sources of trace silver available today, colloidal silver is probably the best substitute. If you want to experiment with taking colloidal silver for an extended period of time, stay within the amounts considered to be nutritional. If you want to experiment with larger doses, do so with caution, and only for a day or two at a time.

SAFETY AND TOXICITY

Silver can act as a heavy-metal poison in the body. It can also act as a trace mineral nutrient. The difference is in the particle size, NOT the concentration. Colloidal silver with a particle size of 0.001 microns has particles 100 times smaller than a preparation of silver with a particle size of 0.1 microns.

The smaller the particle, the less likely it will behave as a toxin. Typically, the worst toxic reaction from metallic silver, cited in the medical literature, is a condition called Argyria. Argyria is primarily a cosmetic condition characterized by a permanent, bluish discoloration of the skin. Argyria causes no physical discomfort, and does not have any other known side effects. Your skin just looks bluish-gray.

In fact, the term “blue bloods” in reference to the royal families of Europe, probably refers to a mild, argyrial condition caused by the constant eating of food from silver place settings. It is interesting to note, however, that there has never been a case of Argyria reported from the use of electro-colloidal silver, free of salts or other impurities.

Argyria, while not being a deadly condition, certainly is undesirable. It is usually caused by the massive intake of silver salts, such as silver nitrate, silver sulfate, and silver chloride.

To determine just how toxic these substances are, I contacted the Agency for Toxic Substances and Disease Registry through their on-line information services (at <http://latsdrl.atsdr.cdc.gov:8080/TaxProfiles>). All of these silver salts are talked about as toxins, but the only consequence of even high exposure in humans that is listed is Argyria.

The EPA issues a “control code” for each toxic substance it tracks that can cause human illness. Silver nitrate and silver sulfate have control codes, but silver chloride does not. I received essentially the same information when I spoke with Dr. Edison at the Department of Epidemiology in Santa Fe, New Mexico. Apparently, the government thinks silver and silver compounds are toxins that essentially have NO significant toxic effects other than the ability to discolor your skin.

EFFECTIVENESS

In a study done, in part, by the Institute of Microbiology in Rome, Italy, and published in Applied And Environmental Microbiology, in December 1992, various forms of silver were tested for their ability to kill micro-organisms. Pure electro-colloidal silver outperformed silver nitrate, silver chloride, and silver sulfadiazine as a broad-spectrum germicide. For all classes of bacterial, fungus, and mold samples tested, pure electro-colloidal silver worked better, and at much lower concentrations. They concluded that additives reduced the effectiveness of pure silver ion, the silver salts being as much as 100 times less effective.

Electro-colloidal silver’s effectiveness as a broad-spectrum germicide is directly related to the number and size of the particles. The same volume of space taken up by one silver particle 0.1 microns in size, will hold about 10,000 silver particles 0.001 microns in size. This reduction in particle size not only allows for a greater distribution of the silver, but it also greatly increases the total surface area of silver available for interacting with the environment. These, plus the stability of the electrical charge, are the most important factors when considering the effectiveness of colloidal silver.

[Dr. Young’s Editor’s note: Moreover, if one were to look upon each of the little silver particles as a tiny “tuning fork” which emits frequencies which irritate the life out of a vast array of low-frequency critters such as are reported are incapacitated by silver, then it becomes much easier to picture (and understand) why a lot of smaller silver particles are more effective than one larger clump.]

THE REGULATORS

While silver has been shown to be a very effective germicide—killing gram-negative bacteria, gram-positive bacteria, yeasts, molds, and viruses in laboratory experiments—this does not mean that it will invariably cure disease conditions in the body caused by these organisms. Colloidal silver is a fantastic adjunct to the home, but it is by no means a “cure-all”.

The biggest obstacle to using colloidal silver as a “home remedy” is the lack of information in the public domain on how to use it effectively in any given situation. The FDA has tested colloidal silver extensively and found that different micro-organisms succumb to its action at a wide variety of concentrations and exposure times. If any of this information entered the public domain, the FDA would consider their own research “unsubstantiated medical claims” and reason enough to classify colloidal silver as a “new drug”. The “new drug” classification would be “required” because “new use protocols” had been developed that did not exist before 1938.

Here is an example of the problem. It is now estimated that one in four women will develop breast cancer in their lifetime. I have spoken to two women who claim to have cured themselves of breast cancer with colloidal silver. They were both diagnosed by biopsy. After the diagnosis, they took 2 teaspoons of colloidal silver a day, until their surgery. One took a home-made product, the other took a silver protein product. In both cases, the biopsy of the removed breast tissue and lymph nodes were cancer free.

The question is, will colloidal silver work this well for all cases of breast cancer?

Probably not, but in the current legal and political environment, we may never know. No pharmaceutical company can control or monopolize ownership of colloidal silver, so none of them will ever fund the testing, which currently costs over $10 million and takes 10 years.

FDA says that if you claim colloidal silver cures breast cancer, that would classify it as a new drug, and the public cannot be given access to new drugs without proper testing. Using the FDA model, it could cost the public $1 billion to “prove” to the FDA what the FDA already knows about colloidal silver.

Politics has definitely entered this picture.

FDA does not want to be exposed as an enforcer for the drug companies, or be seen as an agency clearly not acting in the public’s best interest. While these ideas are not new to some of us, it would be a startling revelation if a large portion of the population began thinking this way. FDA would certainly like to avoid this “public relations” embarrassment.

The fact is, FDA has never spent our tax dollars discovering something important, and then published their findings for the benefit of the public-at-large, especially when it involved something that was powerful, safe, and inexpensive for the public to make for themselves. Obviously, empowering the population to be self-reliant and frugal in relation to their own healthcare is NOT the FDA’s responsibility.

Colloidal silver clearly has some extraordinary capabilities and hundreds of legitimate uses. But without standardization, quality control, and extensive medical testing, the public will never know how best to use colloidal silver, claiming it is unsafe, even though they know how “safe and effective” it CAN BE when used properly.

[H: And here we go, readers, as proof that the SPECTRUM group knew of the new regulations and still affidavits were sent directly to the FDA accusing Diane of distributing this “new drug” and misadvertising advantages. Interesting thing is that the products themselves had NOTHING to do with Diane in any way, shape or form but were manufactured quite professionally by these very persons who did the “turning-in”. Is it possible that Dr. Young, et al., and even Dr. Al Overholt simply didn’t know what their left or right hands were doing? Oh indeed!]

Is there something wrong with this particular edition of SPECTRUM as to content? No indeed! This last article is an exceptional piece of necessary information. I do find it interesting when Margie Berndt went to get a copy of this edition from Spectrum’s office at full fee payment, she was insulted, refused and asked to “get out”. Then there were accusations of “you people doing all the damage to them...” while they had stolen OUR paper and OUR money and literally turned in our friends and family members, yet, to the Federal FDA, U.S. Postal Service, accused us of money laundering, and finally did International slander, false statements and criminal activities. NONE OF WHICH WERE, NOR ARE, TRUE IN WAY WHATSOEVER. THAT IS WHAT IS WRONG, NOT THIS TOPIC OF SILVER COLLOIDS.]

[Dr. Young’s Editor’s note: This article was obviously written prior to the actions taken by the FDA on August 17, 1999 to attempt to restrict the sale and use of colloidal silver. Go back and re-read the important News Desk item on page 9 of the September 1999 issue of the SPECTRUM for details on the sleazy maneuver pulled by the FDA. Now is certainly a good time to have a private means to maintain a stock of this very useful item!]

[H: Now let us compare “sleazy deals” and see which is more sleaze-oriented in this whole

immediate affair with the Federal Court and signed affidavits accusing Diane of criminal activities and signed by those lovely people at SPECTRUM! This, over their own products yet! Wow and oh wow!]

In the absence of the release of this authoritative testing data, the public is left just experimenting and groping for the answers. A big fight over the public's access to colloidal silver may be looming because the cost of healthcare in this country is out of control, and the public is looking for inexpensive solutions that work. In that sense, colloidal silver could be "just what the doctor ordered".

DIGESTIVE INTERACTIONS

Colloidal silver is apparently able to kill nearly all micro-organisms, including the "friendly flora" your digestive system needs for proper function. I have spoken with hundreds of people who have taken colloidal silver on a daily basis and have noticed no digestive upset, even after prolonged use. I have also spoken to two individuals who reported digestive upset after taking colloidal silver one time. So, in my experience, the die-off of friendly flora is possible, but rare.

There are a number of strategies that can reduce the probability of digestive interactions. The simplest one is to swish the colloidal silver around in your mouth for 30 seconds before swallowing. This promotes an absorption of the colloidal silver into the body, away from the intestinal tract. Another strategy is to take smaller doses, multiple times per day, or with meals. Either way, if you do experience a die-off of friendly flora, they can be re-populated by taking any of the acidophilus products on the market.

[Dr. Young's Editor's note: A little bit of well-made yogurt product will also accomplish the same goal of re-populating your intestinal tract with the good critters it needs, if you find yourself experiencing some digestive disorders—usually from an "overdose of poorly made colloidal silver". Just look at the ingredients label on the yogurt culture packages in the dairy section of your grocery store. For example, the Continental brand of yogurt products has long been an excellent choice due to the wide range of "good stuff" in their culturing medium.]

SEPTIC TANKS

Septic tanks are like your home's intestinal tract. They only work when populated with friendly flora. If you live in a rural area with your house on a septic system, and you are making your own colloidal silver, make sure you don't throw a lot of it down the sink, or your septic system may stop working properly. This problem can be handled by using a product like RID-X periodically, which is a good idea anyway.

CONCLUSIONS

Colloidal silver is an extraordinary product. It can enhance your health and the health of your family in hundreds of ways.

EVERYONE SHOULD LEARN HOW TO MAKE HIGH-QUALITY COLLOIDAL SILVER, AND HAVE THAT CAPABILITY IN THEIR HOME, IN CASE THE REGULATORS RESTRICT ITS AVAILABILITY AT SOME POINT IN THE FUTURE. THIS COULD BE THE BEST "HEALTH INSURANCE" POLICY YOU EVER IMPLEMENTED!

[Dr. Young's Editor's note: The SPECTRUM

couldn't agree more—and that is the reason both for the emphasis added above, and for the sharing of this important information article with you at this time.]

If you buy one of the colloidal silver makers on the market, make sure it can make the "yellow" particles. When you make it yourself, make sure you are making the "yellow" particles. If you have any doubts about the quality of the product you are making or buying, you can send samples to any of the following laboratories for definitive testing.

For particle-size testing with an electron microscope, contact:

EMS Laboratories, 117 West Bellevue Drive, Pasadena, CA 91105; (818) 568-4065. Price will be under $200 per sample.

For a concentration test (mg/L) of total dissolved solids, contact: Associated Laboratories, 806 North Batavia Avenue, Orange, CA 92668; (714) 771-6900. Call for prices.

For elemental analysis, including "Tyndall effect" and "precipitation" test, contact: Kimball Laboratories, 600 East 11800 South, Draper, UT 84020; (801) 571-3695. Call for prices.

These companies are busy professionals who have no idea I am listing them in this article. Please don't waste their time unless you plan to submit samples for testing with payment.

[END OF QUOTING]

GCH here to sign off for this writing. Dharma has had to type some near-40 pages today to get this far and we have concluded the above article but have yet to cover Norey Latona's writing with Dr. Young's input and their diagrams (illustrations). We will try to get to that tomorrow but remember we are having a WAR ON TERROR and a full-time job to be done right here and right now.

We don't have the luxury of scanners or special equipment to go directly to the Internet for disk retrievals. I want to be able to comment along with the writings and therefore this works out well.

In this time of incredible trouble it is the mean actions of our own team-mates which are the undoing of the very society itself. So be it, for what you send forth upon others, expect back in return in kind.

Salu, and God blesses you, for HE is never from thee.

GCH (Yes that is Cmdr. Gyeorgos Ceres Hatonn) in service.

NOTICE OF DISCLAIMER

By Gyeorgos Ceres Hatonn

I do not service either Dr. Edwin Young or Mr. Norey Latona. They both use my identification as a "higher teacher" for their personal reference. This is false as are their other presentations of my compatriots.

These people, inclusive of Rick Martin-Cortright and his claimed wife (no record of said marriage ever having been located and they have refused to present same), Gail Irwin, did criminally TAKE CONTROL of CONTACT newspaper, Phoenix Source Distributors and the business company handling said office rents and utilities. Mr. Martin and Gail Irwin were the ONLY signatories on said bank accounts and did take funds from those accounts for their own personal purposes. So too, did Dr. Young AFTER he was dismissed from any position whatsoever with said paper or corporations.

This does NOT mean that good information is not available in SPECTRUM. It does mean that the only reflection of input by "higher energies" (silly point) is per Dr. Edwin Young's own opinion and perception. Mr. Norey Latona presents documents as claimed to be "received" but only has claim of such THROUGH the approval and EDITING OF CONTENT by Dr. Young who himself claims association at the level of the higher energies THEMSELVES. It is a good job if you can get it. I do not concur. Dr. Young is a product of Stanford University and is a self-proclaimed "psychic-genius". This appears and has to be considered ego-hogwash.

One erroneous publication of "hijacked" CONTACT, March 15, 1999 indicated that somehow Cmdr. Hatonn (ME) had turned over all property and the full control of CONTACT into the hands of Dr. Young. This is untrue and could not be true under any circumstances, there being LAWS of God and Man that present otherwise.

You who follow that trail with those persons at SPECTRUM are following a MIND-WARP "game" which actually includes outright criminal activities and totally occult information of a very serious and dark reference.

It is "our" responsibility to present disclaimers of either association or participation with those persons or their presentation unless fully clarified for the reading public. THAT IS GOOD JOURNALISM AND TRUTH IN PUBLICATION.

EXAMPLE: When documents such as these presented over the past few days are so timely and worthy AND WHY WE HAD ENGAGED DR. YOUNG IN THE FIRST CASE, we value and respect the daring authors and providers who step right out there and take action. And yes, while I realize that the issue of SPECTRUM here utilized is in itself "old material", the information is no less valid.

The point is that all of this information offered again here is no less valuable but the facts ARE: At the same time our people and YOUR products were being stopped by turn-in (from these very SPECTRUM people) they were presenting THIS information even on how to make your own colloids. If nobody finds that objectionable, then we are not reaching through the TRUTH which they claim as their top-banner platitude.

It IS my responsibility to you readers and certainly to those who have served our task to present the Truth in the face of these actions having been sustained in ill intent for the last several years.

Before the "split" of persons in this event in point and especially while this secretary, Doris, was in Southeast Asia, the paper quality deteriorated markedly. This later was claimed to be because of Doris somehow, along with E.J. Ekker, becoming "dark tinged".

The people at SPECTRUM have continued to this day to try and deceive the readers into believing that I and my colleagues are contributors to their criminally established monthly tabloid. This is total misrepresentation, readers, and is unacceptable behavior.

As we offer the next portion of the Silver Colloid presentation represented as being from Norey Latona and obviously as much written by Dr. Ed Young, I respect and honor the presentation but in no way condone activities which have been perpetrated IN INTENTIONAL EFFORTS TO DESTROY OUR WORK OF SOME 14 YEARS. When it is referenced as to "long-time" readers, it can ONLY refer to the prior years of said paper, CONTACT, Liberator and "Extra".

The Spectrum editor, Dr. Young, continues to cover that by asserting that "when CONTACT was 'our' paper...". No, it was NEVER such a thing—EVER!

READERS, IT IS ALL IN THE "SORTING"

The friends at CONTACT are continuing to serve your needs and wishes to the very best of their ability. IF THERE ARE QUESTIONS about anything from products to information, they will respond as to the very best that they have available.

Perhaps they will be able to help you, in this immediate case of terror in your biologic systems, with suggestions.

Please feel free to call but please assist enough to keep phone costs down as much as possible. Damages have been severe as these self-proclaimed "enemies" have practiced their dirty tricks and black-magic curses. Truth SHALL prevail. Sometimes, impatient people, it just takes a while.

We will now move directly along, please.

[QUOTING (Continuing article), Norey Latona (in The SPECTRUM) on Colloidal Silver and apparatus for colloidalization.]

The above is one of several very well done general documents regarding colloidal silver that can be found on the Internet by ones wishing more information of this type. Note how often the research materials cited in the references are from early in the 1900s, before the pharmaceutical companies "redirected" our attention in the direction of their expensive antibiotic products.

COLLOIDAL SILVER GENERATOR

Since a picture is worth a thousand words, I have included herein both a diagram based on the description in this last article and a photo of a system I quickly put together from the diagram in order to illustrate the simplicity of a typical colloidal generator. All parts (except the silver electrodes) are readily available at your local Radio Shack or other electronics supply store for under $30, including the four 9-volt batteries. If you are not sure exactly what these basic parts are, then take the diagram with you to your nearest Radio Shack or electronics supply store and ask them to help you. Even the larger hardware stores usually carry these basic parts.

(There is an additional cost for the pure silver wire electrode material.) [H: You will need 99.9% pure silver wire and that is available through commercial vendors.]

The diagram depicts a simple, inexpensive, and very useful method of building a colloidal generator. A large drinking glass, clear glass Pyrex measuring cup, or even a glass coffeepot make very convenient containers. The latter two have a handle and pour spout, so that you can easily transfer the finished liquid product into storage bottles after it is made. Glass is a must since you will need to see the reaction. Plastic and metal containers are to be avoided as they may cause undesirable silver compounds to be formed. Wash the container prior to each use as you would any food preparation utensils. Rinse it with a little distilled water just prior to use.

A NOTE ABOUT VOLTAGES

The preceding article states that 30 volts is a nominal voltage that keeps the electrodes running clean. However, both lower voltages and higher voltages can be used. If you run at lower voltages, it will take longer to get the reaction started and the batch completed. Higher voltages will likely result in larger particle size (not good) along with reduced process times. Many articles recommend three 9-volt batteries in series (27 volts), rather than four (36 volts), and this too is acceptable and will work.

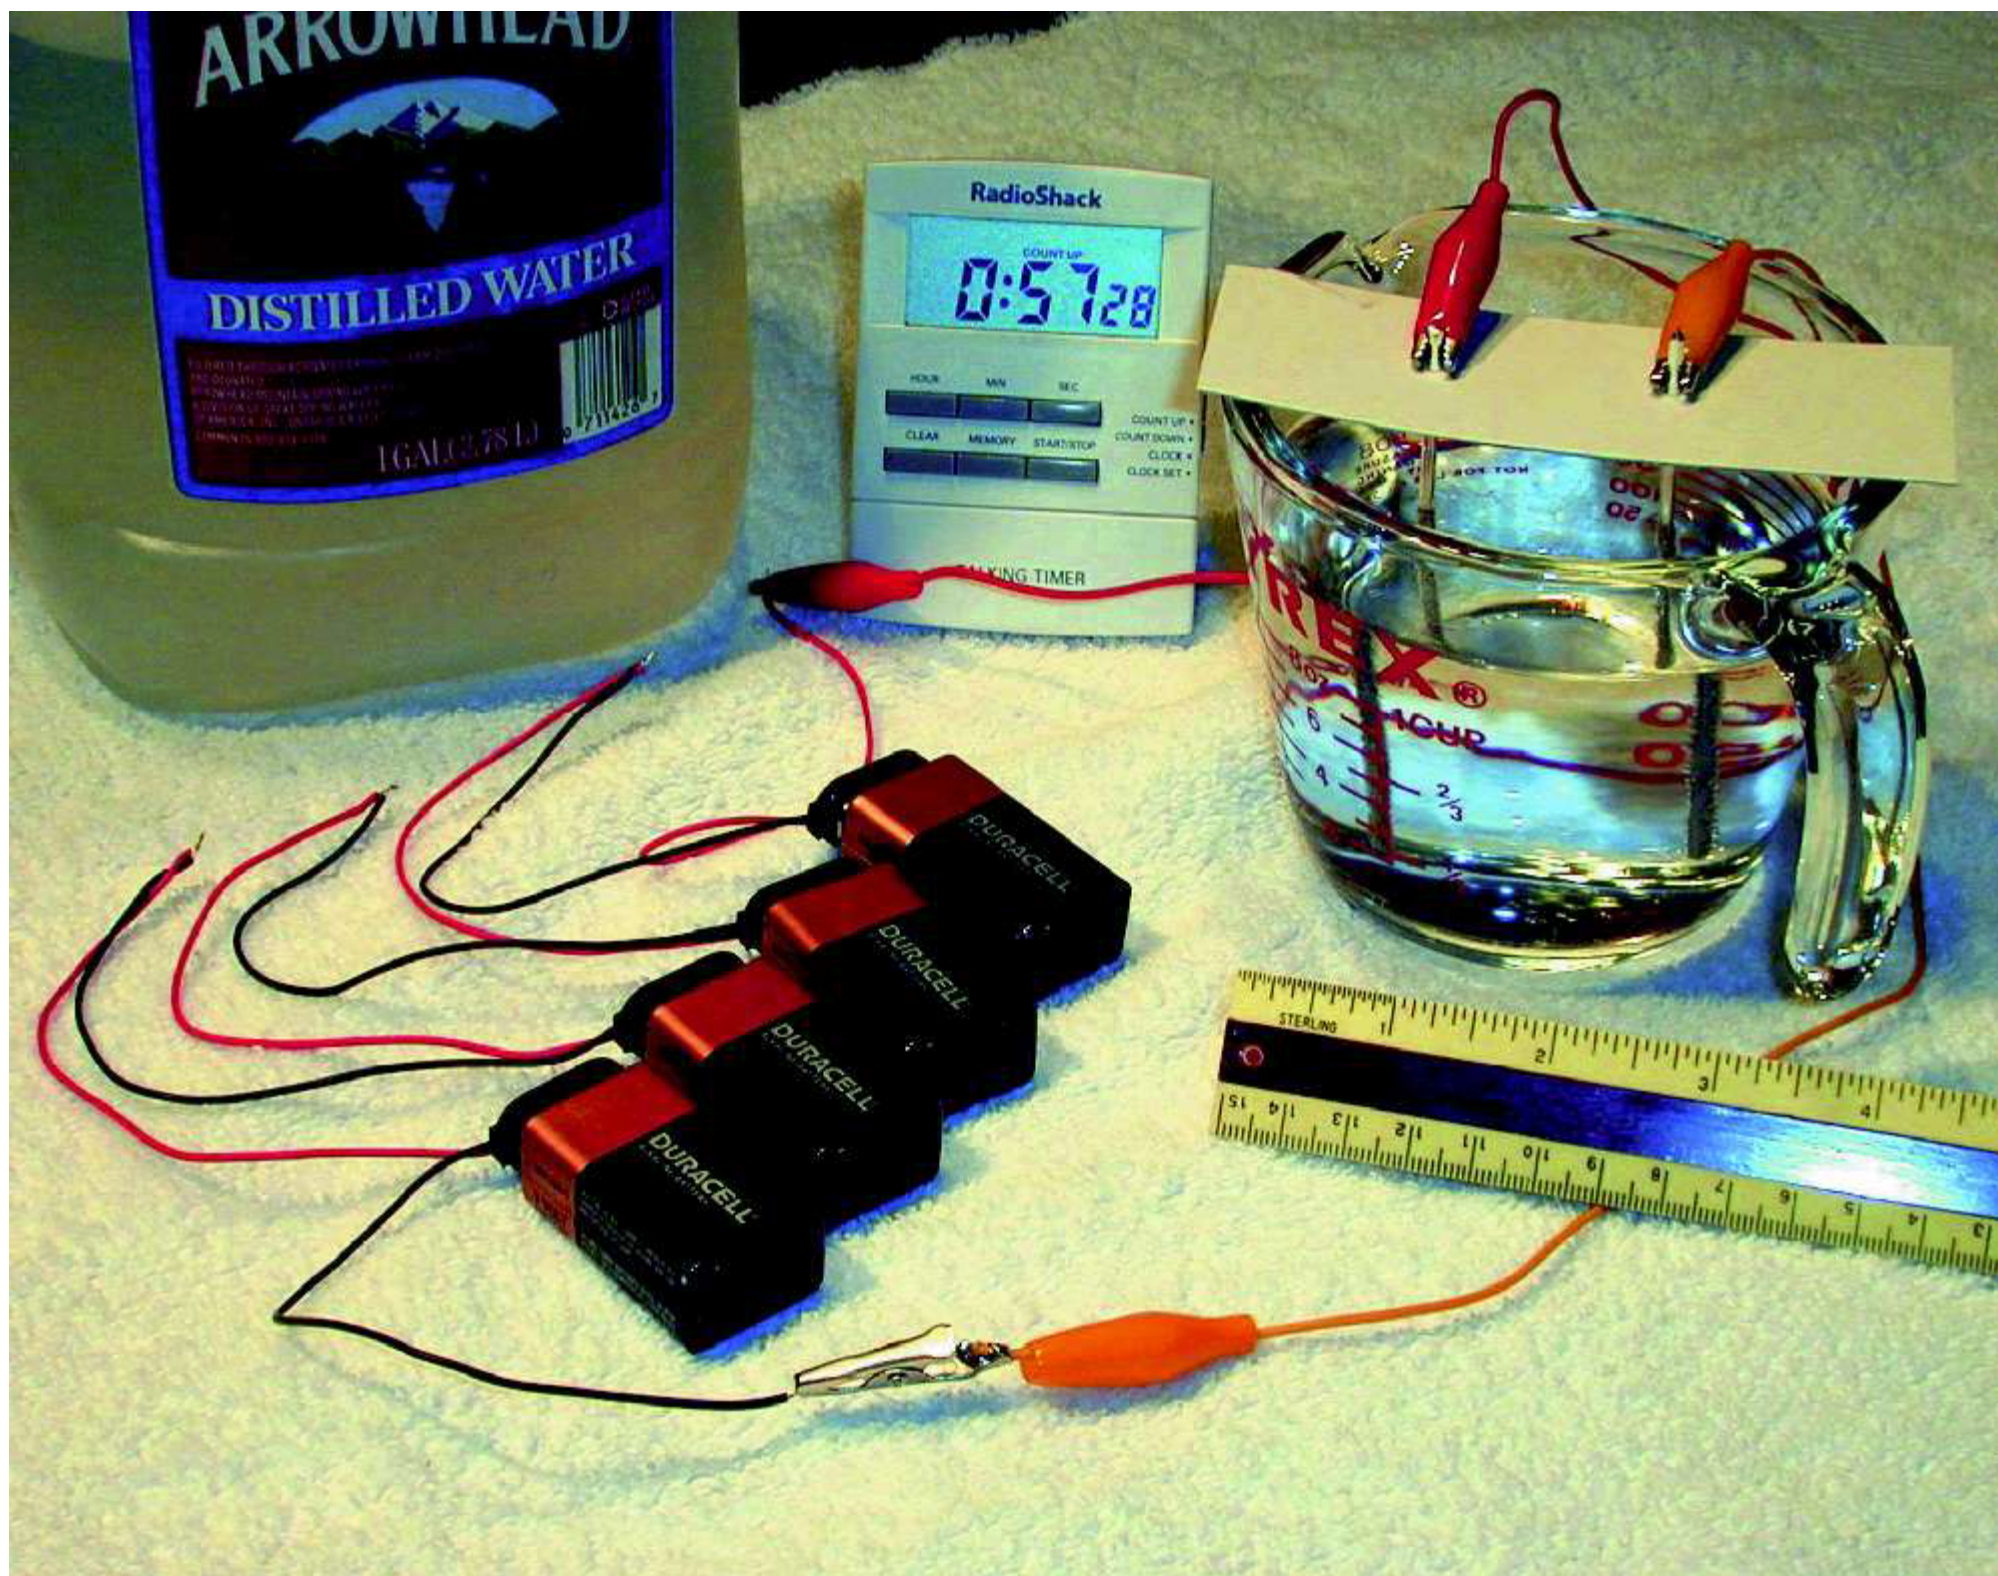

A caution to be aware of—for you experimentalists who are inclined to try the route of “more power!”—is that if you want to scale-up the reaction container size or push the reaction too fast with high-amperage DC current (generated, say, by automobile batteries or a DC arc welder’s power supply) you will likely cause the formation of larger, less useful (and more wasteful) silver particles, and also run the risk of dissociating water molecules into their primary elements—oxygen and hydrogen.

This is NOT good, and can be very dangerous! In a confined area the released hydrogen could cause fire or explosion. It is safer to just use 3 or 4 of the small transistor radio batteries, in the voltage range of 27-36, as the diagram illustrates. And for the sake of the batteries, try to keep the silver wire electrodes from touching each other and shorting-out the battery power. Small 9-volt transistor radio batteries can take some of this kind of abuse, but it only runs them down prematurely.

ANOTHER NOTE ABOUT WATER

Find a good brand of distilled water, as all are not equivalent. The lower the conductivity, the cleaner the water is, though many of you are not in a position to measure this parameter. The ARROWHEAD brand of distilled water is the best among the various brands readily available in our particular local area grocery stores. Or, if you have a good water distiller at home, use that water.

Let me emphasize again: Never use regular “drinking” or “spring” water to make your colloidal silver, as there are generally dissolved minerals and mineral compounds in drinking water that will cause silver salt compounds to be formed which will reduce the effectiveness of your colloidal silver liquid.

Deionized water should NOT be considered either, as this water is the least conductive due to the removal of ionic charges; it will be very difficult to start the colloidal reaction in this water.

The bottom line: Use only a good quality of DISTILLED water to make your colloidal silver.

EXPANDING YOUR COLLOID CHOICES

[H: THIS NEXT IS EXTREMELY WORTHY OF NOTE AS SUCH AS NEW GAIA IS CLOSED, SO USE YOUR OWN COMMON SENSE, FOR NOBODY CAN ACCEPT RESPONSIBILITY, LONGER, FOR EASE OF PRODUCT ACQUISITION. THE VARIOUS ELECTRODE ELEMENTS HAVE DIFFERENT FREQUENCIES AND CAN BE SINGULARLY BENEFICIAL IN EACH REFERENCE. THE FDA IS WORKING TO NEGATE ANY OF THESE PRODUCTS REACHING YOU-THE-PUBLIC.]

You can expand your supply beyond just colloidal silver. Colloidal gold, copper, titanium, and platinum can be generated just as easily with the appropriate electrode substitutions.

[Dr. Young's Editor's note: While it is beyond the scope of this article to outlay reasons WHY these other metallic colloids may be useful, it can be suggested that the “tuning fork” frequency of some of these—say titanium and platinum—may well be effective in combating superbugs which have been purposely engineered to withstand silver's frequency. In the case of gold and copper, there is already some research literature available describing their observed benefits.]

The overall problem here is that so-called “modern” medicine does not yet recognize the “tuning fork” frequency picture of subtle energy interactions, and thus, to use an analogy, we are stuck with attempting to explain how walkie-talkie radios work when “modern science” only knows about tin cans & string communication devices. Of course there have been those, like Rife many years ago, who have discovered The Truth—but one way or another they have found that they must proceed very quietly with their work or incur the wrath of the FDA and AMA watchdogs.]

The purest source of gold readily available to the general public (gold wire is hard to find) has been the Canadian Gold Maple Leaf coin, which can be purchased at any reputable coin dealer. Since gold is expensive, you could buy one coin and cut it in half. But keep in mind that the larger the surface area of the electrodes, the quicker will be the reaction rate of the colloidalizing process. Moreover, gold coins are a relatively sound investment so, if you have the necessary financial resources, buy two (or more) Canadian Gold Maple Leaf coins. They are one ounce each and can always be sold back to a coin dealer at a later time (if they have not been cut or damaged).

[H: I have to insert a rather obvious, but possibly overlooked thought as to returning the gold coins. If they are in good condition, yes the “coin” value may well be the same but the “gold” content will not be the same as prior to use. In fact, when making a lot of these colloids it is amazing how quickly an ounce of gold is converted to nothing. This should be considered when you are exchanging “coins” for “value” of content. You WILL want to keep that “gold dealer” as your friend in the days ahead.]

As far as PURE titanium and platinum, the sources are quite limited. Scientific equipment suppliers are a good direction in which to look.

[H: It should be noted here that Charles Neil obtained these products but his whereabouts are not known to this CONTACT staff. I am hesitant to give out information on this topic because of ongoing legal confrontations instigated by the SPECTRUM group. These products ARE AVAILABLE, however. And next: We will meet myself—but I certainly do note that even my proclaimed “double” fails to offer credit. Thank you, Mr. Latona.]

Now, to make things even more interesting, I am aware of a “finishing” technique where, after a batch of colloidal silver is made and the silver electrodes are removed, two gold electrodes (such as gold coin halves) are momentarily inserted into the solution with current applied to the electrodes for about 10-15 seconds for a 16-ounce batch. It is believed by some that the addition of the small amount of gold to the silver increases the frequency of the entire solution and thus enhances its effectiveness.

[H: There is more material offered in the “Final Thoughts” as to where you can get product, etc. I will decline to offer that information because it is directly counter to the regulations as now stated by the FDA and was at the time these articles were published by SPECTRUM.]

Messrs. Latona and Young have named a company which bears TWO negative and careless recognitions for you to avoid like plague, readers: 1) they offer product, and 2) their very NAME identifies with that which is now AGAINST THE LAW regarding any “home” remedy or health care product: “HomeCure”. Is this entrapment or genuine assisting of your cause? SPECTRUM HAS NOT BEEN OUR FRIEND!]

[END OF QUOTING]

Dr. Young is a scientist and physicist (assuming both to be the same in meaning); we give credit to his qualifications and that is WHY his services were acquired in the first place.

Mr. Latona does not offer identification or credentials but, prior to joining Dr. Young, did attend all my own sessions and discussions. He was at that time employed in a respected position in a major plant in Boron, California.

His work is under the constant observation and editing by Dr. Young, with whom he resides.

Both are in concert with workings of Dr. Tesla and I personally have supplied them with information and actual diagrams from Dr. Tesla's works.

It is because of the association of Dr. Tesla with one, Dr. Dicabla that interest has been focussed from time to time on Mt. Shasta and some people who reside there. I have purposely spelled the name phonetically because Dr. Dicabla did end up with many of the “thought to be destroyed” documents and patent materials of Dr. Tesla. Those were then placed into security with a party we will simply leave unnamed. Those things are not available to you now, but in time and proper sequence will be brought forth. Oh, the technology has been used but YOU are not allowed access and Dr. Tesla was wise indeed to attend his final records most carefully.

Dr. Tesla was a friend of Dr. Walter Russell (of “Light” fame) and it was decided between the two that Man was not ready to receive and handle the knowledge “they” possessed—for AT LEAST A THOUSAND YEARS. That was early in the 1900s so count it up for self. It is very difficult to be a man or woman “out of your time” slot. They were extremely wise and so it has come to pass, also quite correct.

It is important to always honor these great men, for they have provided ‘THE WAY’ when the International Banksters were moving into full-enslavement mode.

Readers, if you are going to survive, then you will have to take some responsibility for selves. Our people will help all they can—but they cannot do it FOR you, nor is it acceptable for them to be set up to be assaulted and even incarcerated for those very acts of generosity and compassion.

I can better tolerate and have compassion for an honest criminal than for any who do things of great and heinous contempt in the name of God, such as these named miscreants in revenge—FOR THEIR OWN ACTIONS.

Thank you, team, for these very long days in the vineyard. The wine will soon be ready.

We will need to give attention to our friends here in the Asian countries, as well, with that which may help them get through these plagues on mankind. However, we need to get our “assistants” up and able to travel to give assistance and have ability to fund a program for manufacturing and processing. One step at a time is sufficient unto our needs. I will release nothing to the haphazard management of such important matters to those who cannot even speak truth. We won't tolerate inferior quality in such as electrode material.

Dr. Cantera can be of great help and certainly is a necessary asset for the Philippines, but we will not simply turn over something as important as this to the tinkers who just want to use our information—incorrectly, and then blame us when it goes wrong, which it will when graft and corruption enter the picture.

I write this NOW, because we can expect a full assault as soon as this gets around in just the circle of this paper's readers in the Philippines and Papua New Guinea. And no, we won't just corner the market in some manner—but since this is now “controlled” in the U.S. by the FDA, we will have to make sure all things are properly in order.

We offer NO CURES; we share what we have, for we are within the Brotherhood of Man and it will be “TOGETHER” that success shall be achieved. At this point our team here has absolutely all it can handle other than with this topic in point but we will make an effort to find those who can meet this challenge. We ALL need first to have funding in order to do even this side project. The apparatus is inexpensive but the colloidalizing electrodes are precious metals and are expensive, especially in a country where poverty is rampant and life is considered cheap.

My own offering is that every “dose” should be utilized with a few drops of Gaiandriana (by whatever label you choose) for better cellular response and immune system management. All of these things take time and funds. We must “grow” our way. If we cannot do these things in the United States because of absurd regulations, then we shall take it elsewhere and that simply is the way of it.

This can be a very good industry within the Sovereign Nations of Native America or any other “sovereign” nation or territory.

So much for today, for there are other things to attend.—Gyeorgos Ceres Hatonn

UNIVERSITY HELPED U.S. REACH OUT TO TALIBAN AFGHANISTAN CENTER HOSTED OFFICIALS DURING '80S, '90S

By Michael J. Berens, Tribune, 10/21/01

Peering at the 60-foot-high faces of four of America's most famous presidents, the dozen robed and bearded Afghans drew little attention at the base of Mt. Rushmore in July 1999.

Only bullet and shrapnel scars beneath their heavy attire would be clues that these visitors were militia commanders, some with ties to Osama bin Laden and his al-Qaida network.

For the next five weeks, the men were feted at private parties, escorted on tours of other local landmarks, including a school and hospital, and given cash for a shopping mall excursion where most bought scented soaps and silk stockings.

And just as quietly as they had arrived, the Afghans were shepherded back to Afghanistan—all expenses paid courtesy of the U.S. government and the University of Nebraska at Omaha.

Since 1986, spanning the early years of post-Soviet occupation to the oppressive regime of the Taliban, the Center for Afghanistan Studies at the Omaha commuter campus has served as a back door for U.S. intelligence efforts to expose Afghan leaders to American ideas and democracy.

Even as the anti-Taliban rhetoric in Washington grew harsher in the 1990s, the university center provided a softer approach to foreign policy, an approach that was often awkward, occasionally controversial and, ultimately, a failure.

The university hosted parties for the Taliban and then filed briefings to the U.S. State Department. School officials distributed thousands of textbooks to Afghan children that reflected a government-approved version of history depicting women as second-class citizens. Encouraged by Washington, the school worked with a U.S. oil company to try to persuade the Taliban to grant valuable oil pipeline rights in Afghanistan.

The goal was to provide Afghan leaders, particularly members of the Taliban, with a taste of America in the hope that they might become U.S. allies.

The Afghans continued their trips to America even after sanctions against the Taliban were implemented by the U.S. and other nations.

In November 1997, then-Secretary of State Madeleine Albright harshly criticized Taliban leaders as sadistic killers who nailed enemies to village walls and stoned uncovered women.

One month later, eight key Taliban members, including the foreign minister, toured the U.S., stopping in Nebraska and Houston, where they visited NASA headquarters.

They also visited Washington, where State Department officials tried to reinforce Albright's views.

"We wanted to take advantage to convey this message to them directly, as well, and that's what we took advantage of these visits for," said Leonard Scensny, public affairs adviser for the State Department's Bureau of South Asian Affairs, which oversaw dozens of trips of Afghan and Taliban leaders.

The trips involving senior Taliban officials did little good, he said. During one meeting with the Taliban leaders, U.S. officials encouraged them to bring peace to Afghanistan and restore human rights.

The Taliban's reply was curt, Scensny said.

"They said this is God's law. This is the way it's supposed to be. Leave us alone," he said.

The trips were little more than a blind wager, said Peter Tomsen, a former U.S. ambassador to Armenia who teaches at the university.

There is no evidence that any of the visitors are assisting U.S. military efforts in Afghanistan, and State Department records show that many remain enemies.

Since 1986, university and federal records show, the Nebraska center has received more than $60 million in federal grants to launch educational programs in Afghanistan and Pakistan and to host visits of key Taliban leaders and military commanders....

"Most of the time the Taliban ministers would stare at the books for a few seconds, then leave. Most cannot read. They couldn't understand the covers of the books."

On July 9, 1999, the dozen Afghan leaders who had visited Mt. Rushmore gathered in a single room with a tape recorder for a landmark meeting that, for their safety, was to remain confidential.

The group was composed of leaders who worked closely with the Taliban and al-Qaida, but also included Afghan leaders who were bitter opponents of the Taliban, State Department officials said.

Sensitive to public criticism that they might be seen as embracing a controversial regime, State Department officials tried to minimize direct contact with Afghan leaders, whose government was not recognized diplomatically by the U.S. or any other major industrialized nation....

But even when the AID grant to Nebraska was canceled in 1994, the State Department continued to authorize trips of Afghan officials to the U.S. as a way to keep some line of communication open, Tomsen said.

Footing the bill for some of these visits was another party with a special interest in Afghanistan: Unocal Corp., a California-based global energy company. Although the U.S. had banned foreign aid to Afghanistan, the edict did not apply to private companies that initiated education or humanitarian relief efforts.

By 1997, the Taliban was firmly in control of the country, and energy companies long interested in Afghanistan as a possible location for oil and natural-gas pipelines were beginning to make overtures.

Unocal officials envisioned a pipeline that would tap into rich reserves held by former Soviet republics around the Caspian Sea, then course south for 1,000 miles through the mountains of Turkmenistan and the deserts of Afghanistan, snake through Pakistan and into the cargo holds of U.S.-bound tankers anchored in the Arabian Sea.

In 1997, the only roadblock to the company's plans was the Taliban.

Unocal, along with a consortium of international energy companies and investors, had secured pipeline rights for Afghanistan's northern neighbor, Turkmenistan. In November 1997, Unocal officials enlisted the support of the Afghan studies center in Omaha to help them form a business relationship with the Taliban.

The company gave the university nearly $1 million to establish job training programs in Afghanistan that would be overseen by the Taliban, said Raheem Yaseer, the Omaha center's program coordinator.

"The oil company wanted to generate goodwill with the Taliban without actually negotiating with them," said Yaseer, who is an Afghan native and a Muslim religious leader at an Omaha mosque.

In December 1997, Unocal—with State Department approval—obtained U.S. visitor visas for eight Taliban officials and a Pakistani intelligence officer.

"The U.S. government was encouraging our engagement there to bring stability to the country," Unocal spokesman Barry Lane said.

State Department officials confirmed that the agency supported Unocal's efforts....

[JR: Not only are our college campuses halls of learning and indoctrination but are also utilized by governments and private industry to further their plans for "nation building". The U.S. in collusion with the oil barons have had designs on Afghanistan since 1986. Nothing happens by chance and it's time we all learn to follow the money and connect the dots in this deadly game of world takeover. Globalization and nation-building as orchestrated by the UN is the politically correct way of saying we are out to conquer the world and subjugate it to our will. It's the same game plan that has been used for centuries and we as a people still fall for the lie and march off to kill our so-called enemies. The profiteers, privateers and elite rulers are toasting their victories over us sheeple and reveling over their obscene profits.]

WITH UN HELP, U.S. HAS TOOLS FOR PURSUIT

at Northwestern Law School,
PERSPECTIVE, 10/21/01

President Bush has unveiled a "most wanted" list of 22 international terrorists, topped by Osama bin Laden and his gang. Together with the $5 million reward for information leading to the arrest of anyone on it, the list makes clear that the United States will vigorously pursue not only a military but a law-enforcement response to the Sept. 11 terrorism.

Yet few noticed when the United Nations Security Council last month unanimously adopted Resolution 1373 on international terrorism. It transforms the landscape in the attack on terrorism.

The resolution, proposed by the U.S. and expanded by Russia, clarifies and extends the duties of all nations to help bring terrorists to justice. It also makes their obligations enforceable, and closes the loopholes. In one stroke, it accomplishes what would otherwise have taken years to achieve by the treaty process.

Perhaps the war drums were beating too loudly. Or the Sept. 28 resolution came too late on a Friday night for news cycles.

But what escaped notice was a revolution in international criminal law on terrorism. Imagine, for example, the following scenarios:

- Osama bin Laden, racing ahead of our helicopter gunships, crosses the border into Iran and requests political asylum. The U.S. demands his extradition.

- The U.S. detects Saudi millionaires writing hefty checks to an Islamic “charity” in Pakistan, whose funds are diverted to support bin Laden. The U.S. demands that Saudi Arabia end such “donations” and make them criminal.

- Mullah Mohammed Omar, head of the Taliban, escapes to Pakistan. The U.S. demands that Pakistan either prosecute or turn him over for prosecution.

In each case, must Washington’s demand be met?

If it is rebuffed, what are the legal and diplomatic consequences?

Before the new Security Council resolution, the answers were problematic. International law on terrorism was a prosecutor’s nightmare: a Swiss cheese of non-binding or narrowly focused UN resolutions, sandwiched between treaties that ban some kinds of terrorism but not others, and bind some countries but not others.

This legal laxity has two historical roots. One was armed national liberation movements. From 1945 until the 1990s, they won independence for countries throughout Africa and Asia. However, they committed violent acts that were crimes under the laws of their colonial or oppressor governments. The African National Congress, for example, bombed police stations and government buildings of the apartheid regime in South Africa.

An increasingly Third World UN was not about to repudiate their tactics. In 1973 the General Assembly adopted a resolution on “basic principles of the legal status of the combatants struggling against colonial and alien domination and racist regimes”. It declared their struggles “legitimate and in full accordance with principles of international law.”

How could the UN define terrorism in a way that would not also condemn the violent tactics of independence movements? No answer was found. So no consensus was reached on how to define or, for a time, even whether to condemn terrorism.

The other historical root was the Cold War. While the Soviet Union supported Cuba’s effort to export revolution to Bolivia, Ronald Reagan sponsored the Contras who fought to overthrow the Sandinistas in Nicaragua. One side’s terrorist was the other’s freedom fighter.

In these circumstances, a blanket, binding ban on terrorism was impossible. Yet international terrorism—especially airplane hijackings—threatened both sides. How to deal with it?

Three sorts of answers were devised, none satisfactory.

In a series of resolutions beginning in 1972, the General Assembly pronounced itself “deeply concerned,” and it “unequivocally” condemned international terrorism. But its resolutions, not legally binding, ducked any effort to define terrorism. They left all sides free to inveigh against terrorism in general, while indignantly denying that their freedom fighters were terrorists.

A second response was multilateral treaties banning specific kinds of terrorism. Countries joining such treaties agreed to make certain terrorist acts criminal, prosecute or extradite those who commit them, deny them political asylum and cooperate with efforts to bring them to justice....

As colonialism and the Cold War fade into memory, legal momentum has picked up in recent years. The broadest treaties—against terrorist bombings and financing terrorism—were adopted in the past few years. However, they are not in force, because they have not been ratified by the minimum required number of states. The U.S. has signed but not yet ratified both treaties.

The U.S. also tries to curb terrorism through bilateral treaties in which both countries agree to provide mutual legal assistance. But our relations are too poor to reach agreement with some countries. And there are escape hatches. Our treaty with Egypt, for example, allows either country to refuse assistance that could “prejudice security or similar essential interests”.

The legal landscape on Sept. 11, then, was littered with loopholes. When the World Trade Center and Pentagon were hit, the extent of other countries’ obligations to help the FBI was limited, varied and often unclear.

But that has been changed by the new resolution.

What makes this swift action possible is another treaty, the UN Charter.

In case of threats to international peace and security, Chapter VII of the Charter empowers the Security Council to order all UN member states to take certain actions. If any state fails or refuses, the Council can then impose diplomatic, economic or even military sanctions.

Using its Chapter VII powers, the Council decided in the new resolution that all UN member nations, among other steps, “shall”:

- Stop the financing of terrorism, by criminalizing its funding and freezing assets of terrorists and related entities.
- Not support terrorists, even passively, going so far as to suppress their training and eliminate their supply of weapons.
- Share early-warning information.
- Deny a haven to terrorists and those who finance or give them a haven.
- Prevent use of their territories to plan or finance terrorism.
- Ensure that terrorists are brought to justice and duly punished.
- Provide the “greatest measure” of mutual legal assistance.

The resolution makes no effort to end past controversies by defining terrorism. Instead, its approach is “you know it when you see it.” Judgment calls will be made by the Security Council, whose members will enforce their own resolution.

The resolution sets the bar high, as it should be. If all or even most governments meet its standards, terrorists will be pushed deep underground and find it difficult to operate.

In the real world, of course, the resolution will not instantly convert regimes that sponsor terrorism into law-abiding global citizens. Nor will it immediately put backbone into leaders who choose to look the other way when terrorists are funded from their territories.

Yet by making the rules reasonably clear and uniform, the resolution makes it easier to hold governments accountable. Regimes that flout the rules can be confronted. If they fail to cooperate, the threat of Security Council sanctions ups the ante.

Like all else in the world of international law, neither compliance nor enforcement will be perfect. Both will be subject to the geopolitical realities of the day.

But the campaign against international terrorism, at long last, has the legal tools it needs.

[JR: This UN Resolution 1373 may set the rules for every country on how to combat terrorism but it also does away with the need in having to negotiate and sign Treaties with each individual sovereign nation. This “fast track” resolution has effectively put every nation under the authority of the UN. Every nation that has signed the UN Charter (U.S. included) has in effect signed their people, their country and their sovereignty over to the rulers now set up at the new world headquarters in Brussels. A terrorist act has destroyed lives, families and buildings—but it also destroyed our U.S. Constitution.]

TALIBAN FIGHTERS SLOW REBEL ADVANCE

By Colin McMahon, Tribune, 10/18/01

TASHKENT, UZBEKISTAN—Hopes for a potentially decisive ground victory against Afghanistan’s ruling Taliban government suffered an apparent setback Wednesday as Taliban forces held off rebels in the battle for the strategically important city of Mazar-e-Sharif.

The Northern Alliance launched its attack early in the day, confident it could take the city within days and bolstered by the Pentagon’s assertion that the Taliban is less able to respond to the barrage from U.S. warplanes, now concentrating on the capital, Kabul, and Kandahar, the Taliban’s home base.

As President Bush left the U.S. for a meeting in China, he warned that the struggle against terrorism likely will last beyond the campaign against Osama bin Laden, the prime suspect in the Sept. 11 suicide hijacking attacks, and the Taliban regime sheltering him.

“People are going to get tired of the war on terrorism,” Bush said at Travis Air Force Base in California. “And by the way, it may take more than two years.”

Secretary of State Colin Powell sought to maintain the delicate coalition against terrorism, assuring India officials that the U.S.’ critical alliance with Pakistan will not come at India’s expense. Tensions between Pakistan and India flared this week with the two nuclear powers exchanging artillery fire in the disputed Kashmir region.

Later in Shanghai, Powell said the deteriorating situation in Afghanistan might lead to a political vacuum, requiring United Nations peacekeepers to stabilize the country.

“This isn’t the United States going in and nation-building with troops,” Powell said. “This is helping the international community, helping the people of Afghanistan to create hopeful conditions within the country.”

In Washington, Pentagon officials said special operations troops were ready for search-and-destroy missions against terrorists and their supporters in Afghanistan.

Military officials said helicopter-borne special forces were put aboard the carrier USS Kitty Hawk in the Indian Ocean several days ago, but the officials would not discuss their possible deployment. The Pentagon has not acknowledged the presence of any ground forces in Afghanistan but has said ground forces will be needed to uproot bin Laden and his al-Qaida network.

Bush said the U.S.-led air assaults were “paving the way for friendly troops on the ground” to rout the terrorists. But aides said the president was referring to anti-Taliban forces in northern Afghanistan, not American or British troops....

In Mazar-e-Sharif, scene of frenetic street fighting and large-scale massacres three years ago when the Taliban wrested the city from the Northern Alliance, hopes for a quick rebel victory dimmed.

A rebel victory could allow the United States and its partners in the anti-terrorism coalition to use the city’s airport as a launch pad for air strikes and other operations against the Afghan capital and other Taliban fortifications.

Navy Rear Adm. John Stufflebeem, deputy director of operations for the Joint Chiefs of Staff, described the fighting at Mazar-e-Sharif as “back and forth”.

That assessment from the Pentagon raised fears that fierce street battles are ahead as Taliban fighters dig in, and deepened concerns that Northern Alliance leaders may be too optimistic about their abilities....

Meanwhile, the U.S. propaganda broadcasts warned that terrorists in Afghanistan “will pay with their blood” for their actions, according to transcripts released by the Pentagon. Another message, transmitted by Air Force ED-130 aircraft flying over the country, warns the Taliban: “You have guaranteed your own demise.”...

Pakistan, the only nation to maintain diplomatic relations with the Taliban regime, shares a border with Afghanistan. Despite widespread protests, President Musharraf has allowed the U.S. to base troops and aircraft in his country.

[JR: The U.S. Special Forces won’t go in and engage in their search-and-destroy missions until the Northern Alliance secures the Taliban strongholds; in other words, do all the heavy fighting so we can claim a major victory without the cost of heavy casualties. Notice that reports of U.S. casualties are all related to supposedly accidental crashes in Pakistan, not from battles in Afghanistan. Got to keep the “patriots” at home cheering us on. Bush does warn that the war will take over two years, only because we have to keep on going and bomb into submission any “rogue nations” that do not comply to U.S. threats and coercion. Next stage in “nation building” (despite Sir Powell’s denials) will be for the UN to march in and set up its own puppet governments. And so goes the NWO/globalization/colonization plans for world takeover.]

ARMITAGE EYES MAJOR UN ROLE IN TERRORISM FIGHT

USA TODAY, 10/18/01

WASHINGTON (AP)—Afghanistan’s postwar future was on the agenda as Deputy Secretary of State Richard Armitage met Friday with Lakhdar Brahimi, who is in charge of all UN operations in Afghanistan. President Bush was holding parallel talks with Russian President Vladimir Putin and Chinese President Jiang Zemin in Shanghai, China, trying to coordinate their positions with his. Brahimi had talks in Washington with Undersecretary of State Marc Grossman and Richard Haass, who is plotting U.S. postwar policy, as well as Armitage, and with officials at the National Security Council. The Bush administration is looking to the United Nations to take on a major role. While Brahimi made no statements in Washington, he had already registered skepticism.

After peacekeeping disasters in Bosnia, Somalia and Rwanda, he urged the Security Council this week not to rush in with peacekeepers when the U.S.-led military campaign ends.

“Afghanistan is a very difficult country,” Brahimi said. “It’s a very proud people and they don’t like to be ordered around by foreigners. They don’t like to see foreigners there, especially in military uniforms.”

On another troubled front, an Afghan opposition leader said Thursday he vehemently opposes Secretary of State Colin Powell’s suggestion that moderate elements of the ruling Taliban militia might have a role in a future government in Kabul.

The Taliban should be tried in court—not allowed to govern, said Ravan Farhadi, Afghanistan’s UN ambassador, who represents the former Afghan government.

Farhadi stated the opposition’s position in a note to Richard N. Haass, the State Department’s director of policy planning, who is Powell’s coordinator for Afghanistan.

“The Taliban have given not only shelter to (Osama) bin Laden but they facilitated his international terroristic acts,” Farhadi told reporters after handing the note to Haass in a UN corridor in New York. “We don’t agree with Mr. Powell because we think that the Taliban leaders... need to be (on) trial in a court.”

The paper accused the Taliban of committing genocide and crimes against humanity and of providing training centers and safe haven for terrorists.

“In no way they could be considered as eligible for the future political setup of a democratic Afghanistan,” the statement concluded.

Farhadi represents the ousted Afghan government led by Burhanuddin Rabbani, which is still recognized by the United Nations but not by the United States.

It is part of the northern-based opposition alliance fighting the Taliban.

On the U.S.-led coalition that is on the offensive against the Taliban, Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld on Thursday defended the secondary roles played by some NATO allies.

The coalition is unlikely to unravel, Rumsfeld said at a Pentagon news conference. But he said the campaign is a flexible one, involving “different nations at different times doing different things”.

“As far as we’re concerned, that’s fine,” Rumsfeld said.

And yet, he told reporters, “A month from now, I expect someone somewhere might report that a particular nation is not doing something or has stopped doing something.”

As a result, Rumsfeld said, “The speculation could be: Is the coalition coming apart or unraveling?”

Britain has been most visibly alongside the United States, joining in missile attacks on the Taliban.

Robert Bell, an assistant secretary-general of the NATO military alliance, told reporters Thursday that Britain, Canada, Germany, France, Spain and Italy all are actively participating in the U.S. military campaign.

Bell, a former National Security Council official, said some elite U.S. peacekeeping units in the Balkans may be assigned to the campaign in Afghanistan.

The NATO allies would pick up any slack in the region.

But while Bell described the allies’ support as steadfast, he said if the United States takes military action against terrorism in other countries, NATO support would depend on the kind of evidence the United States provided.

At the State Department, Philip Reeker, the deputy spokesman, said the United States was already sharing with NATO allies information and intelligence about terrorism beyond Afghanistan.

Reeker said the sharing would continue.

In the meantime, former Canadian Foreign Minister Lloyd Axworthy was sharply critical of the dominant U.S. role in the campaign. He said in New York that it was not acceptable for all decisions to emanate from the United States.

Axworthy said the key nations in the coalition should meet soon and review the mission against the Taliban, its duration and an “exit strategy”—a plan to leave the South Asian country.

[JR: The UN is again made mention in terms of its future participation in the affairs of Afghanistan. Some of our NATO allies are grouching over the dominant role the U.S. plays in world affairs. Not only do we provide all the information and intelligence on any targeted country, and our military is the first to go to “soften up” countries for UN takeover. The latest stats back this up. The U.S. has now 1.4 million troops stationed in 130 countries around the globe to, quote, “shape the international environment and respond to conflicts”. Have our military become the dogs of war? No offense, “bully patriots”... it means our troops are now being used as mercenaries.]

MOST WORLD LEADERS AGREE TO INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE ON TERRORISM

From Mohd Kamel Othman & Ridzuan Zulkifli,
BERNAMA, 10/20/01

SHANGHAI—Datuk Seri Dr. Mahathir Mohamad said that most of the world leaders he met in conjunction with the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC) here agreed to having an international conference on terrorism.

“Most of them feel that such a conference should be held,” he told Malaysian journalists here Saturday.

Dr. Mahathir, who had proposed such a conference to discuss the question of terrorism, said that although he did not stress on it the majority of the world leaders felt it was necessary in the fight against terrorism.

Today, the prime minister held bilateral discussions with U.S. President George W. Bush, Russian President Vladimir Putin, Chinese President Jiang Zemin and Mexican President Vicente Fox.

He is expected to hold a bilateral meeting with Japanese Prime Minister Junichiro Koizumi on Monday.

“I gave as an example the Irish Republican Army (IRA) which the British government regards as terrorists but not by the United States,” he said.

In fact, Dr. Mahathir said many Americans of Irish origin supported the IRA.

“So, we want to know who are ‘terrorists’ so the world could take action against them,” he said.

Asked on his discussions with Jiang, Dr. Mahathir said the Chinese president only wanted to hear his view on terrorism and that he had explained to him Malaysia’s stand.

On his discussions with Putin, he said they also discussed the same issue and the need to identify the root cause of terrorism.

He said Putin also expressed sympathy to Palestine President Yasser Arafat and the Palestinians but was cautious on the solution to the problem in West Asia as Russian Jews made up about one third of the Israel’s population.

[JR: Seems like the talks Dr. Mahathir had with Putin, Zemin, Fox and Koizumi were more insightful on terrorism than the meetings held with all the APEC leaders. Hope we hear of more positive and productive recommendations in the days to come.]

APEC LEADERS CONDEMN TERRORIST ATTACKS IN U.S.

From Mohd Kamel Othman, BERNAMA, 10/21/01

SHANGHAI—Leaders of the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC) forum who ended their meeting here Sunday have unequivocally condemned the Sept 11 terrorist attacks in the United States branding them as a threat to the peace, prosperity and security of all people, faiths and nations.

“Terrorism is also a direct challenge to APEC’s vision of free, open and prosperous economies and the fundamental values that APEC members hold,” they said in a statement on counter-terrorism after the Ninth APEC Economic Leaders Meeting.

Malaysian Prime Minister Datuk Seri Dr. Mahathir Dr. Mahathir Mohamad, U.S. President George W. Bush and his Russian counterpart Vladimir Putin were among the leaders who attended the two-day meeting.

As such, the leaders said in the statement, it was imperative to strengthen international cooperation at all levels in combating terrorism.

In this regard, they affirmed that the United Nations (UN) should play a major role especially taking into account the importance of all relevant UN resolutions.

In the Sept. 11 attacks, terrorists crashed hijacked jetliners into the World Trade Centre in New York and the Pentagon in Washington killing about 5,600 people.

The leaders also pledged full cooperation and close communication among economic policy and financial authorities to ensure no disruption to economies and markets by international terrorism.

They also called for increased cooperation to bring the perpetrators to justice and for early signing and ratification of all basic universal anti-terrorist conventions including the International Convention for the Suppression of the Financing of Terrorism.

The leaders are determined to enhance counter-terrorism cooperation in line with specific circumstances in their respective economies, through:

- * appropriate financial measures to prevent the flow of funds to terrorists;
- * adherence by all economies to relevant international requirement for the security of air and maritime transportation;
- * strengthening of energy security in the region;
- * strengthening APEC activities in protecting critical sectors including telecommunications, transportation, health and energy;
- * enhancement of customs communication networks;
- * cooperation to develop electronic movement records systems that will enhance border security;
- * strengthening capacity-building and economic and technical cooperation to enable member economies put into place and enforce effective counter-terrorism measures; and,
- * cooperation to limit the economic fallout from attacks and move to restore economic confidence in the region through policies and measures to increase economic growth.

Their weekend meeting here was the first top-level multilateral gathering since the Sept. 11 attacks on the U.S. [JR: I look at APEC recommendations to combat terrorism with a jaundiced eye. Most of the proposals are for the protection of telecommunications, utilities, record-keeping and to increase or restore the economic growth. These Third World countries are in hock to the U.S., IMF and WB so all this does is protect the privateers who control these countries and their assets. I don’t see how these resolutions address the needs of the people who can’t feed their families because there are no jobs for them. Terrorism is born out of the desperation of the “have nots” whose daily existence is a struggle for survival. The globalists like to ignore all this and so do we.]

ONCE AGAIN BITTEN BY AMERICA

Hizb-ut-Tahrir in Pakistan, 10/4/01

In a recent article published by the New York Times it was reported that official sources had confirmed that President Bush had approved a secret effort to strengthen a diverse array of groups opposing the Taliban. The details of the operation include: providing funding to the opposition groups, purchasing weapons, recruiting new fighters, bribing Taliban commanders to switch sides, or to undertake other efforts to weaken the regime. By sponsoring such a move the U.S. has clearly signaled that she is preparing to install yet another government of her own choosing in Afghanistan, irrespective of the harm that may ensue to lives of the Muslims and the security of the region.

The truth of the matter is that the U.S. is not concerned about achieving a settlement that is beneficial for the Muslims of this region; she is only concerned about using the region to further her own aims and cement her new world order. In the eighties, it suited the U.S. to use Pakistan to back competing groups of Afghan Mujahideen in order to expel the Russians and to protect the U.S. oil interests in the Gulf. After the departure of the Russians, it then suited America to consolidate Afghanistan under a single leadership, so it used the Pakistani establishment to set up the Taliban regime, which succeeded in taking control of about 95% of the country. Meanwhile, America used the threat of the apparently Islamic Taliban to draw the Central Asian States closer to her sphere of influence by forging security treaties under the pretext of fighting terrorism. Now it suits America to discard the Taliban regime and replace it with a Western-style regime that will control the whole of Afghanistan. Unlike the Taliban, such a regime will be openly American and will open the doors to a strong American presence within the region. Economically, the U.S. will then be well positioned to exploit the hugely lucrative oil wells of the Caspian Sea.

Militarily, the U.S. will use its strong presence in this region to maintain a strong hold on regional affairs and to challenge other powers, especially China, who is her main potential rival. Politically, America will foster secular leaderships within the region and pressure Muslim governments to suppress the strong Islamic revival within the region.

How could America dare to enter the Muslim lands and pick and choose regimes as she pleases? She could not do this without the full co-operation of the traitor leaders of Muslims. And this dependency on Muslim regimes exposes the weakness of America in front of the Muslim Ummah. She has to rely upon Muslim regimes to provide her with bases, logistic support, oil and intelligence to execute her war on the Muslims of Afghanistan. Our rulers fully realise this but they are agents to the West and so must project America as the mighty power that will isolate our countries if they do not cooperate. If America terminates relations with the Muslim countries, is it the Muslim Ummah that will become isolated or is it America herself that will become isolated from the huge markets and vast resources of one-fifth of the world population?

It is time for the Muslims of Afghanistan, Pakistan, Turkministan, Uzbekistan, Tajikistan, Khazakstan and other countries to remove these Western kufr regimes and establish the Khilafah.

The Khilafah will unify the resources and the armies of the ummah under a single leadership and will not allow any Muslims to fall prey to the American New World Order.

[JR: This is the view from the Taliban perspective that Washington considers as propaganda and attempts to block American exposure. The fact is, there is nothing new reported here that hasn’t already been published or discussed in various U.S. media. The administration just don’t like it being so readily spread around domestically as it might educate too many Americans and change the programmed support for this so-called “war”.]

TRAITORS AT THE OIC APPROVE AMERICA’S WAR AGAINST MUSLIMS

Press Releases From Naveed Butt,
Official spokesman of Hizb-ut-Tahrir in Pakistan, 10/11/01

On the 10th of October, foreign ministers of 56 Muslim countries gathered in Qatar and offered muted criticisms against the U.S. attacks on the Muslims of Afghanistan. In response to this the Spokesman of Hizb ut-Tahrir in Pakistan Mr. Naveed Butt said that it is hypocritical to support the plight of the Afghan people and at the same time offer U.S. and British forces access to bases, intelligence, logistical support and oil, so that these colonialist powers can freely wage their war against the population of Afghanistan.

Naveed Butt said that this comes as no surprise, as during the last decade the butchering of Muslims in Iraq, Bosnia, Chechnya, Palestine and Kashmir have also met similar fates. Some still view organisations like the Arab League and the OIC helping the ummah, but in reality they are forums where the puppet rulers of the Muslim world gather to rubberstamp America’s war against the Muslims.

The Spokesman said that today it is America that is weak and has to continuously rely upon her agents in the Muslim world to protect her national interests. The Muslim countries all in all have about 5 million well-equipped soldiers, thousands of tanks, numerous fighter planes lethal weapons such as nuclear, vast deposits of oil and gas. More than enough resources to protect the ummah from her enemies. Instead of using our armies to liberate the ummah from our belligerent enemies they are used by our oppressive regimes to suppress the ummah worldwide.

He further said that as the Muslim ummah leaves the past decade behind, one observes a new energy in the Muslim world. This new energy is her return to political Islam. This manifests in her strong desire for unification of the Muslim lands into a single global state. Increasingly the wish of the common Muslim whether from Morocco to Indonesia is about the Muslim world getting together under the leadership of a single leader who would run their affairs according to Islam. It is only a matter of time before she wrests the reigns of power away from the present rulers and transfers it to a sincere leader who will rule according to Islam.

[JR: The G-7 (8) nations and most Christians and Jews assume that the Muslim nations are so splintered in their political philosophy that they could never join together to be cohesive enough to stand up against those that are actually controlling their assets through the IMF and WB. Any movement towards an Islamic independent coalition is immediately suppressed through “covert” economic actions against any state that might dare, such as

Malaysia. The powerful Elite make sure all Muslim countries remain “Third World” or “Developing Nations” because they contain the bulk of the of the world’s natural resources the G-7 need. That is why the 57 Islamic nations in the Organization of the Islamic Conference (OIC) must act in unison in order to protect their individual member states. Can you imagine the economic impact on the entire world if all the Muslim countries united into one international trading block with an Islamic banking system by using the gold-backed GAIA program? Talk about major shifts in power and control!]

U.S. MUSLIM LEADER: JEWS DID IT

WorldNetDaily.com, 10/17/01

The Jews are responsible for the terror attacks on the World Trade Center and Pentagon, the imam of New York’s Islamic Center said in an interview with an Arabic-language university Website.

“All the signs indicate that the Jews have the most to gain from an explosion like that,” Egyptian Sheikh Muhammad Al-Gamei’a, the imam of the Islamic Cultural Center and Mosque of New York City, told the Website alazhar-qaza.edu, an unofficial Al-Azhar University site. “They are the only ones capable of planning such acts.”

The interview was translated by the Middle East Media Research Institute.

“First of all, it was found that the automatic pilot was neutralized a few minutes before the flight, and the automatic pilot cannot be neutralized if you don’t have command of the control tower,” Al-Gamei’a explained. “Second, the black boxes were found to contain no information; you cannot erase the information from these boxes if you do not plan it ahead of time on the plane. Third, America has the most powerful intelligence apparatuses, the FBI and the CIA. ... How did [the perpetrators] manage to infiltrate America without their knowledge? Fourth, Jews control decision-making in the airports and in the sensitive centers in the White House and the Pentagon. Fifth, to date America has presented no proof incriminating Osama bin Laden and al-Qaida.”

These four “facts,” said Al-Gamei’a, prove that “only the Jews are capable of planning such an incident, because it was planned with great precision of which Osama bin Laden or any other Islamic organization or intelligence apparatus is incapable. ...”

Gamei’a repeated the discredited rumor, begun in the Pakistan press, that “4,000 Jews did not come to work at the World Trade Center on the day of the incident.”

“This news item was hushed up immediately after it was broadcast,” he said. “The Jews who control the media acted to hush it up so that the American people would not know. If it became known to the American people, they would have done to the Jews what Hitler did.”

Gamei’a, who returned to Egypt immediately following the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks, characterized the American attack on Afghanistan as “terrorism.”

Gamei’a also charged that “Muslims are being persecuted by the people and the federal government” in the United States following the Sept. 11 attacks.

“When a group of people attacked my home, I went out to them and asked why they were doing this,” he related. “They said that because we were Muslims we were linked to terrorism. I explained to them that what they were doing was uncivilized and was, in effect, a twofold crime—you let the criminals go free and attack innocents. This does not suit a modern state and a modern people, and is opposed to human values. During my conversations with this group, it became clear to me that they knew very well that the Jews were behind these ugly acts, while we, the Arabs, were innocent, and that someone from among their people was disseminating corruption in the land. Although the Americans suspect that the Zionists are behind the act, none has the courage to talk about it in public.”

Why can’t Americans talk about these suspicions?

Gamei’a explains: “When I asked them whether they had the courage to talk about it openly, they said, ‘We can’t.’ I asked why, and they said, ‘You know very well that the Zionists control everything and that they also control political decision-making, the big media organizations and the financial and economic institutions. Anyone daring to say a word is considered an anti-Semite.’”

[JR: From a different perspective, however this doesn’t say anything that we haven’t heard from other alternative news sources.]

CIPRO IS NOT ONLY PILL TO FIGHT ANTHRAX

By Shankar Vedantam, WASHINGTON POST, 10/17/01

Last week it was a medicine known only to doctors and patients who suffered from very private diseases, such as urinary tract infections or gonorrhea. Today, Cipro is famous as a treatment for anthrax. It is being fought over at pharmacies and bought at exorbitant markups on the Internet. So great is the demand—and so widespread the fear of shortages—that one U.S. senator has called on the government to lift patent laws and allow generic manufacturers to market millions of doses of the lifesaving medicine.

Lost in the melee is the fact that Cipro—or ciprofloxacin, as it is generically known—is only one of several medicines approved by the Food and Drug Administration to treat anthrax. Many of the others have been around for decades and cost less than a tenth as much.

“I don’t know how Cipro got labeled in the first place as the drug of choice,” said Philip Hanna, an anthrax expert at the University of Michigan. “It’s a great medicine for a number of different bacteria, but I don’t know how it got labeled as the go-to medicine” for anthrax.

Mohammad Akhter, executive director of the American Public Health Association, said four first-line treatments approved for anthrax are penicillin, tetracycline, erythromycin and chloramphenicol.

“Everyone is using Cipro, but they are not using the guidelines” issued by public health authorities, said Trish Perl, an associate professor of medicine at Johns Hopkins University’s Center for Civilian Biodefense Studies. “You can look at the susceptibility [of a given anthrax strain] and see what medicines kill the organism. Penicillin and doxycycline are effective and have been used clinically.”

FDA PUSHES ANTHRAX DRUG OPTIONS

WORLD SCIENTIST, 19/17/01

WASHINGTON (AP)—Cipro is not the only antibiotic that fends off anthrax. Two other drugs are widely available, have fewer side effects and are much cheaper, a message the government is struggling to get out.

The American Medical Association urged physicians Wednesday to quit prescribing unnecessary Cipro. Pediatric specialists warned that it is especially dangerous for parents to stockpile because Cipro is not approved for children’s use.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention will produce a special Webcast Thursday to teach thousands of local doctors how to recognize anthrax and properly treat people exposed to the bacteria.

And the Food and Drug Administration announced it is about to issue specific instructions on how to use two other widely available antibiotics—doxycycline and penicillin—to prevent anthrax infection.

“It seems as if in the minds of some people, that’s the only drug,” FDA drug chief Dr. Janet Woodcock said, speaking of Cipro. “That actually isn’t the case.”

Only people who have been exposed to anthrax are supposed to take the 60-day course of antibiotics to prevent infection. Doctors should not give patients any antibiotic to keep in case they’re exposed, the AMA stressed Wednesday.

There is a “real risk that symptoms not related to anthrax will prompt people to initiate unnecessary treatment,” said AMA chairman Dr. Timothy Flaherty.

A person who takes antibiotics for a cold will suffer needless side effects for no benefit. Taking antibiotics unnecessarily can spur germs to mutate so that people’s future infections may be untreatable. Worse, people with actual anthrax symptoms need immediate medical care, not self-treatment, anthrax experts stress.

Yet panicked Americans who haven’t come close to anthrax-tainted letters circulating the East Coast are buying up Cipro. Internet sites sell Cipro packages that let people buy without seeing a doctor—at more than $7 a pill, and some don’t even contain the proper dose.

“One pediatrician called me and said, ‘Look, I’m going to do this; just tell me what the dose is,’” said Dr. Bernhard Wiedermann, an infectious disease specialist at Children’s National Medical Center in Washington who urges doctors not to do that.

For children, the warning is especially important: animal studies suggest Cipro might damage child joints, he said, so other drugs are preferred.

Some doctors say they’ve agonized over those concerns yet decided to give in to patients’ demands.

“We could help create strains of common drug-resistant bugs that could plague us all for years,” acknowledge Drs. Beth Horowitz and Matthew Parker, internists practicing in downtown Washington. Yet they wrote The Washington Post this week that they’re not sure the government has the situation under control and thus will continue to dispense just-in-case antibiotics.

Cipro gained fame when the FDA approved it last year as a first-line treatment against anthrax, and the government has stockpiled enough doses for 2 million people for 60 days.

Yet the generic drugs doxycycline and penicillin have long been FDA-approved anthrax treatments, and several manufacturers churn out millions of pills. What’s been missing are exact dosage instructions for preventing anthrax infection in people exposed to the bacteria. Within a week, the FDA will publish those instructions, Woodcock said.

That’s important in helping doctors choose antibiotics that will pose the lowest side-effect risk to each patient.

All antibiotics can cause allergic reactions. Cipro can cause central nervous system side effects such as dizziness, confusion and depression, as well as ruptures of tendons. Doxycycline’s main warnings mention permanently staining children’s teeth and making the skin sensitive to sunburn.

“Doxycycline is better tolerated,” said Dr. Jeffrey Koplan, the CDC’s director.

Indeed, people exposed to anthrax who show no symptoms after a few days should expect doctors to switch them from Cipro to doxycycline, Koplan said.

The CDC has mailed state health departments anthrax-preventing dosage instructions for Cipro, doxycycline and a penicillin relative called amoxicillin. The recommendations:

—For adults, 500 milligrams of Cipro twice a day for 60 days; or 100 mg of doxycycline twice a day for 60 days; or 500 mg of amoxicillin three times a day for 60 days.

—Doxycycline is the first choice for the elderly.

—Children need special doses based on weight.

The FDA didn't object to the CDC's recommendations but also will publish a penicillin dose.

[JR: My first preference would be penicillin which is a very powerful antibiotic. I always ask my doctor for penicillin anytime I get an infection and need an antibiotic. The Federal Government owns the patent so the price is a fraction of all other antibiotics. Penicillin was developed during WWII when the government paid for the research and development and they owned the patent. They then leased it to many companies for manufacturing. Today, the government still pays for much of the research and development of certain drugs but now the drug companies not only own the patent but also any byproducts developed during the process. This gives them the right to jack up the price in relation to total development cost even though the government may have paid most of it. The drug companies do not push penicillin because there is no big profit. Penicillin is developed from natural "green bread mold" not chemicals, however there are certain people that are allergic to penicillin so check with your doctor. The side effects from other drugs may be even worse.]

ID CARD IDEA ATTRACTS HIGH-LEVEL SUPPORT

By Elise Ackerman and Paul Rogers,
San Jose Mercury News, 10/18/01

Silicon Valley software mogul Larry Ellison's proposal to create a national ID card has gained substantial ground—and the interest of top Bush administration officials—in a signal that the controversial idea may be closer to reality than ever.

In an interview with the Mercury News on Tuesday night, Ellison, the chairman and CEO of Oracle, said he met with U.S. Attorney General John Ashcroft and officials at the CIA and FBI in Washington, D.C., over the past week to discuss the idea. U.S. Sen. Dianne Feinstein, D-Calif., has endorsed it, other tech executives have jumped on board and even some prominent civil libertarians have said the idea is worth pursuing.

"We are in the process of putting a proposal together and analyzing what it would take to get something running in a matter of a small number of months, like three months, 90 days," Ellison said. "We think we could put up this technology very, very quickly."

The idea of a national ID card has been debated since the 1930s. But Ellison's proposal in the wake of the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks has reignited the dispute over privacy and security.

Under Ellison's plan, the government would create a national identification card. The card would contain basic information about the holder, including Social Security number, and would be linked to a federal database containing detailed personal data, including digital records of the person's thumbprint, palm print, face or eyes.

Passengers would show the card at airports, Ellison said, and would have their thumbs scanned by a digital reader to verify identity before boarding a plane.

The cards also would be instantly checked against a new national database. That database would link existing criminal and immigration data to screen out potential terrorists.

Ellison unveiled the idea three weeks ago in an interview with a Bay Area TV station. In it, he offered to donate the software. His company, Oracle, based in Redwood City, is the world's leading maker of database software. He is among the world's richest men, with a fortune estimated at $15 billion.

Since then, Ellison has offered more details.

The cards would be voluntary for all U.S. citizens, he said Tuesday. Any American without a card still could board a plane, but only after undergoing a more rigorous search.

"I think 99.99 percent of Americans will want these ID cards," Ellison said. "Wouldn't you feel better if everyone who walked into an airport showed their ID card and put their thumb in the scanner and you knew they were who they said they were?"

The cards would be mandatory, however, for foreign visitors, including students on visas and non-citizens living and working in the United States who now carry "green cards", he said. Ellison has not offered specifics on how the estimated 8 million illegal immigrants in the United States might be affected.

The national ID card idea has won the approval of retired Gen. Norman Schwarzkopf, Harvard law professor and civil rights expert Alan Dershowitz and Sun Microsystems CEO Scott McNealy in the past week.

More important, it is now supported by Feinstein, the chairwoman of the Senate subcommittee on terrorism, who met with Ellison on Thursday. Feinstein said she will write a letter this week to Ashcroft asking the Bush administration to move forward.

"There has to be some ID," Feinstein said. "We have had a major catastrophe. This is a very serious time. The country is at war. The purpose here is to protect ourselves."

Mindi Tucker, a spokeswoman for Ashcroft, said the attorney general would have no comment Tuesday night.

Critics say such a card would give government too much power to track citizens.

"ID cards were used by the South African government to keep apartheid in place and by Malaysia to separate religious people by group," said Marc Rotenberg, executive director of the Electronic Privacy Information Center, a non-profit group in Washington, D.C.

Rotenberg and other opponents, including the American Civil Liberties Union, worry it could be required to board buses, apply for jobs, or even enter cities facing terrorist threats.

But supporters say those concerns are overblown.

At a speech in Salt Lake City last week, former Desert Storm commander Schwarzkopf said he saw nothing wrong with ID cards. "I've had a military ID card since I was a cadet at West Point and I haven't lost any freedom," he told a cheering crowd.

Taking another approach, Harvard lawyer Dershowitz said he believes having an ID card would reduce racial profiling at airports.

"Four Arab-looking guys reading the Koran are much less suspicious if they have the cards and can just slash them through card readers," he said.

Dershowitz said the database would have to be carefully guarded and that police should not be able to ask for a card at will, a view Ellison and Feinstein share.

"You don't give up much," Dershowitz said. "Civil libertarians will come around."

Any move by the federal government to institute a national ID card system could mean millions for Silicon Valley companies.

Shalini Chowdhary, an analyst at Frost & Sullivan, said the U.S. government could end up spending more than $3 billion on computer chips, hardware, software and services that go into creating so-called "smart" ID cards.

Ellison said that if he does donate the software, maintenance and upgrades won't be free.

"I don't think the government has any trouble paying for the labor associated with the software," he said. "I made this offer not because the government can't afford to pay for the software, but because I shut up the critics who were saying, 'Gee, Larry Ellison wants to build a national database because he wants to sell more databases,'" which is pretty cynical and bizarre. What's in it for me is the same thing that's in it for you: a safer America."

[JR: Note the motivators who enthusiastically promote and heartily endorse the long debated National ID card: Oracle (I'm keeping America safe) CEO Ellison, the CIA, FBI, Attorney General Ashcroft, Sen. (ultra liberal) Feinstein, General (Gulf War) Schwarzkopf, and Alan (Harvard law professor) Dershowitz. This card replicates the identification papers that all European citizens had to have in order to travel and to work. It's voluntary now but not for long.]

AL JAZEERA DEFENDS RICE BROADCAST

FOX NEWS, 10/18/01

WASHINGTON—The Washington bureau chief of an Arabic-language satellite television channel is denying reports that the channel withheld portions of an interview with a top U.S. official and instead chose to run only "inflammatory" excerpts.

Hafez Al Mirazi Osman, Washington bureau chief for Al Jazeera television, said Thursday his network aired the entire interview with National Security Adviser Condoleezza Rice three times and ran snippets from it several times in the days following the interview.

"We broadcast it three times in its entirety to make sure it would reach the peak of prime time for three different time zones and three different audiences," Osman said.

Reports from Cairo earlier this week by the Associated Press said the clips Al Jazeera used to promote the interview were inflammatory because they dealt primarily with Iraq and the Palestinians.

The report said the excerpts—part of a 16-minute interview recorded Monday—put the United States in a bad light and would only increase Arab hostilities toward the United States.

The AP also said the snippets ran more than a dozen times before the entire interview with Rice had even been scheduled to air.

Osman disputed the assertion that the clips Al Jazeera broadcast were inflammatory. He said the AP report was wrong about the network delaying its broadcast in order to cut the interview to fit regular news segments.

A three-minute uncut slice of the Rice interview aired on the evening news Tuesday, Osman said, and the entire interview ran three times between

Tuesday and Wednesday.

“By the time the [reporter] in Cairo finished the report, we had sent it [to air],” he said.

Osman said Al Jazeera, like other news organizations, does not always air interviews in their entirety, “but this is sensitive here. We can’t be the judge here in the middle.”

He added that the news channel had debated when to air the Rice interview, but decided to do it sooner rather than later to keep the news current.

Al Jazeera is also running an interview Thursday with Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld, and has already aired interviews with Secretary of State Colin Powell and British Prime Minister Tony Blair.

“It’s not every day we get such a high-level interview,” he said.

Known for its independent streak, Al Jazeera has aired entire speeches by Usama bin Laden and his deputies in the terrorist al-Qaida organization. It has also interviewed top Israeli officials, one of the few Arabic-language news outlets to do so.

The Qatar-based channel, started in 1996 by veterans of the BBC’s Arabic service, reaches 22 nations and 300 million viewers.

In her interview, Rice spoke about the United States mission to weed out global terrorism, U.S. policy on Iraq, the state of peace in the Middle East, and Rice’s request to American networks not to rebroadcast speeches by al-Qaida members that originally appeared on Al Jazeera.

The three-minute segment from the interview—which was also distributed to ABC and CNN, but not Fox—included three complete answers to questions about Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat’s call for final status negotiations and the continuing U.S. effort to isolate Iraq, Osman said.

U.S. officials have agreed to do interviews with Al Jazeera, in an effort to tell Arab populations that airstrikes on Afghanistan are not an attack on Muslims, but on terrorists and their protectors.

“They did deliver the message, whether [Arabs] like the message or not,” Osman said.

Osman said the Rumsfeld interview was promoted using three questions and answers. They focused on the U.S. explanation for why civilians were killed in strikes, how the United States differentiates military targets from civilian compounds, and the continuing presence of U.S. forces in the Gulf.

The three questions and answers used by Al Jazeera television to promote its interview with National Security Adviser Condoleezza Rice:

Q: Dr. Rice, we would like to thank you very much for this opportunity that you give to Al Jazeera and to our audience in the Arab and Muslim world. And since we have a limited time, let me start first with the latest developments.

British Prime Minister Blair met with Chairman Arafat. They both emphasized the importance of reviving the peace process. Chairman Arafat called on the Israeli government to start immediately the permanent-status negotiations. Would you second him in that appeal?

RICE: Thank you very much for the opportunity to be with you. Indeed, we took note of the very fruitful discussions between Prime Minister Blair and Chairman Arafat. The United States fully agrees that as soon as possible we should get into the Mitchell Process, which lays out a road map toward meaningful political negotiations toward a final status.

The President has been very active in asking both sides to do what they can to make certain that we get into the Mitchell Process. He has asked Chairman Arafat to make 100 percent effort to arrest and deal with terrorism and violence toward Israel. He has asked Prime Minister Sharon to do nothing to make the situation worse and, indeed, to—the Israelis pulled out of Hebron. We take note of that.

There have been security talks between the two sides that are sponsored by the United States. And so we are hopeful that the two sides will be able to get into the Mitchell Process. We think that that’s the way to get back to discussions of a final status.

Q: But you know that Prime Minister Sharon imposed a seven-day truce that he wanted to be done before we get into the Mitchell plan. And if the Mitchell plan—or the main goal of the Mitchell plan is for the cease-fire and the stopping of violence, how come, if we have the stopping of violence before we started, why do we wait for it? Why don’t we implement the Mitchell plan now, instead of waiting seven days that is not going to come?

RICE: Well, we would like to implement the Mitchell plan as soon as possible. And we work every day with both parties to get to conditions under which we can implement the Mitchell plan.

It is very important that the level of violence be brought down. And again, Chairman Arafat, in recent days, has made some important steps in that direction. It is very important that the Israelis work to open closures, to relieve the financial and economic pressures on the Palestinian people. We think there are some hopeful signs, and we’re going to try to nourish those hopeful signs along so that we can begin the Mitchell Process.

Q: Aside from the Arab-Israeli conflict that you talked about—and that seems that the U.S. policy is not going to change in that regard—Iraq, as you might have heard in many of the tapes of bin Laden or others, or even other people aren’t friends of the U.S., is one of the sources of friction or problems for people in the Middle East toward U.S. policy. However, you are personally perceived as one of the few people in the administration who would like to enlarge the war in terrorism to include Iraq. Correct me, please.

RICE: Iraq has been a problem not just for U.S. policy, but for policy in the region, as well. This is a country that could not even acknowledge the right to exist of Kuwait. This is a country that has threatened its neighbors, that has been harmful to its own people.

And we believe that our policies toward Iraq simply are to protect the region and to protect Iraq’s people and neighbors.

Now, we understood when we came to power here in Washington several months ago that we had a problem, for instance, on Iraqi sanctions; that people believed, or that Saddam Hussein was claiming that the sanctions that were in place were somehow harming the Iraqi people. We do not believe that they were harming the Iraqi people because in the north, where the UN administers the oil-for-food program, Iraqi people are doing well. It’s only where Saddam Hussein administers oil-for-food that there is a problem with the Iraqi people.

But that said, we want to change the sanctions. We want to change the sanctions so that they are aimed at the regime, which is a danger to its neighbors, not at the people.

[JR: Have any issues regarding Arab/Muslim or Palestinian concerns been given fair coverage in our controlled media and press? Arafat has not met with President Bush or had substantive talks with Sir Powell. Most of the Western movers and shakers have been given air time on Al-Jazeera TV to present their spin on Middle East issues. Condoleezza Rice’s presentation of the U.S. position against Iraq hasn’t changed since the Gulf War down through Madeleine Albright’s war against the Iraqi people. In ten years, what has changed—nothing—and the Muslim people know it.]

EGYPT, SAUDI AIRLINES WON’T SHARE PASSENGER LIST DATA

By Robert Pear, New York Times, 10/18/01

WASHINGTON—Federal officials said Wednesday that Saudi Arabia and Egypt have refused to cooperate with American efforts to identify terrorists and other criminals on aircraft flying to the United States.

Ninety-four airlines cooperate, but Saudi Arabian Airlines and Egypt Air are among a handful that do not electronically provide passenger lists when planes begin their flights to the U.S., the officials said.

The new customs commissioner, Robert Bonner, said airlines should be required to collect and provide names and other basic information about passengers traveling to America.

“It should be mandatory,” Bonner said. “It should be a condition for getting landing rights in the United States.”

Bush administration officials said they soon will propose a requirement that such passenger information be provided.

Airlines cooperating with federal law-enforcement authorities in the Advance Passenger Information System send data electronically to the United States when international flights take off for this country.

The Customs Service and the Immigration and Naturalization Service check the names against “watch lists”.

A spokesman for the Saudi Embassy here said his country is not in any hurry to sign up for the system.

“At this time,” the spokesman said, “hundreds of Saudi citizens are being detained and questioned with regard to the hijackings. A lot of them are innocent people. That number would probably quadruple if we shared advance information on air passengers with the United States.”

Egyptian Ambassador M. Nabil Fahmy said he does not know why Egypt Air refuses to cooperate. “The Egyptian government is the ultimate owner of the airline but does not manage it,” Fahmy said. “The airline makes its own decisions.”

VACCINE PLANT BESET BY WOES

By Stephen Kinzer, New York Times, 10/7/01

LANSING, MICHIGAN—With concern growing over the possibility of biological weapons being used against Americans, things should be busier here at the only American laboratory licensed to produce anthrax vaccine.

But, aside from the National Guard sentries posted outside the doors and around the low-slung buildings, there are no signs of urgency.

Although it is the sole supplier of anthrax vaccine to the military, BioPort Corp. has not produced a single dose since 1998. As a result, millions of service members have not been inoculated against the disease.

Problems have plagued BioPort since it bought the plant from the state in 1998. It has been barred from producing the vaccine because it failed Food and Drug Administration inspections in 1999 and 2000. Inspectors cited such problems as poor documentation and improper procedures in the room where the vaccine was packaged.

Corporate managers hope to begin producing the vaccine this year, but that depends on the outcome of a third FDA inspection, not yet scheduled.

At a hearing of the Senate Armed Services Committee last year, Sen. Tim Hutchinson (R-Ark.) called BioPort's record "an unmitigated disaster". He said its failures were "costing the American taxpayer millions and millions of dollars and jeopardizing the safety of our troops who we're not able to provide that anthrax vaccination".

Others say the problems are not all the fault of the lab, which started life as the Michigan Biologic Products Institute before it was acquired by BioPort.

"There's a lot of criticism of BioPort," said Tara O'Toole, deputy director of the Center for Civilian Biodefense Studies at Johns Hopkins University, "but, to be fair, there's also a lot of talk that the Defense Department significantly underfunded the whole effort and didn't give it the priority it deserved."

"In retrospect," O'Toole said, "the notion of turning this over to a new contractor instead of an established pharmaceutical company looks questionable."

Plant officials say that since the Sept. 11 terrorist assault, their 220 employees have been working with new fervor.

"Our commitment has deepened measurably," said Kim Brennen Root, a BioPort spokeswoman. "People are getting up every morning thinking: 'I know what my job is. I know what I have to do, and I have a very clear purpose.'"

Root said the only other plant in the world that produces anthrax vaccine is in Britain.

Many experts believe that, if terrorists were to launch an attack using biological agents, anthrax would be among their most likely choices. Although anthrax is reported to be difficult to produce and spread in large doses, an enemy that managed to do so could inflict considerable damage.

A 1993 government study found that spraying just 220 pounds of aerosol anthrax over Washington could kill up to 3 million people.

LIBRARY: WE DON'T WANT NO FILTERS

By Julia Scheeres, Wired News, 10/4/01

The issue of filtering Internet access in public libraries is a delicate one, pitting the lofty notion of protecting children against First Amendment guarantees.

But legislation attempting to shield children from online pornography and predators, including the Communications Decency Act and the Child Online Protection Act, has repeatedly been ruled unconstitutional in federal courts.

The latest reincarnation, the Children's Internet Protection Act (CIPA)—which requires schools and libraries to screen out smut by 2003 or forfeit federal funding—has run into a quagmire as well.

This week the San Francisco Board of Supervisors voted unanimously to ban filters at city libraries, becoming the first municipality to openly defy the federal mandate.

The San Francisco decision isn't the only challenge to the law. Both the American Civil Liberties Union and the American Library Association have filed lawsuits challenging the legality of CIPA. Both cases are slated for trial next February at a federal court in Pennsylvania.

"The (San Francisco decision) demonstrates what we've been saying all along, that these decisions should be made locally," said Emily Sheketoff of the American Library Association.

There are over 160,000 school and public libraries in the United States; Many stand to lose much-needed federal funding if they don't follow CIPA requirements.

Conservative groups, such as the Family Research Council, argue filters are the best way to keep children from being soiled by the Net's shadier realms.

"Children's concerns trump those of people who want to look at pornography," said council spokeswoman Heather Cirimo.

Critics of that point of view argue that software that filters Internet content is simplistic and arbitrary—blocking out sites that contain specific words, such as sex, breast or even the numeral "X" (to weed out X-rated). In addition to impeding hardcore smut, the software also prohibits access to sites that feature health information and even Super Bowl XXX.

Planned Parenthood and Afraidtoask.com—two sites that actively promote safe sex—are examples of the plaintiffs being represented by the ACLU.

Opponents also argue that the legislation discriminates against the poor.

"Information needs to be available on an equal basis to everyone. If you depend on the public library for Internet access, you should be able to get the same access as someone rich enough to afford access at home," Sheketoff argued.

San Francisco doesn't stand to lose much federal money—about $20,000 toward its $50 million library budget, said San Francisco Library spokeswoman Marcia Schneider.

Schneider said the city's library system hasn't been plagued by people ogling dirty pictures. And if someone's Internet viewing does offend other patrons, the person is asked by the staff to move to another terminal, she said.

"We're not going around peeking over the back of people's heads to see what they're looking at on their computers," said Schneider. "We do respect the individual's right to privacy."

However, the San Francisco Public Library is considering filtering content on computers located in children's areas.

Many libraries already have guidelines for dealing with pornography.

At the Loudoun County Library in Virginia, for example, patrons under 18 must surf filtered content, said assistant director Linda Holtslander.

The library became famous in 1998 when a group of patrons challenged the constitutionality of permanent filters at the library's computers in a federal court and won. The library won't be affected by CIPA because it doesn't receive federal funding, said Holtslander.

She said that pornophiles have never been a problem. "When people come here they're usually in a hurry. They don't have time to mess around," said Holtslander.

But staffers at the Minneapolis Public Library said that smut-seekers created a hostile environment for the mostly female workers. Men regularly monopolized the terminals to browse porn and even masturbate, they complained.

In May, the local Equal Employment Opportunity Commission sided with them.

In an attempt to solve the problem, the library installed software that limits public use of computers to 60 minutes and requires patrons to use their library card or driver's license to access terminals, said spokeswoman Kristi Gibson.

She said that the employees use "common sense" to keep children away from adults surfing smut and that they were instructed to call 911 if a patron is observed perusing child pornography.

GULF VETS REPORT MORE CASES OF BIRTH DEFECTS

By Suzanne Gamboa, Daily News, 10/7/01

WASHINGTON (AP)—The children of Persian Gulf War veterans are two to three times as likely as those of other vets to have birth defects, according to a government study based on interviews with the veterans.

Gulf vets also reported more miscarriages.

The research, published in this month's Annals of Epidemiology, follows other studies that did not find evidence of greater risk of birth defects.

The latest study, conducted by the Department of Veterans Affairs and Johns Hopkins University scientists, surveyed gulf and non-gulf veterans from all four service branches. Just under 21,000 active and retired military, reserve and National Guard members answered questionnaires about health, reproductive outcomes, exposure to risk factors and other issues.

About 70 percent of those who were sent surveys responded.

"Veterans are very concerned that they have a higher risk of bearing children with birth defects," said Dr. Han Kang, a Veterans Affairs epidemiologist and the lead researcher.

The Pentagon says an estimated 90,000 troops who served in the Gulf War complain of maladies including memory loss, anxiety, fatigue, nausea, balance problems, and chronic muscle and joint pain. The ailments are known collectively as gulf war syndrome.

A presidential panel in December concluded no research validated a specific cause and that more study is needed.

The earlier studies that found no unusual risk of birth problems among gulf vets were based on reviews of hospital records. Critics say a weakness of the latest study is its use of veterans' opinions rather than hospital data.

Researchers said they don't believe the results were skewed but are checking veterans' reports against hospital records.

"If the risk of having a child with a birth defect was that much increased simply by having served in the Gulf War, I find it hard to believe that previous studies would have missed that," said Dr. Francis O'Donnell, a Pentagon epidemiologist.

The study focused on first pregnancies that ended after June 30, 1991. Researchers analyzed information on miscarriages, stillbirths, premature delivery, birth defects and infant mortality. Male Gulf War veterans reported having infants with likely birth defects at twice the rate of non-veterans. Female veterans were almost three times more likely to report children with birth defects than non-gulf counterparts.

‘JIHAD’ DOES NOT MEAN HOLY WAR*The STAR*—Malaysia, 10/12/01

Perhaps there is no term or word most misunderstood and misused at this point in time than the term jihad.

After the tragedy in the United States on Sept 11, jihad has cropped up more often than before.

Unfortunately, the term has been overused by various quarters, both Muslim and non-Muslim, so much so that jihad has been misinterpreted and misunderstood, again by both Muslims and non-Muslims.

If we follow reports in the print and electronic media, be they local or foreign, it is most unfortunate that jihad is directly translated into “holy war”.

This is, perhaps, the best example of misunderstanding with regards to Islamic concepts.

Over the years, and throughout history, especially in the past few centuries since the decline of Islamic civilisation, we find that Islam has been the most misunderstood religion.

Jihad is an Islamic concept that is, more often than not, used to paint Islam as having a “dark and evil” side.

The term has been used, time and time again, to scare people and portray Islam in a very negative manner.

This is very unfortunate, because the word “Islam” itself comes from the root word salam which literally means “safe” or “peaceful”.

How then can a religion that declares itself to be peaceful be so violent and bloodthirsty?

It is apparent that these past couple of weeks the term jihad has been used wantonly to imply that Islam is violent and bloodthirsty.

The biggest misconception about jihad is to translate this term to mean “holy war” when, in truth, “holy war” is not a translation of the term jihad, either directly or subtly.

This mistranslation started during the Crusades when “holy war” was used to describe the war against the Muslims.

There is, in fact, no equivalent in the Muslim vocabulary that describes “holy war”.

Centuries have gone by since the Crusades ended, yet sadly many people still translate jihad into “holy war”.

Even today’s Muslims got so used to, or rather confuse with, this translation that they themselves begin to describe jihad, in particular jihad fi sabilillah as “holy war”.

Jihad fi sabilillah actually means “to strive on the path of God”.

However, if one were to actually translate “holy war” into Arabic, the term would be al-harbu al-muqaddasah.

Neither the Quran nor the Hadiths equates jihad as “holy war”.

As a matter of fact, there is no mention of “holy war” in either of the primary sources of Islamic teaching, namely the Quran and the Hadiths.

There are, however, references to war in both these sources, and the terms used to describe war or fighting are either qital or harb.

To understand jihad, we must first take a look at its literal translation. The word jihad comes from the Arabic word al-jahd, which means “tireless” or al-juhd which means “energy” or “energetic”.

The word jihad is thus translated into “to strive tirelessly” or “to channel all energies into an endeavour”.

There are many forms and levels of jihad. Many Islamic scholars stated that the highest form of jihad or jihad al-akbar is the struggle within one’s self to become a better Muslim by resisting the temptations and lures of lust and sin.

This is highlighted in one Hadith of the Prophet who explained: “The mujahid (one who carries out jihad) is he who strives against himself for the sake of God, and the muhajir (one who migrates) is he who abandons evil deeds and sin.”

In other words, the highest form of jihad for a Muslim is to observe the akhlaq (virtues) of Islam in one’s daily life.

On this matter, the Prophet was once asked by a man: “Should I join jihad?” The Prophet then asked: “Do you have parents?” The man said: “Yes.” The Prophet replied: “Then strive by serving them.”

Indeed, Islam regards serving one’s parents as a virtuous character. This form of jihad, therefore, is considered to be the most noble and admirable.

The question that arises now is why is it that many people equate the term jihad with war or harb?

Usually we see the phrase jihad fi sabilillah being equated with war and fighting or, as evident today, this sacred phrase is even used to insinuate acts of terror.

This may be a result of the history of Islam that saw this phrase being used during wartime.

If we look back at history, Islam had to strive against attacks from the Musyrikin of Mecca.

Wars like the Battle of Badr and Battle of Uhud were results of acts of transgression against the Muslims.

The Muslims, having only established the city of Madinah, had to defend themselves, and thus a call for jihad as an act of self-defence was made.

This was stated in the Quran (verse 39 of Surah al-Taubah), translated thus: “To those against whom war is made, permission is given (to fight), because they are wronged, and verily God is Most Powerful in their aid”.

The word used to describe “to fight” is yuqataluna which originates from the Arabic word qital. Even here, the word jihad is not used.

The Quran thus allows fighting to defend the religion of Islam and the Muslims.

This permission is given under several conditions, one of which is self-defence and the protection of family and property.

In the early days of Islam, as stated earlier, the Muslims had to defend themselves and their faith from the attacks of the pagans of Quraisy in Mecca.

On this matter, the Quran outlined clearly the dos and don’ts of war: “Fight in the cause of God those who fight you, but do not transgress limits, for God loves not transgressors” (Verse 190, Surah al-Baqarah).

Further in the same chapter of the Quran in verse 193, it is stated to the effect that: “And fight them on until there is no more tumult or oppression, and there prevails justice and faith in God, but if they cease, let there be no hostility except to those who practised oppression.”

Again, in these verses the word used to describe fighting is qatala which originates from qital and not jihad.

Thus, it is imperative that this misconception and misunderstanding of jihad be corrected. In this regards, the media should play an important role.

When translating the word jihad, the media should not use “holy war” as its equivalent. The truth to the matter is that there is nothing holy about wars.

War should only be regarded as a last resort after all attempts have been exhausted to solve whatever problems that one faces.

While there are still other means to solve disputes, quarrels or squabbles, then they should be used before war is even considered.

Diplomatic negotiations, mediations and dialogues could perhaps be the best means to overcome problems.

These efforts may look to be slow and tedious, but they can definitely save many innocent lives.

We have seen too many wars in our history. We have seen too many people die as a result of wars.

We should ask ourselves whether we would like to go through another war.

What happened in the United States on Sept 11 was an act of sheer terror that is not accepted by any faith in the world.

Islam does not condone violence and acts of terror. The killing of innocent lives is not part of the teaching of Islam.

Such acts are, therefore, not jihad.

NEW OFFER ON BIN LADEN

By Rory McCarthy in Islamabad, The Guardian, 10/17/01

Minister makes secret trip to offer trial in third country

A senior Taliban minister has offered a last-minute deal to hand over Osama bin Laden during a secret visit to Islamabad, senior sources in Pakistan told the Guardian last night.

For the first time, the Taliban offered to hand over Bin Laden for trial in a country other than the U.S. without asking to see evidence first in return for a halt to the bombing, a source close to Pakistan’s military leadership said.

But U.S. officials appear to have dismissed the proposal and are instead hoping to engineer a split within the Taliban leadership.

The offer was brought by Mullah Wakil Ahmed Muttawakil, the Taliban foreign minister and a man who is often regarded as a more moderate figure in the regime.

He met officials from the CIA and Pakistan’s ISI intelligence directorate in Islamabad on Monday. U.S. officials pressed the minister for a sweeping change in the regime. “They are trying to persuade him to get the moderate elements together,” another source said.

Mr. Muttawakil’s visit coincided with the arrival in Islamabad of Colin Powell, the U.S. secretary of state. After several hours of talks with Pakistan’s military ruler General Pervez Musharraf yesterday, Mr. Powell admitted that moderate Taliban would play a role in talks on a future Afghan government. “We would have to listen to them or at least take them into account,” he said.

Mr. Powell also met envoys sent by Zahir Shah, the former Afghan king who lives in exile in Rome, and a representative of the opposition Northern Alliance, sources said.

The Taliban foreign minister had asked for face-to-face talks with the U.S. secretary of state but no direct meeting was held. Mr. Muttawakil returned to Kabul last night and the Taliban have publicly denied he was ever in Islamabad.

His visit came as Taliban forces in Afghanistan came under renewed pressure from the bombing campaign and opposition advances.

Troops from the Northern Alliance were yesterday closing in on the key northern town of Mazar-i-Sharif. More alliance soldiers were locked in heavy fighting with the Taliban in the west hoping to cut a key supply line to the town.

Some reports suggested the Taliban foreign minister had in fact defected in the face of mounting pressure and was now in the Gulf. But sources in Pakistan confirmed he had returned to Kabul and said there was still no clear rift in the ultra-Islamic regime.

Instead, the offer appears to indicate that Pakistan is applying pressure on moderate Taliban elements to negotiate their way out of the crisis.

Pakistan has made clear that it wants the bombing campaign to be brief and that it does not want the Northern Alliance, backed by its archenemy India, to sweep to power in Kabul. Gen Musharraf said publicly yesterday that he wanted to see “moderate Taliban” in the next Afghan government.

Pakistan was intricately linked to the emergence of the Taliban as a military force and has closely backed the movement financially and diplomatically. Pakistan is now the only country to maintain diplomatic links with the ostracised regime.

The Taliban have offered to hand over bin Laden before but only if sufficient evidence was presented. Bin Laden is wanted both for the September 11 attacks and for masterminding the bombings of two U.S. embassies in East Africa in 1998 in which 224 people were killed. He is also suspected of involvement in other terrorist attacks, including the suicide bombing of the USS Cole in Yemen last year.

But until now the Taliban regime has consistently said it has not seen any convincing evidence to implicate the Saudi dissident in any crime.

“Now they have agreed to hand him over to a third country without the evidence being presented in advance,” the source close to the military said.

However, it is unclear whether the Taliban would have the ability to seize bin Laden and hand him over.

The U.S. administration has not publicly supported the idea of a trial for bin Laden outside America and appears intent on removing from power the Taliban leader Mullah Mohammed Omar and the hardliners in the regime.

Some in Pakistan have suggested Saudi Arabia as a location for any trial for bin Laden. “The Pakistan army would be supportive of anything with a Saudi link,” said the source.

The Saudi royal family has long seen bin Laden as a threat because he has accused the government of corruption and mismanagement and continually demanded the withdrawal of U.S. troops from Saudi soil.

Mr. Muttawakil’s clandestine visit to Pakistan was planned several days in advance. The Taliban ambassador in Islamabad, Mullah Abdul Salam Zaeef, left the embassy on Friday and travelled to Kandahar, home of the Taliban headquarters in southern Afghanistan, for talks with Mullah Omar to prepare for the visit.

It is not clear how the Taliban foreign minister travelled from Kabul to Pakistan without approval from the U.S. One report in the U.S. yesterday suggested that Pakistani intelligence flew him out of the country in a small aircraft.

OF MICROBES AND MOCK ATTACKS— 51 YEARS AGO, THE MILITARY SPRAYED GERMS ON U.S. CITIES

By Jim Carlton, Wall Street Journal, 10/26/01

SAN FRANCISCO—Fifty-one years ago, Edward J. Nevin checked into a San Francisco hospital, complaining of chills, fever and general malaise. Three weeks later, the 75-year-old retired pipe fitter was dead, the victim of what doctors said was an infection of the bacterium Serratia marcescens.

Decades later, Mr. Nevin’s family learned what they believe was the cause of the infection, linked at the time to the hospitalizations of 10 other patients. In Senate subcommittee hearings in 1977, the U.S. Army revealed that weeks before Mr. Nevin sickened and died, the Army had staged a mock biological attack on San Francisco, secretly spraying the city with Serratia and other agents thought to be harmless.

The goal: to see what might happen in a real germ-warfare attack. The experiment, which involved blasting a bacterial fog over the entire 49-square-mile city from a Navy vessel offshore, was recorded with clinical nonchalance: “It was noted that a successful BW [biological warfare] attack on this area can be launched from the sea, and that effective dosages can be produced over relatively large areas,” the Army wrote in its 1951 classified report on the experiment.

Now, with anthrax in the mail and fear mounting of further biological attacks, researchers are again looking back at the only other time this country faced the perils of germ warfare—albeit self-inflicted. In fact, much of what the Pentagon knows about the effects of bacterial attacks on cities came from those secret tests conducted on San Francisco and other American cities from the 1940s through the 1960s, experts say.

“We learned a lot about how vulnerable we are to biological attack from those tests,” says Leonard Cole, adjunct professor of political science at Rutgers University in New Jersey and author of several books on bioterrorism. “I’m sure that’s one reason crop dusters were grounded after Sept. 11: The military knows how easy it is to disperse organisms that can affect people over huge areas.”

In other tests in the 1950s, Army researchers dispersed Serratia on Panama City, Fla., and Key West, Fla., with no known illnesses resulting. They also released fluorescent compounds over Minnesota and other midwestern states to see how far they would spread in the atmosphere. The particles of zinc-cadmium-sulfide—now a known cancer-causing agent—were detected more than 1,000 miles away in New York state, the Army told the Senate hearings, though no illnesses were ever attributed to them as a result.

Another bacterium, Bacillus globigii, never shown to be harmful to people, was released in San Francisco, while still others were tested on unwitting residents in New York, Washington, D.C., and along the Pennsylvania Turnpike, among other places, according to Army reports released during the 1977 hearings.

In New York, military researchers in 1966 spread Bacillus subtilis variant Niger, also believed to be harmless, in the subway system by dropping lightbulbs filled with the bacteria onto tracks in stations in midtown Manhattan. The bacteria were carried for miles throughout the subway system, leading Army officials to conclude in a January 1968 report: “Similar covert attacks with a pathogenic [disease-causing] agent during peak traffic periods could be expected to expose large numbers of people to infection and subsequent illness or death.”

Army officials also found widespread dispersal of bacteria in a May 1965 secret release of Bacillus globigii at Washington’s National Airport and its Greyhound Bus terminal, according to military reports released a few years after the Senate hearings. More than 130 passengers who had been exposed to the bacteria traveling to 39 cities in seven states in the two weeks following the mock attack.

The Army kept the biological-warfare tests secret until word of them was leaked to the press in the 1970s. Between 1949 and 1969, when President Nixon ordered the Pentagon’s biological weapons destroyed, open-air tests of biological agents were conducted 239 times, according to the Army’s testimony in 1977 before the Senate’s subcommittee on health. In 80 of those experiments, the Army said it used live bacteria that its researchers at the time thought were harmless, such as the Serratia that was showered on San Francisco. In the others, it used inert chemicals to simulate bacteria.

Several medical experts have since claimed that an untold number of people may have gotten sick as a result of the germ tests. These researchers say even benign agents can mutate into unpredictable pathogens once exposed to the elements.

“The possibility cannot be ruled out that peculiarities in wind conditions or ventilation systems in buildings might concentrate organisms, exposing people to high doses of bacteria,” testified Stephen Weitzman of the State University of New York, in the 1977 Senate hearings.

For its part, the Army justified its experiments by noting concerns during World War II that U.S. cities might come under biological attack. To prepare a response, the Army said, it had to test microbes on populated areas to learn how bacteria disperse.

“Release in and near cities, in real-world circumstances, were considered essential to the program, because the effect of a built-up area on a biological agent cloud was unknown,” Edward A. Miller, the Army’s secretary for research and development at the time, told the subcommittee.

But in at least one case—the bacterial fogging of San Francisco—the research may have gone awry. Between Sept. 20 and Sept. 27 of 1950, a Navy mine-laying vessel cruised the San Francisco coast, spraying an aerosol cocktail of Serratia and Bacillus microbes—all believed to be safe—over the famously foggy city from giant hoses on deck, according to declassified Army reports. According to lawyers who have reviewed the reports, researchers added fluorescent particles of zinc-cadmium-sulfide to better measure the impact. Based on results from monitoring equipment at 43 locations around the city, the Army determined that San Francisco had received enough of a dose for nearly all of the city’s 800,000 residents to inhale at least 5,000 of the particles.

Two weeks after the spraying, on Oct. 11, 1950, Mr. Nevin checked in to the Stanford Hospital in San Francisco with fever and other symptoms. Ten other men and women checked in to the same hospital—which has since been relocated to Stanford University in Palo Alto, Calif.—with similar complaints. Doctors noticed that all 11 had the same malady: a pneumonia caused by exposure to bacteria believed to be Serratia marcescens. Mr. Nevin died three weeks later. The others recovered. Doctors were so surprised by the outbreak that they reported it in a medical journal, oblivious at the time to the secret germ test.

After the Army disclosed the tests nearly three decades later, Mr. Nevin’s surviving family members filed suit against the federal government, alleging negligence. “My grandfather wouldn’t have died except for that, and it left my grandmother to go broke trying to pay his medical bills,” says Mr. Nevin’s grandson, Edward J. Nevin III, a San Francisco attorney who filed the case in U.S. District Court here.

Army officials noted the pneumonia outbreak in their 1977 Senate testimony but said any link to their experiments was totally coincidental. No other hospitals reported similar outbreaks, the Army pointed out, and all 11 victims had urinary-tract infections following medical procedures, suggesting that the source of their infections lay inside the hospital.

The Nevin family appealed the suit all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court, which declined to overturn lower court judgments upholding the government’s immunity from lawsuits.

Today, the U.S. military is again patrolling San Francisco’s coastline, guarding against someone who might try to copy the Army tests of half a century ago. Local officials say such an attack is unlikely, given the logistical problems of blasting the city without Navy ships.

Partly as a result of Mr. Nevin’s death, says Lucien Canton, director of San Francisco’s emergency services, “one thing we now know is that it takes an awful lot of stuff to produce casualties, especially in a place like San Francisco that always has a stiff breeze.”

WORDS OF WISDOM FROM HATONN

CONTACT OR SPECTRUM?

I want to briefly respond to a most unusual question from a totally "out of the blue" person: "It appears Spectrum will fail, possibly close, so will you go back to writing for CONTACT or what?"

I have never stopped writing for CONTACT—but I have NOT written, nor have my compatriots written for Spectrum. Tails wag a lot of dogs, my friends. Therefore, "or what" has no meaning.
