A Grand Supercycle Crash? Watch Korea For The Moscow-Beijing Decoy Attack

Editor's note: The following is actually a "News Desk Special" report which we moved to the Front Page due to the merits of the information. Besides his usual duties going through piles and piles of news clippings sent in by you wonderful readers, and keeping an eye on the print and broadcast media outlets locally, Dr. Al Overholt has added the domain of the Internet. He scans that regularly, too, for those gems which deserve wider recognition. The following is one such topic we all need to watch closely.

5/10/97 DR. AL OVERHOLT

From the INTERNET, 5/5/97, by J. Adams, [quoting:]
What are the consequences of Western greed? Well, the consequences are probably what Western society least expects at the current time since investors and people in general are almost completely self-deceived. This, after all, is what a Grand Supercycle peak in stock prices represents: completely irrational collective expectations where Western greed is most concentrated, i.e., Wall Street.

Unfortunately, however, a likely consequence of Western greed is that other countries around the world that may be deemed relative have-nots are going to become thoroughly xxxxxx-off over the years and decades and eventually build-

WHAT IS A "BALANCED" DIET?

The "authorities" in nutrition, and the government, say that we should eat a "balanced" diet. By that they mean we should eat a food from each of four food groups, every day. The diet "expert" at Harvard even recommends a fifth food group, "recreational" food, such as pizza, hotdogs, tacos, ice cream, etc.

We have to be careful about relying on "authorities" and "experts". Sometimes we must use our own common sense.

LET TRUTH BE YOUR AUTHORITY, DO NOT LET AUTHORITY BE YOUR TRUTH.

I have questions for the "experts". Why should we eat a food from each of the food groups every day? Should a cow eat a food from each of the food groups every day, or should it eat the food it was biologically adapted to eat? Should a wolf eat a food from each food group every day, or should it eat the food to which it is biologically adapted? Should a bird eat a food from each food group every day, or should it eat the food to which it is biologically adapted? Should a fish eat a food from each food group every day, or should it eat the food to which it is biologically adapted? Are humans' digestive systems different? How are they different? Should we eat a food from each food group every day, or should we instead eat the food to which we are biologically adapted? I think the answer is rather obvious. The real reason the government, the American Dietetic Association, the American Dairy Association, the American Meat Council, etc., recommend eating from each food group is to keep the people selling these "foods" happy—it is an economic reason, not a health reason.

I don't want to go into exactly what you should eat. We are less-than-perfect beings and live in a less-than-perfect world (civilization). It is easy enough to figure out that the best foods for us, the foods to which we are biologically adapted, are fresh, raw fruits and vegetables. However, such foods are simply not available to most of the world most of the time, and when available have been denatured by human greed practices. So we have to make compromises, compromises which compromise our health. Humans were not designed to eat meat (where are the claws, the fangs, the 1,000 times more acidic digestive system, etc.), but we live in a meat-eating culture. It could also be said that humans were not designed to fly (where are our wings), yet we manage pretty well. Life is a struggle between choices, a struggle for balance, a search for what is balance.

If everybody ate natural, raw foods, think of all the food processors, can makers, canneries, advertisers, etc., who would go out of business. And that does not count all the parasites who live off of sick people—hospitals, doctors, nurses, drug companies, etc., all of whom would go out of business.

I would also like to point out that Kraft, General Foods, and several of the other major food companies are owned by R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., the cigarette giant. You can bet the bosses in these companies are not concerned with your health, they are concerned only with profits, so they go to great lengths to create addictions and to finance studies to brainwash people into purchasing their products. Most of their food products are not much better than the poison cigarettes they push.

WHY DOES GOD NOT ALWAYS ANSWER PRAYERS FOR HEALING?

I now think I understand why God does not always heal people who pray for healing. Suppose a man were to beat his head against a wall, and while doing so he would pray to God: "God, I have a terrible headache, please heal me!" Bang, bang, he continues to beat his head against the wall. Do you think God would answer that prayer? What if someone eats garbage and gets sick, then prays for God to heal him, without changing any of his bad health habits and bad diet. Will God heal him? Yes, sometimes, in His mercy, He will. More often though, the plain facts are He will not. What good would it do to heal the person if he continues to bang his head against the wall or otherwise continues in his bad habits? He would just get sick again, and probably accuse God. If God always healed people who prayed for healing, then we would live in an unrealistic chaos in which we would be free to live on pizza and ice cream or eat anything we wanted. God would have to suspend His Own health laws.

WHO ARE THE HEALTH EXPERTS?

Jerome Irving Rodale was the founder of Prevention magazine, and he died of a heart attack at age 72 on a TV talk show. One would think he should have lived longer.

Adelle Davis (Mrs. Frank Sieglinger) died at age 70, I do not know from what cause, but again that is a rather average age for someone who was supposed to be at the forefront of good nutrition and long life.

Nathan Pritikin at one time had one of the most popular diets in this country. His diet was a high-starch diet, allowed no more than 1/4 pound of meat per day, and allowed no avocados or nuts. He developed cancer and became so depressed that he committed suicide at age 72.

On the other hand, the champions of the raw food diet do indeed generally live longer. Norbert Walker, who invented the Norwalk Juicer (which is the best juicer there is, but it usually costs about $1,200) wrote books in the 1930s and 1940s promoting a raw fruit and vegetable diet (with lots of juices, of course). He died at age 109. A few days before he died he was seen out working in his garden.

Paul Bragg called himself a "life extension specialist." He was a strong advocate of fasting and good foods. He was physical fitness advisor to people like Douglas Fairbanks, Tom Mix, Gloria Swanson, Rudolph Valentino, Ethel Barrymore, Lon Chaney and many more famous people. He died in his 90s, I believe in his late 90s, but I don't remember exactly. When he was 85 years old he wrote about hiring 10 college athletes to hike with him from Furnace Creek Ranch to Stovepipe Wells, a distance of 30 miles, in Death Valley, California. They started at 8 in the morning in July when the temperature was 105 degrees. At 12 noon the temperature was 130 degrees. The college boys drank quarts of cool water and took salt tablets. For lunch they ate ham and cheese sandwiches and drank cola drinks. Soon three of them got sick and threw up everything and collapsed and had to be driven back. Later 5 more got sick with cramps and had to be driven back, then at 4 PM the last two collapsed and had to be driven back. Bragg finished the 30 mile hike in 10 1/2 hours, camped out overnight and then walked back the next day. He drank only warm water and fasted the whole time. When he got back the doctors examined him and he was in perfect health. This great-grandfather was in much better shape than the college athletes.

Dr. Herbert Shelton died at age 90, just after he lost a lawsuit that bankrupted him, which may have contributed to his death. He taught all his life that you should never use medicines, yet they accused him of practicing medicine without a license. He was the leading promoter of Natural Hygiene in this country. Can you imagine what would happen if most people followed his teachings and became well? The AVERAGE doctor's income is over $300,000 per year. Almost all doctors would have to get jobs waiting tables and driving taxis. The multi-billion-dollar research industry would go under. The multi-billion dollar drug industry would disappear. Hospitals by the thousands would fold. Most of the millions of nurses and other health leeches would be out of a job (the dictionary says leech is another name for a physician—look it up). Most insurance companies would go under. The whole world economy would collapse. The people would become healthy and vibrant, and would probably not tolerate a lot of things that are presently being forced on them. The powers that be (the "experts" and "authorities") will do anything and say any kind of a lie to prevent that from happening.

Of course, many of the medical doctors, etc., are sincere, they are just deluded and brainwashed. If you can learn the truth, the truth (properly acted upon) can make you free of bad health and their brainwashing.

I enjoyed learning about a doctor in the late 1800s who was curing hundreds of people with a secret pill. Here was a pill that actually worked! Other doctors were very envious of his success, and sick people by the score flocked to him and were cured. People would come to him with all kinds of problems, and he would prescribe these tiny pills, one to be taken with water every 4 hours, and it was very important not to eat anything because food would make the pill stop working. He kept the secret of his miracle-working pill until he retired. What was the secret drug in his miracle pill? Bread. He found that if he tried to tell people to go on a fast, they would not listen to him. So he tricked them into fasting, "miracle" healings occurred, and business boomed.

WHAT IS A VIRUS?

Now let's take a look at one of the main factors of modern health and disease—the virus. What is a virus? "Viruses are complex organic substances that have some living and some nonliving characteristics.... They are made of nucleic acids and proteins. Nucleic acid is the center or core of a virus. A coat of protein surrounds the core. Viruses can grow and reproduce only inside living cells. Yet, crystals of viruses taken from cells can be stored in bottles for many years. These crystals do not grow and produce more viruses until they are inside living cells again. Inside a cell, a virus may take control and change the normal activities of the cell. In effect, the virus becomes the 'master' and the cell becomes a 'slave'" (p. 236, Focus on Life Science, by Charles H. Heimler, Charles E. Merrill Publishing; a standard school textbook).

In plain, simple language, perhaps too simple for the "educated", viruses are crystals of nucleic acid in a protein coat. The definition of virus in the glossary of Essentials of Microbiology, Jaime S. Colomé & Raúl J. Cano, is: "Virus—Protein-covered nucleic acids that infect all types of cells." Wait a minute, I want to know what a virus IS, not what a virus DOES. A virus IS NUCLEIC ACID. Period. Viruses have no reproductive system, yet all they do is reproduce. A virus is a crystalline chemical, as is table salt. Is table salt alive? Are viruses alive? How can that be?

Viruses (Arnold J. Levine, Scientific American Library, p. 2) says that viruses are like pieces of computer tape that contain part of a computer program, and says "...all viruses can duplicate themselves only inside cells, because they require significant contributions from their hosts."

On page 8, it says the first virus discovered was a crystal from tobacco. "In truth, the ability to form a crystal simply reflects the structural uniformity or symmetry of all the viruses in a population...." Then the book continues, "Almost all viruses are composed of two parts: a nucleic-acid core containing the genetic information and, surrounding and protecting this core, a coat built from repeating protein subunits....A virus's genetic information may be encoded in deoxyribonucleic acid (DNA), as it is for all non-viral living organisms, or in some viruses it may be encoded in ribonucleic acid (RNA)....All plant viruses are RNA viruses....In the simplest cases, the DNA or RNA of a virus is surrounded by proteins." It points out that the simplest viruses consist only of genetic codes (DNA or RNA) enclosed in a protein coat.

Viruses are marvelous little beasts. They have no reproductive systems, yet all they do is reproduce. They have no metabolic systems (they don't eat anything). They are not alive at all, yet they are described as "virulent", "infectious", "deadly", they "inject themselves" into cells, doctors talk about "live-virus vaccine" and "killed-virus vaccine", yet, when forced to, they admit that viruses have no life.

Science News, Vol. 140, Dec. 14, 1991, said (under the heading, "Instant virus: Just add RNA"): "Viruses are such primitive things that many scientists don't consider them alive. They cannot reproduce on their own." Funk & Wagnalls' article on virus says "Like living organisms, the virus has the power of self-duplication, but reproduction occurs only within susceptible living cells." Same as saying, "I can do it all by myself as long as you help me." The article also says "As early as 1935 biochemical research established that in the extracellular state the virus is metabolically inert, behaving like a chemical rather than a living organism....it may be preserved outside the cell indefinitely...."

Look up "life" in the dictionary. My dictionary says "the condition that distinguishes animals and plants from inorganic objects and dead organisms, being manifested by growth through metabolism, reproduction, and the power of adaptation to environment through changes originating internally."

According to the normal definitions of life taught in most schools, life is the metabolic processes of a living thing. Viruses are "metabolically inert". VIRUSES ARE NOT ALIVE. Mean little demons, to be so dead, aren't they? What are viruses? They are genetic material, enclosed in a protein coat. Outside the cell, they dry out and become crystals. Encyclopedia Britannica, under "Viruses", says: "Viruses are self-reproducing agents, smaller than the microscopically visible bacteria, that multiply only within living susceptible cells and are responsible for a wide range of infectious diseases." Think about these dead crystals, with no reproductive systems, that are "self-reproducing", yet they reproduce "only within living...cells...."

Later in the article it says, "All the viruses contain their essential genetic material in the form of nucleoprotein, which is a combination of nucleic acid and protein." And it says a curious thing: "The essential features are the disappearance of virus as such as soon as infection is initiated..."

Infection is when this dead crystal organized into a genetic code injects itself into a living cell. And then it disappears! A little study reveals that it disappears because it is exactly like the cells own genetic material and it is impossible to tell the difference.

This same Britannica article also says: "There are now many instances where an apparently normal plant or bacterium can be shown to carry a virus indefinitely. The multiplication of the virus keeps pace with the multiplication of host cells in so precise a fashion that some form of mutual coordination must be postulated [how does a cell 'mutually coordinate' with something dead?]."

"It can be argued that this must mean that a virus is essentially made of host material, though capable of being set free; or alternatively that a free parasitic organism can become so integrated with its host that it becomes incorporated into its structure."

Hmmm, this dead thing is made from its living host cell, and when it magically injects itself into the cell, it disappears by becoming part of the cell? Does something sound fishy to you?

Sure enough, farther down in the article, it says: "Viruses, when they enter a cell, lose all identity except that of the chemical substance, nucleic acid....it has proved possible to infect cells by means of nucleic acid alone.... the natural history of a virus is determined by the fundamental requirement that multiplication can take place only within the living cells of a susceptible host."

The Austin American Statesman, Friday, 13 December 1991: "Polio virus is made in test tube", by Gina Kolata, New York Times Service. NEW YORK—Scientists have synthesized polio virus in the test tube, the first time that an entire virus has been created outside of living cells....The feat, accomplished by biologists at the State University of New York at Stony Brook and published today in Science magazine, also underscores the fuzzy border between living things and chemicals....They gently extracted a soup of the proteins from human cells, then dropped into it strands of the genetic material of the polio virus. After five or more hours, complete, assembled polio viruses appeared in the mixture" (p. A11). The article states the virus was created "outside of living cells" by dropping already created polio virus into a "soup of the proteins from human cells". Hey, this rock is a dollar bill, trust me. It doesn't make sense to me, but then, not much of what they say makes sense to me.

"I think it's fantastically important," said Dr. Donald Summers, a molecular virologist at the University of Utah. "This is an amazing finding. It's a real first for molecular biology." Dr. Vincent Racaniello of Columbia University's College of Physicians and Surgeons said, "It's a seminal discovery, no doubt about it."

"Amazing". "Fantastic". Indeed. A fantasy is right.

Look at that again, this was the first time that viruses were created outside of cells, right? How was this done? It was done by making a "soup...from human cells." How did the viruses get into this cell/no-cell soup? By dropping "into it strands of the genetic material of polio virus". What are viruses? They are genetic material. The article makes it plain: "In the Stony Brook experiment, only human cell components and the virus' genetic material were used." Oh, I see, you create a virus by using a virus to start with, and you do it outside of cells by doing it inside of cells. Can you see that these stories are NUTS?

WHAT IS A GENE?

"The nucleus is the control center of the cell. It controls both the chemical reactions that occur in the cell and reproduction of the cell. Briefly, the nucleus contains large quantities of deoxyribonucleic acid, which we have called genes for many years. The genes determine the characteristics of the protein enzymes of the cytoplasm, and in this way control cytoplasmic activities. To control reproduction, the genes first reproduce themselves, and after this is accomplished the cell splits by a special process called mitosis to form two daughter cells, each of which receives one of the two sets of genes" (from pages 15, 16 of Basic Human Physiology: Normal Function and Mechanisms of Disease by Arthur C. Guyton, M.D., W. B. Saunders Company, 1977).

Let's boil down the bare bones answer from what was just said—genes are nucleic acid. Period. Got that? If you look under "genes" in the index, it says "see DNA". DO NOT MISS THIS POINT—GENES ARE NUCLEIC ACID. AND VIRUSES ARE NUCLEIC ACID.

WHAT IS NUCLEIC ACID?

Nucleic acids are molecules of acids arranged around the nucleus of the cell, that's why they are called nucleic acids. One type of acid is called deoxy-ribo-nucleic acid, abbreviated DNA. The other is called ribo-nucleic acid, or RNA. These acids (when dried they become crystals) consist of small parts called nucleotides. The nucleotides are adenine (A), cytosine (C), guanine (G), uracil (U), and thymine (T). The A, C, G, and T nucleotides are what make up the "steps" or "cross-bars" of the DNA double-helix "ladder" of genes. In DNA, the strands ("steps") connect in binary pairs, A to T and G to C.

The T is replaced by U in RNA. In RNA molecules, G - C and A - U are the paired "steps" on the gene ladder.

Editorial Policy

Opinions of the CONTACT contributors are their own and do not necessarily reflect those of the CONTACT staff or management.

The genes of animals and humans are DNA molecules, although the cell also uses RNA to promote chemical reactions and transport of materials. DNA is found in the nucleus of the cell, RNA is found in the cytoplasm surrounding the nucleus.

If you are awake and thinking and following me so far, you will have noticed that viruses are pieces of RNA and DNA. And the genetic code, the genes, of living things are pieces of RNA and DNA.

So, how do you tell the difference between a virus and a gene?

Ah, Ha! You can't. THEY ARE THE SAME THING, called two different names by the witch doctors.

Think maybe there is something fishy going on here?

It probably has not sunk in yet, so let's look some more.

"If proteins are the principal stuff of life, the nucleic acids are its blueprints--the molecules on which the Secret of Life, if we may speak of such a thing, is written....There are two kinds of nucleic acid: DNA, short for deoxyribonucleic acid, and RNA, ribonucleic acid. DNA is always found in the nucleus of the cell, RNA mainly in the cytoplasm outside the nucleus" ("Recombinant DNA", Scientific American, 1957, p. 1). On page 8, it says "...when a bacterial virus infects a bacterium, it is the virus's DNA (not its protein) that enters the bacterial cell, and much of this DNA turns up in the progeny virus produced in the cell. Taking all the evidence together, it is difficult to resist the conclusion that DNA is genetic material. If that is the case, our problem is to learn how DNA reproduces itself." Note that it says DNA is genetic material.

"Viruses consist of a single type of nucleic acid (DNA or RNA) within a protein coat called a capsid. The nucleic acid and the capsid are referred to as the nucleocapsid. The nucleic acids contain the information for making the proteins found in the viral coat as well as many of the enzymes required to invade the host and to replicate the virus's nucleic acid. Some viruses are covered by a membrane, often called the envelope. The term virion is used to describe the complete viral particle, including the nucleocapsid and any envelope it may have. None of the viruses is able to replicate in the absence of host cells. Thus, all the viruses are obligate parasites of cellular organisms" (p. 254, Essentials of Microbiology by Raúl J. Cano and Jaime S. Colomé).

Don't let the big words throw you, a virus is a molecule of DNA or RNA. Period. Sometimes its coat changes, but that is beside our point. A gene is a molecule of DNA or RNA. Period. There is no (apparent) difference between a gene and a virus, except if it is a "bad" gene we call it a virus.

A virus is a crystal of acid. Is it any wonder that it "cannot live outside the cell"? A virus is DEAD. It always was, it always is, and forevermore, it is DEAD, by all the rules in the book. A virus by itself is NEVER ALIVE. How can an acid be alive? How can a crystal be alive? (Don't jump to conclusions yet, there is more to this story!) If it is alive, can't you see that there MUST BE something more going on here? Can it be that the rules of the book are WRONG?

By all the normal rules of what is life, a virus is not and cannot be alive. It has no metabolism. It has no digestive system. It has no reproductive system. It has no system of mobility, it has no intelligence. It is plainly and simply a crystal of acid. "Viruses are such primitive things that many scientists don't consider them alive" (Science News, Vol. 140, December 14, 1991, article "Instant virus: Just add RNA"). Keep that thought in mind as we continue to look at this subject.

"There are certain entities, in fact, such as the viruses, about which biologists have had recurrent doubts as to whether they should be admitted into the category of truly 'living' organisms" (The Explosion of Science—From Molecules To Man, edited by J. Z. Young and Tom Margerison, p. 34).

"One class of entities which are less structurally complex than the cell is the viruses. Whether, however, they are 'living', and thus qualify as the 'simplest' of all living things, is another matter....The question as to whether viruses are truly 'living' or not has, in its time, been a famous biological controversy" (ibid, p. 40). And on the next page: "Experiment, however, shows that not only is a virus quite incapable of growing outside a living cell, but exhaustive tests fail to reveal any genuine indigenous metabolic activity in it, when it is in the 'free' form. The extracellular virus is biochemically an inert particle, devoid of all synthetic or energy-releasing activity." That is just a fancy way of saying that, by normal definition, IT IS DEAD.

The "simple cell", however, is ENORMOUSLY active and complex and very much alive.

The book Viruses, by Arnold J. Levine, Scientific American Library, asks: "Are Viruses Alive?" on page 22, but then does not answer the question. It says "Volumes have been written to elucidate the properties of a living thing, but consensus has been rare in these debates."

This book also says: "When, in 1935, Wendell Stanley succeeded in obtaining a crystalline form of the tobacco mosaic virus, this form was seen by some scientists as filling the gap between the living world of reproducing viruses and the chemical or nonliving world of molecules and crystals" (p. 8).

You have been so brainwashed that you will probably still find what I am saying hard to follow. Look at it this way. If you have a computer, you probably have a piece of plastic called a computer disk. We say that the computer disk controls the computer. IT DOES NOT. It is simply a piece of plastic with a magnetic coating on it, it cannot DO anything, except just BE. The computer does all the "doing". A higher intelligence arranges the magnetic coating on the disk in a certain way, and the computer is designed to do certain things based on how the magnetic coating is arranged.

Or look at it this way: Saying a disk controls the computer, or saying a virus "forces" the cell to do anything, is like saying this piece of paper is alive, it takes control of you, it forces you to read and act upon it. NOT SO.

On CNN on TV, I saw a program which showed the "AIDS virus" "injecting itself into a cell". Right in front of our eyes, we were told the virus was injecting itself into the cell, and the screen, using a scene from an electron microscope, showed this mean little beastie crawling right into this big white wall (which we were told was the cell). How, exactly, does a piece of acid do that?

Well, see this pencil on my desk (let's pretend). Now watch. The pencil is forcing my hand to move. It makes my hand open up and grab it. It forces my hand to draw skulls and crossbones on a piece of paper. This must be a very evil pencil. In fact, this pencil must be a living demon!

Just because I say it, is that what is really going on?

The encyclopedias and textbooks admit that viruses have no life outside the cell. They have no digestive system, no reproductive system. They can be turned into crystals, and the crystals can be turned back into "viruses". Some books even say that scientists at first thought they had found the basis of life, because here was something dead that could come alive. What the medical textbooks teach is that the virus injects itself into a cell (a virus is about one billionth the size of a cell), becomes alive and takes control of the cell, forcing the cell to reproduce viruses until the cell explodes. That is like saying a flea bites a horse's rump and takes over control of the horse and forces the horse to manufacture fleas! Even that is not a good analogy because the flea is at least alive and has some intelligence and has its own reproductive system, while the virus has no life and no intelligence and no reproductive system. Viruses are not alive, UNLESS THERE IS MORE GOING ON THAN MEETS THE EYE!

DNA REPLICATING ITSELF

Is that possible? Let me ask you this—are cells alive? You will probably answer, yes, of course.

So let me ask it again. Are the cells in that beefsteak you had for dinner alive? Well, no, you say, not any more.

What is the difference between a living cell and a dead cell?

There is no difference at all. Except, we all know, there is a very BIG difference, but the difference is NOT CHEMICAL, NOT PHYSICAL, not something you can measure or weigh. We might say the difference is electrical, but it is not really electrical, the difference is that mysterious thing we call LIFE.

WHAT IS THE “SOMETHING ELSE”?

There are so many places to start and so much to cover, I shall just hit a few highlights to define the track we are on. For instance, in the 1720s a French astronomer (Jean-Jacques Dertous de Mairan) did some experiments on Mimosa pudica plants. As soon as the sun disappeared, they folded their leaves. He placed some in a dark closet at midday, and their leaves stayed open. But when the sun set, their leaves closed, even though they were still in the dark closet. So he took some plants down a mine shaft about 650 feet below the surface at mid-day, and they immediately closed their leaves. The leaves stayed closed even when incandescent bulbs were turned on. There was apparently something unseen, something besides light, coming from the sun that was affecting the plants.

One experimenter placed a certain metal plate on the roof, ran a wire to a dark basement and into a pot with seeds in it, further sealed the container with foil wrap, and grew quite healthy and productive plants (Phoenix Journal #96; Heave-Ho (Phase Two), p. 22)!

From the 1700s, scientists such as Jean Antoine Nollet, Peirre Charles Lemonnier, Benjamin Franklin, Gardini, Bertholon, Galvani, Mesmer, and many others were researching electrical and other radiations and how they affected plants and other life.

Baron Karl von Reichenbach, the man who discovered creosote, wrote a book in 1854 about a light force he called the OD Force. Nowadays we would say he was researching sound and light and color and magnetism from the vacuum. Andrija Puharich, in Beyond Telepathy, 1973, has a whole chapter of extremely detailed information on the OD (Appendix C). Others called a similar vacuum force the ether, the orgone, prana, cosmic field, lepton gas, etc., and most recently, scalar waves from the Zero Point.

In 1845, William Ross tested claims by the Marquis of Anglesey that electricity made seeds sprout faster, and wrote an account called “Influence of Electricity on Vegetation”. In 1902, Selim Lemström published a book showing that plants treated with electricity produced greatly increased yields, tasted sweeter, etc., compared to non-treated plants. James Lee Scribner, Dr. George Starr White, Bindo Riccioni, and many others were reporting success at treating plants with electricity. In 1963, the Soviet Union built a commercial processing plant to treat seeds with electricity at the rate of 2 tons of seeds per hour.

Dr. U. J. Pittman in Canada, L. J. Audus in Britain, and A. V. Krylov and G. A. Tarakanova of Russia published papers showing that plants also responded to magnetism. In 1968, Aviation Week and Space Technology had an article saying that satellites could tell the health of crops based on their “electromagnetic signature”, and Dr. H. Len Cox, a space scientist, after reading the article, started Cox's Electroculture Corporation in 1970 selling a special metallic culture that greatly increased the yield and flavor of plants by using electricity. An article in Fusion magazine, March-April 1985, p. 11, called “Let's Use Our Technology To Wipe Out Drugs”, says that “Every growing plant, when hit by sunlight, reflects back radiation in a specific array of frequencies that is different from every other plant; thus the scanner can identify the signatures of illicit drugs. For example, cannabis plants can be detected in the 1.55- to 1.75-micron band of the infrared part of the electromagnetic spectrum, its specific, identifiable signature.” A picture of a multispectral scanner made by Texas Instruments (to be carried under an airplane wing) is included in the article. They can identify “signatures” from airplanes, from satellites, and of course, from desktop. They can also tell if the plant is healthy or not, and can tell to some extent what diseases the plant might have. There is simply too much information for me to cover it here, but Acrea USA newspaper sometimes has articles along these lines (Acrea USA, PO Box 9547, Kansas City, MO 64133, (816)-737-0064).

Don't you realize you can do that with animals, too? Animals such as, say, humans? Yes, you can use spectroscopy to precisely evaluate the composition and condition of elements, cells, and bodies. Scientists can analyze the composition and condition of stars billions of light years away, and they most certainly can do the same with cells 6 inches or so in front of their machines. The only reason they do not do so is because of the drug cartel and medical mafia. Using a spectrometer and evaluating by frequency and light would quickly reveal that their drugs do not work, and in fact, are often the cause of the problem.

Recent Space Shuttle trips to repair the Hubble Space Telescope included checkout of the Nicmos Near Infrared Camera/Multi-Object Spectrometer installed in the Hubble Space Telescope by a Shuttle crew in February. I suspect there is a lot more involved than they are telling us, like in weapons and secret communications, but how would I know, I'm just guessing.

In the 1920s, Georges Lakhovsky wrote a book explaining that cells of plants and animals were electromagnetic radiators. They absorbed and emitted radiation in various waves and frequencies. Normal cells had certain frequencies, diseased cells had different frequencies, and by the application of certain frequencies, the diseased cells could be brought back into a condition of health. He developed a “multi-wave oscillator” to heal cancers, radiation burns, and many other problems normally considered to be difficult to cure. The American authorities suppressed and banned his machines and writings, while in Russia great strides were made in understanding the frequency-based foundation of life.

FREQUENCY AND THE WAVE

In 1978 I received a packet of communist literature from the Soviet distributor, Northern Book House, Box 1000, Gravenhurst, Ontario, Canada. At the time, I considered the material as worthless nonsense garbage. Later, as I learned more and reviewed it, I was shocked. They talked about getting energy out of the vacuum and talked about humans and animals responding to “electromagnetic waves”.

To begin to understand the wave is to begin to understand the method of creation.

The wave is the mechanism of transferring zero-point energy from the vacuum (commonly called ether) into matter and force.

All energy is expressed in motion. All motion is expressed in waves. The wave is too complicated to describe simply, but let's start simply and begin to understand.

The waves we are most familiar with are waves caused when we toss a pebble in the water, or sound waves in the air from vibrations.

Waves consists of a series of crests and troughs of varying pressure. It can be said that waves divide a medium by concentrating it and decentrating it at the same time (compression and rarefaction). For instance, a wave in the atmosphere is called a “front” by the weathermen, which concentrates or compresses air in front of it (a “high pressure” area), and decentrates or expands air behind it (a “low pressure” area). Since the high pressure area moves into the low pressure area, the weathermen look at this oppositely as to the “front” and “back”, but these terms are relative to your viewpoint.

Physicists are learning that what we call empty space, the vacuum, or ether, etc., actually is the source of waves which divide the vacuum into sexed pairs of concentrated and decentrated waves. These waves, vibrating at various frequencies and interference patterns and forming holograms (or formed from holograms), are the source of all that we call reality, all that we call existence.

WAVELENGTH AND SPECIFIC FREQUENCIES

What is wavelength? Wavelength is the distance between any point of one wave to the corresponding point of the next wave.

The number of waves along a certain distance in a certain period of time is called the frequency, and is generally measured as cycles per second.

The term now used to express “cycles per second” is called “Hertz”. One Hertz equals one cycle per second, 60 Hertz is 60 cycles per second.

The human ear responds to sounds in the frequency range of approximately 20 Hertz to 15,000 Hertz, so this is called the sound frequency range.

Radio waves are from 15,000 Hertz (abbreviated Hz) to about 1,000,000,000,000 Hz.

Heat waves are from 1,000,000,000,000 Hz to 400,000,000,000 Hz.

Light waves are from 400,000,000,000,000 to 750,000,000,000,000 Hz.

The top speed of sound depends on the material through which it travels, but does not exceed about 20,000 feet per second, or about 6,097.56 meters per second.

Sound travels through copper at 10,800 feet per second; iron at 17,390 fps.; brick at 11,980 fps; glass at 16,410 fps; oak at 12,620 fps; pine at 10,900 fps; water at 4,794 fps; air at 1,129 fps; and does not travel through a vacuum.

The top speed of light is given as about 186,000 miles per second, or 300,000,000 meters per second. This is the standard teaching. In higher understanding, the speed of light is variable and in ultimate truth the limit is not defined correctly (light does not travel), but we shall have more on this later.

The formula for wavelength is wavelength in meters per second equals speed in meters per second divided by frequency in Hertz.

The textbooks generally do not deal with frequencies below 30 cycles per second. This information has been purposely repressed by “the government”.

Nikola Tesla was the genius who gave us alternating current and who [actually, originally] invented radio, TV, radar, and much more. He is also the one who decided that the standards for our household alternating current would be 120 volts and 60 cycles per second. He decided this after much experimentation with voltages and frequencies.

Tesla learned that the natural resonant frequency of the Earth is about 10 cycles per second.

Frequencies of 8 - 20 Hz are considered the ELF range (Extremely Low Frequency).

Frequencies of 20 - 40 Hz are considered VLF (Very Low Frequency).

Frequencies of 40 - 100 Hz are considered LF (Low Frequency).

SOME INTERESTING FREQUENCIES

Tesla determined that the LF frequency range of 40 - 100 is safe to humans, so he set our standard household current frequency at 60 cycles per second.

He determined that the ELF range of 8 - 20 cycles per second is harmful and can be painful to humans.

A frequency of 16 cycles per second produces a visual flicker fusion that upsets people.

A resonant frequency of 6.66 cycles per second is damaging to humans and to the planet. In articles about Tesla there is mention that he could build a "black box" that could destroy buildings, cause earthquakes and even split the Earth in two. The formerly restricted/classified frequency for this is 6.66 Hz! Soviet scientists began an experiment with this frequency on October 14, 1976. Andrija Puharich said of this experiment: "What happened had such a disastrous effect on the planetary well-being, that even the Soviet scientists were frightened. Enormous standing waves of electromagnetic energy formed in the atmosphere above the planet extending from the Russo-Finnish region to the reciprocal pole in the Pacific east of New Zealand. These standing waves, thousand of miles long, refused to damp out, even after the Soviet TMT [Tesla Magnifying Transmitter] was switched off. The planetary electromagnetic bell just went on ringing with unprecedented resonance. Normally when the driving oscillator is switched off, the resonant waves damp out and cease shortly. Thoroughly alarmed, the Soviet scientists tried to break up and dampen the resonance with intense high-powered bursts of ultra-high frequency radiation—all to no avail. The undamped resonance of the planetary waves had all the dangerous potential of a catastrophic event, such as "splitting the planet in two like an apple." After a few months, the standing waves did damp out, but not until some unusual never-before-seen events had occurred.

Puharich then explained that one of the events was the creation of the worst winter in the U.S. in over 100 years, drought, forest fires, etc. Passengers in airplanes were getting sick (from unusual ozone), etc. The winter of 1977-1978 was the worst since 1883 in the northeast U.S., and the winter of 1978-1979 was the worst in recorded history in the Midwest U.S. Jeremy Campbell published an article in the London Evening Standard, April 13, 1977, entitled "Are the Russians Changing our Weather?"

A frequency of 6 Hz produces dizziness, nausea, and a cholinergic effect on the parasympathetic nervous system (in plain language, a sudden massive diarrhea). Margaret Cheney, in Tesla: Man Out Of Time told about how Mark Twain learned this:

"He [Tesla] led his guests to the corner where a strange platform was mounted on rubber padding. When he flipped a switch, it began to vibrate rapidly and silently.

"Twain stepped forward, eager. 'Let me try it, Tesla. Please.'

"No, no. It needs work.'

"Please.'

"Tesla chuckled. 'All right, Mark, but don't stay on too long. Come off when I give you the word.' He called to an attendant to throw the switch.

"Twain, in his usual white suit and black string tie, found himself humming and vibrating on the platform like a gigantic bumblebee. He was delighted. He whooped and waved his arms. The others watched in amusement.

"After a time the inventor said, 'All right, Mark. You've had enough. Come down now.'

"Not by a jugful,' said the humorist. 'I am enjoying this.'

"But seriously, you had better come down,' insisted Tesla. 'Believe me, it is best that you do so.'

"Twain only laughed. 'You couldn't get me off this with a derrick.'

"The words were scarcely out of his mouth when his expression froze. He lurched stiffly toward the edge of the platform, frantically waving at Tesla to stop it.

"Quick, Tesla. Where is it?"

"The inventor helped him down with a smile and propelled him in the direction of the rest room. The laxative effect of the vibrator was well known to him and his assistants."

The electrical charge of the atmosphere increases about 100 volts for every meter [of height], thus placing the Earth/ionosphere potential difference at hundreds of millions of volts (Earth negative ground, ionosphere positive). This creates a resonating capacitor (and when scientists fool with it, it also creates "sprites"). The 7.03 Hz frequency is the resonant cavity frequency of the Earth-air-ionosphere condenser/capacitor. The frequency of Earth by itself was determined by Tesla to be 6.67 Hz. This looks to me like it might more precisely be 6.666—a curious number, don't you think?

The Earth's natural oscillating magnetic field frequency is 7.83 Hz (usually rounded off to 8 Hz). Thus, the natural heartbeat of the Earth is considered to be 8 Hz, discovered by Tesla in 1895. In 1960, Balser and Wagner (Nature, Vol. 188, No. 4751, 1961) published their findings that showed that the Earth-cavity was resonant at 8 Hz. More precise studies done by M.J. Rycroft showed that the ELF spectrum had its fundamental at 7.8 ± 0.2 Hz (Radio Science, Journal of Research, NBS/USNC - URSI, Vol. 69D, No. 8, Aug. 1965, pp. 1071-1081, article entitled "Resonances of the Earth-Ionosphere Cavity observed at Cambridge, England"). None of the authors mentioned Tesla. Tesla was at least 65 years ahead of these authors. By the way, on September 13, 1898, at the Eighth Annual Meeting of the American Electro-Therapeutic Association (whatever happened to them?), Buffalo, New York, Tesla presented a paper he wrote called "High Frequency Oscillators for Electro-Therapeutic and other Purposes". Doctors will tell you frequency-based healing is quackery. The medical profession is a profession of liars and killers.

The 7.8 Hz resonance has been attributed to a man named Schumann and called the Schumann resonance, and is considered to be a constant in physics. Global military communications were developed on this frequency. However, recent reports (from Norwegian and Russian researchers) say the Earth is rising in frequency and the Schumann resonance is now 8.6 Hz, and climbing! At the same time, the Earth's magnetic field strength is declining.

Tesla noticed that the Earth and the ionosphere formed the two plates of a giant capacitor, with a resonating cavity peak at 8 Hz (7.83 Hz). He then tuned a secondary coil in resonance with the two resonant cavities of the Earth by creating a 20,700 Hz wave and pulsing (chopping) it so that the pulses hit the Earth 6 times per second. The Earth began to "ring like a bell". The sound would bounce back in 108 minutes. By keeping this up, he discovered the sonic stationary wave of the Earth. An electromagnetic wave was also created which traveled faster than the speed of light through the Earth (471,240 kilometers per second) and these electromagnetic waves became supraluminal and superconducting! He said that if he kept this up for two weeks, he could "split the Earth in two like a sliced apple"! (The World Today, Vol. XXI, No. 8, February 1912, pp. 718-722, "Nikola Tesla, Dreamer", by Allan L. Benson.)

The Soviets recreated this experiment on October 14, 1976. They started transmitting extremely powerful pulses at 6.66 cycles per second (6.66 Hz) and created tremendous standing waves thousands of miles long that became extremely frightening to them as they got out of their control. They created catastrophic weather and were afraid they might "split the Earth like an apple". They tried for months to shut it down, until it finally dampened down.

Normal brain frequencies are 8.6 Hz to 11.3 Hz. The brain wave Alpha frequency is 8 Hz (actual peak is 7.81 to 7.83 Hz). This is a healthful biological frequency and produces feelings of well being.

Magnetic pulse frequencies in the range of 7 to 10 Hz can protect the individual from the harmful ELF magnetic waves. With training, the human brain can generate frequencies in this range.

A single frequency in the range of 3 to 5 Hz can produce cancer.

Another range of frequencies harmful to humans is 10.8 Hz to 11 Hz, being transmitted on carriers by the Russian "Woodpecker" transmissions. NASA's Space Shuttle program has announced "experiments" sending pulse frequencies at 10 Hz or thereabouts. For instance the 10/3/94 Aviation Week & Space Technology magazine reported that the Discovery mission also involved two Lockheed Electra aircraft which, during the period Sept. 16-17, flew over part of Discovery's orbit, each firing its own on-board laser at the Earth, "pulsed at 10 Hz, through quartz windows" on the aircraft. When the Space Shuttle launches, there is usually at least one other launch somewhere, often from Guyana, which is involved with it—does the term "phase conjugate mirrors" fit in here? They are doing weather control and mind control and other "Star Wars"-type games.

EINSTEINIAN PHYSICS

Before we continue, you should become aware that physics and electronics as taught in schools and universities are not correct; we have been purposely lied to by the oil/nuclear energy crowd to prevent us from attaining energy independence.

Albert Einstein is a good example. We are taught that Einstein was a great mathematician, yet in his own biography he says that he had trouble with math and had to ask friends (such as Marcel Grossman) for help.

We are taught that Einstein is the author of the Theory of Relativity, yet evidence has come forth proving that the real author was Mileva Maric, Einstein's first wife.

Einstein had a reputation at the Swiss Polytechnic Institute in Zurich of being a man with poor work habits and was often reprimanded for laziness during all his school years including the University. He developed a romance with classmate Mileva who helped him with his math. His autobiography says "In my work participated a Serbian student Mileva Maric who I married later." She had an illegitimate daughter in 1902, which they gave up for adoption. They got married in 1903, separated in 1912 and divorced in 1919. This is when Einstein married his cousin Elsa. The original manuscript of the Theory of Relativity submitted for publication had Maric's name on it as co-author.

For more proof, see the article "Theory of Relativity—Who is its real author?" by Dr. Rastko Maglic and J.W. McGinnis, President, International Tesla Society, in the Jul/Aug 1994 issue of Extraordinary Science magazine, which contains references for further documentation.

Einstein was a foreign-born Khazarian Jew with membership in at least 16 Communist front organizations (Friends of the Soviet Union, for example). Einstein was head of the Jewish Black Book Committee, which was listed as a Communist front in the 1947 House Un-American Activities Committee Report. He was a Communist cell member with Klaus Fuchs, the famous atomic spy, and was instrumental in bringing Fuchs into the U.S. Einstein was a hoax and fraud saddled on the scientific community to prevent them from learning too much and to promote Jews as being superior.

Einstein's famous equation " $E=MC^2$ " is WRONG, or at best incomplete. His definition of energy is wrong, his definition of mass is wrong, C is defined as the top speed possible for anything. Light does not move, our perception of the speed of light is wrong (the perception is what moves). Even in conventional physics, it is said that no material particle can exceed the velocity of light. But every motion of a physical particle or wave has with it another wave called a pilot wave. The velocity of the pilot wave is always greater than the speed of light, and the product of the two wave velocities always equals the speed of light squared. The velocity of mind is greater than the velocity of light (according to Puharich, Beyond Telepathy, formula on page 191).

Those who REALLY understand, and who can prove it by creating matter out of "nothing" for instance, say that the original White Light is invisible and still.

The correct science being discovered and revealed by such as Nikola Tesla, Tom Bearden, Andrija Puharich, G. Lakhovsky, Royal Rife, T. H. Moray, Antoine Priore, Amnon Yariv, William J. Hooper, Louis Kervran, David Bohm, Trevor James Constable, Bruce Cathie, Chiang Kanzen, etc., was downplayed, suppressed, or banned to prevent humanity from achieving energy independence (and thus political and military independence) from the Rockefeller/Rothschild/Royal Family oil/nuclear energy barons. Understanding the correct technology leads to understanding of good health and thus independence from the drug/medical crowd, who happen to be the same oil crowd crooks.

HOW DO VIRUSES REALLY WORK?

What are being called viruses are simply pieces of genetic material. Left alone, they are normally no problem to the body. But "messed up" by drugs, or by radiation, they supply wrong information to the cells and create problems, just as a wrong or doctored computer program messes up what the computer is supposed to do. Computer "viruses" do not really take control of the computer, we just look at it that way. Viruses do not really take control of cells, we just look at it that way. A computer disk has no intelligence of its own, except the intelligence of the programmer that is stored on the disk. The virus has no intelligence of its own, except for the intelligence of the virus creator/programmer. Dr. Chiang Kanzen, credited with discovering "biomicrowave communications" (the Chiang Scientific Foundation and Chiang Institute are named after him), said that DNA is only a "cassette" with recorded information, whose actual material carriers are bioelectromagnetic signals. "In other words, the electromagnetic field and DNA together make up COMBINED GENETIC MATERIAL, which exists in two forms: a passive (DNA) and an active (bioelectromagnetic field) form. The passive form preserves the genetic code, the active (transmitting) form is able to modify it." The bioelectromagnetic field (the material carrier of energy and information) exists in both the microwave and infra-red range of frequencies, and the bio-EM fields act by moving photons.

The government black budget "Starwars" programs and medical programs are reprogramming the genetic codes in the pieces of genetic material and calling them viruses, and, yes, in that case, they do definitely cause disease and genetic mutations.

HOW CAN VIRAL DISEASES BE CURED?

You should know by now that drugs and radiation create defective pieces of genetic codes which we call viruses. The solution to the problem is to stop the intake of drugs and all harmful elements, and to stop being irradiated. We cannot always do that, so we need to keep the body in top condition to allow it to counter the problems. Since genes are being electromagnetically programmed by our enemies, we need to be able to counter that programming, which can also be done electromagnetically (in which I am including light waves and all forms of helpful frequency).

There is no single AIDS virus, ALL viruses (harmful genetic material) are AIDS viruses, all harm the body's immune system (if they are harmful at all—many are harmless and are scapegoats for the drug dealers). And, yes, these viruses can and are being programmed/created from a distance by pulse beam systems: "Yes, the retrovirus can be manipulated by pulsed beam systems" (Hatonn, Phoenix Journal #65, p. 173).

The MIND is a pulse beam generator and can CREATE, OR HEAL viruses. However, we generally do not know how, so we can do it by using machines. You can search the field of radionics for more information.

In 1977, Louis Kervran won the Nobel Prize for showing that plants and animals (his main experiments were with chickens) use "scalar wave" type technology to transmute elements, for instance turning potassium into calcium. This is impossible according to the "laws" of physics currently taught in schools. Lead cannot be turned into gold, we are told, except now by atomic bombardment in nuclear reactors. In fact, living beings do this "alchemy" routinely. The ruling Elite do not want you "common folk" to have this type of knowledge, as it will undermine their control over you. So the "laws" they teach are incomplete or WRONG. Kervran wrote a dissertation (in French, I believe) on "biological transmutations" and a translation was republished in CONTACT (August 29 and September 5, 12, & 19, 1995).

HOW DO YOU CREATE A VIRUS?

When a virus is taken into a cell, it vanishes by becoming a part of the cell's genetic code. The cell does whatever cells do, using the genetic code as a guideline. When the cell dies, it falls apart and is digested by enzymes and in the process bits of the genetic code are released until they too are dissolved. These bits of cell garbage are called viruses. They are "harmless" or "deadly", depending on how they have been programmed. They can also be, and are being, generated artificially. Gene manipulation is being used for everything from cloning humans, creating artificial foods (some "foods" that are genetically altered are Coca Cola, Fritos, Green Giant Harvest Burgers, McDonald's French Fries, Nestle's chocolates, Karo Corn Syrup, NutraSweet, Kraft Salad Dressings, Fleischmann's margarine, Similac infant formulas, Land O' Lakes Butter, and Cabot Creamery Butter), to creating new strains of old diseases and

THE LAST GREAT PLAGUE UPON MAN: AIDS AND RELATED MURDER TOOLS

You are in the time of evolution wherein technology is proven capable of genetic and DNA tampering to the point of replication of plants, animals AND MAN. Further, brainwashing has achieved such sophistication as to totally control the mass population and individual persons to the very capability of separating soul from human consciousness. This is unacceptable to Creator. Man is doomed if changes are not brought about quickly and surely. This book is a representation of a JOURNAL "banned" by Federal Court. We have added the ultimate insult in this offering and made changes in the original presentation to qualify the material. May your reading be guided and the Light of realization be your gift.

germ-warfare-type new diseases. There are billion-dollar industries based on hiding this information from you!

An article in the April 2, 1994, issue of Science News, p. 213, talks of the discovery of something they are calling a "holoenzyme". They explained a holoenzyme as something like a chairman over the committee that controls reading the genetic code. The article did not state why the name "holoenzyme", but it sounds like a reference to a hologram. If that's the case, they were on the right track. Since then, they keep changing the definition of the "holoenzyme".

THE HOLOGRAPHIC UNIVERSE

Quantum physicists are beginning to learn that the universe is in reality a hologram. It is hard for us to accept that we and all we consider as reality are a giant hologram that contains matter and consciousness in the same "dream". This subject is too big for me to try to cover here, so I recommend you start with a book called The Holographic Universe, by Michael Talbot, HarperCollins [one word] Publishers, 1991. It has recently been a non-fiction best seller and is available at the library or from most any book store. If you read only one book in the near future, it should be this book. It will change your whole perception of reality.

Another book you may want is called AIDS, Biological Warfare by T. E. Bearden, available from the Tesla Book Company, P. O. Box 121873, Chula Vista, CA 91912 (their catalog is also on the Internet). Bearden's book contains more than you ever wanted to know on how holographic/scalar technology is being used and what it is. One chapter is called "Developing the EM [electromagnetic] Cure For AIDS".

An article in the March 30, 1991, issue of Science News begins: "Zapping the AIDS virus with low-voltage electric current can nearly eliminate its ability to infect human white blood cells cultured in the laboratory, reports a research team at the Albert Einstein College of Medicine in New York City" (p. 207).

It is illegal to sell devices that heal AIDS (are you surprised?), although there is evidence that some of them work. However, the laws exempt making devices for your own use or your own research. See Code of Federal Regulations 21 § 807.65 Subpart D - Exemptions. Paragraphs {d} & {f}:

Exemptions:

"(d) Licensed practitioners, including physicians, dentists, and optometrists, who manufacture or otherwise alter devices solely for use in their practice."

"(f) persons who manufacture, prepare, propagate, compound, or process devices solely for use in research, teaching, or analysis, and do not introduce such devices into commercial distribution."

If you wish to do your own experimenting, you can get a kit of parts for about $50.00 or a partially assembled kit for $89.00 from Action Electronics, 1300 E. Edinger, Santa Ana, CA 92705 (714) 547-5169 or you can buy the parts from your local Radio Shack (contact Dr. Robert Beck for a list). Another source for parts and instructions is Brownell Electro, 6450 Caballero Blvd., Buena Park, CA 90620 (800) 774-4643.

Dr. Robert Beck has a taped lecture on this subject called "An Electromagnetic Remedy For Many Disorders", $8.00 for an audio (plus $1.50 s/h) or $20.00 for the video, available from Backcountry Productions, 831 Alpine Street, Longmont, CO. 80501 (303) 772-8358.

A magnetic pulse generator is available from Energetic Transformations, 8425 North Foothill Hwy., Boulder, CO. 80302, (303) 939-0090. Price was $95.00.

A catalog of useful parts is available from MCM Electronics, Centerville, OH 45459 (800) 543-4330, catalog # 50-940.

No claims are made for any health or healing effect of these machines (keep it legal), so they are for your research into how frequencies and waves affect the universe. They are for informational, instructional, and research purposes only.

A book I have not seen yet, it is supposed to come out in April 1997, is called The Electric Spark of Life: The Millennium Science by Dr. Reijo Mäkelä. He says that living cells are electromagnetic units. Everbody already knows this (that's why electrocardiograms work). Mäkelä expands upon this and says "Genetic engineering is electromagnetic in its character. Environmental factors—light and other electromagnetic radiation like radiation heat, noise, all kinds of pollution [HAARP?—will cause electromagnetic changes in DNA....The compounding of adenine to thymine and cytosine to guanine is governed by electromagnetic laws." An article by Dr. Reijo Mäkelä is available on the Internet from <http://www.earthpulse.com>.

Another book that appears to be valuable is Living Energies: Viktor Schauberger's Brilliant Work With Natural Energy Explained, by Callum Coats. There is such a mind-boggling wealth of information available these days—until the government manages to suppress it all—that a lot of researchers are discovering how to use this new technology. Unfortunately, too many of them do not see the big picture of the politics and conspiracies and deadly control wars going on, so they generally do not get very far. They copyright their material, run to the patent office and turn over their secrets to their enemy, run to banks for financing (banks that make their money from the very enemies of the new technology, or the enemies who want to keep the new technology to themselves). And they do not understand or consider where GOD fits in the picture.

One of the best books with key information is The Last Great Plague Upon Man: Aids And Related Murder Tools from Phoenix Source Publishers, P. O. Box 27353, Las Vegas, Nevada 89126, (800) 800-5565. Ordering information is on the back page of CONTACT Newspaper (call same phone number for more info). On page 159 he says, speaking of control system of cells: "The master cellular control system is holographic." I wonder how he knew? (joke)

A LOOK AT SOME OTHER DEVICES

SONIC BLOOM—A home and garden plant-growing kit. Dan Carlson developed a combination of harmonics and nutrients to make plants grow better.

He's in the Guinness Book of Records for having grown the world's largest house plant, and has produced liter-sized potatoes, 500 tomatoes on single vines, three times more roses on a bush, etc. His basic kit is $60.00 plus $5.00 shipping, available on the Internet or other sources.

THE NEUROPHONE—Patrick Flanagan has produced a machine that allows the deaf to hear. He invented it when he was 14 years old, Life magazine did a feature on him in their September 14, 1962 issue. He demonstrated his machine on the Gary Moore, Bess Meyerson, etc. TV shows. When he first tried to patent the machine, the National Security Agency confiscated the Neurophone (convincing evidence that it works!).

Harry Stine wrote a book called The Silicon Gods (Bantam Books), about using the Neurophone as a brain-to-computer interface device. They developed a Man-Dolphin language translator. The limit of human hearing is about 16,000 Hz., but dolphins "speak" and hear up to 250,000 Hz. The Neurophone was successful in allowing humans to hear and speak at these frequencies. The machine was used during the Vietnam War to locate sounds in the jungle. Flanagan developed a digital Neurophone patent application and sent it to the patent office, and the Defense Intelligence Agency put it under a secrecy order. They were not allowed to talk about it for 12 years.

The mechanism uses holographic sound, so that they can locate sounds in 3-D space, and also works backwards—they can project sound in 3-D space. In other words, they can record an orchestra, then play it back and it sounds just like you are sitting in a live concert.

The first Neurophone consisted of two copper Brillo pads connected to insulated copper wires. The pads were put in plastic bags for insulation. The copper wires were attached to a reversed audio output transformer that was attached to a hi-fi amplifier. The output voltage of the audio transformer was about 1,500 volts peak-to-peak. When the pads were placed on the temples next to the eyes and speech or music was played, you could "hear" the sound inside your head. The transformer would oscillate ("ring") with a dampened wave at frequencies of 40-50 kHz.

The next Neurophone consisted of a variable frequency vacuum tube oscillator that was amplitude modulated. The output signal was then fed into a high frequency transformer that had a flat frequency response in the 20-100 kHz range. The electrodes (this time they were two-inch diameter disks with mylar insulation) were placed on the head and the oscillator was tuned so that maximum resonance was obtained using the human body as part of the tank circuit. It used a 2,000 volt peak-to-peak amplitude-modulated carrier wave.

Their literature says: "The Neurophone is really a scalar wave device since the out-of-phase signals from the electrodes mix in the non-linear complexities of the skin dielectric. The signals from each capacitor electrode are 180 degrees out-of-phase. Each signal is transmitted into the complex dielectric of the body where phase cancellation takes place. The net result is a scalar vector. This fact was not known at the time I invented the device. This knowledge came later when we learned that the human nervous system is particularly sensitive to scalar signals.... We established quite early that some totally nerve-deaf people could hear with the device.... We were able to stimulate visual phenomena when the electrodes were placed over the occipital region of the brain. The possibilities of Neurophonic visual stimulation suggests that we may someday be able to use the brain like a computer or television screen."

They also say: "The skin is our largest and most complex organ. In addition to being the first line of defense against infection, the SKIN IS A GIGANTIC LIQUID CRYSTAL BRAIN" (emphasis mine).

"The skin is piezo-electric. When it is vibrated or rubbed, it generates electric signals and scalar

"I'm ready to hand in my book report, Ms. Hotchkiss. Paper or plastic?"

waves.... Many primitive organisms and animals can see and hear with their skin.....The Neurophone is an electronic telepathy machine. Several tests prove that it bypasses the eighth cranial nerve, the hearing nerve, and transmits sound directly to the brain. This means that the Neurophone stimulates perception through a seventh or alternative sense."

The machine works by means of the skin, not by means of bone conduction. Although this material may sound extremely technical to some of you, any Ham radio General license operator should have no trouble understanding it, or even someone who is "into" hi-fi and stereo electronics.

If the "skin is a gigantic liquid crystal brain," then it would follow that, like other crystals, it receives frequency transmissions, radiates information, and is programmable (silica is an example of a crystal, as in Silicon Valley).

For more information, get the book Towards a New Alchemy: The Millennium Science by Nick Begich (who also wrote Angels Don't Play This HAARP). The Neurophone sells for $695.00.

More about Patrick Flanagan is in an article in CONTACT newspaper, July 2, 1996, p. 27, article "Water: The Most Amazing Substance On Earth" (call 1-800-800-5565 for back-issue information).

CYMATICS

Cymatics sounds good (that's a pun) in theory. It is a system of using sound to improve conditions of the body (sort of like that forbidden word "healing"). Ultra-sound is used, in diagnosing pregnancy for instance, with no harm. Since viruses are crystals, and crystal responds to sound vibrations (remember the "Is it real or is it Memorex" ad where sound shatters a glass?), there are great possibilities here. Unfortunately, their machine costs an absurd $5,000. It comes in a briefcase. It fills about half the briefcase, and consists of two coils and some electronics, about as complicated as a computer board or radio, less complicated than a TV. I see no reason it should be so expensive. Nevertheless, they have a lot of good information and they recognize the body as a holographic manifestation. They probably concentrate too much on the purely audible spectrum (there is more than just sound involved). Their manuals are needlessly complicated and verbose in my opinion.

Example: They ask the question, "What is disease?" Their answer is: "It is the oscillatory disequilibrium of cells, originating from external causes. It is more, especially, the struggle between microbic frequency and cellular frequency. For the microbe, unicellular organism, acts also by virtue of its frequency. If microbic frequency is predominant, disease is the result, and when vital resistance is completely overcome, death occurs. If cellular frequency gains the ascendant, restoration of health follows." Now you know. These are exactly the same words Lakhovsky used in The Secret of Life, so I assume Dr. Peter Guy Manners, founder of Cymatics, was quoting him.

They DO have some very good information if you can handle the big words. Example: "The etheric body is a holographic energy field or template that carries information for the growth, development and repair of the physical body. While the genes within the DNA direct the molecular mechanisms which govern the development of individual cells, the etheric body guides the spatial unfoldment of the genetic process."

The machine works by sound vibrations on acupuncture points. They say that the heart muscle is affected by a combination of 105, 160 and 214 cycles per second, while 98, 132 and 234 affect the speech area of the brain.

You can contact them at Bretforton Hall Clinic, Bretforton, Vale of Evesham, Worcestershire, WR11

5JH. Telephone: 01286 830537. Or you can contact a representative in Houston at (713) 528-0087. I have an audio cassette tape of Dr. Peter Guy Manners, and he talks like he writes.

There are no "cures" for anything, other than removing the cause of the problem and giving the body what it needs to come back into balance. But what do you do when you are being irradiated against your will? One way to counter harmful frequencies is to counter them with other frequencies (called phase cancellation or creating a "null"). That removes the cause of your problem. The medical mafia and their cohorts want you to concentrate on magic potions, pills, and incantations, which they just happen to sell at a very high price, while in the meantime they are destroying you with their pills, potions and FREQUENCY POLLUTION.

How do you go about using frequency in healthful ways? One of the quickest, simplest ways is to use frequency-enhanced products. Even plain water can store, and transmit, frequencies (see the above mentioned article on water by Flanagan). Now where might one go to find frequency-enhanced products?

I am running out of space and time (which, by the way, according to The Holographic Universe do not exist—no wonder I have so little), but in the future I hope to write more about the electromagnetic/holographic information that is currently available (if one bothers to dig it out) and how to use it. If anyone wishes to share information with me, please do so. To any doctors who might read this, I warn you, Sirs and Madams, many of you have your noses so deep in the bark that you cannot see even the tree, much less the forest. Remember, this is your life, too, and the lives of your loved ones, as well as your patients. You need to wake up from your programming.

I hope I have given you something to ponder. Somebody had better start doing something more than pondering or complaining, though, for it is almost too late.

Good day.

BORNEO MINE WORTHLESS

Investigations launched into colossal hoax.
From Los Angeles Daily News, 5/6/97, [quoting:]
TORONTO—The search for a jungle El Dorado is over. The search for culprits in an astounding gold mine fraud has begun.
Half a world apart, Canadian and Indonesian au-doctor the Bre-X samples to make them appear Busang was a world-class gold deposit.

Bre-X's president, David Walsh, who launched the Busang project from his Calgary basement while bankrupt in 1993, expressed shock at the evidence of tampering and said his company would conduct its own investigation.

Walsh, 51, sold off some of his Bre-X shares last year, along with other senior company officials, who together reaped more than $56 million in profits.

They have been targeted by at least eight class-

Associated Press

Bre-X had claimed that its mining operation in Borneo was the world's largest deposit of gold.

thorities opened investigations Monday into how Bre-X Minerals, a tiny exploration company from Alberta, managed to convince countless experts and investors that a tract of land in Borneo contained the biggest gold find of the century.

After two years as a stock market superstar, Bre-X was suddenly a pariah after an independent consulting company reported Sunday that the Busang site was worthless. It said thousands of seemingly promising crushed rock core samples collected by Bre-X had been doctored with gold from elsewhere in a scam "without precedent in the history of mining".

Partners in the Busang project promptly jumped ship. The Indonesian government, which held a 10 percent stake, vowed to punish whoever was responsible. New Orleans-based Freeport-McMoRan Copper & Gold—which first cast doubts on Busang's value in late March—said it was withdrawing from its planned partnership with Bre-X.

The company that reported the fraud, Strathcona Mineral Services, did not attempt to fix blame for the tampering, but offered to assist in subsequent investigations. Industry analysts said it seemed clear that some senior Bre-X personnel were involved, but there was no consensus whether the culprits were Canadian-based executives, geologists in the field, or both.

Mining analysts say only a small amount of gold—perhaps a few pounds—would have been enough to action lawsuits in Canada and the United States alleging that Bre-X executives misled shareholders about Busang's potential while selling off some of their own shares.

The Ontario Securities Commission and the Royal Canadian Mounted Police also are investigating aspects of the Bre-X affair.

Trading in Bre-X on the Toronto Stock Exchange, NASDAQ and other markets has been suspended indefinitely. Share prices already had plummeted more than 80 percent March 27, following Freeport-McMoRan's announcement that its preliminary tests showed little trace of gold.

In Indonesia, the investigation may focus on Bre-X's chief geologist, Michael de Guzman, who plunged to his death from a helicopter March 19. Bre-X claims he committed suicide because of despondency over his health, but his family believes he may have been murdered.

De Guzman died en route to a meeting with officials from Freeport-McMoRan, and some analysts believe he may have realized the U.S. company had begun to suspect Busang was a hoax. [End quoting]

I still don't hear or see mention of George Bush and his Barrick Gold gang and their major activity in this scam. I wonder why—don't you??

I've since heard, on TV news, that the shares have plummeted to three cents a share.

UNDERMINING CHRISTIAN ANGER

From THE JUBILEE, March/April, [quoting:]

In an obvious effort to blunt Christian anger at Hollywood's never-ending anti-Christian, pro-Jewish bias, two new organizations have been set up to "keep Hollywood in line". These organizations are promoted as Christian and Jewish and will probably serve the real purpose of keeping Christians in line.

The organizations are the Center for Jewish and Christian Values set up by Rabbi Yecheil Eckstein and the Christian Film and Television Commission set up by Ted Baehr.

The organizations are already serving their real purpose. They have asked Christians not to boycott Disney or other movie studios. This is clearly in response to the highly effective work done by the American Family Association and the Southern Baptist Convention which do advocate boycotts and the targeting of advertisers. [End quoting.]

The good usually end up destroying themselves with the help and the encouragement of the infiltrated evil ones.

EXPERTS OF HATE INSTILL FEAR IN JUDGES

SPLC (Southern Poverty Law Center) stooge plays the role of a "False Patriot" by attending Jubilation '96 undercover

Excerpted from THE JUBILEE, March/April, [quoting:]

Recently discovered video tapes (over 3 hours in length) document a judges' seminar entitled "Impact of the Common Law Court Movement on the Courts".

The seminar was made possible by a grant from the National Center for State Courts in Williamsburg, Virginia—a taxpayer-funded Organization.

Appearing before the Conference of Chief Justices (CCJ) and the Conference of State Court Administrators (CQSCA) (sic), held in Nashville last August, Michael Reynolds, spokesman and senior intelligence analyst for the Southern Poverty Law Center, told the panel of judges he attended the conference that proclaimed, "We Want Our Country Back" as part of his "field work."

The stated purpose of the seminar was to initiate an action plan against the Freemen, aggrieved litigants, patriots, and the common law court movement. The plan was developed by keynote speakers Michael Reynolds and James Reynolds, Chief of Terrorism and Violent Crimes Section, U.S. Department of Justice....

Michael Reynolds appeared to be terrified of the common law movement and relayed this feeling to the judges. He told the judges not to give aggrieved litigants and patriot groups a platform because these groups would use this platform for propaganda purposes....

Other speakers on the panel were Susan Hansen, senior reporter for The American Lawyer; Judge Thomas J. Moyer, Chief Justice Supreme Court of Ohio; Judge Michael D. Zimmerman, Chief Justice Utah Supreme Court; and Judge Jeffery H. Langton and Judge Gregory P. Mohr from Montana.

In addition to the video tape, copies of 3 handouts from the conference became available. Susan Hansen admitted that she had been traveling around the country "to witness first hand the rapid rise of right-wing extremists who, rejecting the established judicial system, have set up their own."

Hansen handed out copies of her article in the May 1996, issue of the American Lawyer titled "A Rule of Their Own", stating, "A new breed of antigovernment rebels are setting up their own renegade court system. Like Montana's 'Freeman', they're meting out instant 'justice' and death sentences against real sheriffs and judges."

Another handout was a memorandum by Harold Nagle regarding "Common Law Courts in the U.S." covering the history, philosophy, lien procedures, summary of specific common law court activities nationwide, and common law court documents from Minnesota.

The third handout was from a panel member who could not attend the conference, Susan P. Koniak. She wrote a paper called, "When Law Risks Madness" about the militias. She mentions in a footnote that she was afraid to do primary research with the common law groups because she is Jewish, and was particularly and personally offended by anti-Semitic beliefs of the Common Law community.

Michael Reynolds appeared to be terrified of the common law movement and relayed this feeling to the judges. He told the judges not to give aggrieved litigants and patriot groups a platform because these groups would use this platform for propaganda purposes.

Using a little propaganda of his own, he told the judges, "You are the enemy to the people and you are the ones they intend to hang if you don't come aboard. What is to prevent one of you or one of the members of your court from being kidnapped and being taken before one of those grand juries, charged, convicted and hanged?" He also said of the patriots: "If you are willing to die for a movement, you are willing to kill for the movement. This is what we are dealing with."

M. Reynolds mentioned further that the leaders of the movement are angry Americans who see no future and believe that their government doesn't care. He talked about LeRoy Schweitzer noting he is "a true believer", and that the money he generated went back into the movement. A fact that seemed to shock even himself as he told this to the State Supreme Court Justices and Court Administrators. He said that the "true believers" will not go away. He pointed to the flag and said that the gold fringe means admiralty law—"I don't recognize your court. You have no jurisdiction over me. I'm a sovereign citizen." There was dead silence after this remark.

Perhaps touching upon the most dangerous aspect of contemporary patriots, M. Reynolds lamented, "They don't need and they don't trust the straight media. They have their own media. They don't need NBC. They don't need any of this. They're already well connected. They deal in a closed system. They have a closed system of media that is great. They cover all the angles. All they do is listen to short wave radio. They go on the Internet. They read those publications [referring to papers like The Jubilee]. It's a self-supporting closed system. They don't need the lies of the New World Order-controlled media Elite or Jewish occupied government."

In a shocking statement that illustrates the patriots' point, Judge Langton declared that the oath of office was a requirement of the Constitution, and that it was an "incident of public office", but not a "contract with the people".

M. Reynolds and the judges expressed great fear that patriot groups will change the system by successfully backing their candidates and getting them elected to office—their interpretation of "we want our country back."

James Reynolds mentioned that there are 94 U.S. Attorney district offices that write monthly reports on every act of domestic terrorism and fraud-type violations, and that 26 districts have an investigation relative to common law activities. He said there is a special task force set up to monitor the Freeman activities.

James Reynolds gave a detailed explanation on how a lien is filed and how to sell liens to foreign governments. He told the judges that 1300 Freeman checks are circulated in almost 50 states and that the losses from the checks are $1.8 million. He said the checks have been successfully negotiated and that there are investigations regarding the Freeman activities in 50 of the 94 districts. He categorized the common law activities into 4 areas; flat-out scams, harassment type actions, threatening activities, and assaultive activities.

It is an alarming testimony of judicial ignorance to realize that Michael Reynolds was able to "brainwash" the judges with his biased ideas against the patriot and common law movement. He strongly recommended that judges do not listen to or work with aggrieved litigants, stating that 98% of the grievances filed are frivolous. [As though he had reviewed each of them.]

Another conference was held in Scottsdale, Arizona in early February 1997, called Dealing with Common Law Courts. Over 40 judges and administrators attended this conference, with Jonathan Mozzochi of the Coalition for Human Dignity in Seattle, Washington, as one of the keynote speakers. The goal of this conference was to "develop recommendations which judges and court administrators can pursue and combat the inappropriate and illegal actions of those associated with the common law court movement." A source said that one of the goals of the conference was to identify ways the courts can take preemptive actions against the common law court movement.

As a member of the National College of Probate Judges I attended a Probate Judge Conference in Monterey, California, last November. There, I learned first-hand judges are more afraid of losing power and control than they are in achieving justice. As Judge Martin E. Kravarik said in the Fall 1996, issue of Court Review, "There's a tidal wave of change, chaos, and violence coming that will last a generation—and you and I must be the finger in the dike. We have to succeed or our nation's courts and communities will be wiped out." Judge Kravarik is the immediate past president of the American Judges Association, and attended the conference in Nashville.

They're planning well to keep us from gaining a just court system.

THE MONETARY SYSTEM CANNOT BE SAVED

From THE NEW FEDERALIST, 1/20/1997, [quoting:]

We have a pattern of similar developments around the world. We are on the verge, as everyone in financial circles at top levels knows and says, we are on the verge of a disintegration of the present world monetary and financial system. In the present form, there is nothing that can prevent that collapse from occurring. Absolutely nothing. There is no trick in the book that can save the present monetary and financial system globally in its present form. Very soon, in addition to all kinds of financial market upheavals and collapses of industries and so forth, we are headed for the greatest financial collapse in all human history. Not years ahead, but in the immediate period ahead. It's already on the way.

The day that the derivatives bubble internationally—which is probably on the order of magnitude of $100 trillion of liabilities, probably, maybe more, because most of it's off-balance sheet—on the day that bubble begins to collapse, you will have, within three to five days, the vaporization of virtually every financial institution on this planet. Not bankruptcy, not "in trouble": vaporization. The door closes, it stops. You take a credit card, you put it in the machine, there's nothing on the other end to connect to.

And if you think about the dependency of people in the United States and in Western Europe on electronic transfers of money, as opposed to actual cash transfers, and realize that not only households depend upon electronic transfers in large degree—credit card debt and similar kinds of things its called here—but also that business firms, such as the local grocery store, depend upon it. What happens on the day that this collapse occurs, and people rely upon certain grocery stores to get their groceries? How many days' supply of groceries for a neighborhood is represented by the stores in that area? What happens when the stock runs out? How does the grocery store secure new supplies? That's the kind of problem that we potentially face.

The question is: Do we wish to survive? Because we will not survive, ourselves, unless we change the policies in a way which addresses our problem as well as solving the problems of Bosnia, and other starving people.

And that's the way to look at it. We're all in a mess, and we cannot turn our back on a neighbor and say, "I don't have time to be a good Samaritan." That's not the issue. If you're not a Good Samaritan, you're not likely to survive yourself. So, you are the guy who's really in a need, whether you know it or not. [End quoting]

The financial markets are scary places today.

EXXON ATTACKS ELECTRIC VEHICLES IN BROCHURE FOR KIDS

From the INTERNET, 4/23/97, [quoting:]

Just in time for Earth Day, Exxon has taken upon itself to combat bias by environmentalists by producing a brochure for school children about the benefits of gas cars over EVs [electric vehicles].

In Texas, officials were concerned that children were getting an "unbalanced" view when it comes to education about pollution. So a couple weeks ago the Texas government asked for help from the polluters themselves.

In a seminar held in Houston, major oil and chemical corporations were invited to offer advice on teaching children about the environment. The companies helped pay for and produce the seminar. Among them [was] Exxon, who presented their brochure on EVs.

The conference was co-sponsored by the Texas Natural Resources Conservation Commission.

This article was on the front page of Tuesday's Washington Post in an article called "Whose Shade of Green? Critics Find Environmental Bias in Schools" [End quoting]

Instead of educating the children about the absolutely clean energy they prevent us from having use of, they propagandize the children to keep using filthy, polluting oil products.

JEWISH PERSECUTION

From THE SPOTLIGHT, 4/28/97, [quoting:]

According to Alan Dershowitz, the Harvard Law School exponent of Jewish "chutzpah", Jews "have become the new WASPs", economically, socially and politically. Serious Semitism is over in America, he believes, but sees a downside in that without such "trouble" Jews could lose their Jewishness. Perhaps Dershowitz fears that untroubled American Jews will prefer to be assimilated Americans, contributing to America rather than [being a] segregated and privileged class. [End quoting]

Can't have the Jews wanting honesty, justice and fairness.

YELLOW PERIL

From THE SPOTLIGHT, 4/28/97, [quoting:]

With all the talk of Red China moving in on the U.S., I recall something that happened in 1978. I went into a coffee shop one morning and three men were talking about the Communist threat to this country. They were discussing the takeover of the U.S. by about the year 2000. I asked [them] if they had anything to make the U.S. surrender and one man produced a paper that had President Jimmy Carter's name on it and the secretary of state's name on it.

It was an agreement between Red China and the U.S. [that] in the event of a rebellion...Red China would provide 5 million soldiers to maintain order in the U.S. —Harley Fisk, Houston Texas [End quoting] Conspiracy? No, there couldn't be such a thing—just "coincidence".

BRITAIN HAS ANSWER TO HILLARY CLINTON

Excerpted from THE DAILY NEWS, Los Angeles, 5/7/97, [quoting:]

Cherie Booth Blair has all the attributes of Hillary Rodham Clinton. A high-flying lawyer, she is strong-minded, stylish and loyal. But she also has another important trait for a political wife: she keeps quiet about politics.

Mrs. Blair was a Labor activist at 16. And if fate—or a parliamentary nomination—had gone the other way, the Blairs could have been celebrating her victory Friday instead of his.

She ran for Parliament and lost in 1983, the year Blair won in Sedgefield, a solidly Labor district in north England.

The Blairs, or so the legend goes, made a pact soon after marrying in 1980: whoever got into Parliament first would be the politician with the big ambitions; the other would be the lawyer with the big earnings.

Pact or not, that is how it worked out. [End quoting]

Again—"coincidence"? They use the same pattern over and over and over again. It works every time.

CLINTON PLAN WOULD ALLOW TOLLS ON INTERSTATE HIGHWAYS

From FAX (datelined UPI) sent by L. Gersic & M. Back nan, 4/29/97, [quoting:]

President Clinton's new transportation budget, if approved by Congress, would allow states to begin placing tolls in the middle of interstate highways.

Administration officials said today they have no specific requests pending from states that want to introduce such tolls, but are nevertheless proposing the change so states have the option.

Deputy Secretary of Transportation Mortimer Downey said the idea for expanding toll authority was "one of the things we heard as we went around the country, that state and local governments are looking for ways to increase their transportation revenues."

States currently can place tolls on bridges and tunnels that are on the interstate system, but not the highway sections themselves.

The President's proposal would allow states the option to introduce such tolls, Downey said, although federal law would continue to require the tolls to be "just and reasonable". [End quoting]

We paid for the roads once and now they are trying to make us pay for them again. They will get away with it unless we give them enough flak!

THE SECRET OATH OF THE 32nd DEGREE MASONS

From THE SEEKERS, Jan./Feb. 1997, [quoting:]
"Brother thou has finished thy instructions as a chief of Freemasonry. Pronounce thy supreme oath, 'I swear to recognize no fatherland but that of the world. I swear to work hard everywhere and always to destroy frontiers, boundaries of all nations, of all industries, no less than of all families. I swear to dedicate my life to the triumph of progress and universal unity and I declare to profess the negation of God and the negation of the soul.' And now Brother, that for thee, fatherland, religion and family have disappeared forever in the immensity of the work of Freemasonry, come to us and share with us the boundless authority, the infinite power that we hold over humanity. The only key to progress and happiness, the only rules of food are thy appetites and instincts."

This is the end product of a succession of oaths taken upon initiation in degrees that become progressively more Satanic or Luciferic. So secret are they that nothing is ever written, but committed to memory only. [End quoting]

Just a bunch of "good buddies" at the top of Freemasonry??!!

HOW STATISTICS LIE

From MIDDLE AMERICAN NEWS, 1/97, [quoting:]

Because of racially-skewed record-keeping of crime statistics under the 1990 Hate Crime Statistics Act, the FBI is reporting distorted pictures of crime in America. According to National Review magazine, the FBI classifies victims of "hate crimes" by race, ethnicity, religion, and sexual orientation, but categorizes perpetrators by race alone. Because most Hispanics are designated as Whites, a Hispanic attack on a Black is counted as a White-on-Black crime. [End quoting]

Figures don't lie, but the ones "managing" the numbers do.

BLOOD SUCKERS

From MIDDLE AMERICAN NEWS, 1/97, [quoting:]

Thanks to the immigration policies of the federal government, a contagious killer disease once confined to Latin America is now appearing in the United States. Chagas' disease, which kills 45,000 people a year, is transmitted by the tick-like triatomine insect, which sucks blood. Victims can be asymptomatic for years, but can infect others through blood transfusions. There is no effective blood screening test. The disease attacks the body's immune system, causing an enlarged heart, colon, or esophagus. Thus far, only a few deaths from Chagas' disease have been reported in the U.S., all linked to blood transfusions. About 370,000 Hispanic immigrants are infected. [End quoting]

Sounds like another World Health Organization (WHO) project.

THEY ALL HAD A GOOD TIME, TOO

From MIDDLE AMERICAN NEWS, 1/97, [quoting:]

At a meeting to figure out how to alleviate hunger in the world, the U.N. Food and Agriculture organization staged the "World Food Summit" in Rome, Italy, at a cost of $10 million. Welfare agency workers in New York said they could have given Thanksgiving Day dinners to 5 million people for that amount. [End quoting]

You don't really think this organization was set up to help the poor—or do you?!

MORALS AND ETHICS CONSIDERED EXPENDABLE

FORGIVING WORDS

We all have suffered through humiliating moments. Here is how one man settled the score for good.

From GUIDEPOSTS, P.O. Box 1479, Carmel, NY 10512, [quoting:]

As I look back over my life, despite thousands of other mistakes and embarrassments, my most humiliating moment was in my seventh-grade class at Immanuel Lutheran School in Mount Vernon, N.Y.

Our teacher had ordered me to remove my shirt and stand at my desk. What bothered him was that I had my shirt collar up—an adolescent style in the '50s. He was going to make an example of me.

I had turned 13 only a few months before. All eyes were on me, and it felt as if they were burning through the back of my neck. I wanted to scream or cry or die. My heart beat so loudly in my ears I was sure others could hear it too.

"Take off your shirt," the teacher ordered.

I promised not to wear my collar up again.

"I've caught you twice already," he said, striding to my desk. "Take the shirt off!"

He had me and he knew it. I lived deep in the south side of town in a tenement on a street where kids often wore motorcycle jackets, greased their hair, talked tough and tried to look unafraid. Immanuel was on the north side, the right side of the tracks. Every night I crossed those tracks to go home to a block where kids wore their collars up.

"Take it off!" the teacher ordered. He blocked any chance I might have to run.

"Please..." I begged.

"Now!" he said. I unbuttoned my shirt and slipped it off, draping it behind me on my chair. My undershirt had holes. Several people giggled. The teacher, who had been standing beside my desk, marched back to the front of the classroom. I stood alone.

I heard my heart beat louder in my ears. For a 13-year-old boy, this was my worst secret. The undershirt with its holes for all to see proved I was poor, a south-sider, unworthy of the north-siders in the classroom.

I wrote about that incident in GUIDEPOSTS several years ago. I received many letters after the article appeared, but there was one that touched me more than all the others. "Dear Walter," it began. "I'm really sorry I made you take off your shirt and embarrassed you in front of the class. I had forgotten all about it until I read your story this morning, and oh, how ashamed I am that I did something like that—especially since I was there to teach you and the other young people love."

My former teacher explained in his letter how when he was a boy he was picked on mercilessly by street toughs, and the bullying had left a painful impression on him.

"Walter, I was at least as afraid of you as you were of me. I thought you were the Dead End Kids and Blackboard Jungle all rolled into one. Who knows how much your inner self saw me as your threatening father, and how much my inner self saw you as the bullies who had terrified me as a child? I'm so sorry things weren't different, and I know that as the adult it was up to me to set the example."

To help me understand his state of mind at the time he wrote about terrible hardships that he, his wife and family had endured. And he expressed a wish: "I hope and pray that you forgive me."

This is the letter I wrote back:

"Your letter touched me deeply. It took great courage to write and to share so much of yourself. Your sensitive words bring my life full circle in the most beautiful way possible. The greatest risk of all is to be vulnerable and to allow others to see us as we really are. Well, you've taken the greatest of risks and I could not be more moved.

"The truth is, you were one of several people I hated when I was a child, and I added quite a few more names to my list as I became an adult. Painfully, I can remember times when my anger and hatred nearly consumed me. Not anymore. I forgave you years ago. I even forgave me.

"What I understand today is you tried your best with all you had. I'm sure you blossomed in the classroom over the years and undoubtedly, at a later time would have found a child like me a little easier to handle—but you should also recognize that you did teach me. You are my teacher. Just today you taught me again, about the extraordinary power of forgiveness.

"I was so moved by your candor and kindness that I called my friend Norman Vincent Peale, explained how you had seen the article in GUIDEPOSTS, and I read your letter to him

"Tell him the truth," Norman advised me.

"What's that?" I asked.

"That you love him."

"I do."

As you might expect, my former teacher wrote back—and, of course, Norman Vincent Peale wrote too: "This incident will ever be remembered by me as one of the most inspiring I have known." [End quoting]

Never underestimate the power of an apology and forgiveness—no matter what the circumstances. Life is a classroom for experiences and lessons. Why hate the teacher whom you drew to you, on a higher level of consciousness, to play their role in assisting you to have the lessons and experiences you need?

Sigmund Freud: Antichrist Devil

5/10/97 EUSTACE MULLINS

Few Americans realize that the principal tool of Communist penetration in the United States is the pseudo-science of psychotherapy. Not only have many patriots who opposed Communist subversion been imprisoned for life without trial, but many others have been rendered helpless, their fortunes seized, and their exposures of Communist treachery discredited by the accusation of "mental illness". In 1848, Karl Marx issued his Communist Manifesto, detailing the Jewish plans for subduing the gentile, but it was not until 1896 that the most workable system to achieve this goal, "psychoanalysis", was unveiled by his fellow-Jew Sigmund Freud.

No one suspected at the time that Freud (pronounced Fraud) had invented the indispensable tool for the biological parasite in his quest to gain absolute control over the life of the gentile host. Psychoanalysis became the instrument which the Jew used to probe the deepest recesses of the mind of the host, thereby learning his best secrets, as well as the hidden fears and doubts which could be exploited by a clever enemy in order to become his master.

Beginning his career as a medical student, Freud concentrated on the study of the nervous system, obtaining a degree in neuropathology. Up to this point, his education had been strictly scientific, conducted according to methodical Teutonic principles of study in the Vienna Medical School. He now abandoned these principles. For the rest of his life, he would be the typical Jewish adventurer, seeking one path after the other until he hit upon the one which would lead him to fame, riches and, more important than either of these to the Jew, power over the gentile host.

For several years, Freud experimented with "cocaine therapy" or, as a policeman might put it, drug peddling. The only outcome of this was that he himself became a convert, and continued to use cocaine throughout his life. Even today, cocaine is the favored drug of the wealthy and influential Jews in New York and Hollywood who control the minds of the American people through television and the news media. They are loyal to cocaine solely because it was the drug of their master, Sigmund Freud.

After Freud discovered that putting his patients on cocaine brought him no sudden wealth or prominence, he began to cast about for some quicker road to fortune. He seemed to have found it when he began to practice hypnosis on his patients. For more than a century, hypnosis had been the favorite practice of Europe's most notorious charlatans, Mesmer, Cagliostro, and Charcot. Freud now became the legitimate heir of these mountebanks. But how did he escape being branded by their well deserved reputations as necromancers and frauds? Early in his use of hypnosis, he made the fortunate discovery that it was no longer necessary to put his patients "under", or to subject them to hypnosis in order to get them to reveal their innermost secrets. He had only to establish a suitable atmosphere of confidence and trust, and they would begin to talk about themselves. As Thomas Szasz, the famed critic of this pseudo-science, revealed in his book, THE MYTH OF PSYCHOTHERAPY, "Psychotherapy is merely talking."

Freud's reputation as the great inventor of an entire new science rests solely on his discovery that he could get his patients to talk about themselves without the use of hypnosis. Nevertheless, much of the mumbo-jumbo of psychotherapy was invented in order to create a hypnotic atmosphere. Freud's discovery freed him from the stigma of the charlatans of hypnosis, and put a great distance between him and his discredited predecessors such as Mesmer, the father of Mesmerism. Nevertheless, the practice of psychoanalysis depends heavily on creating and maintaining a pseudo-hypnotic atmosphere in the psychiatrist's office. The patient must be persuaded to relax, to place himself completely in the power of the psychiatrist, and to reveal his innermost self. Thus the pseudoscience of psychotherapy functions only because it is pseudo-hypnosis. No wonder that Freud is pronounced Fraud!

Once he had broken away from the unsavory reputation of his predecessors, and had put the stigma of charlatanism behind him, Fraud began to build an elaborate facade of intellectual supports for his new "science" of psychotherapy. This proved to be a difficult task, for, as Szasz has pointed out, psychotherapy is merely talk. It would not be easy to erect a vast superstructure of scientific procedures around the basic principle of a patient lying on a couch and chatting about himself to a listening doctor. Nevertheless, Freud, exhibiting all of the talent of his race for bewildering and misleading the gentile host, proceeded to do just that. He devised a "system" based upon incorrect and often obscene theories, using these theories to attack the basis of all family life by such developments as the "Oedipus complex".

Not only has an "Oedipus complex" never existed, but Freud either completely misunderstood or more likely, purposely misrepresented, the entire basis of this "complex". He based it upon an ancient Greek myth, the story of Oedipus. Although he first advanced the theory of the Oedipus complex in 1910, it was not until 1920 that he published three essays which purported to establish the foundations for this theory, the projection of "infantile sexuality".

It has been said that the Oedipus complex is the nuclear complex of the neuroses and constitutes the most important part of their content, because this complex, appearing early in life, is the basis for all later neuroses. It represents the peak of infantile sexuality, which Freud claims appears in the first year of infancy, and forever after molds the nervous structure of the adult. In fact, there is not the slightest evidence that "infantile sexuality" reaches its peak in the first year of life, or that there is even such a phenomenon as infantile sexuality. Of course, this did not bother Freud. If there were no such thing as infantile sexuality, he would invent it. He built the Oedipus complex by tacking his pet sexual obsessions onto the myth of an ancient Greek King, Laius of Thebes. When Laius consulted the Delphic Oracle to divine his future, he was told that a child born to him and his wife Jocasta would become his murderer. A son, Oedipus, was born to him, and he had the child set out to die on Mt. Cithaeron. Years later, Oedipus, who had been rescued and brought up by a kindly shepherd who found him lying there, met Laius on a narrow path. After a quarrel as to who had the right of way, they fought, and Oedipus killed him. He continued on to the city of Thebes, where he met Laius' widow, Jocasta, who was also his mother, and married her. The shepherd then appeared, and revealed the true origin of Oedipus, who was overcome by remorse. He blinded himself, while Jocasta hanged herself. This legend, typical of its overtones of traditional Greek tragedy, had deep implications that we must become aware of our identity if we are to lead satisfactory lives, but Freud showed no understanding of this. Instead, he completely distorted the legend by claiming that every male child, even in the first year of infancy, as it writhes in torments of infantile sexuality, is bedeviled by jealousy of the father, whom the child wants to kill so that he can have sex with his mother. Only a Jew could bring to a traditional myth such perversion and such distortion. As Szasz points out, the Freudian elements, jealousy of the father and the desire to have intercourse with the mother, are completely lacking in the original myth. Donald Wormell, writing in the Encyclopaedia Britannica, notes that the Freudian interpretation has no similarity to the classical Greek story, because Oedipus as an infant had no jealousy of his father, whom he did not know, or any desire to have intercourse with his mother, whom he did not know.

Despite these inconsistencies, Freud claimed that much of the neurosis of the twentieth century was caused by the Oedipus complex. The frustration of the infant, being unable either to kill the father or to have sex with the mother, became "repressed", and was thus mentally affected for the rest of his life. This tissue of distortions, falsities, and perversions became the cornerstone of Freud's entire "science" of psychotherapy. Freud's reputation as "the father of psychoanalysis" rests upon the Oedipus complex.

The second foundation of the Freudian system is Freud's "theory of repressed homosexuality". Early in the course of his hypnotic treatment of patients, Freud had encountered a number of wealthy and dissolute aristocrats who, wearying of the usual vices of drug addiction, gambling and alcoholism, had taken up the practice of sexual perversion. After "treating" a number of these perverts, whose real problem was not so much their "homosexuality" as their boredom and their ability to spend as much money as they wished to purchase partners for their perverted acts, Freud decided that "homosexual impulses" were universal among men. Why, then, did not most men engage in homosexual acts? Freud had a ready answer for this: They "repressed" their homosexual impulses.

Now that he had created the problem, Freud had only to erect a "scientific" foundation for it. This proved to be a simple task for one of his racial duplicity and lack of morals. He appropriated the greatest figure of Western culture, Leonardo da Vinci, to carry the banner of his new theory. Freud decided that Leonardo da Vinci must have been a homosexual. Da Vinci had once been brought before a court on a charge of homosexuality, and had been acquitted. No other evidence existed that he had been a homosexual, and it had been several centuries since anyone had been around who could testify about it one way or the other. But Freud, the Jewish mountebank, found this important in order to denigrate da Vinci because he was a great non-Jewish artist.

After a notable lack of success in his efforts to find any basis for his theory that da Vinci had been a homosexual, Freud finally came upon a rather dubious recording of a faint childhood memory, in which Leonardo da Vinci wrote that a vulture came down to his cradle and struck him in the mouth with his tail. Eureka! Freud had found what he had been looking for. He immediately interpreted this childhood memory, or dream, as an illustration of Leonardo's "passive homosexuality". Flimsy though this basis was, it became the cornerstone of Freud's theory of universal repressed homosexuality among men. Unfortunately, as Freud's disciples have desperately sought to conceal for many years, Thomas Szasz reveals that Freud's entire theory was wrong because of his defective scholarship. He had based his theory on a German text in which the translator had incorrectly translated Leonardo's word for "toy kite" as a "vulture". The tail of a toy kite had dragged across Leonardo's cradle and brushed him. Freud, relying upon the wrong translation of the kite as a vulture, devised a complicated sexual theory by which Leonardo's memory of the bird's tail touching his mouth had been the conscious fulfillment of his subconscious homosexual desires!

From a wrong understanding, Freud now erected a vast superstructure of Leonardo's entire art and, subsequently, the art of the Western nations being created from his homosexual nature. In so doing, Freud unleashed a terrible weapon against Western civilization. Single-handedly, he created the enormous problem of the "gay" communities which plague America today. By identifying the greatest artist of Western culture as a homosexual, Freud gave an aura of respectability to a sexual deviation. By his claim that all men have "repressed" homosexual desires, he unleashed a torrent of sexual acts and a great blow against established family life. Young men who not only are searching for a career but who also have doubts about their sexual identity have only to abandon themselves to Freud's theories, and they can, simultaneously release all their "sexual repressions", thus avoiding the danger of terrible neuroses, but they can become great artists as well.

Only a Jew could have unleashed such a poisonous theory on the gentile community to further confuse and destroy it. Despite Freud's theories, scientists today have begun to doubt that there really is such a thing as a "homosexual impulse". Instead, they lean to the finding that there are sexual impulses which, in the absence of a member of the opposite sex, tend to turn to a member of the same sex, as in prison, the army or private schools. Such a finding, of course, is devastating to the "gay" community, which has sought to turn perverse impulses into a modern religion.

We could be accused of oversimplification if we sought to condemn the entire "science" of psychotherapy because its two principal foundations, Freud's theory of repressed homosexuality and the Oedipus complex, have been shown to be little more than the products of his cocaine-stimulated imagination. Realizing from the outset that Freud's theories might be subject to serious challenge, later practitioners of psychotherapy have sought to erect an even more complex superstructure of psychological theories to bolster their basic technique of "talk". In this campaign, they have produced millions of words, but not a single workable theory. As Thomas Szasz points out:

"Psychotherapy is secular ethics. It is the religion of the formally irreligious—with its language which is not Latin but medical jargon; with its codes of conduct, which are not ethical but legalistic; and with its theology, which is not Christianity, but positivism."

For several years, before fixing upon his theories of psychotherapy, Freud had experimented with various other "treatments", such as electrotherapy, baths and massages. The German Dr. Wilhelm Erb (1840-1921), in his Handbuch der Elektrotherapie, described his technique for applying electric shock to the genitals, which later became a favorite form of torture in Latin America. Erb "assumed" that the victims on whom he practiced this technique had "neurosis". During World War I, the most notorious practitioner of electric shocks was Dr. Julius Wagner-Jauregg, professor of psychiatry at the Vienna Medical School and a former teacher of Freud. Wagner-Jauregg was fond of using heavy doses of electric shock on soldiers who suffered nervous breakdowns during artillery barrages in combat zones. Despite heavy criticism, Wagner-Jauregg continued to use electric shock on soldiers throughout the war. Freud defended him against his critics, calling the soldiers "malingersers".

In 1920, the Austrian War Ministry, in response to the public outcry against Wagner-Jauregg, conducted a lengthy investigation of his mistreatment of soldier patients. Freud wrote a long memorandum defending Wagner-Jauregg's torture technique of electrotherapy. "I know," wrote Freud in Wagner-Jauregg's defense, "that the motivating force in his treatment of patients is his humaneness". This was a typical Jew view of humaneness.

Electrotherapy was later replaced by chemotherapy, although Freud continued to use some electrotherapy on his patients. He explained it as "pretense treatment", which he used to "keep in touch" with his patients. Throughout his career, Freud was obsessed by sexual imaginings, which ranged from the ludicrous to the obscene. In one of his letters to Ludwig Binswanger, he wrote: "I have always lived on the ground floor in the basement of the building... I already found one for religion when I stumbled on the category 'neurosis of mankind'." One of his last writings (July 12, 1938) contained this "gem": "As a substitute for penis-envy, identification with the clitoris; neatest expression of inferiority, source of all inhibitions."

During the erecting of his psychotherapy empire, Freud was on the lookout for a suitable heir apparent. At one time he had selected a young non-Jewish doctor, Jung, after quarreling with his Jewish disciples. Jung spent much time with him, but found himself unable to accept Freud's wild theories, and he finally dismissed Freud's work as "too Jewish".

IN MEMORIES, DREAMS AND REFLECTIONS, Jung wrote (p.149):

"Above all, Freud's attitude towards the spirit seems to me highly questionable. Wherever in a person or in a work of art, an expression of spirituality (in the intellectual, not the supernatural senses) came to light, he suspected it, and insinuated that it was repressed sexuality."

It took Jung several years to realize that the earth-bound Jew was unable to comprehend anything spiritual, having to interpret it in the grossest physical sense, and he finally parted company with him.

It was Thomas Szasz, in THE MYTH OF PSYCHOTHERAPY, who writes most revealingly of Freud's creation of "the science of psychotherapy" as an instrument of the Jew to be used to gain power over the gentiles. Szasz titled his chapter, "Sigmund Freud, the Jewish Avenger" (editor's note: Mr. Mullins uses the word "gentile" meaning all non-Jews, not just Christians).

Freud himself was born a Jew, was given the Jewish name of Schlomo after his grandfather, a rabbi, and remained a Jew.

Szasz further comments:

"The inconsistency between Freud's passionate anti-religious tirades and his profound commitment to Jewishness significantly highlights an important aspect of Freud's personality and predilections, namely, his anti-gentilism. The popular image of Freud as an enlightened, emancipated irreligious person who, with the aid of psychoanalysis, 'discovered' that religion is a mental illness is pure fiction."

Szasz then defines the Freudian psyche permanently by writing: "Freud was throughout his life, a proud, chauvinistic, even vengeful Jew." Thus Freud's famed "irreligiousness" was merely his anti-Christian, anti-gentile bias. In his "science" of psychoanalysis, Freud focused the hatred of centuries which the biological parasite had cultivated against the host, a hatred irreconcilably rooted in the biological situation of the parasite that must live off the host, and that can have no existence without this relationship. Certainly the State of Israel typifies this relationship, as the entire budget of Israel is built on "loans", "grants", "gifts", and the sale of worthless Israeli bonds.

David Bakan writes of Freud's Jewishness:

"Freud believed that anti-Semitism was practically ubiquitous in either latent or manifest form; the broad masses of England were anti-Semitic 'as everywhere'; he refused to accept royalties of Hebrew and Yiddish translations of his works; he was sympathetic to Zionism from the first days of the movement and was acquainted with and respected Herzl. (Editor's note: Herzl died of syphilis, his entire dream of a Jewish empire in Palestine being the product of the decaying brain of a Jew in the last and most violent stages of paresis). Freud's son was a member of the Kadimah, a Zionist organization, and Freud himself was an honorary member of it."

Szasz further notes:

"In addition, Freud displayed his devotion to Judaism in the letters he wrote, the friends and enemies he made, and, last but not least, in his anti-gentilism. His interpretations of Western civilization, Oedipus was not a king, but a complex; Leonardo was not a heroic painter but a homosexual pervert."

The final statement of Szasz on Freud's racial bias is the most important (p.146). "One of Freud's most powerful motives in his life was the desire to inflict vengeance on Christ." At last we get to the meat of the matter! Psychoanalysis is the creation of a hate-filled Jew whose life was devoted to vengeance against Christ. Could any more definitive analysis of the satanic origins of "the science of psychotherapy" be made?

The sick theories of this modern anti-Christ did not long remain theories. They were quickly put to use by the Jews, not only in treating the "mentally ill", but in the techniques of attaining and holding political power. The psychiatrists, interviewing the patients, most of them from wealthy and influential gentile families, learned trade secrets and political information invaluable to the Jewish dreams of enslaving the gentiles. These secrets were quickly turned to advantage in their war against the Christians. They spawned a host of "psychiatrists" that rapidly infested all of the gentile nations, and then turned up as the directors of mental institutions.

The hapless patient who revealed an attitude critical of the Jews, or who was even suspected of such thoughts, was treated mercilessly. The mental institutions provided the Jews with the ideal laboratory for their wildest dreams of power over the non Jews. They now had an endless supply of victims, completely helpless, whose screams would never be heard by the outside world. What tortures, what murders, have gone on in these institutions in the fifty years since the Freudians took over their operations can only be imagined. Most of the victims will never talk—they are dead. The survivors are “insane”; their stories of their sufferings at the hands of the Jews are merely the products of disordered minds.

destroy, they

Nevertheless, we do know that not even the highest government officials have been immune from Freudian “correction” when they strayed from Jewish programs. We have only to remember that when our first Secretary of Defense, James Forrestal, hesitated to commit our entire military power to the support of the State of Israel, within a few hours he suffered a “breakdown”. He was taken to Bethesda Naval Hospital and soon went out the window to his death. In April 1936, Congressman Marion Zioncheck, denounced J. Edgar Hoover on the floor of Congress. Already known as a “maverick”, Zioncheck had gone too far. Soon afterwards, he was taken under mysterious circumstances to a Washington, D.C., mental hospital, St. Elizabeth's (where the patriot Ezra Pound was held as a political prisoner for thirteen years without trial, and then released because of pressure from his friends). Zioncheck was kept incommunicado at St. Elizabeth's, and treated by several of the nation's leading psychiatrists. After several attempts to escape, he was released in what his friends described as a “drugged, zombie-like condition”. He returned to Seattle, and soon fell to his death from the fifth floor of the Arctic Building. The verdict was suicide, but most people interviewed in Seattle believed he had been pushed. He was succeeded by Warren G. Magnuson, who enjoyed a long political career in Washington, and who was very careful not to offend the Jews.

Shortly after the Crash of 1929, when many gentiles had been impoverished by Jewish money manipulation, the psychiatrists began to show their hands as the new masters. In May, 1930, an International Congress on Mental Hygiene was held in Washington, D.C. Four thousand psychiatrists from fifty-three countries were welcomed by the President of the United States, Herbert Hoover. The new masters drafted a charter stating that they alone had the knowledge to “understand and control human behavior... Psychiatry must now decide what is to be the immediate future of the human race.”

The new pronouncement also boasted that “Psychiatrists alone possess the superior intelligence and knowledge to alter materially and permanently human behaviors.” Many of the bureaucrats got the message, and promptly signed up for lengthy series of “analysis”. Soon afterwards, a number of Communist cells were established in the government bureaus, chief among them the Harold Ware cell. Ware was merely the office boy for Felix Frankfurter, who masterminded this Communist group, placing Communist agents high in the official levels of every government department in Washington.

One of the principal speakers at the Washington Congress of Psychiatrists was Dr. Donald A. Nicholson, a psychiatrist from Seattle who was the president of the Washington State Medical Assn. Nicholson was later to examine Congressman Zioncheck shortly before his “suicide”. He committed thousands of Americans to mental hospitals, all of them on his unsupported testimony that they were “insane”. Few of them ever saw freedom again. His most famous victim was the great Hollywood actress Frances Farmer. Frances who? A curtain of silence has been rung down on one of America's greatest talents. When she flashed across the Hollywood screen, she became known as “the American Garbo”. Today her movies are never shown on television or in the theatres. Those Hollywood figures who knew her refuse to mention her name. They are terrified that they, too, might have to endure the sufferings visited on her. What happened to Frances Farmer? A reporter spent five years investigating her story, which he recently published, Shadowland.

As a beautiful young woman in Seattle, Washington, Frances Farmer, was known as a brilliant, outspoken person. She won a newspaper essay contest for a free trip to Russia. Despite warnings from her mother and her friends, she insisted on taking the trip. When she returned, the reporters tried to get her either to praise or condemn the Communist experiment, but she replied, quite honestly, that in such a brief trip she had not seen enough to make a decision. The Communists decided that this meant she was really sympathetic; but did not want to declare herself. Soon afterwards, she was “discovered” by talent scouts, and went to Hollywood. Her radiant beauty proved to be very photogenic, and her movies were an immediate sensation. Because of her famous trip to Russia, she was supposed to be a rabid Communist sympathizer, although she had said or done nothing to support such a theory. The large community of Jewish Communists in Hollywood, who completely controlled the making and distribution of movies, entertained her and raved about her beauty. She was then asked to become a Communist courier. She indignantly refused, being an extremely proud and intelligent White girl who had no interest in Communism. The Hollywood Jews were infuriated and frightened by Frances Farmer's refusal. They had supposed she was one of them, and had taken her into their confidence. Now she knew the identity of every prominent Communist in Hollywood. At a secret conference, they resolved that she must be disposed of. An “accident” to such a prominent star would be too risky. The Jews decided that “psychoanalysis” was the answer to their dilemma. She would be railroaded to an insane asylum. Any accusations she might make would then be ignored.

At the very height of her fame, while everyone was predicting she would win an Academy Award, Frances Farmer was invited to a party at the home of a Jewish producer. She was given a drug during this party. When she drove away, she was soon stopped by a policeman, who claimed she had committed a minor traffic violation. Instead of giving her a ticket, he immediately took her before a judge, although it was late at night. The judge claimed that she was “confused”, and in what could only have been a prearranged plan, he committed her to a mental asylum. Reporters made a complete reversal of their usual practice when a movie star gets into trouble. Instead of headlining Frances Farmer's predicament, they were told not to write about it! From that day on, her name was rarely mentioned in the press.

For six years, Frances Farmer was forced to endure horrors which, even without the drugs and shock treatments which she was given on a daily basis, would have destroyed anyone's mind. After a few days in a California mental hospital, she was transferred to a state mental hospital, Steilacoom, near Seattle, Washington, ostensibly so that her mother could visit her, but actually to remove her from any contact with anyone in Hollywood. Many years later, a reporter, William Arnold, spent five years tracing the record of Frances Farmer during her years in Steilacoom. He discovered that the orderlies at Steilacoom were mostly convict trustees from McNeill Island Penitentiary on the other side of Puget Sound. He also discovered that Steilacoom was known as “the brothel of Ft. Lewis”. Each evening, drunken soldiers from Ft. Lewis paid the convicts five dollars each and were admitted to certain wards. Here the convicts held down the women chosen by the soldiers, who then took their will. Arnold found inmates who could recall seeing Frances Farmer, easily the most beautiful and desirable of the inmates, being held down by the convicts while she was being gang-raped by the drunken soldiers. Even the most diseased Jewish mind has never claimed that such horrors went on in the German concentration camps as were nightly enacted at Steilacoom.

To nullify any complaints from Frances Farmer, the orderlies regularly gave her bad reports, claiming that she was “uncooperative”. Since she was being forcibly held down during these outrages, her cooperation or lack of it does not seem to have presented any problem, but the Jewish doctors were eager to get this diagnosis. The entry of “uncooperative” by the name of any patient in a mental institution means that any and every possible form of drugs, “treatment” and other punishment is necessary. Frances Farmer was given massive doses of electric shock treatment every week. She was forced to endure medieval form of hydrotherapy by which she was thrown into a tub of ice water for periods of six to eight hours. During the agony of these ordeals, she chewed her lips to pieces. After four months of “treatment”, her spirit had been broken. She appeared before the psychiatrists and agreed to “cooperate”. A careful Dr. Nicholson immediately held a press conference to display his latest triumph. In a typical example of Communist “selficism” and “confession”, Frances Farmer gave her performance. “I was rude and disrespectful,” she told the reporters. “I was very, very sick.”

“I think this case demonstrates how successfully antisocial behavior can be modified,” stated Dr. Nicholson. “Three months ago, this woman was mentally unresponsive, and today she is being returned to her family completely cured. This marks a significant victory for the mental hygiene movement in Washington.”

Because of her fame as a movie star, Frances Farmer was chosen to be publicly exhibited as an example of the triumph of Freudian theories. The power of the psychiatrists had mushroomed during the war, as psychiatrists were stationed with each unit, just as Communists commissars were placed in each combat unit of the Red Army to identify and arrest any dissenters. As the sole victors of World War II, the Jews rapidly extended the influence of psychotherapy over every aspect of American life. In 1946, Harry Truman signed the National Mental Health Act, which brought “mental health” organizations into almost every community in America. These organizations quickly became local outposts of the State of Israel, seeking out and punishing those Americans who were afflicted with “the running sores of anti-Semitism”, as the Jewish Gestapo group, the Anti-Defamation League, characterized anyone who criticized the subversion of the American government by the State of Israel.

No sooner had Dr. Nicholson released Frances Farmer than he received anxious messages. The news that their victim was no longer imprisoned terrified the Hollywood Communists. Dr. Nicholson was instructed to seize her and return her to Steilacoom. Her freedom had lasted less than two weeks. She was now to endure six years of concentrated treatment intended for only one purpose: To destroy her mind so that she would never be able to identify the Hollywood Communists. She was immediately put back on the weekly schedule of shock treatments. This medical boon to mankind came about when two Italians watched the convulsions of a pig after it had been accidentally electrocuted. At first they were merely amused; but they suddenly realized it would be great sport to try this technique on human beings, and electroconvulsive shock treatment was born. The technique called for sending 70 to 130 volts of electricity through the temples of the victim for a tenth of a second. This destroys large numbers of brain cells, and causes years of headaches, permanent loss of memory, and other unpleasant side effects. The benefits of this treatment, as years of experimentation on many thousands of patients has proved beyond all question, are nonexistent. For this reason, electric shock treatments have been outlawed in most European countries for many years. The United States, being firmly in the grip of the Jews, is the only developed nation which still practices this form of barbarism.

Besides enduring the weekly shock treatments, Frances Farmer, who had been consigned back to Steilacoom at a court hearing at which she was not even present, now became the victim of a new operation, the CIA LSD experiments. It was recently revealed that she was the first person chosen to receive the LSD dosages. A Bronx Jew, Dr. Sidney Gottlieb, joined the CIA to direct the LSD program, which he personally operated from 1951-1956. Through Teddy Kollek, a Jewish terrorist who was a close friend of Allen Dulles, Gottlieb obtained Dulles' direct approval of the entire scheme. Kollek, presently mayor of Jerusalem, was at that time in this country illegally to raise money for the Jewish terrorist organization, Haganah. He lived in Manhattan in a rent-free apartment, above the Copacabana night club, provided by its Jewish owners. Kollek was the only non-official person invited to Allen Dulles' home for parties, and at one of these gatherings, he was introduced to Jim Angleton, later director of Special Operations for the CIA, who became a "Zionist" director of the CIA. Through this alliance, CIA funds were used to pay the entire budget of the Israeli Intelligence Service, while CIA agents all over the world were instructed that Israeli interests came first. They were directed to turn over all information on Arab economic and military operations to the Jews. With this inside information, which the Arabs themselves furnished to the CIA under an agreement set up by Allen Dulles, the Israelis were able to win each confrontation with the Arabs. The CIA also paid King Hussein one million dollars a year for his private spending on blondes, airplanes and fast cars, as his country, Jordan, was penniless. In return, Hussein furnished the CIA complete information on all conferences of the Arab leaders. It was in retaliation for these CIA operations that the Arabs formed the OPEC alliance and raised the price of their oil. Had we not gone out of our way to make enemies of the Arabs, we would still enjoy low prices for oil. Every dollar we spend at the gas pumps is a fine which we pay for helping the Israelis, but your friendly local newspaper is not going to give you this information.

Richard Helms now became Gottlieb's immediate superior in the LSD program. Because this program severely compromised the highest officials of the United States, Helms was later able to have himself appointed Dulles' successor as Director of the CIA. When he faced dismissal and perjury charges, the personal file of this program enabled him to resign without punishment and to become Ambassador to Iran.

On April 3, 1953, Helms sent a memo to Dulles, requesting "the covert use of chemical and biological materials" to develop controls over possible agents, foreign officials and other targets of CIA infiltration. In Nov. 1953, Dr. Gottlieb entertained a group of gentle scientists from the Army Chemical Corps, Special Operations Division, Ft. Detrick, MD. He secretly gave them large doses of LSD in their drinks. One of the scientists, Frank Olson, leaped to his death after taking the dose. Twenty-five years later, his widow, learning of the true circumstances of his death, sued the government and obtained a three-million-dollar settlement.

Gottlieb also hired George White, a former narcotics agent, to operate a house of prostitution on Telegraph Hill in San Francisco. CIA officials and other government personages watched the activities through one-way glass and photographed the more unusual scenes. White's assistant in this operation was one Ike Feldman. This operation proved so successful that a second house was opened in Marin County, Calif., and a third in New York City. When Gottlieb retired in 1973, he had most memoranda concerning his activities destroyed. He had spent more than fifty million dollars without a trace.

For more than a year, Frances Farmer received daily doses of LSD, as well as the weekly shock treatments. Despite this cruel regimen, her tormentors were dismayed to find that her brain had not been destroyed. There remained one final horror for her, a treatment which was guaranteed to destroy the brain of anyone. This was prefrontal lobotomy, which in every case had totally destroyed the rational capacity of its victims.

A Portuguese doctor, Edgar Muniz, developed this technique for "curing mental illness" in 1935. For this contribution to human well-being, he received the Nobel Prize in 1949. Hundreds of thousands of lobotomies were performed in Europe and the United States. Dr. Walter Freeman, head of the Dept. of Neurology at Georgetown University, became an enthusiastic advocate of prefrontal lobotomy after studying with Muniz. He refined Muniz' technique by inserting an ice-pick type of instrument under the eyelid into the brain, and severing the nerve from the cortex to the thalamus which directed rational thought. This turned the human victim into a vegetable. Presto! No more anger, no more protest. Instead, there was meek compliance with any order. Deciding it might be more prudent to practice his technique away from Washington, Dr. Freeman went to Spencer State Hospital at Spencer, W. Va. The Jewish doctors at this institution lined up thirty-five women patients, and in a brilliant display of virtuosity, he lobotomized them one after the other.

Learning of this triumph, the CIA asked him to go to Steilacoom to lobotomize Frances Farmer. As a cover, he first lobotomized twelve other women patients. Frances Farmer was then brought in, and told that the doctor wished to examine her. To attendants seized her by the arms, and Dr. Freeman quickly inserted the ice pick into her brain. Two seconds later, Frances Farmer had become a human vegetable, her memory destroyed and her brain barely functioning, she was no longer a threat to the Hollywood Communist conspirators.

A few months later, satisfied that her memory was gone, the CIA authorized Dr. Nicholson to release Frances Farmer. Her years of horror were over. On March 23, 1950, she left Steilacoom. She was only thirty-six years old. Despite her ordeal, some traces of her former beauty remained, but when she tried to resume her acting career, she found she could not remember lines or follow directions. She died alone and in poverty in Indianapolis a few years later. Yet, even today, those who ordered her torture and destruction still fear the mention of her name. Not only does the blackout of her films remain in effect, but William Arnold found no one in Hollywood willing to be quoted about her fate.

We know the fate of Frank Olson and Frances Farmer only because those dedicated to their memories spent years fighting to uncover their tragic stories. We do not know the fate of many thousands of other victims of the Jewish pseudo-science of psychotherapy, because no one mourns them or remembers their names. They, too, were done to death by drug overdoses, shock treatments, or the Freeman ice-pick treatment. We must act at once to save thousands of other potential victims from the Jewish terrorists. We must outlaw electric shock treatments as humane nations have done; we must outlaw the practice of pseudo-therapy such as psychoanalysis, ice-pick in the brain, and indiscriminate use of LSD and other drugs in the mental institutions. Unless we act quickly, thousands more will die, the victims of Jewish sadism and Freud's poisonous legacy. This Jew converted the shameless charlatanism of a few eighteenth-century necromancers into a worldwide system for "treating the mentally ill", solely because of his anti-gentilism and his hatred of Christ. Freud gave the Jews their most powerful weapon against us. We must stop them now.

SHADOWLAND: THE SEARCH FOR FRANCES FARMER—by William Arnold, McGraw Hill, New York City, N.Y. 1978.

"SEX, DRUGS, AND THE CIA", Saturday Review, Feb. 3, 1979.

One single columnist spoke up in her behalf. That was John Rosenfield, at the time of her initial arrest, [quoting:]

WHAT HAPPENED TO FRANCES FARMER SHOULDN'T HAVE HAPPENED AT ALL!

Just when the movie industry is winning the public's admiration, Hollywood breaks out in a rash of petty scandals. It is not a tribute to a part of the press that some of these episodes have been played well beyond their merits as news.

It was the lesser of sagacity that the industry permitted some of these affairs to get out of hand. The Frances Farmer Incident should never have happened. This unusually gifted actress was no threat against law and order or the public safety. Something that began as merely a traffic reprimand grew into a case of personal violence, a serious charge and a jail sentence.

And all because a sensitive high-strung girl was on the verge of a nervous breakdown.

Miss Farmer, who is no prodigy of emotional stability or sound business management, needed a lawyer one unhappy night last winter. A helping hand might have extradited her immediately from nothing more than a traffic violation. The terrible truth is that she stood alone, and lost. [End quoting]

Rosenfield's was the only note of compassion. The rest of the press coverage followed the lethal lead of Lolly Parsons, who snickered: "Hollywood Cinderella Girl has gone back to the ashes on a liquor-slicked highway".

PSYCHIATRISTS' TESTIMONY SAID WORTHLESS IN COURT

by Gene Blake

LOS ANGELES—Testimony of psychiatrists should not be permitted in court because they do not know any more about their subject than laymen, a National Homicide Symposium was told here recently.

Jay Ziskin, a psychologist and professor of counseling at California State University, Los Angeles, said psychiatric testimony about the prior mental condition of a criminal defendant was worthless.

(Psychiatrists are medical doctors who specialize in mental disorders, whereas psychologists are specialists in human behavior who approach the subject from a non-medical viewpoint.)

"It does not meet the requirements of law of expert testimony," he told the symposium sponsored by the California District Attorneys Association. "It is highly unreliable, highly inaccurate."

"A psychiatric diagnosis is more likely to be wrong than right. It is even more likely wrong when trying to assess the mental condition at some time previous to the examination."

Ziskin said he hopes that the American Psychiatric Association would consider it unethical for psychiatrists to offer testimony in court on a prior mental condition because "they don't have the competence to do so."

"If you need a psychiatrist to tell you that the defendant is crazy," Ziskin said, "he isn't."

Ziskin added that studies had shown the experts are not better at making such diagnoses than are amateurs.

Taking issue with Ziskin was Dr. Seymour Pollack, a noted psychiatrist who has given expert testimony in criminal cases including that of Sirhan Sirhan, the convicted assassin of Senator Robert F. Kennedy.

Pollack accused Ziskin of raising a "strawman". Although conceding that medicine—including psychiatry—is an art rather than a science, Pollack said the average layman recognizes that there are people who are "crazy".

"They recognize there are a few offenders who are crazy as well, mentally impaired enough to justify some excuse from criminal responsibility," Pollack said.

A Grand Supercycle Crash?

Watch Korea

up the means and find the most strategic way to wipe the wealthy nations off the face of the Earth. In other words, somewhere down the road the West will fall victim to a collective explosion of anger against iniquity by the have-nots against the haves. So now, when we may be facing a Grand Supercycle crash, there is reason to believe that the Cold War "of old" between the Communism of the East and Capitalism of the West is going to unexpectedly erupt into a Hot War of global destruction.

FROM WHERE MIGHT THIS EXPLOSION IGNITE?

I'm admittedly unsure on this point, but one possibility on top of the threat of a global war starting in the Middle East is war starting in the Far East—i.e., on the divided Korean Peninsula where the final battle line between Communism and Capitalism, East and West, is believed to be drawn between Communist North Korea and Capitalist South Korea. Furthermore, this has become a symbolic focal point of the division between the haves and the have-nots, the rich and the poor, the well-fed and the hungry.

As I have mentioned before, there is reason to believe Moscow would want Korea ignited prior to or at the time of having a war unleashed in the Middle East since this will divert a sizable portion of U.S. military might into the Far East so that Washington will be unable to come to the defense of the Jewish homeland of Israel [emphasis mine].

Furthermore, given Moscow's recent "public" befriending of China with the recent agreement signed between Moscow and Beijing, it appears the stage has been set for application of the "One Clenched Fist" strategy in which the deceptive split between Russia and China (see the work of Anatoliy Golitsyn) would end so that the two powers could come together for a sudden, overwhelming military onslaught against the West at the appropriate time. This time appears now to be at hand.

Accordingly, war between East and West might now erupt and a potential trigger-point for this is the Korean Peninsula where North Korea is putting finishing touches on its preparations for an attack.

First off, with the recent strategic, misleading defection of the top North Korean official, Hwang Jang-Yop, North Korea has infused alarming, seemingly credible intelligence (i.e., possible strategic disinformation) to South Korea that has created uncertainty in South Korea, Japan and the U.S. about the military capabilities of North Korea—particularly in terms of striking South Korea and Japan with nuclear and chemical weapons. In this way, Japan and other regional U.S. allies may be hesitant and/or unwilling to help the U.S. in repulsing a North Korean overrun of South Korea, and the U.S. may be hesitant or unwilling to use tactical nuclear weapons in response to a successful North Korean invasion. Secondly, in recent weeks, U.S. satellites have noted that black-outs are spreading across North Korea seemingly because of low fuel supplies for generating electricity.

However, this is also a useful cover for the black-out of the North Korean countryside that will likely be necessary at the time the North executes its invasion plans.

WHAT NORTH KOREA'S UP TO!

From the INTERNET, by J. Adams, 2/18/97, [quoting:]

Recent news articles raise some interesting questions about the newest North Korean defection crisis:

1. Given that the defector Hwang Chang-yop developed the North Korean philosophy of "Juche", or self-reliance, why was he sent on a mission to elicit help, particularly in the form of food-aid, from Japan—a country considered by North Koreans to be an ultimate imperialist enemy?

2. Why didn't Hwang defect in Japan—where he was for a couple of weeks prior to stopping by China—instead of Beijing, since China is closely allied with Pyongyang and could send him back to North Korea?

3. If Hwang was closely surrounded by North Korean agents in Japan to stop him from defecting, why was he able to casually jump into a taxi in Beijing and drive to the South Korean embassy? And if the North Korean leadership was aware Hwang Chang-yop might defect, why did they send him on a trip to Japan and China where he could seek political asylum and thereby create a dangerous political crisis in Pyongyang?

4. If Hwang knows there are tens of thousands of N. Korean agents in South Korea that had infiltrated the South Korean political, military and intelligence establishments to a high level, why did he reveal his intent to defect to South Korean contacts for upwards of a year before actually attempting to defect? Wouldn't he realize he was jeopardizing his chances of success or of even receiving an opportunity to defect?

5. Is it a coincidence that the newest Korean defection crisis is occurring at the time of the most important North Korean holiday—i.e., the birthday of Kim Jong-Il, and at a time that Chinese leader Deng Xiaoping appears to be on his death-bed?

6. What were Hwang's meetings with Vladimir Zhirinovskiy in 1994 and the Central Committee of the Soviet Union under Gorbachev in 1987 all about?

SO WHAT IS NORTH KOREA UP TO?

Clearly the defection of the North Korean Communist leader Hwang Chang-yop makes little sense. Indeed, there is reason to believe that, in reality, Hwang Chang-yop, the Communist leader who developed the North Korean philosophy of Juche that emphasizes complete obedience of North Korea's leader, is defecting because he is obeying the orders of his "Dear Leader" Kim Jong-Il. The circumstances surrounding the defection suggest the defection is being staged (and rather sloppily at that), i.e., this top Communist official is attempting to defect to South Korea as part of some sort of North Korean plan.

AND WHAT IS PYONGYANG'S PLAN?

As I have long been warning, North Korea is preparing for a massive invasion of South Korea. Final preparations may have been completed during the past couple of months. If so, then the North might be planning to attack the South before spring thaw since right now rivers and rice paddies along the DMZ are frozen such that North Korean tanks and tracked vehicles can maneuver off roads and thereby most easily roll into South Korea (see "Weather Factors" in the 1994 U.S. News and World Report article "The Most Dangerous Place On Earth", 6/20/94).

"USA TO PONDER N. KOREAN DEFECTOR'S NUCLEAR RIDDLE"

From the INTERNET, by Barbara Starr, 4/30/97, [quoting:]

It is "unclear" how much of the military information on North Korea offered by defector Hwang Jang-yop is "hearsay" and how much is based on direct knowledge, according to Kurt Campbell, US deputy assistant secretary of defense for Asia and Pacific affairs. The USA hopes to begin talking to Hwang shortly, specifically to evaluate his view that North Korea still considers the "war option" as a viable strategy. The USA is also interested in verifying his statement that North Korea holds enough fissile material to construct a nuclear weapon.

The USA believes statements attributed to Hwang are genuine. However, the question remains how much of the knowledge is first hand. Campbell also noted that North Korea has stored large amounts of chemical weapons close to the demilitarized zone along with its long-standing inventory of artillery pieces, mortars and rocket launchers.

Although the economic crisis in North Korea continues to affect certain military tasks such as pilot training, Campbell said that the forward-based weaponry can be readily fired against the South at any time. He further acknowledged that much of the artillery and weaponry is in tunnels or buried for survivability.

There is "nothing we can do if North Korea wanted to roll out artillery and fire on Seoul," Campbell said. However, US officials do not believe any attack is imminent.

Campbell said that North Korean exercises in February and March were in fact "not very effective militarily" and "very expensive" for the cash-strapped nation, but nonetheless indicate the continued government support for the military.

The ability of US troops in South Korea to detect and cope with a chemical warfare attack "could be improved", Campbell added. US forces are currently testing a variety of detector technologies that could be placed at key ports and airfields in South Korea.

"KOREAN DEFECTOR'S CLAIMS DUBIOUS"

From the INTERNET, by Foster, 4/28/97,

"God invented time to keep everything from happening at once."

[quoting:]

That North Korean bigwig who defected to South Korea a few days ago may not be the "crazy man" his former colleagues say he is. But some of the frightening things he has said and written seem a little extreme and ought to be treated with a fair amount of skepticism.

Among other scary things, he said North Korea possesses nuclear weapons and would not hesitate to use them to turn South Korea and Japan into a "sea of fire". So mighty is North Korea, he said, that it can even "reduce the United States and Japan to ashes".

The warning generated a lot of attention partly because the defector, Hwang Jang Yop, was his country's top ideologue. In February, he sought political asylum in South Korea's consulate in Beijing. He finally made it to South Korea last weekend, where some of his warnings were made public.

There is little doubt that, at least until fairly recently, North Korea wanted the world to believe it was acquiring a nuclear arsenal. In 1994, it signed an agreement that promised to end its nuclear program, but U.S. intelligence officials have said they think North Korea collected enough plutonium for one or two bombs.

Maybe that estimate is too low. At the same time, asylum-seekers want soft landings when they defect, which means they tend to say things their hosts want to hear. Also, they usually harbor grudges against their former comrades. They are, after all, defectors.

But even if North Korea is the menace that Hwang says it is, it is also desperately poor. Earlier this month, after a four-day tour of North Korea, Rep. Tony Hall (D-Ohio) reported that he was "stunned" to find people in rural areas trying to subsist on a diet of five ounces of rice a day, plus grass, weeds and tree bark.

Wars are notoriously costly things to wage, and a nation on the verge of starvation is not apt to start a war that it could not pay for or launch an attack that would inevitably invite devastating reprisals. North Korea's rulers may be fanatics, but that does not mean they are suicidal.

Hwang was the philosophical mastermind of the cruel, crude system that has beggared and tyrannized the people of North Korea. Maybe that's just another reason to be wary of the extraordinary things he is now saying.

His track record isn't any better than the record of the regime he helped to build and from which he has decided to flee.

"N. KOREA WARNS HWANG'S DEFECTION COULD SPARK WAR"

From the INTERNET, 4/29/97, [quoting:]

TOKYO, April 23 Kyodo North Korea on Wednesday blasted high-ranking defector Hwang Jang Yop as a "lunatic" and a "war criminal" and said South Korea's act of bringing him to Seoul constituted "a declaration of war against the North".

The Korean Central News Agency (KCNA), quoted a statement it said had been issued by the pro-North "the National Democratic Front of South Korea" as saying the 74-year-old defector's arrival in Seoul on Sunday could undermine peace and stability on the Korean Peninsula.

"It is, in actuality, a forestalling attack and a declaration of war against the North. If one side fires, the other side is bound to retaliate and the crossfire will inevitably lead to igniting a war," the statement said.

South Korean authorities said they are not aware of the pro-North Korean group's existence.

The KCNA report, monitored in Tokyo, is the first comment from Pyongyang's official media on Hwang's arrival in Seoul 68 days after he sought asylum at the South Korean diplomatic mission in Beijing.

Hwang, who was the chief ideologue of the state philosophy "juche" or self-reliance, is the first member of the North Korean leadership ever to defect to South Korea.

In his arrival statement, he painted a bleak picture of North Korea as a country without hope whose efforts to build a socialist paradise left it a "beggar".

In return, the KCNA statement heaped abuse on the defector, variously calling him a "traitor", "a common enemy of the North and South Korean people", and "a crazy man sick with paranoia, eccentricity and mental derangement".

"To our people, his worth is less than a dog's," it said.

In what appeared to be a thinly veiled threat against Hwang's life, it said, "If Hwang, an uninvited guest and a spark of confrontation and war with the North, is left alone, our people will soon suffer a holocaust of war."

"EVEN STARVED, NORTH KOREA DANGEROUS"

From the INTERNET, by Paul Greenberg, 4/28/97, [quoting:]

It sounds like something out of a sci-fi horror comic book, or maybe just the history of the 20th century: A defector from another starving totalitarian regime says its leaders wouldn't hesitate to reduce its neighbors to a "sea of fire".

Hwang Jang Yop, formerly of Pyongyang, North Korea, may have had his own reasons for sneaking out of the country he helped shape as chief ideologue and tutor to the next tyrant. He may have his own reasons now for echoing South Korea's official line and worst fears. He makes the North's strategy sound grotesque, irrational, paranoid...but that is a fairly accurate description of North Korea's insulated, isolated, quite mad leadership.

Talk about criminal fantasies: "North Korea is capable of scorching South Korea with nuclear weapons, chemical weapons and rockets," this highest ranking of defectors warns. "North Korea believes that if there were a war, it would certainly win, and if the United States intervenes, it can reduce the United States and Japan to ashes."

Well, the West can't say it wasn't warned. Washington may yet rue the day or night that it didn't take out North Korea's nuclear capacity in a surgical strike—the way the Israelis destroyed Saddam Hussein's nuclear plant and threat in 1981.

At the time, this country joined the world in condemning Israel's raid on that reactor at Baghdad, only to have to do the job again a decade later on a much grandeur scale, once Iraq's ruler had shown his hand in Kuwait. (Nor is Saddam Hussein finished even now, or the world with him.)

Now it is Pyongyang that may be harboring delusions of grandeur—and horror. Month after month, year after year, Washington has chosen to placate, rather than confront North Korea.

Practicing a kind of diplomacy not always distinguishable from bribery, the United States has offered North Korea's rabid regime food, nuclear power, alternate fuel sources, a soft word and just about anything else—if only it will keep its latest word not to develop nuclear weapons.

In an earlier time, this kind of diplomacy was called by a different name—appeasement—but the results could prove just as much of a failure this time around.

Totalitarian powers that agree to freeze their nukes can thaw them in a hurry. And without any compunctions. What's more, the smaller the power, the greater its apocalyptic ambitions. When the full story of the Cuban Missile Crisis of 1963 came to light, it became clear that Fidel Castro had been dying to get his trigger finger on the Soviets' nuclear arsenal.

IF HE HAD succeeded, a lot of others would have died with him. North Korea's own Ultimate Leader, Kim Jong Il, represents the same kind of ever clearer and more present danger to the peace of the planet. There is no longer a Soviet Union, but that evil empire has left a legacy of sawdust Stalins.

Much as Americans would like to slide back into our usual isolationist coma, the world is still a dangerous place. Lest we forget, there's still a Cold War in Asia. And however cozy its connections with the Clinton-Gore campaign/administration, Red China remains Red, and North Korea is even Redder. For Beijing, it must be like having a crazy nephew in the attic—playing with nukes.

Why would any country whose subjects have been reduced to eating tree bark entertain such illusions? This isn't strategy; it's Grand Guignol. It's the Theater of the Absurd with nukes.

It is, in short, the diplomatic and military history of the 20th century. Suppose a high-ranking defector from North Korea had warned the world in early 1950 that Pyongyang was about to invade the South with everything it had? Would oh-so-respectable opinion have given him any credence—before June 25, 1950?

The surest way to repeat the past is to forget it. The reason George Santayana's maxim to that effect is endlessly repeated is because it remains so relevant.

AND REPEATING THE PAST COLLECTIVE MISTAKES OF HISTORY IS PRECISELY WHAT CAUSES GRAND SUPERCYCLE CRASHES, I.E., THE GREAT MISTAKES OF HISTORY HAPPENING OVER AND OVER AGAIN, BECAUSE MAN, IN HIS

"RUSSIA AND CHINA AGREE: WASHINGTON IS TOO BOSSY"

From the INTERNET, by Lee Hockstader, 4/24/97, [quoting:]

The presidents of Russia and China, symbolically thumbing their noses at the United States, signed a declaration Wednesday formally endorsing "a new multipolar world" that would counterbalance Washington's global muscle.

But beyond pomp, ceremony and words of friendship at their Moscow meeting, there was little sign of what policies or actions Boris Yeltsin and Jiang Zemin planned to embrace that would advance the "new international order" they so gravely proclaimed.

Although both took pains not to mention the United States by name, their resentment of Washington's unrivaled clout permeated the Kremlin signing ceremony.

"Some are pulling the world toward a unipolar order," said Mr. Yeltsin, who, when he last met with President Bill Clinton in Helsinki a month ago, appeared grumpy at a press conference afterward. "Someone wants to dictate order in the world. And we want a multipolar world."

He added, "These poles constitute the foundation of a new world order."

China is on record supporting Russia's bitter opposition to the eastward expansion of NATO, the Western security alliance in which the United States plays the leading role. NATO is expected to announce in July that it will add members from the former Soviet-dominated Warsaw Pact, probably the Czech Republic, Hungary and Poland.

In the past, mutual suspicions between Moscow and Beijing have run deep. In December, for example, Russia's defense minister, Igor Rodionov, warned on the eve of a visit by Prime Minister Li Peng to Moscow that China remained a military threat to Russia.

Visiting China this month, though, Mr. Rodionov shifted gears. A member of his traveling delegation told the Interfax News Agency that not only did China no longer pose a threat, but also that "Russia can supply China with up-to-date arms and technology for their production without harm to its own security."

For months, it has been reported that as part of their reconciliation, Moscow and Beijing planned troop reductions, perhaps of 15 percent to 20 percent, along the 8,000-kilometer (5,000-mile) border that once demarcated the Soviet Union and China. But the issue appeared clouded Wednesday. Citing an unnamed person, Interfax reported that the troops would remain where they were and that the two sides had merely ruled out any increase.

In a separate accord scheduled to be signed Thursday, Mr. Yeltsin, Mr. Jiang and the leaders of the former Soviet central Asian republics of Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan and Tajikistan will agree to inform each other about troop movements in the border region.

Mr. Yeltsin, who returned from a vacation to greet the Chinese leader on his five-day visit to Russia, said the occasion was "of enormous, possibly historic importance, as we are determining the fate of the 21st century".

Mr. Jiang, who speaks some Russian, addressed the Russian Parliament with a similar message of friendship and "strategic partnership".

"Let the powerful tree of friendship between our two peoples always be green," he said.

The two leaders announced that a committee on "friendship, peace and development" would be set up to nurture the warming bilateral relationship.

The Russian side will be headed by Arkadi Volsky, who has close ties to top figures in Russia's crumbling military-industrial complex. The top Chinese representative will be Huang Izheng, vice chairman of the Chinese National People's Congress Commission for Financial and Economic Issues.

PART II

HATONN: Well, we've the same questions asked of us. Why would we write so, just almost frenetically? Not the least of which would be my own typist who would ask this, you know—is why would we write, and we're two hundred volumes in less than seven years. And there isn't one of these books that's less than 200 pages. There are thousands of hours of this. You're going to have to live based upon the truth. And as Phil would ask you, "What is truth?" Truth is dealing with responsibility of individual, and universal oneness.

And then comes the next one: "What do you mean you are considering, sir, making agreements, even financial contractual agreements, with a George Bush if he is so bad?" Why not? Can you think of anyone else's money you would rather use? Money is not bad or good. Men may be bad or good, evil or good intended. And he has a lot of problems that I don't have.

And David is right. I don't have to concern myself with all of those negative feelings that you might have to confront, but you'll learn. You'll learn that the minute you've just put them aside and say, "Oh, okay, bring them on," because there's something about the media and the ones who will lie about you. And we could get into fisty-cuffs up here. He thinks he's Jesus Christ? Well, she got written up in Associated Press as calling herself Jesus Christ. And certainly Applewhite called himself Jesus Christ. My good gracious, there's just got to be a lot of them running around somewhere. Will the real ones stand up? [David Icke stands.] Well, let's talk about these people. See, there's one in every crowd that will take responsibility. Possibly every one of you should have been on your feet if you're teaching or saying the right thing, a messenger of truth.

A messenger of life truth is nothing more than bearing "dharma". It's not a name, any more than Christ is a name. If you're name is Mr. Christ, then I guess that's a name. And I repeat, if you walk up to me and say, "I am Jesus Christ" (in fact, I may need to call him Jesus now [referring to David Icke]), and you introduce yourself to me, I'm going to use the name you give me. If you don't know what your name is, who does?

But Jesus was also a term, but this was the name given by Saul of Tarsus. Now all of you think, maybe, that Saul had this remarkable revelation and met the Light, went blind for a while and then went about spreading the word of truth of Christ. Forget it. He went right on his way of bigotry, putting women down. I mean, I wonder, if the women's movement really, really understood what Paul wrote in that Bible, there would not be one woman left tolerating the Christian Bible. Does that make him bad? It makes him nothing, bad or good. He just was. But look at what has happened with a beautiful word that became the name of who you can look back 2,000 years ago and say was a Christed being, this one Esu Immanuel, Jesus, the Christed.

The Masonic Order is waiting for the keystone to the pyramid of the illuminated ones. That is Jesus. If there are any Masons presented, you'll know exactly what I'm talking about. And so you have all of the evangelists coming on and it's all in the name of Jesus. Doesn't anybody see what you are talking about? "Oh, he shed his blood. Oh, he took our sins." Say what? Did you sin, and now he's going to take yours away from you so you that don't have to have any more responsibility. "You wait around, you goin' to get raptured." Well, I suggest you not hold your breath. Who is going to rapture you? You've already turned this Jesus chap into a human being, a physical entity. You can no longer, except for a few brief moments on Easter Sunday, relate to the fact that this is an energy form you're talking about, after the physical is past and gone beyond. "So, in the name of Jesus, who shed his blood and took my sins all I have to do is just believe that story is true." It's come a long way, baby. It used to be, well, you know, "in the name of Jesus, he will help me." No, now it is, "All you have to do is proclaim the name and it's over." No, it's not over.

You've missed the point. Religions have usurped your world. Incorrectly. Religions manipulate and control you because mankind is basically afraid. He knows he errs. And possibly he knows he deserves to be swatted down and therefore he expects his higher-self to make him pay. That's what it's about. And it's never going to work. You have to assume responsibility for what you are, what you think and what you intend, because God is going to look at one thing—your intent. You can't lie about it. You can even think you intend to do some good, but if it does not measure up with those Laws that have been birthed within you on birth day, you're going to fall short.

God is very, very simple. And yes, there is a place. We'll call it the gathering of souls. It's not limbo-land. It's where soul essence resonates in tune with God. And yet there are disadvantages to that dimension of experience. So you don't want to move into that dimension of experience until you've learned your cotton-pickin' lessons, because, in the world of physical dimension, you have the right to practice your intent, make your choices and do your actions in a physical sense of being-ness. You're going to get over there where you don't have any hands or legs or anything to help you out and it's going to be a space of confusion. Just because you pass the veil and cross the threshold, it depends on your level of understanding and your level of knowledge, knowingness, that determines where you are in this limbo-land.

And if you think you are going to go from the lowest of error-makers, with intentional contempt for the priceless treasures of Creator, and you think you're going to just hop over there into a better world of milk and honey, you're going to get stuck in the muck. It isn't that way. And it's time we worked together to get it squared away enough that, if we can prevent that all-out stupidity of pulverizing your planet, for instance. Since you are only illusion anyway, this whole experience, we talk about Hale-Bopp. What difference does it make what Hale-Bopp is? What are you?

So, you are coalesced energy, in only a sequence of activities of seeming motion, because you're like a sequence of lights going off and on. Perhaps it gives you the illusion of movement, but really it's just one little bulb going on and off, in sequence to the next. So your whole universe is built on a pulse, wave, electric motion, like a piston, just exactly like a piston. And eventually the concept is always in a spiraling form, without beginning, without end. And, depending on what frequency you use for your vibrations depends on whether or not you are visible. You are extremely slow motion and basically all we look at is your energy form.

And all you can perceive of a higher-dimensioned being is a simple feeling of energy. Slow that energy down a little bit, and a little bit more and a little more, and at some point we are able to at least be visible to one another. And I'm talking about the generalities of a dimensional shift or a dimensional change.

This is one reason suicide is such an error in the mental thought processes of an individual. "I will just kill myself and end this misery." What do you think is going to be different over here, other than more confusion? Because the mind is the same, and you have now done away with that ability to deal with the mental things in a physical environment of choice. You're stuck there until you either go around again, and sometimes that's a long, long time in coming, but God has time. Perhaps you think you don't but that is only in the perception of the environment in which you find yourself.

All of these fantastic tales, as he mentions when you talk about fiction and nonfiction, ones will say, "Well it's so boring to be good. There's nothing entertaining about it. You're going to have responsibility in sex, responsibility in food, responsibility in dress, responsibility... Why, you're going to just stick us with responsibility." Well, why don't you try it? Confound it, you might find you like it. It opens whole new vistas of experience. And while all of those ones are running and hiding, or looking for those places to hide, they're going to find there wasn't any place to run and hide, especially from self.

But what has happened on your place, and I will refer most of you back seven or eight years when we first began to have these lessons, I had to get all of those books, those titles back there on that wall, out. So that's exactly what happened. Bruce can say six or seven years ago there was Satan's Drummers. We have got to have already written it down. I can't tell you individual truth about every tiny detail or happening or individual, but I can give you what is necessary for the whole, and tell you of the Universal One-ness. And it's not an easy job, but it's a challenging, rather fun job. I doubt David has actually been bored in 10 years. And when you think, "Well, I just learned about babies and children underground over at China Lake and this sort of thing Springmeier writes about." Well, my goodness, your chin goes down too, doesn't it? Well, son-of-a-gun, can you believe this? And then suddenly you have to believe this.

You have to understand that truth is that which is, while they're telling you all of this other garbage. But you only have to deal with the truth. And as long as you set your anchor in the truth of what is and the realization and the knowing about your association and your God and your self and your Creator and your Creation, you stop being so blameful: "Oh, my goodness." And after a while you get up and it's another nasty job, but somebody's got to do it, and so you get up and you say, "Oh, Hell let's just go do it. Let's just go do it. I can't wait for Joe to do it and I can't wait for Pollyanna to do it. She ain't ever going to do anything but tip around on her goody-two-shoes."

"But, this can't be reality," your brain will scream at you. "It is without all humanity, as in the terms of Higher-Universal-Man." But let me tell you something. This is what is the basest of man, Lower-Universal-Man. And that's why you have planets like Earth for you to experience. It's why you have messengers, teachers and angels, whatever you want to call them, that show up when you need them, if you're on the team. And it's the ability to confront truth, accept truth, weed out the trash and keep moving, because you know within it must be done, because it lays a foundation.

Ones can come and say, "Well, but if you ever want a real paper, you're going to have to do this and this and this and..." I don't want a real paper, then. Our paper reaches exactly the ones we need it to reach. And the most avid readers are your enemies. They're cheap about it, but that's to be expected, that runs in the lineage. Our job is not to explain it. Our job is simply to state it. And the more stating it, the safer it gets to state it. The more people pinpointing the truth, the less dangerous it is to any one.

It's why ones ask me, "Why would you point to this one or that one, or the other one and mention something about them? Won't that get them in trouble?" No. Publicity will save your ass. It is really going to be hard, for instance, to bump off David Icke now. Even five years ago he might not have been so missed for awhile, but the more publicly known you are—it's going to be harder to lie about you here in Tehachapi, after last week, ever again in this world. They can't bash you. They can try, but they're not going to make it. And worse than that, you see here, for these ones. David's got to go on out there because he has put his human stamp on this thing that he does. I have not put my human stamp on this thing. She's a typist. The truth is there, made available, and we haven't even hardly begun. So we will just keep right on going.

But you see, we don't have to concern with whether people believe us or do not believe us. And the less they believe us, the more they leave us alone. And in this particular area, I want the people left alone. Doris did a good job of telling them what they had done. You know, we have never asked for anything. We haven't asked for any attention, we have wanted nothing. And look what you've done. In five minutes you've destroyed, and it actually hurt their feelings. There is actually life and love in these beings. All you've got to do is reach in there and touch it. They were shamed, but that doesn't stop their editors from doing a job, does it? But you made some friends here that day. And the less attention ever called to this place, the more we're going to get done, because we are going to do some very magnificent things. And now we have people arguing over who's going to do it first for you. I just wish they'd get on with it.

But when these things begin to flow, some of the team can begin to back up a little bit and get a little rest. And then we can support so that it doesn't drain the life flow out of the ones like David that have to keep going. Because they are now a face, a personality, and they will grow and grow and grow and grow.

And he is absolutely right, there's no one going touch him. He's not concerned about them, and the minute you stop being concerned about these buggers, that moment you start living. They haven't anything; they can not stand against the Truth. They can not and will not stand against the Light. So we're just going to keep uncovering and uncovering and uncovering. And meanwhile, we need to get some remnants through. And we're going to do it. And in that journey, we'll be able to offer many, many things to many, many ones.

Are they going to de-populate this place? And when I say "they", don't assume God is going to knock you off. But, yes. Hurts your heart? Well, you've made that choice of allowing it to happen or stopping it, long, long, long ago. But we are going to evolve into a wondrous society because it has never occurred to us that it would be otherwise. And when it quits occurring to you that it might be otherwise, then is the day we start accomplishing things. And it's happening.

Everybody want a break?
Interrogate David.

DAVID: I'd just like to say a few things after that. First of all, different points. The thing that I think is most magnificent about CONTACT and makes it so different from any other publication I've come across is that, apart from my books, CONTACT has the same attitude towards life as me: If they believe it's true, they publish it. So many publications that talk about truth and talk about standing up for freedom, they are immediately starting to run back in fear of consequences for certain stuff, so that stuff stays out in the so-called magazines and papers that are speaking truth. I remember what Ghandi was apparently supposed to have said once: "Even if you are in a minority of one the truth is still the truth." I think CONTACT, for that reason among others, is a very unique publication.

I also recall something I've put in this book. There was an American comedian called Bill Hicks who's a very brave man, a very angry man, but he used humor brilliantly to expose a lot of the nonsense. Because when you look at what's going on in the world, a lot of it's funny. It is ludicrous. He used to finish his act talking about life and what it was, something that we've talked about this afternoon, how the physical world is just thought made physical. It's just an illusion. And he summed up life like this—I think it was brilliantly done—he said, "it's like a ride in an amusement park." And when you go on it, you think it's real because that's how powerful our minds are. The ride goes up and down, round and round. It has thrills and chills, and it's very brightly colored and it's very loud. And it's fun for awhile. Some have been on the ride for a long time and they are beginning to question, "is this real or is this just a ride." And others have remembered and they come back to us and they say, "hey, don't worry, don't be afraid ever, 'cause this is just a ride." And we kill those people. "Shut him up. We've got a lot invested in this ride. Shut him up. Look at my throes of worry. Look at my big bank account and my family. This has to be real."

It's just a ride, but we always kill those good guys who try to tell us that and let the demons run amok. But it doesn't matter because it's just a ride and we can change it anytime we want. No job, no savings of money, just a choice right now between fear and love. And what I think we've created is fear made physical. That's what we're looking at. And we can make this love made physical with another choice. And I couldn't agree more that one of the things, I guess the greatest thing I've remembered—because that's what we're doing, remembering—is there's no such thing as no choice. Just a series of choices, some which we'd like to make and some which we'd would rather not like to make. But they're just choices to be made.

I've got a four-year-old boy at home, in England and by the time I get home—and I've been away for six months in nine, and it's only just beginning—and that part of this is killing me. But I have a choice. I could choose not to do this or I could choose to do it. And I can't say, "I have no choice, I've got to do it," because I have a choice. I could choose not to do it, for a while. But in the end, the more you open up, the more the power within you, the direction within you urges, you on. And in the end, once you step on this conveyor belt and you start to see what's really happening in this world, there is no turning back, because you can't face yourself if you try to turn back, once you realize what's going on and the kind of world my four-year-old and other four-year-olds are going to live in, unless we wake up and take our power back. And that's all we need to do. It's just a choice, just a choice.

AUDIENCE: I have some thoughts generating along here with all these stories this morning. When we are studying with these enlightened beings of other realms, they point out that what we're, what you, what we seem to be talking about is the power of sound, or what Sia Baba would call Matrika-shaki. And he would describe how it would start at the solar plexus and come up Poushanti, the heart, where it's a thousand times more powerful, as it moves to the throat with a thousand times more power, as it moves to the end of tongue with a thousand times more of that previous power. Before you spit it out, like venom from a snake, you take a thought and you think, "Is it the truth? Is it kind? Is it necessary?"

What I was going to ask you and Commander to both comment on is the meaning of those three positions right there. Because we're really wrapped up in truth here. Is it kind to talk about George Bush and some of his habits? And it sure seems necessary to expose these things. At the end of your statements on that, my real question is, how do know if you're doing the right thing?

DAVID: Right. Well, I've got one now. First of all is it kind? Depends on what level of kindness you're talking about. I don't guess George Bush thinks it's kind to reveal what he's been doing. But when you're looking at a "George Bush's" true evolutionary situation, it is very kind to him to reveal what he's doing, as a part of his evolution as well as everyone else's. Is it kind to accept, as I do, that tens-of-thousands, at least, of children are being abused in this way by the day, and walk away from it? I don't think that's kind at all. So we have to make those judgements, and they're the choices we have to make, and we can only make them from what we think is right.

Secondly, is it necessary? Well, I think that a lot of stuff we talk about isn't necessarily necessary. I must say, if I get caught in a corner at the dinner party (which I avoid like the plague, and I can't remember the last one I've been to), but when I do, I start to realize there's a hell of a lot of things that come out of people's mouths that are utterly unnecessary. So that takes a bigger point, which I will use under the word "focus". I think it's very important that we do get focused on what is actually necessary because, if we are starting to shoot in all directions, we are actually going to so dissipate the energy we're using that we are not actually going to focus that energy on what would be most effective. I do think that there's great dissipations of energy in organizations I come across, where basically they don't know their ass from their elbow. There's no focus on "what are we trying to achieve here?" So, I think that question is very well worth everyone asking all the time. Otherwise, your energy goes in so many different directions, its power is not what it could be if it was focused.

Thirdly, how do you know if you're doing the right thing? Well, this takes a wider thing for me. People talk about the need to seek enlightenment. I don't think we need seek enlightenment at all. I don't think enlightenment has ever gone anywhere. I think enlightenment is sharing the same space as ignorance. The highest dimensions of knowledge and love are sharing the same space as ignorance. What I feel we need to do is to remove the barriers we throw up between ignorance and enlightenment.

One thing, you see, enlightenment does once we allow it in is it transforms our lives, and we start to do things which in the three-dimensional world appears strange and challenging. This is why so many people who are in the prison of the fear of what other people think of them are shutting out enlightenment, because they know where enlightenment is going to take them. And it's going to take them out of the imposed engineered norms, like Carl-bloody-Lewis. And people are frightened of being different in a world of uniformity.

That is the prison. Therefore, they are shutting out enlightenment, which they know is going to take them straight out of the prisons of uniformity, and people are going to call them "mad" or "bad" or whatever. What's it bloody matter what people call us? It's for so many reasons we are shutting out enlightenment because enlightenment, is leading us to do things that we think our mother might not like. Or the guys down at the bar might find funny. So for many, many reasons, all of them based on fear, we're shutting out enlightenment.

Once we let those barriers, that fear, guilt, resentment, that "I could never, I'm just an ordinary man or woman"—I call them low vibrational eggshells—when we let them fall (a friend of mine has done a lovely illustration in there of the eggshell principle), once we let the Light in, then two things happen. First of all, all that suppressed emotion that we haven't wanted to deal with, all that grunge we've pushed down—"change the subject, I don't want to talk about it"—when we let that Light in, that higher dimension of us—because, in the end there's no such a thing as we, just one gigantic "I", of which we are expressions of—once we let that in, it acts like a hose-pipe. And all this stuff we've suppressed comes to the surface.

I don't know whether you've found this, but I certainly found it, big time. Once you let the eggshells crack and the Light in, there's a period of very great emotional challenge as your life is turned upside down and you deal with all the stuff you need to deal with to find a vibrational level in the three-dimensional consciousness, for want of a description. That is the same as our higher consciousness. Allow that connection to take place. And once—this is the answer to the question I'm getting around to, the question is it right? is it truth? is it the right thing to do?—can only be answered by each of us individually, by what we feel is right.

Now that feeling—I've said in this book somewhere that we believe too much and feel too little: it's belief systems that control us, and believe systems tend, because they're head-based, to suppress the feelings intuitive-based, it's the intuition—that intuition for me is that connection with multidimensional self. All I've done, and it's the only thing I've basically done for the past seven years, more and more, as I've set myself free, is when head and intuition have come into conflict, intuition is always the way I've gone. And in the end what you find is that the head and the intuition come into harmony and they both push you in the same direction.

So, there's an antenna somewhere here which you really can't put words to, because it's a feeling that you either know it's right or you don't know it's right. And sometimes your head is going, "oh, my God!" But something here says, "this is right," and you go with it. And that's—I feel, anyway—our connection with who we really are. This is our connection with this world overwhelmingly and the stuff that comes this way. This comes this way. And when we shut out this, our whole focus for inspiration and information starts to look this way, and therefore we become a manipulator's dream because most of the information coming this way is controlled by a handful of people. So when this opens, not only do you vibrationally reconnect or start to get closer to who we really are, you start to filter this because you start to get dead streetwise, via this "something feels right or doesn't". But in the end, what feels right to one might not feel right to another, because we're all in a different point in the journey with different things to experience.

I think that the danger comes when people start to impose their intuition on someone else. In this whole New Age area I do hear, so often, people saying to people, "Trust your intuition, follow your intuition." But, what they're saying, without saying it, is so often, "Follow your intuition as long as it agrees with mine because if it doesn't, you're off your path." And so I know what's right for me. Full stop. And everyone else knows what's right for them, which is why I wouldn't dream of advising anyone what action they should take. Because within them they know exactly what they've come here to do and exactly what they've come here to contribute and how they've come to do it. It's accessing that knowledge that's the trick. And that means getting the hell out of the head domination—not that the head's going to part to play domination—and let the feelings, the intuition, in there and go with what that says, even though this is screaming, "oh, my God!" because it's frightened of being different in a world of uniformity.

AUDIENCE: Is there a point in your life where you remember how you really got into this stuff, or is it just something that you've always known all your life?

DAVID: No. I could have feared for England, I could have felt guilty for England, I could have represented my country. All these emotions, you know, the emotional olympics; I'd have got a gold. Because I feel our journey—and this is why we've got to start being kind to ourselves. Humanity loves to put itself down. "I'm human, give me a slapping." We're on a journey, and if we follow our intuition, there is a point where awakening particularly if we come to contribute something—we all have—there's a point where you need to wake up. You can stay asleep after that point, and I think a lot of people still are. But there is a point to wake up because if you kind of come in, and say you're doing something that I'm doing, which is interacting with people, if I'd have come in as an all-knowing being, I couldn't go around now talking to people and have any relevance or connection with them, because I wouldn't understand where they're coming from, why they react in certain ways, why they're frightened, why they feel guilty, why they feel insignificant. But having lived about thirty-odd years of my life in that same state, you get to understand what these emotions are and what a prison they are. And then there comes the awakening point, and then you've got the balance. You've got the wider understanding because you've accessed more of yourself, but you've also got the understanding of where you were.

I was traveling around in Australia, and I met a guy who was creating his own reality about every fifteen seconds, because he saw himself as a victim. And therefore every day, no matter how well the day had gone, he had to manifest something to feed his addiction to being a victim, because that was his sense of self, that was his imagination of self. So every day, no matter how well the day went, he would manifest a crisis at some point to feed his addiction. Now I could see where he was coming from and I could understand it, and I learned a lot from observing it, not in the least because I was looking at myself about 15 years ago.

So I think we need to be kind to ourselves. There's no such thing as a bad experience unless we perceive it like that, only experience. Everyone in this room, and everyone on this planet, and everyone in creation is not what they are now, despite what has happened to them and what they've experienced. They are what they are because of what has happened and because of what they've experienced. That's one of the things I talk about in the book, you know, one of the things that I believe slows down human evolution so much, is that instead of taking this evolutionary process in its simple form—because all genius is simple: experience, learn, evolve—instead of saying, "Right, I've got what I need to learn from that experience. Terrific. I'm a more enlightened being now. Move on," we take with us, because of the conditioning, the debris of experience, the guilt, the resentment, the fear and all this stuff. And so that becomes weights, then, that we have to carry. The journey actually gets harder because of all the emotional weights we're carrying. And yet, from my perspective, we are attracting to us, magnetically, think, because once we get pulled into the personality of an experience, we start to externalize responsibility to personality: "It's your fault, you're to blame" and all this stuff. If I'm travelling through California and I'm in a certain state of being which needs to interact with another state of being for an experience that I need to have for my journey, then that state of being in California will be called "Chuck". If I'm traveling through Germany in that state of being and I need to attract in another state of being to interact with in Germany, that same state of being will be called "Wolfgang". In Britain it would be called "Charley" or "Fred" or "Bill". It's just a state of being which I'm pulling in, because that's what I need to interact with for the experience that I need. So once you get out of the personality, you actually operate on a level which is above this highly programmed, manipulated, conditioned world. And you don't get pulled into that view of ourselves.

I was talking about America once in Australia, underground bases and stuff, and this lady stood up and said, "I'm outraged. You're insulting my country. I'm an American." And I said, "You're a multidimensional infinity. Why are you identifying with a belief system that's been around for little more than 200 years?" If we get pulled into countries, sort of racist, we get pulled into religions, we get pulled into all of this stuff. When actually what we're doing is getting pulled into a fraction of our consciousness, because we're seeing ourselves as what we are experiencing in human form instead of what we are, infinity. And that is a completely different way of living our lives. When you get to the big, big, big, big, big, big, big, big picture of infinity, of Creation, of the ultimate, what we are sorting out here at this time, is a little local difficulty. It's big to us, because we're living it. But this is a little local difficulty which offers fantastic consequences in the short term, in the three-dimensional world, unless we sort it. But it also offers fantastic challenge, fantastic experiences, and when we get out of here, we will be far more enlightened beings than we would be if we had not had the experience. And what I feel is happening now is that, collectively, we are going through a massive evolutionary experience.

Just on an individual level, we experience, learn, evolve, if we learn from the experience. If we don't take stage two and learn from the experience, then we stand still. But nothing happens in Creation without consequences. That's what the evolutionary process is. So for a long, long time—thousands and thousands and thousands of years, goodness knows how far back—the human race has been giving its power away to "leaders", and followed and shut its mind down and conceded its uniqueness to fear. That can't happen because nothing can happen in isolation. So where I feel we are at this point now is Creation, the evolutionary process saying to humanity, "Hey, over here."

This is what happens when you give your power away. This is what happens when you concede your uniqueness to someone else's version of what you should be. This is what happens when you concede your right to be you. Because what you do when you do that is, first of all, you give your life away. If enough of us do it, we give the world away. And that's what we've done. But this edifice of so-called power is a house of cards dependent totally on us doing that. When we take the power back, the power used to control us is also taken back, and this little local difficulty is all over. And we're going to see it and we're going to live it, because I ain't come here to mess about, right? I haven't left a four-year-old in England to mess about. And I haven't left wherever I've bloody come from, where ever that is, to mess about. This is sort-out time. It's a great time to be alive.

AUDIENCE: Amen.

DAVID: It's time for pudding.

AUDIENCE: A couple of words you mentioned in there, intuition and feeling, but what do you want to do with your actions?

E.J.: There must be a difference there.

Update Message To Our Enquiring Readers

5/12/97 #1 HATONN

A MESSAGE TO OUR READERS

I wish to take a few minutes early this morning to get a note into the paper this week regarding our seeming lack of writing. There IS NO lack of writing, only a lack of publishing "my" communications through Doris.

We have been told by the Judge that we will refrain publishing on the subjects we most need to confront, lest Doris be imprisoned. The ruling was actually the most well-thought-out judicial rendering I have had the privilege to witness, but it still is an order. Does this mean we won't write on the topics of God and Light? Yes, for now, because the concepts as offered prior to now are not ENTIRELY CORRECT, and the books bearing corrections have been banned, and when we choose to again write on the topics involved, we shall only present the CORRECT material, and therefore it will not resemble that which came before. That is for later, and others in distant lands are doing the receiving, the drafting both in writing and diagrams, and we are free of the burden here.

As most of you realize, the Constitutional Law Center has been closed until we can better consider pathways to improvement in the system itself. We realize that attorneys of lifelong standing have great difficulty in changing, and change you must. We will investigate thoroughly the opportunities to merge some Constitutional LAW into whatever we personally can utilize before the courts, but to cut our throats and end our own "wins" to simply argue and make the courts angry is a stupid maneuver at best. So much activity is being shouldered by a very few in this place that they have no time for such as restructuring cases, so even our first encounter to study case-load had to be postponed. It was not a public forum but was to consider how to go about restructuring cases presenting opportunities to do so.

We had received some input from a usually credible resource that there would be a "raid" on the meeting. How strange you have become; there would be NO MEETING as such, but only a few very isolated persons would even be attending, and no legal parties at all. Are YOU in serious trouble or what, America?

Is this just America? NO. We received in-depth "debriefing" yesterday from one of our dearest friends who was in Greece for the past several months—only to get CONFIRMATION for other warnings that there were groups of CIA, MOSSAD, and INTERPOL intelligence teams to see to it that we can't even open personal accounts in that nation. These teams are directed and headed by Israeli henchmen.

FINE, WE WON'T DO BUSINESS OF ANY KIND IN GREECE AND SO BE IT. As important as money may well be to accomplishment of any revolvment into peace and freedom, it is not worthy of one person being put into jeopardy to accomplish our business.

V.K. Durham offered in sealed contract a billion dollars per state in the Flood Zone states just experiencing total disaster in the U.S. and guess what? Not one response from anyone—and especially silent is the State Department! Well, G-7&1/2 meets in June so it will be interesting to see what happens there in Denver.

Dharma is actually not any better at all, physically. Perhaps ten years of this 24-hours-a-day load is not realistic, after all. She must stay quiet lest she lose her voice entirely and that would be most inconvenient for speaking engagements. It has now become simply a transient problem which could not be properly attended because of legal matters and other interruptions while we made other plans. Actually, we just keep our eye on THE GOAL, remain prepared for ANYTHING, remain absolutely flexible, stay at PEACE in all intents and actions—and wait upon the Lord to give us our assistance. Meanwhile we do that which we can in order to stay in print and do a bit of healing.

We have not lessened our writing one iota but have had the necessity of holding it.

Has the "enemy" won? Come now, does GOD win or what? I have to remind you over and over: "You have to know when to hold them, know when to fold them and then, brother, you had best know when to walk away and let them trap themselves!" And further, if you must spit—I suggest you turn away from the wind—BUT REMAIN FACING THE LIGHT SO THAT SHADOWS DON'T CREEP INTO YOUR SPACE AND BLIND YOU. Just know when to hold on, when to let go—and the wisdom to discern each and both. But most of all, when challenges seem to come aboard your ship of life—welcome them for, as with a full cup of wine or water, you have to sometimes EMPTY THE OVERFLOW SO THAT YOU CAN HAVE ROOM TO FILL THE CUP WITH THAT WHICH IS WHOLESOME AND GOODLY AND ALLOWS FOR COURSE CORRECTIONS.

Satan is alive and well on planet Earth—BUT GOD IS ALIVE AND WELL IN THE UNIVERSE! This becomes a totally impractical match—for Satan!

Is Dharma the only speaker and writer for me and/or my compatriots? Gracious no. You have been getting an overflow of offerings directly from this place EVERY WEEK and that has NOTHING to do with Dharma OR Doris. We keep the focus OFF so nobody knows who to damn or strike. One target is enough and Dharma can handle it while the work goes right on going on. And you out there make it possible. You might think your cards and letters, gifts and remembrances are not noted? Oh my, they are THE glue, bandaids, hairpins and bailing wire that holds ourselves together.

Will we ever have meetings again? Of course, and they shall be greater than ever before, but since we have no claim to group, church, cult, or other alliances, we will keep ourselves independent, totally without cause of anyone to damage us, and we shall be fine and in recognition of the FACT that since onset of our immediate work—GOD HAS ALWAYS GUIDED CORRECTLY AND WITH GREAT WISDOM.

AUDIENCE: When we asked this teacher the question, "How do we know if we're doing the right thing?" he said, "By the results." So we really can't know if we're doing the right thing 'cause we got to wait for the results. Or can we actually predict the results and know by that means, or are we just under the power of intuition?

DAVID: Well, I just disappeared up my own backside, and I'm trying to let that out—No, no, I'm only kidding. I think the question that we need to ask at all times—no, the question that I need to ask at all times—is, "what is my intent?" You know, if my intent is positive, then that's good enough for me. What the outcome is, we then learn from and we get streetwise. But it's the intent, I think, that is the key point. If you put the intent out there—it's like people. When you put the intent out there that you want to reveal this stuff, you're putting out the magnetic vibrational field, and therefore that magnetic vibrational field then starts pulling back to you the stuff and the experiences and the information and the people you need to interact with to do what your intent puts out there. This is where focus comes in. If you're not focused and you say, "Yeah, I'd really like to kind of reveal this, but I don't really know how and I'm a bit confused," that state of being is going out as a vibrational field, and it's going to pull back complete bloody confusion and chaos around you. This is where focus is so important: "This is what I want to achieve. This is how I want to do it, with love." And that's going out and that will pull back a focused set of physical circumstances interacting, synchronistically, which will manifest what your intent is.

In the end, if the intent's out there, powerful enough and focused enough, there's nothing that could stop us. Absolutely nothing. Certainly not the consciousness that George Bush is interacting with, which is, I think, in evolutionary infinity terms—the consciousness that's running this planet—is intellectually sharp, but spiritually in the kindergarten. I think that the children just need a little word in their ear and they need to evolve also. And I think it's so important we don't give too much power away to this, you know, because it is just a local difficulty, in Creation terms. And we live forever, and the next second is the first second of the rest of our eternity. Whether we get taken out or whether we don't get taken out, we will just continue our evolution into infinity.

My knees are knocking as I speak. I'm terrified. I think that, if we can hold that big picture, we actually, the higher of our consciousness we can access, the more powerful the magnetic energy we're accessing and projecting into this world. Therefore, the more detail we can pull back towards us in terms of synchronicity and attracting to us all the things we need to do.

People don't talk about a magnetic personality just as a throw-away. That's what we are. We're magnetic people. The more magnetic, the more power the magnetism we allow in by getting these eggshells out of the way, the more we will manifest exactly what we need to do. We said earlier, money's just an energy. You can attract it to you or you can push it away. You can use it positively and you can use it negatively. I mean, in physical terms, most of it doesn't exist anyway. Well, it's obviously energy because it's fresh air. So, I think, if we come from a space of thinking that it's going to be difficult and, "oh, yeah, they're all so powerful" and all that stuff, we're going to create that reality big time. We come from a space that we are multidimensional infinity. This is going to be sorted. And that's what we've come to do. It will be sorted. It's just a thought. It's just a state of mind, it's all it is. If we get the mind-right the feelings right, and the intent right the physical world naturally comes right because the physical world is just a reflection of that, I think, anyway.

Oh, we can take some more later. Shall we have a cup of tea?

We have become close friends with those who spouted and damaged in the media at the whim of our adversaries. Even the local TV station is producing some outstandingly important persons who can actually have our network operation when God is ready to create it here. As with most things God is working on to create a better way—you just don't know what it might be that is happening beyond your own nose and fingers. And no, we don't share that which can stop our receiving what is necessary. Wouldn't it be totally stupid to advertise and publish that we have an ongoing negotiation with the Dalai Lama of China/Buddha now banished to Tibet? Well, we do, and one of our people is spending time with him VERY SHORTLY. It was very generous of him to come to the U.S. and lessen our own burdens. Oh, don't get flustered; Clinton met with him—why can't citizens? Ah, but guess what: Clinton COULDN'T meet with this teacher/leader in the Oval Office of YOU-THE-PEOPLE because it "might" irritate China and other Congressional Zionists who won't tolerate another concept of Spiritual TRUTH. Am I a Buddha-ist? Nope. I'm not in agreement that there is only human journey to perfection for that is ONLY A PORTION OF THE FACTS OF IT. Do I agree with the CHRIST TEACHINGS of famed "Buddha", the leader? Yes, I believe and LIVE all of Christ's teachings to the full extent of my capabilities and those are quite abundant. Do I believe the Christ teachings of the Muslims? Indeed. Do I believe the Christ teachings of the Christians? Yes, but only the CHRIST teachings—not what "Christianity" itself has become. It is a non-Godly-based RELIGION which places first in definition "Judeo". Is this bad? I don't JUDGE but it IS, by very definition, THE OPPOSITE MEANING OF CHRIST. This term now represents the ZIONIST movement which just yesterday had its 100-year birthday. Didn't you realize that? So be it.

Religions are for physical experience as "human" enterprise. SPIRITUALITY is of SOUL. What is the intent of YOUR SOUL? I am NOT of the following of John the Baptist, Constantine, The Pope of Rome, or any other such as Martin Luther or Harry Carrie—I AM A PRACTITIONER OF CHRIST TRUTH AND A SERVANT TO GOD CREATOR IN LIGHT, THROUGH LIGHT, AND OF LIGHT. ALL MAN-MADE DOCTRINES ARE THAT: MAN-MADE DOCTRINES. SOUL ONLY NEEDS CONNECTION WITH AND THROUGH GOD AND SELF.

I have just heard Akhenaton described again as the "Heretic Pharaoh". What? Who? He recognized ONE GOD OF LIGHTED CREATION and that seems to classify the poor sucker as a "heretic"? What exactly DO YOU BELIEVE? Is some man, like Martin Luther, going to come back and offer you divine and eternal life? How is he going to accomplish that task? Did not GOD promise to send HIS HOSTS to attend you who KNOW HIM? Well, God is here; I (Host) am here, and I don't find Martin Luther or John Calvin around.

You have been sent, as messengers, MANY great and brilliantly wondrous teachers—Socrates, Buddha, Confucius, Jesus, and on down the line of time immemorial but it hasn't really "SAVED" anything or anyone. Only YOU can offer SELF salvation, and THAT is what every messenger of God, every teacher of truth, and every spiritual leader of Truth has brought to you for your use, and you look to THE MAN and never mind the TRUTH.

Do I need your blessing or your confirmation to somehow PROVE MYSELF? Of course not, and when you look for your own confirmation in all the WRONG PLACES, you won't find factual TRUTH—for truth abides in EVERYTHING but is elusive in ill-intent. You seek TRUTH in things that are visible and pleasing to your sensing beings—which is the very liar himself at work in your domain. You want me to show myself? Why? I would then be a reproduction of YOU instead of that which I AM! The same with my "craft". You want a hard and physical object—but when it becomes physical and an object in density—it is NOT a reflection of MY SHIP. It becomes your IDEA of what might be. Further, that object will be exactly like the projected images placed into your unrealizing minds by those who control you.

Do I have followers? I CERTAINLY HOPE NOT! My only purpose in this entire journey is TO HELP YOU REALIZE YOU FOLLOW GOD CREATOR AND THAT IS TOTALLY SUFFICIENT. YOU MUST FOLLOW THE WORD IN TRUTH. GOD IS THE WORD, THE THOUGHT, THE TRUTH, THE LIFE, THE LIGHT—AND IS ABSOLUTE LOVE—IN UNCONDITIONAL ALLOWANCE.

So, if we need something, can't we create it? Of Course!!! However, "why" you might wish to create some things is well beyond reason and logic. If you, for instance, create 3 tons of gold coins—would you have arrived at where you need to be? Of course not—you would have simply created more wealth for your kings and controllers. We must always create within the WILL OF GOD so that what we gain is that which we can use and hold, and that, within all laws of God AND MAN. Remember, money (gold) is neither good nor bad—IT SIMPLY IS! Its recognition of use according to the criteria of good or bad comes in the use of it and that can only be attributed to MAN. A dog, for instance, may well wet upon a lump of gold—or coal—and realizes no difference. We need the "value", not the substance! Further, we destroy NOTHING for our only INTENTION, ever, is to CREATE A BETTER WAY, THING, USE, SUPPORT, TRUTH, HONOR, INTEGRITY, LOVE, AND BEING IN FREEDOM. We fight no one, even if we use the term to indicate opposition; we subvert no thing and/or no one; we attack no thing or no one; we only build that which services all things and all persons. If there are evil persons or intents—they shall have to change or fall of their own accord for we do not even give them the energy of attention. Let them stir in their own hot soup. YES, WE GIVE THEM "ATTENTION" BUT NEVER THE "ENERGY" OF ATTENTION.

Attention to something is NOT giving energy to it. It is a gaining of information and knowledge "about" that focus. Never give it your energy. Offer YOUR ENERGY to God for HIS use and ask that it be used for HIS WILL and ACCOMPLISHMENT TO BEST AND HIGHEST GOOD—AND YOU HAVE IT! But you have to know what is WRONG before you can FIX IT INTO RIGHTEOUSNESS. You can't even know whether a road goes in the right or the wrong direction—UNTIL YOU KNOW WHERE YOU ARE GO-ING. And, if you are in Chicago, Ill., U.S.A. and wish to go to Mexico, and you head north toward Canada—is it not wise to turn about, head south and realize possible arrival in Mexico? The interesting thing is that on that road north—it becomes a roadway south—eventually. However, you have to walk over the North Pole, which can frost your toes and the likelihood of ending up in Mexico becomes remote unless, of course, you know what you are doing and take a super jet AIRCRAFT. Even then the turbulence may very well "getcha".

Now, why would you, further, choose a roadway that has no throughway passage—if you can know in advance by simply reading, correctly, a map? Why would you take a path to get from California, U.S.A. to New York, U.S.A. and have it not pass through the Rocky mountains? Why do you continue to put whole mountain ranges in your roadway when all you have to do is KNOW and pass them by, go over them or whatever else is available? The first point here, however, is to KNOW WHAT IN THE WORLD YOU WANT TO GO TO NEW YORK FOR OR TO DO! Is it a destination chosen or simply a city on the way to reaching the Atlantic Ocean? Aren't there easier ways to reach the Atlantic Ocean from the Pacific Coast?

If you, however, have your worst enemy following you to try and get your assets and perhaps even your life, would you not direct him to New York where he is entangled in the massive confusion—while you go directly to the East Coast via shortest routing to reach the ocean if you be on the West Coast? It is called "reason", "logic", "intelligence" and yes, WISDOM.

How many gifts from God will YOU refuse? How many gifts do you ask for and seem to be in failure of receiving? Do you KNOW what you want, your goals, your directions? God cannot GIVE you a gift unless you ACCEPT IT. A "gift" remains only a thought or a thing until it is received and accepted. And, how many gifts do you CLAIM to GIVE when actually you want PAYMENT for the idea or the thing? A person is stupid to even consider accepting a "gift" of poison and drinking it. If you DO NOT know what you do—poison is as apt to be in that "gift" as goodness. With the government "gifts" it is ALWAYS POISON, AS A GOOD "RULE OF THUMB"!

May you always remain OPEN for ideas to circulate through that wondrous mind GIFTED by God and held by each recipient. A gift unused is but an insult to the gifter. Why would you hold the only TRUE GIFT in the universe—AND NEVER USE IT FOR ITS POTENTIAL TOTALITY OF CREATION? Salu.

A Note From New Gaia

Dearest valued customers,

We would like to ask for a moment of your busy time to extend our thanks for your continued support.

Here at New Gaia we have recently gone through many changes and expect that adjustments will continue until we get things right. We realize that many of you have been dissatisfied with the service you have received from our office. Some of the recent changes should rectify most of the problems.

At times we run out of product and, because the products MUST be kept in the freshest possible state, there is little we can do about that. We do our best to prevent this from occurring, but at times we drop the inventory too low and have a delay. At this time we do not have an adequate back-order system, therefore if it appears that an out-of-stock item will be available shortly, we hold your entire order. This generally does not exceed the stated allowance of 3-5 weeks for delivery. Certainly if we know an item is out-of-stock, we try to inform you of that when placing your order. At times your orders come through the mail and, of course, we can't notify you of the outages. Also, it could help for you to know that, when mailing-in an order, it takes approximately 10 working days for your order to be received in our office. Please take this into consideration.

We do our best to get your order out to you as quickly as possible. Sometimes as soon as within one week, but there are times when it is more likely to take 3 weeks, from the time you place the order.

Again, thank you, for your patience and understanding. If I [Diane] can further help with these concerns, please call me at New Gaia: 1-800-639-4242.

More "Inconvenient" Data About Oklahoma Bombing Fabrication

4/30/97 NORIO HAYAKAWA

I rarely send any FAX to you at CONTACT unless something highly important comes my way. And surely it has!!

I have just recently (a few days ago) acquired a color photocopy of an astounding aerial photo allegedly taken by a private pilot in early April of 1995 (before the bombing), near Camp Gruber (near Braggs) in the state of Oklahoma. The pilot apparently is remaining anonymous for fear of retribution.

This amazing aerial photo shows a yellow Ryder truck tucked inside white walls within an enclosed area of what appears to be some type of temporary makeshift military-type of quarters. Several humvees can be seen, also some dark-green tent-like covered quonset huts and possibly military trucks.

The private pilot was flying over Oklahoma state in early April of 1995 (before the bombing). He began to notice a small clearing in the forest area near Camp Gruber, Oklahoma. He became curious because he noticed a white-walled enclosure with makeshift-type quonset huts and several humvees parked along with possibly dark-green covered trucks. He became curious and decided to fly a little lower, and from the side he noticed that there was a yellow Ryder truck inside the white walls within the enclosure. For the next few days he didn't really think much of any significance of what he saw.

Then, after hearing the astonishing news for the first time about the Oklahoma City building bombing on April 19, he was shocked to learn that a Ryder truck was involved in the bombing! He then remembered that he had indeed seen a similar Ryder truck in the area he flew over. So a few days later, he flew over the same area again and, to his astonishment, the whole place was already dismantled!! I got these photocopies just a few days ago through a source that I consider fairly reliable (in taken by private pilot in early April, 1995 near CAMP GRUBER BRAGGS, OKLAHOMA — pilot returned later after April 19? — place completely dismantled my opinion). You are welcome to link the web-site to yours. This is a web-site which I made just a couple of days ago. The information belongs to the public!! But no news media would dare publish these photos (for fear of retribution?)!!

It's at: <http://members.aol.com/bardsquill/truck.htm>

I would certainly appreciate if you could circulate this widely.

The web-site is accessible to anyone. This belongs to the public!

Update Fax To The Above

A truly astounding alleged aerial photo taken by a private pilot in early April of 1995 (2 weeks before the Oklahoma bombing) over what then appeared to have been a makeshift military-type encampment within U.S. Army CAMP GRUBER, northeast of Braggs, Oklahoma, has surfaced (2nd generation color photocopy) and can now be seen at: <http://members.aol.com/bardsquill/truck.htm>

The pilot is now getting ready to identify himself, despite fear of retribution.

The photo was taken approximately 2 weeks prior to the Oklahoma bombing. Approximately one week later, the pilot flew over the same area and the encampment was gone. You can tell that the camp had just been built. There are also two large portable chemical tanks located on site.

Soltec: Further Signs Of Pacific Plate Tensions

5/7/97 SOLTEC

Thank you for taking the time this evening to sit and write. Thank you for listening and hearing my call. Yes, it is I, Toniose Soltec, come in and with the Light of Holy God of Light, God of Creation, and with the Golden-White Christ Light. Do not struggle with your thoughts; allow my energy to flow. Thank you for clearing your space and for lighting the white candle. This is a symbol for yourself, and it will, if you allow, help you to focus upon the task at hand.

I am with you this day to tell you that we at Command, sit at an extremely high state of alertness. The agitation, the ear ringing, the nervousness you and others are experiencing now is due to the stresses which are present RIGHT NOW upon your planet, for many of you are "sensitives" and are experiencing physical reactions to the stresses and changes of your planet.

Do not be distressed over these things, for you are MEANT to be in tune with your planet! Over time, those upon your world have become desensitized to the "nature" of things, and only recently are so many becoming once again attuned to your planet's inner workings.

In a writing on 2/11/97, I called to your attention to watch Japan for clues to impending further pressure build-ups around your tectonic plate called the Pacific Plate. At that time I said:

"Watch Japan VERY closely during the next several weeks. Watch for POSSIBLE activity to occur in this place—beginning with many small quakes, followed by an earthquake which could well register up to 9.5 on your present scales.

"As the Pacific Plate continues to grind against all adjacent plates, watch next for POSSIBLE quake activity to begin along the coastlines of the Americas—both South and North. There is indication at this time that, should quakes occur in Japan, there would follow, within three to five days time, some significant shaking along the coastal areas of the Americas."

Now, so far that "big one" has not yet struck Japan. However, as that writing was going to press, there WAS quite a swarm of smaller quakes in the general area of the Japanese Islands and these, in turn, continue to cause many repercussions.

There is extreme pressure that has built on the eastern edge of your Pacific Plate, and though this place has been experiencing many small-to-moderate earth tremors in the past several weeks, the pressures are but slightly relieved in that place. The ground there is in a brittle state, which means that rather than being in state of flexibility, it acts more like a dry piece of timber, and the pressure present now could easily cause it to snap, which would result in a most violent earthquake.

This is not a prediction, and it is, of course, not carved in stone; however, the state of alertness under which we are operating is in part due to this state of high tension all along that eastern border of the Pacific Plate. There are several points at which the plate is in a locked state—that is, the plate is attempting to move, and movement is not possible and, therefore, more pressure is building at these critical points.

I realize that we have been down this road many times before, and each time, a large, devastating quake has been averted. However, it is our agreement with you ones that we will inform you at any time this area is in a state as critical as at present.

The preparations should already be in place for those of you who are going to prepare. We are not going to go over that one again, except to say to be ready, for the potential for SEVERE activity is there, right now.

There are also other activities present now which we need to bring to your attention.

The volcano 43 miles southeast of Mexico City, Mount Popocatepetl, whose summit is almost 18,000 feet high, is showing signs of building to a massive eruption. Those who live near this place are living in GREAT danger.

Several small eruptions have already taken place, but these only work to make people complacent about a massive eruption. Though warnings have gone out, there are those who say that this mountain has been erupting for eons, and thus are not concerned.

Many have already fled the area, for they have been forewarned; others have heard the warnings before, only to have them never pan out. These ones are remaining and refusing to leave the area.

If the volcano should really blow its top, these ones will not have a chance for survival.

And, yes, there is a definite correlation between the tremendous swarm of "UFO" activity in Mexico (especially in the area of Mexico City) and the impending, explosive state of the volcano. As usual, much information on this subject has been suppressed by your controlled news media outlets. However, avenues such as Art Bell's late-night talk-radio program have provided much factual reporting on this lively "UFO" activity being observed around Mexico.

Is this activity increasing? Of course, and it shall continue to do so. That, however, is all that I shall say about that, except that these craft are NOT from your planet.

There will be many more of these types of "natural disasters" which you ones are going to experience in your time. Do not allow selves to be so overwrought with worry, fear, or grief that you find yourselves unable to function. You knew, before coming into this lifetime, that these were the times and challenges for which you incarnated, and it is NOW that you ones are most needed.

We must have channels through which to get the messages out, and though the free-will human element of choice always exists, we must continue to use those channels who have come to your place at this time for this purpose. It is not always an easy task, for either you or us, for while you ones want to participate and assist in the mission at hand, there is always that human element, prone to fears and other distractions, which can and does intrude.

Though it can, at times, be a handicap for the task of messaging, it is also that human element—the "Spark of Life" or Light from Creator, so to speak—which makes it all possible. So it is somewhat of a "Catch 22" situation for both of us. We will adjust frequencies on both ends of the spectrum whenever necessary and whenever possible, so that the messages can flow with the highest possible "fidelity". This is not possible with ALL third-dimensional humans, for first must come the desire to serve, and to serve selflessly, and that, dear ones, is a most rare quality amongst those on your planet today!

Very few are they who have determined to work and serve without worrying about personal compensation, for you live in a world filled with greed and lusts for material possessions, and power. It may come as a surprise to you ones, but power is more sought after than even monetary gain.

As your world grows more and more crowded, and more and more impersonal, there is the desire within the third-dimensional ego to be recognized, thus the impetus to generate something through which to call attention to oneself, for these ones are fearful of being lost in the crowd, so to speak. So, ultimately, these ones strive to achieve more and more recognition through many different sources. For some it is career, for others it is outrageous actions, but the ultimate goal is the same—recognition.

It is all due to the fact that each of you feels as though you are losing your individuality. And, as you continue down the accelerating path toward your planet's transition, these tendencies will continue to increase, until at last the transition is completed. Then, and only then, will balance begin to return to your now very much out-of-balance planet.

All the political games of power are, in the long-term, for naught, and the struggles in which your world finds itself embroiled at the current time, are but that—games, and these too shall, one day, come to a halt, when finally the transitional process has been completed.

However, see that you pass not judgment upon these ones, for they are but acting out their roles in this play. Each one has their own lessons to experience, and you know not another's agreement prior to entering into this life.

Karmic retribution is in full-swing, and that which is sown is also being reaped. But the germination time has much shortened, and what might be called "instant karma" is occurring. There is not much time left for your world in the third-dimensional framework, so many ones upon your planet are experiencing that karma in their current life streams. You have but to watch what goes on around you to see that this is truth.

Be cautious, however, for not all is of the Light; in fact, very little upon your planet now is of the Light, and that is why it is all the more important for you ones to gather about you your protection of Light, and maintain it at all times. It does not hurt to reinforce your protection several times throughout the day, if you feel it necessary. Better to call it in more than needed, than to not call upon it and leave selves exposed and vulnerable.

The darkness is very subtle and very enticing, and sometimes will even APPEAR, at first, to be of Light; however, it is not Light, and will flee from your presence when you bring the Light about you. The darkness cannot and will not stay where the Light is. So, to stave off the darkness, keep yourselves in the Light at all times!

I will here again emphasize that your world is in a very grave state at present. Can the process be reversed? I do not see how, and the only way to the other side is to go through what is on the horizon. There is no turning back now, for you have come too far. Once you have reached the other side, you will see that the trip was all worth it.

The numbers of those who shall make it in their present physical state will be few. It is a hard truth to hear, but you need to hear it, and not lose sight of your goal once the REAL turmoil begins.

As another useful direction in which to keep watch for clues to the upcoming turmoil as Mother Earth efforts to reclaim her balance and shake off the poisons, I again return to my earlier writing of 2/11/97. Therein I suggested that you pay attention to the anomalies around you. That is:

"I would like to urge all of you who have animals near you to watch them very closely. They are telling you that the Earth is about to give a great heave. Watch for abnormal migrations and animals showing up in odd places. Watch your house pets, as well, for many of them are exhibiting odd symptoms of apparent illness or they may be just acting 'weird'.

"You see, these creatures are more attuned to the frequencies of the planet than are their two-legged counterparts, and they will begin to react long before earthquakes and other geophysical events take place. Watch them also for out-of-the-ordinary behavior, such as dogs biting who normally don't bite—that sort of thing. Those of you at the coastal edges, watch the tidal activity, for there are many, many small earthquakes occurring within the depths of your oceans and the tidal activity will reflect these occurrences."

It is NOW that you ones must make yourselves ready, for time has run out. Prepare yourselves quickly, and then be watchful, for it is coming. Keep your eyes upon the skies and your ears to your planet. Be mindful and attuned to our calls, for they shall be on the increase. Remember, this is why you have come to Earth-Shan, and you are about to come into your fullness of purpose in this mission!

Many will there be coming unto you and asking for help. DO NOT TURN THEM AWAY, BUT LIKEWISE DO NOT ALLOW THEM TO SHIRK THEIR RESPONSIBILITIES TOWARD SELF AND OTHERS. IF THEY ARE TO MAKE IT THROUGH, THEN THEY MUST PICK UP AND CARRY THEIR OWN LOADS. NONE SHALL MAKE IT ON THE BACK OF ANOTHER! Each one will, of his own, make it or not make it, and there will be no victims in this transition—only personal choices.

Be not in fear of the changes that are upon you, for they are a very necessary part of the transition. The Earth will heave to and fro, and many wondrous things will you experience, but lose not your sight upon the final goal. We will always be there with you, and we are but a call away.

Now, let us close this writing, and allow the information to settle within each of you. The Light is about you—keep it there and stray not from that which you know to be The Truth. We of the Heavenly Hosts are very near you, and we are in the service of Holy God of Light. We thank you for your time, and for your determination to see it through the upcoming changes.

I leave you, as always, in the Light of Holy God. Toniose Soltec to clear. Salu.

72-Hour Kit Checklist

- ☐ Water
Stored in a portable container. Rotate regularly. Have at least three gallons per person (for a three day supply). Have a water purification method.
- ☐ Food

TELEPHONE HOTLINE

805-822-0202

This is a service for our dedicated readers. Today's Watch telephone hotline carries the latest news and comments from Commander Hatonn's most recent writings. This is our way of keeping you informed about fast-breaking news and events.

The message machine will answer after 2 rings if there are any new messages for that day, and after 4 rings if not. Thus daily callers can hang up after 2 rings and save toll charges if no new message has been recorded. If the hotline does not answer your call then that means that there is currently no hotline message.
