THE SOUL WALKS UPON ALL PATHS

9/6/01—#1 (15-021)

RE: PETER PRINCIPLE: REACHING A LEVEL OF INCOMPETENCE. PROVING THE THESIS; GAMES PEOPLE PLAY—GCH/D

GAMES LEADING TO TOTAL INCOMPETENCE: "CRY WOLF" AND "LOOK HOW HARD I TRIED".

Hatonn—OIP is a term accepted in this land of the Philippines as valid: Only In the Philippines. Well, sorry, you elected few: It is now Only In Planet Earth (OIP). Therefore, we now have to deal with both oip and oippee or oyip and yippee! But are we "laughing all the way"? No, it gets less entertaining every game played. If you just recognize that life's game is exactly THIS way, however, you will be OK—IF YOU STAY THE COURSE.

Has something gone wrong? No, only "Philippine Time" which is NOT. What was to happen yesterday may or may not happen Today, this morning, this month, this year and so on down the line of possibilities. Probabilities are not really in play because nobody can make it over the hurdle of the thousand-possibilities syndrome.

If you, however, are at ready and expect the "wolf cry", you will prevail at the end of the game. Every individual in THIS game simply seeks the "best deal" for self—and THAT has ever been thus. Once the "deals" are set, we may yet get this program moving. The "cry wolf" may well be related to something specific but the games people play will be present at every confrontation or interchange—usually as individuals reach beyond their level of competence. Frustrating? Yes, but what else more important do you have to do? Check every circumstance and you will ultimately realize it "didn't matter at all" and you can't even remember the date something didn't happen—but only the event.

Remember that someone else's problem may just possibly be larger than YOURS.

Already come responses to my more recent writings regarding gaining control of self, healing addictions, and GIVING. Is it possible that we REALLY don't know of what I write? Is there some better, more human, way to explain or express? Usually! People hear what they WANT to hear and it is only when they are willing to listen to that which perhaps they don't want to hear that progress is made. You have to WANT change to change. You have to want that change ever more passionately than what you are or what you are doing to place it into motion (and then make the journey) that which lies before you.

I like to equate this to something very simple in your old "which came first, the chicken or the egg". Lay an egg and it simply "is"—it just lays there. Lay a fertile egg, however, and it will present you with a chick which then has legs and really gets around and, yea, it can even fly. Humans can also fly as is proven by the craft in your sky. The soul can fly without need of craft—so possibilities are without limit.

GIVING

This is also a realization in self-flexibility.

By this statement I can better example by suggesting you look at that which you "give". Do you give in expectation of return? And, yes, it is good to give in expectation of return—but that would bear a bit different definition than simply “giving”. Mostly, we are exchanging. And this too is good, for you are exchanging something you hold or have for something another holds or has.

Mostly, “man” will make studied “investments” under the guise of “giving” and that too is honorable and noble.

In “giving” to a project or program, you are beginning to act in concert with others who make their own contributions, even if it be a bit of prayer to support the “mission”. For this kind of giving you can certainly expect more reward from the gift, even if it be of a very different nature than what you gave.

I would say, however, that those without specific demands on the return will be far and away the most content of the “givers”—because you will not dwell on the “return”.

Indeed, you “fear” “need” for self? Knowing this we never suggest you GIVE BEYOND THAT WHICH YOU EXPRESS. Why? Because you need to, yes, be as stable as you can—but I will remind you that you will never be as secure as you would THINK you need to be. If you “fear”, you will have a “need” and it becomes your working point—you ARE in need. And my goodness, readers, I do NOT speak here of some money exchange—I speak of giving of self. If you give nothing and expect others to give to you—it is sad, indeed, for you will find yourself surely in need!

If I might define a bit, possession(s). What are possessions except things you keep and guard for FEAR you may need them tomorrow?

I can tell you now that when deprived of those things, you will find you WILL and CAN survive quite nicely and even with a great deal of relief from the cares of having to attend such burdens.

Some give simply to gamble and change their minds at the drop of a whim. Well, OTHERS, who are doing business, expect a contract to be honored and your whim might well be unacceptable. But YOU made the contract, so have you a right to snatch your input BACK? Sometimes, yes, but most often, the business plan was based on YOUR CONTRACT.

People, and especially people so wrapped up in themselves as to become addicts, specifically of substance abuse, are only interested ultimately in themselves and getting the substance to allow remaining totally wrapped up in SELF. It simply is a fact of the circumstance.

When you give of possessions, you must consider that which you offer—for it CAN be a gift of self or it can surely be very little, indeed. If you HAVE many possessions, you see, you can share and have little impact on self.

When you give, however, that which means something to you and offer it, you are giving of yourself. Giving of yourself is that which you TRULY are GIVING.

I asked that our fundamental alliance be called Global Alliance Investment Association for a very specific REASON. Investment is a word that means “input of self”—not some monetary investment program for exchange or brokerage. This means that our program is an alliance and an association of we who work together to accomplish “a better way”. I wanted it to read out in the acceptable use of alphabet shortcuts to be GAIA, because our program is a LIVING exchange where there is an EXCHANGE of value, as in breathing out and breathing in. This is the exchange wave action of living things, be it rocks, frequencies, sound, or LIGHT. If you GIVE into the program and we gain success, which we WILL (for with a goal in target we “have to achieve”), we also gain abundant return, although our return may well be in monetary exchange because we can only continue to “serve” as we ARE. Please humor me and say that this makes sense to you.

There are those who give little of the “much” which they have—and they give it for recognition—and their hidden desire makes their gifts of a most interesting nature. This, however, is appreciated in its very ability to sustain the program, project or people receiving the “gift” in even “investment”. It is only unacceptable when the giver wishes then to control everything involved because he “gave” (not really a gift at all).

There are those who have little and give it all, or even just share what they feel they can. These, as you might guess, are the believers in life and the bounty of life—and finally it is noted that with these wonderfully-intentioned people, their coffers are never empty. Give with God in HIS program and you SHALL be blessed, for that is God’s way.

A great prophet once gave a lesson on this topic and it is worthy of recollection because we all seek understanding, yea, even unto myself who must walk YOUR way in order that I can experience your discontents so that discouragement and “drop out” do not overwhelm your attitudes.

What did that prophet offer?

“There are those who give with pain, and that pain is their baptism.

“And there are those who give and know not pain in giving, nor do they seek joy, nor give with mindfulness of virtue;

“They give as in yonder valley the myrtle breathes its fragrance into space.

“Through the hands of such as these, God speaks, and from behind their eyes He smiles upon the Earth.”

PURPOSE

Ah, indeed, this is THE biggie of life and living. “What is my purpose?” goes the endless line of questions. “Tell me my purpose, Sir!” I can tell you YOUR purpose until the rain falls in the barren desert and YOU still may well not have even an idea of what that purpose might be in actuality—or you have to CREATE your purpose through “giving” and this giving is really often very difficult: YOU MUST “GIVE” UNTO “SELF”. ARE YOU ACTUALLY WILLING TO GIVE THAT MUCH? MOSTLY PEOPLE ARE NOT.

I REMIND YOU OF SOMETHING SURELY TRUE WITH GOD, OR IF YOU PREFER, YOUR HIGHER SELF: UNTIL YOU ARE WILLING TO GIVE IT ALL, IT CANNOT BE REALIZED IN FACT. YOU FIRST HAVE TO REALIZE THAT YOU MUST “GIVE” UNTO GOD AND SELF THAT WHICH IS OPEN AND RIGHTEOUS—OR YOU HAVE NOTHING FOR GOD OR SELF TO RETURN IN ABUNDANCE. EVEN A PHYSICIAN, OR BETTER YET, LEGAL COUNSEL, HAS TO GIVE THAT WHICH IS REQUIRED TO RECEIVE THAT QUALIFICATION TO EVEN BEGIN TO “PRACTICE” AT HIS CHOSEN PURPOSE.

Facts do remain, however, that it has to be the most demeaning circumstance of all that God and his people have to beg alms after they have given all they have and hold—to create the “purpose” all claim to want.

First, God gives you life, then patiently waits. Then you must “give” of yourself to grow—along with use of the gifts originally offered for your use. Then finally you have to open your heart and your hands to be able to RECEIVE, even that for which you thought you wanted.

Most people forget the first bargain (contract) made even though it is well documented and available for your recognition and reminding. Who is at fault that God finds no container into which to put his return? Do you fill your container to the brim and disallow any possibility of refilling? Oh, yes, indeed, mostly you do exactly that. You claim “losses” when there is nothing lost. Even a man bearing stocks on the market does not lose anything as long as his investment is holding and that which holds his stock is viable. If you force liquidation, you lose, yes, indeed—for that is the business aspect of realization. Otherwise, YOU have to declare the loss by destroying the contract or selling at a loss. This is simple “business” fact. And yes, in the world today where you have so much impact on business, you are quite apt to lose everything on that “market” because MAN has chosen to accept no value as a base for any such business games as you have conjured.

To prevent YOUR (our participants) losses, my friends, we are basing on value which CAN return, and set the price, of our fundamental basis of that which we CREATE.

Man must RETURN or become in an exchange of VALUE. That VALUE must be structured in such a way as for accounting, exchange, and stability of both output and expectation.

Back for a moment to today’s drama here in Manila. We expected people yesterday with, yes, that old hard yellow stuff for a “test run”. Oh, they claimed for weeks to have the commodity. They, further, have been “having it” available for a long time but just never quite could make it into town.

Yesterday they called and had “no way” to get it moved. So, the man in charge or receiving got a car to move it—and they would be here with it this morning bright and sharp. Ah, but, one of the delivery persons got a text message that his father had died and now, he could not only not come but had to have P2,000 minimum to handle the emergency! AGAIN. These people lose their parents over and over again—day after day. Their relatives have more hospitalizations that they can’t afford than any people on Earth, and they need help to start to school many times a season. These people make dramas as the wind blows.

What about the other two expected? Well, no word from one of them AFTER the man involved, a Mr. Bashar from Saudi Arabia, rented a car for them—wow, probably the end of a car as to return of same.

Then the third—well they didn’t show and when called to task about it they said they had to be paid in full today and never mind the assay. That elderly gentleman, also an attorney, told them to go to you know where.

I have to remind you about frogs and toads—to get to the prince. There are always a thousand times more “operators” than “holders” AND we need it to come together in a positive fashion which can extend to our needs in “a” central bank.

I don’t want to have you unload commodity from the Southernmost areas of the Philippines, down in “God’s” vaults, until we are structured to utilize it better for our PURPOSES than simply as filler funds.

Note that BIMP-EAGA is working its way up again through the entropy. That is the East Asia Growth Area of Brunei, Indonesia, Malaysia and the Philippines. President Arroyo has just within the last two weeks made special meetings with these particular HEADS OF STATE. They must have “backing” and they are going to have to sooner or later take a stand in the financial world and that means a probable confrontation with the IMF/WB at the least.

So what of GAIA? Well, we stand ready, willing and able—to back that program with GOLD, but it must be with the solid, hard metal, my friends. We DO NOT deal with “paper” as V.K. Durham apparently believes we are stupid enough to pursue. She has called us stupid; we’ll just see won’t we? We use paper to present and exchange intent and lay a basis for accounting.

Now, why would we be patient? Because the southern groups of indigenous and tribal people hold the assets and they will more readily deal with their own tribes which are the Malays, the Moros, the “Bangsas”—and they can and will deal with and through the Islamic-bank structures. There are no corners on Muslim anything down South, so stop the nonsense about Christians vs. Muslims. That may well be present—but the elders who know the ropes are NOT EITHER.

Plus, hear this: The New World Order would certainly like YOU to believe what they put to print and pay-off people to accomplish FOR THEM. No, it is NOT the way it is presented and the shock is going to be devastating to this nation as it is when realization of truth and facts comes forth.

And, no, we will not bring forth God’s wealth to feed off to the greedy reptiles waiting for the feasting. We continue to build our good reputation and stand strong and steady without compromise. Let the fools show themselves as themselves—and we will meet whatever presents.

It is, friends, that you want your ears to hear and eyes to see the things your heart KNOWS. It has ever been thus but wisdom does not tell all so that the journey is worthy of the taking. That is to recognize the worthiness of the participation and ANTICIPATION of watching your goals and intentions unfold.

I do have a team that will not, though they could do so, grab for themselves and leave others wanting. This is why it takes such a long time to see who will stay and who will go.

Bellringer likes to repeat and repeat that which Latona/Young will present over and over ad nauseam: “Go within...”. Indeed, you have to go within but it doesn’t do a whit or tittle of good when there is NOTHING within, either in attitude or information. And to espouse the fraud upon readers that “I” would give such empty lessons is an insult to YOUR intelligence.

You might well go to your teacher and ask for this very realization of Self-Knowledge. What would be the answer from a teacher worthy of the name?

“Your ears know in silence the secrets of the days and nights, but your ears thirst for the sound of your heart’s knowledge. You would know in words that which you have always known in thought. You would touch with your fingers the naked body of your dreams.” In other words, you somehow feel the only true realization you can hold in your dimensional expression is that which your “senses” offer. Ah, BUT, chelas, “information” is as intangible as thought. You can lead the horse to a book but that does not mean he can take in the message.

By the way, you can KNOW you ARE! But you have to grow to learn the how you ARE and the why YOU ARE. You can’t even pin down correctly the totality of WHEN you ARE.

You can have a powerful radio and yet—if you know not how to use it or lack a power source to run it—you have nothing of value.

To really understand “self” you first have to realize that self is a sea—boundless and without ability to measure. Your soul is even greater than these, while there are no scales to weigh your unknown treasures, my friends.

We have to be very cautious that we do not “EAT” the seed-corn because we grow too impatient for the harvest. I also suggest you look with care upon every input in that you are not foolish enough to state that you have found, somehow, THE truth but rather, that you have surely found “a truth”. Sometimes “a” truth is but that which tells you what is “a” lie.

I like a statement which was made that said: “Say not, ‘I have found the path of the soul.’ Rather say, ‘I have met the soul walking upon my path.’” FOR THE SOUL WALKS UPON ALL PATHS.

The soul and that which is the realization WITHIN, walks not upon a line, my friends, and neither does it grow like a sprout or a reed. The soul unfolds itself, like a lotus of countless petals ever awakening as it reaches for the Light of realization.

SO, SPEAK OF TEACHERS AND COHANS (PROFESSORS)

Oh, my, students; no man can reveal to you except that which already lies half-asleep in the dawning of your knowledge. Furthermore, you cannot demand to receive the information you simply “think” serves you and only yourself. Neither can you demand that a lifetime of information be instantly downloaded into your brain depository to be withdrawn when it is most convenient to you for your wishes and interests to be met.

I, for instance, cannot give you wisdom. I can only offer unto you a bit of faith, some lessons and my love in offering you that which you seek. If the teacher is, indeed, wise he does not bid you enter the house of “his” wisdom, but rather will lead you to the threshold of your own mind that you may hold your own wisdom.

A musician, for example, may well play or sing to you of that which he chooses and himself hears as that of the cosmos and ultimate space. But, you my student, must have the ear to hear it—and even then you will only perceive that which YOU receive.

An eagle may well give you a ride, but if you and he are to soar, he cannot give you his wings. In the same context the vision of one man lends not its wings to another, even though he can mentally share the vision to great extent—until it creates the manifestation of the vision itself.

FRIENDSHIP

Yes, this is a very large UNDERSTANDING. A friend is your needs answered—and let us attempt understanding this statement. A true friend comes as close as you can reach to unconditional acceptance. However, in the friendship you have to reciprocate with truth and that same unconditional expectation. This does not mean unconditional functioning in every facet of that life of either or both. I put no boundaries on your-my friendship but I do place conditions on our ongoing ventures. A friendship indicates respect, honor and reverence for that of the other in good times and of bad as might be perceived. However, it does not mean that one can interpret and assume that which is the other’s.

I hope you will understand this as well: It is for a friend to fill your need, reader, but not your “emptiness”. You must learn to be a FRIEND and not just a “codependent”. And, no, you are not a good friend if you are simply a “yes” echo. You are less than whole if you are but a shadow.

In all things you must look beyond the SELF and yet, only within yourself can you decipher the messages and find balance. This does not infer that you shall find solutions to problems—but peace enough in harmony to seek and LEARN the lessons placed before you.

Just knowing what IS is not recognizing that which must come next: DOING THAT WHICH MUST BE DONE TO USE THAT WHICH IS. And, yes, you must first ease the pain, feed the starving—but there must be better solutions than either charity or welfare can fill. Yes, indeed, teach that man to fish—but it doesn’t mean that you can’t front him some hooks, weights for his line and some bait. I would also remark that it is silly to teach a man to fish in the middle of a desert. You will have to teach him how to gain the water to grow the fields and then, in abundance, you can produce fishponds. But if the man has starved to death, it matters little what you offer. FIRST, STOP THE PAIN. THEN, AND ONLY THEN, CAN YOU HEAL THE BODY AND SET FREE THE SOUL.

But that is for another discussion.

May the light that shines always show you the way in WISDOM so that you can also “see in the dark”, for, yes, you certainly CAN.

I have told you over and over again that Doris is not a prophet nor a seer. I am both!—GCH

THANK YOU

We here in Tehachapi—the ground crew seemingly more directly related to the actual output of CONTACT, God’s glorious publication—wish you out there, our kindred and supportive readership ground crew to know something of extreme importance.

Since this publication became basically purer—and left some of its more egocentric presenters behind—it has evolved toward being more truly in the hands of GOD and its dedicated readership.

This includes a financial shift toward readership support as a reflection of that trend. Our fewer, more dedicated reader-contributors are coming into greater awareness that they are paying for what they want and need. Our reasonable rates allow all who wish, to have this priceless information—but always remember we get what we give, and our soul growth is, of course, strictly according to this rule.

Commander always advises soul growth is directly between the individual and GOD—and so is this publication developing to be a purer link between its readership and GOD/ATON/ALLAH.

To a greater extent than ever before, your contributions have kept us going and we are in awe of the dedication shown.

Our thanks is in our realization that you care about CONTACT enough to keep it going, so we all can continue to grow from its presentation of communication with our Higher Source.

Heart- and Soul-felt thanks—CONTACT Staff

Manipulators Won't Tolerate Uniqueness Or Individuality

9/3/01—#2 (15-018)

RE: THE ADULT YOU MUST BECOME, AFTER HUGGING THE CHILD WITHIN; LET'S LOOK AT ADDICTIONS FOR THERE ARE SO MANY

HABITS, DEPENDENCY, CODEPENDENCY AND ADDICTIONS ALONG WITH COMPULSION AND COERCION

Hatonn—Is one better or worse than the other? Neither: THEY ARE.

These are only “words”, readers—YOU give them definition by how you personify each.

One of the saddest of all observations is of the incredibly inept handling of “recovery” habits which often keeps an individual from ability to take charge of his/her life. If, for instance, a group helps to outgrow a dependency, is it not possible that the group itself becomes the next dependency to maintain a measure of success earned? Is this not in some way being “codependent”?

A bad habit replaced with GOOD habits is certainly admirable unless the good habit is used and becomes a battering ram which can also destroy the ability for you, as example, to take control of YOUR LIFE.

Let me adjust an attitude assumption before we go further: If you want a drink of alcohol, or a smoke, or a drug, etc., if you stop and meditate for an hour, this may well be appropriate (or not as circumstances might dictate). However, if your house is on fire and you have this compulsion to simply sit and meditate for an hour before you CAN adequately function—you are going to get scorched pretty badly. Worse, if you must call a support person before making a move, you also are not “in control”. Perhaps you may never be in total control of your life and, in addition, you may well wish for and thrive on the “new” friendships and relationships. I just would like to point out that ALL groups are not in the best interests of the ones seeking help.

Let us take as an example such groups as are formed for “alien abductees”. Watch out because you simply feed into one another, especially through unrecognized hypnotherapists more interested in their books and opinions than YOUR HEALTH. There is hardly a person on planet Earth who wouldn't go within and into trance that can't give a complete detailed report on being abducted. Your subconscious mind (“unconscious” is NEVER an appropriate definition instead of “subconscious”) will believe anything fed into it in a vulnerable trance. THAT is where programming is most important.

This is, however, why honorable therapy with assistance from a knowledgeable hypnotherapist CAN produce pure miracles THROUGH THE PERSON WITH THE “PROBLEM”. However, programming through conjured imaging is the more common outcome as the tinkers search for their own ideal conclusion or outcome.

Are these experiences in mind, REAL? Of course, and sometimes are more “real” than the illusions you experience every day of your walking, breathing expression you call “being alive”. And, yes, it is THE MIND at work in every instance, even in physical addiction. The addicted baby born into drugs has no idea what its body is demanding—or its mind; it simply cries in pain which reaches out for solace and “a fix” of the problem.

A body itself may well nag for “something” and you may well have learned what that “something” might be—but it is the MIND that will determine what it is YOU DO ABOUT THE CIRCUMSTANCE.

So, do you just take the aspirin for the headache you acquired from the caffeine you would rather NOT give up, and thus become “addicted” to aspirin? This is only an example using two things to which you as a general reader might be able to relate.

There are also the very seriously fractured persons who simply cannot face TRUTH and will insist on living IN THE LIES to satisfy that need of irresponsibility or the consequences of knowing Truth.

Hard example of this plight: A person has an intimate affair with another partner who has acquired AIDS or some other death-dealing disease which may or may not be hidden. When truth come forth of the circumstances, how many move into total DENIAL about possibilities? Is that denial from SELF or in protection of the other while wishing to not appear party to the activities, or at the most, a participant in the game in the first place?

We can note that these people in denial are troubled in a most remarkable way and usually continue to support the very “other” which put them at disadvantage as the “other” goes about his/her life while actually continuing to flaunt the “rejection”—while usually hopping from one to another partner in his/her lack of self-control and in search of satisfying his own dependency or addiction or, yes, indeed, codependency. This is exaggerated but is very much a part of TODAY'S accepted behaviors. Moreover, it is why you are being infected, infested and invectived into enslavement.

People will often move right along to the terrible piper even after they meet the truth head-on, and keep right on dancing to that drummer rather than take responsibility for self in order to learn truth.

Therefore, some “recovery” groups are more damaging than the original adjudged “fault”. This, however, does not infer ANYTHING about any specific group or circle of support persons. I have continually been asked for comments on this topic and it is time to turn our attention to same. The point is to look at what you might be doing and WHY. It is now a time of chaos and intentional confusion while also being a time of a disallowance by manipulators to tolerate uniqueness or individuality.

The programming goes on endlessly day and night from all the electronic media to the most subtle radio scatter waves. You are experiencing a time where it is like two people arguing over which brand of tobacco will kill you first.

Trial balloons are sent up all the time to see how people will react to given scenarios—yea, even to the Chandra Levy-Condit idiocy. Watch who gets on the TV live-shows and bashes and convicts without trial or hearing, and it shows exactly to what the public will respond and what the public will ALLOW. So, WHO, exactly is “after” Rep. Condit? More important, WHY? No, it is NOT “unimportant” and it is not over a child in Washington's bedroom games. This may all very well allow for some sensational television noise but it has a very important MEANING which goes beyond the destruction of a man's career or that of a missing girl.

Goodness me, could it actually be a CONSPIRACY? Certainly, and so too can be codependency of any kind. Perhaps “codependency” is actually just another term for “conspiracy”. I ask that you think on that for a minute. When one being or thing cannot function without another being or thing—you have codependency AND conspiracy.

I have always respected those avenues which “work” for addicts and propensities toward negative behaviors, especially those so very damaging to SELF. However, JUST to continue life in an always “recovering” attitude lacks ability to truly heal or cure self.

Talking too much can sometimes be far more damaging than getting inebriated. Are there good groupies to cure or rehabilitate such addicted talkers? Certainly, you will not find them on Larry King Live especially among Jewish lawyers espousing their Jewish superiority as to brains, engaged or disengaged from the mouth or brain.

Perhaps these obvious displays of total misbehavior as to seek and destroy rather than presumption of innocence as are presented by recognized legal counsel on LKL speaks louder than the sum of all their loud and ungracious behavior. It is that which undoubtedly prompted Shakespeare to suggest that to get anywhere at all you would have to “first kill all the lawyers”.

One night a beautiful blonde non-lady states that Condit is guilty of probable murder and the very next night when confronted says she did not say such a thing. And guess what, readers in the U.S., THAT IS GOING OUT AROUND THE GLOBE EVERY EVENING AND MORNING AS CNN IS THE ONLY INTERNATIONAL RESOURCE. The United States of America is now the laughing stock of the globe and this is WHY it is now recognized even in little Third World Philippines and Botswana as “little Israel”.

Even now at the U.N. meetings taking place, the Jewish Rabbis are marching against Zionists. They bear signs reading “Israel does not represent world Jewry” and “Authentic Rabbis have always opposed Zionism and the State of Israel” and “END Zionist occupation and oppression NOW”. And, NO, this is not some tale to fit an Anti-Zionist call to arms of some kind as gossip: The International news plastered pictures around the nations. FIRST, YOU HAVE TO KNOW ABOUT THAT WHICH YOU SPEAK—DON’T YOU?

But for now: back to the topic of the Codependency Conspiracy. I would like you to have backup information because this touches on almost sacred grounds and, YES, I do know that help in intervention and detoxification, if the addiction be poisons of any kind, is necessary in almost any case. People who “just quit” have had that intervention of MIND over the problem. Is that a conspiracy with God? Not usually, but it is a conspiracy with MIND, usually asking for support and assistance from God.

I would like to use another’s observations respecting this topic by a Dr. Stan J. Katz, a clinical psychologist.

[QUOTING Dr. Stan J. Katz:]

When you’re lost and don’t know where to turn, the loudest, most compassionate voice you hear is probably the one you’ll follow. In America today, that voice belongs to the self-help movement. Whatever the nature of your pain, there is bound to be a group of people with similar problems who, having been there, they assure you, they will understand what you are feeling, as well as the problems you are experiencing in your daily life. They promise to offer empathy, comfort, and reassurance, without blaming or judging you and, through their example, you will gain the courage to dig deep down and uncover the source of your pain. Above all, you won’t be alone any more.

Unfortunately, the most alluring voice is not always the most helpful. Self-help groups may entice you with reassurance, acceptance and validation, but few offer real solutions. They do not promote full recovery. They promote dependency under the guise of recovery. And many are more concerned with proselytizing than they are with the real needs of individual members.

In my practice as a clinical psychologist I have worked with hundreds of drug and alcohol abusers, molested and abused children and adults, perpetrators and families in crisis. I know the anger, pain, fear and shame that addiction and victimization can cause. I also know that many individuals and families are enormously resilient and that many many more can develop the resilience to completely recover from even the most tragic or profound crises. Yet such resilience is undermined by self-help programs that teach members to view themselves as powerless and disease-ridden, by “recovery experts” who maintain that virtually our entire society requires lifetime treatment.

In recent years, I have seen a marked increase in the number of my patients and patients of my associates who are members or veterans of self-help programs such as Alcoholics Anonymous and the related “Anonymous” organizations. Some of these patients joined the groups on their own, while others were referred by therapists who had endorsed the programs without fully questioning their value or validity. In many instances, the patients’ original problems were exacerbated by their self-help programs. Additional conflicts were often caused by the policies or dynamics of their groups.

Before going any further, I should make a distinction between the organizations that I call self-help groups and those I describe as mutual support groups. The two terms are often used interchangeably, so that mutual support sessions for cancer patients are lumped together with self-help groups for people who spend too much money or “love too much”. This ignores some crucial differences between the two approaches. Specifically:

* Mutual support groups generally are designed to help members deal with a specific problem or life transition, such as the death of a family member, but do not encourage lifelong membership. Most self-help groups instruct members that they must attend the group for the rest of their lives in order to maintain the recovery process.

* Mutual support groups frequently are supervised by individuals trained in leadership skills, who ensure that every member has an equal opportunity to share their problems and opinions and that the most vocal members do not monopolize the group or antagonize other participants. Most self-help groups are led by nonprofessionals and may prohibit professional involvement. Often the only qualifications for leadership in the self-help movement are membership in the group and familiarity with the group’s program.

* Mutual support groups allow members to share their experiences and offer personal feedback but do not impose blanket prescriptions or behavior programs. Most self-help groups, conversely, prohibit personal advice-giving but teach members that their recovery depends on their adherence to the group’s program for beliefs (often the Twelve Steps used by Alcoholics Anonymous or a variation of the Steps).

* Mutual support groups encourage members to view their problems in the context of their lives as a whole and to believe in their capacity for complete recovery. Self-help groups teach members to view their lives in the context of their problems and to relinquish the notion that they can ever achieve complete recovery.

[H: PLEASE CAREFULLY CONSIDER THIS NEXT BECAUSE RIGHT HERE IS WHERE PEOPLE TEND TO DRIFT OFF INTO AN EFFORT TO “BECOME” AN “OFFICIAL” GROUP, CONGREGATION, CLUB, ETC., OF SOME SORT. IT IS IMPERATIVE FOR YOU AS A PARTICIPANT TO DISCERN WHAT IT IS ACTUALLY YOU ARE SEEKING AND FINDING.]

When people come together for the simple purpose of consoling, listening, empathizing, and sharing experiences, the results can be magnificent. These, after all, are the hallmarks of friendship—that vital, healing connection that has become so rare in today’s rushed and anxious world. True mutual support groups do not pretend to offer anything more than friendship, and that is their great strength.

The groups that I refer to as self-help groups have a far different agenda. Their mission is to help members change themselves, but only by embracing a prescribed set of beliefs and behaviors. Recovery that occurs by any other means is dismissed as self-delusion or denial.

The self-help movement began with the founding of Alcoholics Anonymous in 1935, and for some people who are truly addicted to chemical substances—the people for whom AA was founded—this approach may be their best means of salvation. But the movement today encompasses as many as 15 million members whose problems range from drinking and eating to shopping and worrying too much. Many of these people are NOT true addicts. They are people with problems who need guidance, support and acceptance, but they are not powerless. They can recover completely. They can achieve self-reliance. For these people, self-help programs may provide the best way to begin the recovery process, but in the long run they may do more harm than good.

[H: This has to be carefully considered because you are going to find that sometimes some of the actual “programs” which begin the program will often today handle more than one addiction—and that can be from making an effort to separate out other persons who are a part of the “cause” of the number one addiction, as well as possibly attempting to break other habits which accompany, usually, the primary problem, i.e., smoking as well as alcohol addiction. If you move right out into an AA program to maintain recovery of the alcohol problem, you might well find that smoking gets you in a most uncomfortable environment because there is a standing joke about AA meetings—and that is that you may not die of alcoholism but you may very well die of cigarette smoke inhalation. Let’s just work our way through and find some balance. What you are REALLY seeking is to fill some kind of a void or need within self and, yes, a truthful association with that which you WANT to accomplish. You will, therefore, need to go with something that will ALSO allow you to stand ALONE—just you and GOD. All else will then fall into proper perspective. That wondrous attachment or connection with that God-self is going to be the support system—and you may as well face it right up top. That is the ultimate for an addict or a non-addict. We are not looking particularly at that which is associated with “addiction” as such, but rather, that which allows you to stand as an individual quite alone with self—but with God, whatever that source and resource might be. Every individual must have a spiritual resource—for soul IS SPIRITUAL and every being has a soul. You must get total association with the soul in its realization of TRUTH and STRENGTH, and let go of the feelings of helplessness. YOU ARE NOT ALONE AND YOU ARE NOT HELPLESS AS LONG AS YOU ARE A THINKING BEING. IT IS WHEN YOU GIVE OVER YOUR POWER TO ANOTHER OR SOME “THING” THAT YOU SLIP INTO THE HELPLESS MODE OF OPERATION. When you get rid of that which physically interrupts clear thought, i.e. alcohol as a good example, you do not have “need” to slip with the other categories, for thought capability is intact. Neither, however, should you be inhibited from getting extra help and support, if you can support it financially and find it. Everybody can use HELP, my friends—

everybody. You can be in the very middle of a hubbub of people and still be lonely—ASK FOR HELP. You must ask and seek to find!]

Of course, this is not what you will hear if you attend a self-help meeting. According to the movement's leaders, virtually everyone needs to be in a self-help program because everyone, theoretically, suffers from the same chronic disease, a cross between addiction and victimization—more popularly known as codependence. Self-help experts insist that, because this is a disease, it is not your fault if you are codependent. Because it requires treatment, you are powerless to control it on your own. And because it is chronic, you can never put it behind you. The healing power of the group theoretically will enable you to bring your sickness under control, and as long as you stick with the group's program you can keep on top of it. However, if you leave the group or abandon its program, you will relapse. [H: But, of course, that outcome is entirely up to YOU, isn't it?]

Such "treatment" may make you feel good, but it can limit your options and alienate you from the people and opportunities you most need to help you reclaim your life. It works like symptomatic medication, making you feel and function better as long as you follow the prescription but never really resolving the underlying ailment.

My objective is to show you how to move beyond both your problems and the limitations of the self-help approach, so that you can complete the recovery process.

[END OF QUOTING]

We will pretty much follow along with this presentation as in a series on the topic, but I must tell you in advance that I am going to hit on a lot of topics and SELF-SUCCESS instead of just "self-help" discussions. Mostly, you don't need "help" as such, you just need to learn "how to" treat yourself as an individual and not as some trained entity. In that realization, be successful and then you can begin your own "get it healed and out of here" group. A good refresher occasionally is a very good thing in which you are allowed to participate and share but without embarrassing self with some load of guilt or self-devaluation.

YOU ARE PERFECT, YOU ARE WHAT YOU ARE—AND YOU MAY OR MAY NOT HAVE A "PROBLEM". THERE IS NO MORE OR LESS. I ALSO SUGGEST YOU GRAB ALL THE HELP YOU CAN GET—AND THEN KNOW THAT YOU MUST GIVE THAT HELP "BACK"! IT IS THE GIVING AND REGIVING OF SELF THAT MAKES THE DIFFERENCE IN YOUR OWN SELF-EVALUATION OF WORTH. IT WILL NEVER BE MEASURED TRULY BY WEALTH AS IN RICHES (MONEY) OR IN SELF-EGOTISTICAL BOASTING. IT IS THE SIMPLE GIVING AND REGIVING THAT WILL BRING BALANCE AND HARMONY INTO OUR "SELVES".

If you have made errors in judgments or actions, atone (try to make it right). If there is, as with errors in child rearing and the child is grown now and it seems too late—make it right through communications and change—OF SELF—if that be the cause and THEN, ONLY THEN, do you ask for a discussion on "forgiveness".

Forgiveness has NO MEANING otherwise.

If in your addiction to whatever, you have hurt others, you must make restitution to the very best of your ability (and that is usually more than you are willing to give) and then you can regain respect and esteem for self and from that "other".

Sometimes you will find that the "change" itself must come from the OTHER. Wow, that requires the most courage of all other circumstances and is often NEVER ACHIEVED.

However, be very careful as to what you present to self or that "other"—and in every instance if the addictions are damaging to self mentally or physically, you can never assist any "other" or self by staying trapped within the addiction. IT IS NEVER TOO LATE NOR CAN YOU BE TOO OLD.

Again, why am I spending time on such a topic as this?

Chelas, it is not enough to know something of Truth—you have to move with any positive change and until we can understand one another as in clear realization, you have no ability to function other than as you have been trained to perform. With Truth and true realization YOU TAKE ON RESPONSIBILITIES—FOR SELF AND FOR YOUR NEW REALIZATION. YOU CAN NEVER "UNKNOWN" WHAT YOU COME TO "KNOW" AND THAT STOPS A LOT OF PEOPLE COLD IN THEIR TRACKS. RESPONSIBILITY IS NOT THE SAME MEANING AS "AUTHORITY". Those assuming authority without responsibility are lying to themselves and to all those who "join the group", self-help or otherwise.

The point is that each and all are dependent on others or things of one type or another. It is when there becomes a conspiracy with the co-dependent that the trouble falls into the rut of "just another attempt" at something which may or may not fail. Try that several times and you will surely fail, for that is the pattern you structure for self.

Don't have that first beer or the next one. Don't have that puff on that cigarette—just don't do it.

I am continually amused at the games people play with and on one another. The old "if you don't, you are on my list and I will tell on you", is at the top of the list. Who, exactly are you going to tell? You first have to have a bunch of someones to read your book of lists and who give a whit. It is very difficult to find either, much the less, both.

If tales are lies, confront them. There is no need to argue or even debate (not at all the same thing). An argument is a never-ending ADDICTION and nothing more.

People will surely try to make you become a King Solomon and literally cause you to cut the baby into half—or even more pieces if the first plan works. Truth cut into pieces and even just in half is no longer worthy of being called "truth".

Will there be the albatross for the necklace? Indeed. And, will there be the "other side"? EVERY time. Somewhere, however, lies the TRUTH of every circumstance. Sometimes there can be negotiations—but there is always an error in outright compromise. Sometimes the better part of wisdom, however, is to simply withdraw from the controversy.

Remember through all the travails is that the most dangerous statement or programming is the

"I can't!" YES, YOU CAN!! The weakness lies not in getting help but rather, in NOT getting help from someone who really wants to "help" and not just instruct you in their way or opinion which might be just as damaged as your own attitude. This is not being "mean"; this is being wise.

Attacks are always but a visible sign of the attacker's weakness and insecurity. You can differ in opinion without "attacking". If there is proof of something brought against you which is wrong—state it clearly, back your position and DROP IT. If the "other" is offended it is none of your business.

An argument that continues on and on is no argument, it is a warped way of life. What are you trying to prove? Note the word "try" which remarkably enough means "failure". So again, I suggest that if you find self in a position of being accused—state facts, prove same and leave the opponent to their established and demanded misery. And, the wiser approach in legal disputes is to give no help to the opponents' cause.

When you decide to take control of yourself and your time, which is limited on an Earth scale, you will find all sorts of miseries departing. A burden is nothing until you TAKE IT.

When you make sure that what you do is right in action and intent, then you will find self without having to hide or run—for standing IN that light and truth is the best strategy there is. And know that when you lie about that position in that light, you know that bubble will collapse and you will be the fool. Be careful, every time, every thought, every action and GOD IS YOUR GUARDIAN.

Every ONE has their guardians, guides, angels and teachers. ALL HAVE CREATOR. So, enjoy, commune with them—but just don't get stuck in fairyland. Know that Alice in Wonderland might well be entertaining, even appealing—but it's still nuts.

And, yes, there are a couple of you who asked for Dad's hand today and thus, here it is.

I cherish you—and you are my friends—and there can be no greater than that. When it is returned it is a blessing beyond. I would hope that I represent that which is far beyond just being a teacher of some kind, for you are far more to me than just a bunch of school children making "let's pretend".

YOU certainly may just call me "Dad"—and I will know we have reached recognition, one for the other.

NOW AVAILABLE

SECRET SOCIETIES AND THEIR POWER IN THE 20TH CENTURY by Jan van Helsing is now available by purchasing all 14 copies of CONTACT (issues of May 23, 2001 through August 22, 2001) containing the complete text. The price is $25.00 including domestic shipping.

This is not as compact as having it in book form—but our series is interspersed with Hatonn's Higher-Source commentary, which makes this presentation priceless as an initial, one-source explanation for current planetary chaos.

NWO's Plan For Children: Seizure Without Provocation

DSS—SOCIAL ENGINEERS
OF THE BRAVE NEW WORLD

By Nev Moore (President, Justice for Families),
massnews.com, 8/29/01

Although this article may sound “extreme” to many readers at first glance, please consider it carefully. So far, these programs will probably have had no effect on you personally, because most of these programs apply only to the poor—for now. The stated intent is to expand it to everyone.

The author of the article has had personal experiences with DSS [Department of Social Services] and has helped countless others over the past three years.

You can discover more about the home visitors program in Massachusetts (and its secret, intimate database of the mothers it visits) in our August 2000 issue or at our Internet archives at “healthy families”.

The staggering financial incentives that have corrupted DSS policies and practices were featured in the May 2000 edition of Massachusetts News in the article, “Adoption Bonuses: the Money Behind the Madness”.

It explained the financial motivation for DSS to snatch children and quickly force them into adoption. Previously, Ed Oliver had written a revealing article that explained how consulting firms are hired to maximize the revenue of DSS. These pieces tell why DSS does what it does. Easy enough for even the most uninformed citizen to understand. The questioning mind might wonder why the federal government continues to enable this terribly dysfunctional and destructive system that harms and kills more children than it “saves”. This leads us to the next phase: the madness behind the federal money.

It's no surprise to any of us (is it?) that there are many people who will sell their souls for a little bit of dirty money. Under the label of “liberal”, these brave new socialists are control freaks who are working out their own inner feelings of powerlessness and inadequacy by dominating others. These are the soldiers, passive-aggressive drones who tell you: “We're here to ‘help’ you—whether you like it or not.” It's easy to seduce small-minded, bitter people by offering a little money and unlimited power. The power to harm—without consequences—is irresistible to many.

Behind the money is a faction of people who are intent on bringing to fruition Aldous Huxley's nightmare vision of a brave new world: a homogenized population of compliant, controllable, government-raised citizens.

Reported in Detail

Massachusetts News reported all of this in detail in its August 2000 edition, including the work of Dr. C. Henry Kemp and his protégé, Richard Krugman, who was chairman of the U.S. Advisory Board on Child Abuse and Neglect in 1991. (See “home visitation” on our archives.)

The elite behind this movement are narcissistic men and women who wish to see the United States under a totalitarian regime which, of course, will not apply to them, only to the general population. The architects and engineers of this plan are, in reality, about as “liberal” as Pol Pot or Idi Amin. The plan is being implemented through the bill entitled “Goals 2000” which was enacted in 1994.

It's the end result of thirty years of work by others who work out of the public eye. Goals 2000 was presented as “education reform”. Considering that our kids graduate from high school not knowing how to read or write, on the surface it sounds like a good thing.

It sounds as if the education system will be reformed to bring back higher standards, which would be the logical inference. But, the real intent of Goals 2000 is to “dumb down” our children, rather than to raise their intellectual level.

Goals 2000 is about much more than just education reform. It is the blueprint of a plan to take control of our nation's children—the next generation of adults. A chilling clue to its true intent is that, among its proponents it is subtitled: “The Restructuring of American Society—from Cradle to Grave”. The government will be the “parent” of every citizen born in the United States. Each citizen will have an electronic portfolio that begins at birth [MM: Microchip?] and will track the person throughout their life. Their education and future place in the work force will be determined by the government. The schools will subject all children to psychological testing. Every parent will have a social worker who will make home visits, conduct a family assessment, and record “risk factors”. Risk factors include not enough toys, too many toys, birth of a sibling, death or divorce in the family, homeschooling, etc.

The unholy trinity that is enforcing Goals 2000 is: Child Protective Services (CPS), known as DSS in Massachusetts, the Home Visitation Program (see the August 2000 edition of MassNews), and Outcome Based Education (OBE).

The public is deliberately being kept in the dark as to how these elements are connected because the original proponents of this plan stated that it must be implemented quietly. Why is the intent of OBE to “dumb down” our children? Because a “dumbed down” citizen will not have the capability of independent thinking, will be less likely to challenge and is, therefore, more easily controlled. OBE is also responsible for eroding values, boundaries and morals. The schools, while paying lip-service to the need for discipline and structure in child rearing, in practice undermine parental authority and any form of discipline, self-restraint, or values that parents try to instill in their children. Children are being taught that they must accept the state's politically-correct ideas rather than their families' values and that their parents do not have the right to discipline them or make any decisions for them.

OBE amounts to thought reform—and thought reform is mind control. The December 1999 edition of WorldNetDaily contained an excellent review by Samuel L. Blumenfeld, a scholar who lives in Waltham, on The Deliberate Dumbing Down of America, a book written by Charlotte Thomson Iserbyt. Blumenfeld wrote: “Anyone who has any lingering hope that what educators have been doing is a result of error, accident, or stupidity will be shocked by the way American social engineers have systematically gone about destroying the intellect of millions of American children for the purpose of leading the American people into a socialist world government controlled by behavioral and social scientists.”

Example Close to Home

An example of deliberate dumbing-down occurred close to home recently when my assistant, Stacie Hevener, noticed that her 9-year-old daughter's graded homework contained misspelled words that the teacher hadn't corrected. When Stacie called the teacher to ask her why the spelling errors weren't corrected, the teacher said it wasn't important.

While OBE and DSS stories initially sound nonsensical and far-fetched—all logic and reason turned upside down—they fall into place when considered in the context of implementing a socialist agenda. To gain control of the populace the government must break down the existing systems that give people strength, character, and community cohesion: family, marriage, faith and intellect. This explains the puzzling fact that DSS is not targeting the drug-ridden ghettos where many families do live in filth and chaos and many children are truly neglected and abused. Those families are already broken down, and that is what DSS' role is—to act as the jackboots who will enforce compliance by the citizens and, ultimately, break down the institution of family until it is eliminated completely, leaving individuals isolated, vulnerable and dependent on the government.

So, instead of saving children who are abused, neglected and abandoned, DSS targets Christians, homeschoolers and families with strong marriages where two parents are committed to raising their children to be decent and self-sufficient, with a solid foundation of values and the capability to think independently. Most of us still believe that is the caring and responsible way to raise children, but this is exactly what the government doesn't want, as that takes the control away from Big Brother. During the Communist takeovers in Russia and China, the aristocracy and the intellectuals were murdered en masse as they would be the people most likely to see the larger picture and be capable of organizing to halt it. By the time the average working citizen, distracted by the details of daily survival, sees what's happening and stands to defend his freedom, it's too late. It's interesting to add the gun control issue into the equation, as disarming citizens is a key factor for successful government control. We have plenty of gun-control laws already, the problem is that only law-abiding citizens follow the law—and those aren't the people we need to worry about. Obviously, a person who has no compunction about shooting a stranger in the head is not worried about violating other laws.

There is no question that there is a powerful anti-father agenda in this country today, but we need to recognize that the anti-father agenda is a component of the anti-family agenda. The vicious feminist movement not only attacks men, but also attacks women who desire to be in a marriage and raise a family with their husbands. By removing husbands, the government can create isolation and vulnerability in women, as well as making them financially dependent on the state. Children may be questioned about whether their parents ever argue or yell. Any conflict or disagreement between spouses is documented as “domestic violence” and opens up a whole new funding floodgate.

Documented in Our Case Files

Anyone who thinks I am exaggerating can see copies of service plans from our case files which state “parents will not yell” and “parents will not have loud or angry arguments”. All people disagree at some time or another. Most people, at some time, become angry, argue and even raise their voices. Conflict is part of the human condition. Children have witnessed their parents argue for millions of years. It is not always comfortable, but not necessarily damaging either. Perhaps, by witnessing things, we learn how to do things differently. By grossly stretching the boundaries of definition for domestic violence, DSS has managed to remove thousands of men from their homes and from the lives of their children. There is plenty of sound, scientific literature on the negative effects of fatherless households on children, and the degree to which fatherlessness contributes to the emotional and behavioral decline of children. That is the goal of DSS, backed by the feminists.

This begins to explain why the funding to “combat domestic violence” is channeled through DSS. It is an anti-family, anti-Christian, pro-feminist, pro-gay organization. This is far, far removed from the original purpose of protecting children from abuse and serious neglect that place a child at “imminent risk of serious harm”. Their function is to act as social engineers enforcing a plan of “social restructuring” through coercion, threats, and intimidation by seizing or threatening to seize, our children. Remember, it is DSS who the police, the schools, the day care centers and the doctors call to turn parents in, not necessarily for acts of abuse or neglect, but because the parents are resistant to enforced government programs. Enforced programs such as home visitation, parent “training”, drugging or unnecessary vaccinations, explicit sexual instruction or participation in batterers “treatment” by parents. The threat of having your children seized, or never seeing them again, is a powerful weapon to force citizens to submit to government control.

While breaking down the intellectual development and moral fiber of our children at school, the schools are also subversively intruding into our homes. Many shocked parents are reporting bizarre and invasive questionnaires given to their children in school. Children may be asked if their parents argue or “yell”, if the parents drink, if daddy travels on business, or if there has been a death in the family and if any of the above frighten or upset the child. These are all considered “risk factors” in the Goals 2000 family assessment and will red flag a family for DSS intervention. Home visitation social workers will also note allergies, mother being overweight, baby crying, and letting kids stay up too late as “risk factors”.

YMCA Has Joined In

When our daughter was ten, her school called and told me that the YMCA was offering an after school “adventure” course on the grounds of their summer camp. It would involve the rope course and other outdoor, physical activities. This was offered during the winter so we thought it would be a great chance for her to beat the winter indoor doldrums. The YMCA sent home paperwork for us to complete. I was expecting the usual forms for contact information, emergency contacts, medical information. Instead I received a four-page interrogation. After name/address/child’s age, the third question was: “Has there been a history of foster care placement?” Some of the rest of the questions asked if any of the following applied to our child:

- Poor attitude towards authority
- Swearing
- Yelling
- Argumentative
- Listens to first request (are there really children who do this?)
- Family history of drug, alcohol, or tobacco use
- Poor choice of friends
- Please include any police involvement or arrests (of child’s)
- Age at first arrest
- DSS contact
- Fire setting
- Diagnosed mental health issues
- Sexual identity issues

Bear in mind that this questionnaire was for 9- and 10-year-old little girls. When I said that I felt the form to be inappropriate and invasive and that I would not fill out anything other than necessary information, our daughter was denied participation.

Licensing of Parents

In addition to the Home Visitation Program, which brings the government in control of the child before school age, Goals 2000 is being implemented through parent licensing, parent-teacher compacts, and parental report cards issued by the schools. These programs, under various names, are either in place or being proposed across the nation. Parental Licensing is still a point of controversial discussion, although legislation to pass it into law has been submitted in other states.

The government will determine who may have children and who may not. Jack C. Westman, a psychiatrist at the University of Wisconsin and author of Licensing Parents: Can We Prevent Child Abuse? explains: “A parent license would place the responsibility on parents to be competent. The burden of proof would be on the parents to demonstrate that they are not abusing and neglecting their children rather than on the state to prove through quasi-legal proceedings that parents are unfit after they have damaged their children.” So, parents will be in the position of having to disprove a negative, and having to prove that they will not commit future acts.

As one of the most prominent advocates for parental licensing, he adds, “We must create a new paradigm in which parenthood is a privilege.” Most parents feel that being a parent is a privilege, a gift from God that gives our lives meaning and purpose. But, should it be an entitlement given to us by the government? Does this mean that some citizens will be deemed workers, and others breeders? If the government will select who may propagate and who may not, how many steps away are we from mandatory sterilization of those deemed unfit by the government, or those who do not conform to a societal ideal established by the government? Or will we allow “them” to breed to provide children to others?

David Lykken, author of Antisocial Personalities, and a strong advocate of parental licensing, calls for the immediate removal of newborns from unlicensed mothers so that they may be placed directly into foster homes and quickly adopted.

Who will determine who gets the privilege of a license? Will it be used as a perk for those who “go along” and do not resist the socialist regime? Who will make the determination of who may have children and who may not? Will it be done randomly by a computer? The Illinois legislation established that not having a license would be grounds for the social workers to remove the children. An interesting sidebar is that although parental-licensing advocates are adamant about the issue, they do not feel that it is necessary for social workers or foster parents to have licenses.

Parent Training

Paving the way towards parent licensing is the “Parent Training” program, also enacted in 1994, which is already firmly entrenched. In the Reauthorization of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1994, local education agencies are required to reserve a percentage of their Title I, section 1118, “Parental Involvement” funds for programs that teach “parenting skills”, not to teens in school, but to parents who have children enrolled in the schools.

Schools are directed to “coordinate and integrate” their parental involvement strategies with programs like the “Parents as Teachers” program that was initiated in Missouri and became mandatory for all Missouri school districts in 1984. The program, which is a “home/school partnership that begins at birth” has spread to 44 states, including Massachusetts. In this mandatory program, parents are “trained” by “parent educator trainers” (PETs—can you stand it!). The program is based on the offensive assumption that all parents are in need of “training” and the majority are “at risk”. Which explains the condescending, overbearing attitude that we see in DSS.

The PETs use a Goals 2000 assessment tool called a “risk factor matrix” which includes 12 categories of “at risk” parents. As there is no code to indicate a normal, well-functioning family, any family can fit into the “at risk” category. Some of the questions from the Parents as Teachers workbook are:

- Does mother respond to child’s vocalizations with verbal response?
- Is mother’s speech distinct, clear, and audible?
- Mother occasionally allows child to engage in messy types of play.
- Mother does not scold child.
- At least ten books are present and visible during a PET visit.
- Parent comments verbally on child’s hunger cues.
- Parent does not offer food while child looks down or turns away.
- Parent does not compress lips, grimace, or frown when making eye contact with child.
- Parent verbalizes to child within five seconds after child has vocalized.
- Parent does not talk baby talk to child.
- Child stops displaying distress cues within fifteen seconds after parents soothing attempts.
- Other observations to be documented by PETs include:
 - Does child express distress during grooming (hair brushing, face washing, nail clipping)?

- Does child withdraw from splashing water?
- Does child have difficulty standing in line?
- Does child avoid certain tastes or smells?
- Is child a picky eater?

Child seeks all kinds of movement.

Child doesn’t seem to notice when face or hands are messy.

Does child jump from one activity to another?

Does child leave clothing twisted on body?

Child appears not to hear what parent says.

Child watches people move around room.

Does child squint in bright light?

The government agents who are using this workbook to assess your adequacy as a parent claim that these behaviors indicate child abuse and neglect. Perpetrated by you—the parents. They also include “passive abuse” which includes “neglecting to fill out school forms”.

Worcester School Has Parental Report Cards

To justify the need for parent training programs, the schools have initiated “Parent-Teacher Compacts” and parental “report cards”. Some compacts are simple, others can consist of dozens of pages of invasive questioning. Douglas Elementary School in Worcester, MA sends out a compact for parents to sign that states that they will “ensure their children get to school on time, well-rested and well-nourished in addition to monitoring their homework and leisure time”. Who is going to judge if you have adequately performed these duties? If the schools do not send out the questionnaires, they will lose their federal aid.

The irony is that the federal aid is only channeled to districts that need it because they are considered “disadvantaged”. So, parents in wealthier districts will be exempt from this governmental intrusion and judgment and will not face admonishment if their children ate candy bars for breakfast, or are not “well-rested” or the parents forgot to sign the orange homework folder each night.

In some school districts the wording has already changed from “compact” to contract, and mandates that all parents contribute a specified number of “volunteer” hours to the school. This may include baby-sitting for school employees.

Parent report cards document their compliance with the parent/school compact. One parent report card that we have obtained includes the following areas and questions (on the report card, a check mark indicates that the parent is “successfully nurturing the home/school connection”):

Attendance: Children should be absent only for the following reasons: illness, death of an immediate family member, observance of a religious holiday, or extreme family emergency.

Punctuality: the parent has the child to school on time each day.

Student health & safety: Has the child eaten healthy meals and snacks; dresses child appropriately for the weather; registers child for school aftercare program.

Parent-school communications: parent supports school policies; parent attends school functions; completes and returns school documents; has child return completed homework each day.

Parent involvement: signs and returns the daily parent homework checklist; attends parent-teacher conferences; volunteers in classroom; praises child often; follows through on school’s suggested plans for child’s success; spends quality time with child.

Given the extremely interpretive nature of the questions, who could we trust enough to make these assessments? Why should we be “assessed” when we haven’t done anything wrong? Do we really want to give government agents the right to assess us as human beings and as moms and dads for interpretive social reasons and in the absence of acts of maltreatment towards our children? Who is to judge if the time you spend with your child is “quality time”, or if you have dressed them “appropriately”? Is this before or after they lost their hats and mittens between your home and the school? Is that sugary fruit juice and chemically-sprayed celery a “healthy snack”? I know that I, for one, can never remember to sign the orange homework folder, but then I failed all the other questions, too. My child definitely cannot stand still in a line and, I confess, she absolutely squints in bright light, so I might as well just turn myself in to a "parental training camp", which is where parents who fail their report cards in Illinois have to go. I'd better start packing right away.

The recent case in Massachusetts about the boy who wanted to wear girls clothes to school and use the girls' bathroom illustrates the hypocrisy of this system. When we teach children about homosexual sex in school, we cannot pretend to be surprised when they assert their "right" to act it out. At the same time, the national media has been giving exposure to another story about a boy who was taken away from his parents by social services because they allowed him to wear girls clothes to school. In the Massachusetts case the lesbian Judge Linda Giles wrote: "This court trusts that exposing children to diversity at an early age serves the important social goals of increasing their ability to tolerate differences and teaching them respect for everyone's experience," in the 'Brave New World' out there.

How does DSS fit in? They are the enforcers who will remove your children if you don't "go along". A state police sergeant recently told me that DSS is the ultimate authority over all issues regarding children in Massachusetts. Experience and statistics tell us that DSS is neither a caring nor safe caretaker of our children. When DSS clients call the legislators for help they are told: "We can't help you, we have no power over DSS." Yet, I have a letter from U.S. Health & Human Services in Washington that says it is indeed the state legislators' responsibility to hold DSS accountable. The buck is passing faster here than a three-card Monty game in Times Square.

In the not-so-brave New World [Order] of Goals 2000, which already has much of it in effect, the government will dictate how we think and behave, how we interact in our marriages and relationships, even what tone of voice we use. Literature on battered women's syndrome teaches us that batterers are motivated by the need to control. This is accomplished over time by tearing down the victim's individuality, self-esteem and free will until the person no longer resists or attempts to assert any independence. This includes their thinking process. The victim becomes apathetic, submissive, and compliant—robot-like. This insidious tearing-down process is also the foundation of brainwashing and hostage-taking techniques and is clearly seen in the coercive government intrusion and control that we are seeing in this country today: the insidious removal of our free will.—<http://www.massnews.com>

BABY SEIZED BY STATE POLICE FROM MOTHER'S HOSPITAL ROOM

By Ed Oliver, massnews.com, 8/23/01

She Fears For Children's Safety While With DSS

The mother whose newborn baby was seized by state police and DSS agents from her arms at the Mary Lane Hospital last month, says she fears for the lives and safety of her newborn, Aaron, and her four-year-old, Damien, who are in DSS custody.

Her 5-year-old son, Kyle, died after a Rottweiler attacked him this June while in another DSS foster home.

Atty. Gregory Hession says the snatch from the hospital could be retribution by DSS for the wrongful-death suit the mother has filed against the agency.

In an interview with MassNews, Diana Ross from Ware said, "They murdered one child. I am not going to sit back and let them hurt my other two boys."

Compounding her worries, Ross said DSS placed her infant son and Damien together with two homosexual men who say they want to adopt them. "I told DSS I didn't want that. I said I think the boys should bond with their mother, not with gay men. They told me I have no say in the matter."

Ross told MassNews she would have the boys checked out at a hospital for molestation immediately after she gets them back from DSS, particularly after a gay, foster care parent in Worcester County was arrested last month for raping two boys in his custody.

Judge Is No Help

Circuit Judge Patricia M. Dunbar decided on August 22 in Hampden County Juvenile Court that DSS could keep custody of the newborn Ross infant.

Atty. Hession told MassNews that Dunbar said that DSS did not meet the burden of proof with the baby and did not make reasonable efforts to keep the child with the family. However, the judge decided that custody of the infant would remain with DSS based on Ross' previous history with DSS.

"Essentially, Judge Dunbar is saying 'we don't care what the law says. There is a problem here and we are going to take the child,'" said Hession, who added, "The department simply wants to take children rather than provide services so the family can stay together."

Hession said he would have to study the opinion before deciding on any future course of action.

DSS spokesman Michael MacCormack released a statement on the Ross case and told MassNews he did not want to comment further.

"The Department's decision to file a petition for custody of Infant A. Ross was the result of a careful review of this family's history, which was incorporated, together with information provided by medical, child welfare and mental-health professionals, into a petition filed with the Northampton Juvenile Court, and led to the temporary transfer of custody of this infant to DSS.

"Cognizant of Ms. Ross' desire to care for her infant, we are nonetheless mandated to insure that the infant's safety and best interests are protected in a safe environment. We are grateful that the Court's decision today affirms the Department's position on the safety of this child."

While mindful of the privacy of the child, DSS would not even reveal the identity of the "medical, child welfare and mental health professionals" with whom it consulted. Observers say it sounds like they are all social workers employed by DSS, but the agency will always use a phrase like that to avoid being accountable to the public.

Police Raid Hospital Room

After giving birth on Sunday, August 5, Ross says she was celebrating with her family in her hospital room on Monday. A nurse entered the room and took the baby, saying she had to check his vital signs.

Within minutes a posse of police, state police and DSS social workers swarmed the room and informed the family that DSS had taken the baby due to a 51A report of "neglect" which had been filed by a nurse only hours after the baby was born. The report alleges that Ross had not fed her baby "the right way" when she was in recovery and had allowed her mother to hold and feed the newborn.

The physician, Dr. Torbin Iverson, entered the mother's room to see what was occurring and expressed his shock and confusion at the state's action. He stated that the mother and baby were doing well and he had not seen any problems. It was difficult to understand how the charge of "not feeding right" could be made while the mother was under the care, supervision and scrutiny of maternity ward staff.

Ross told MassNews, "A DSS social worker told me they had a complaint of neglect and they were taking my baby. They threw a paper on my bed and told me to fight it in court," said Ross. "I was hysterical."

DSS Worker Runs Out of Hospital with Police

Ross' mother Sandra told MassNews that when she drove up to the hospital to visit her daughter, she saw a DSS social worker running out of the hospital with the baby and flanked by state and local police. She said a state policeman prevented her from entering the hospital.

Dr. Iverson told MassNews, "It was unusual for DSS to come in this manner and remove a baby. The times I saw the mother with the baby she seemed okay. She certainly seems to be very concerned and caring and loves her children."

Dr. Iverson, who is an obstetrician-gynecologist, told MassNews that although he can't prove that Ross is a fit mother, because it is outside of his field, Ross always kept her appointments and took good pre-natal care of her baby.

A copy of the "Nursing Progress Continuation Notes" from the hospital reveals that DSS told social workers at the hospital to tip them off when Ross delivered her baby.

The records note that after the birth, Ross was encouraged multiple times to hold the infant and the bottle upright, as well as stimulate the infant to stay awake during feeds. "Mother not following instruction", it says. It also states that the mother did properly clean and change the infant and that bonding was occurring between mother and child.

The nursing notes were relayed by phone to DSS social worker Ann Kochis, according to the notes.

Hospital Was Told What to Do

According to the notes, DSS told the hospital to issue a "51A Neglect Report" against Ross. The hospital informed DSS that they were unable to establish neglect in such a short time, yet, they filed the 51A anyway with DSS social worker Kay Durepo.

"51A form sent to DSS per their request. DSS aware that we are unable to establish neglect in such a short period of time. Form sent regardless", the nursing records state.

DSS Social Worker Ann Kochis and Area Director Ellen Patashnic at the DSS East Springfield Office refused to comment for MassNews, directing all questions to public affairs in Boston.

Attorney Greg Hession, who is helping to get Ross' baby back, told MassNews that in order for DSS to take the baby, the law requires either "serious abuse and neglect", such as broken bones, wounds and starvation, or "the likelihood of future serious abuse and neglect". He added that DSS "would have had to make reasonable efforts to keep the child with the mother."

Attorney Alan Goodman told MassNews, "The only abuse that has taken place in this whole situation has been the abuse of Diana Ross, the mother, by this bureaucracy called DSS that is out of control. DSS appears to be an agency bent on breaking up families under the guise of child protection."

Many observers point to the adoption bonuses that DSS receives from the federal government when it takes a child from its parents and adopts it out to foster parents.

Seized in 1999

Ross' two boys, Kyle and Damien, were seized in December 1999, after Kyle wandered outside the house. Ross, a single mother, had previously clashed with DSS over similar incidents.

Kyle was born in September 1995 and Damien in September 1997.

DSS placed Damien with a gay couple and Kyle was placed with Linda McNeil and her boyfriend, Eddie Finklea Jr., who kept a Rottweiler in the backyard.

"Kyle told me he loved me and wanted to come home," said Ross. "DSS told him he was never going home. I promised Kyle I would get him home.

"He told me he got hurt in the foster home. He had bruises on his bottom and legs and burns he said were from a flatiron. DSS told me the burns were from a heater. Kyle told me the people at the foster home locked him crying in the bedroom, while they partied with drugs and alcohol."

In a shocking story that made headlines, Kyle was attacked and killed by the Rottweiler in June of this year after he wandered into the dog's unlocked pen.

Ross' mother, Sandra Daneault, told MassNews that she remembers after they got the news, Diana was distraught and tearfully apologized to a photo of Kyle that she could not get him home like she had promised him.

With the help of Attorney Alan Goodman, Ross, who was pregnant, filed suit against the dog's owner and has taken preliminary steps to sue the Department of Social Services for wrongful death and emotional distress on behalf of her son.

In an apparent retaliation, Ross' infant son Aaron was seized from her by DSS at the hospital the day after he was born and just two months after the tragic death of Kyle.

DSS CHIEF CHALLENGED AT GOVERNOR'S COUNCIL

By Ed Oliver, massnews.com, 8/30/01

'I wouldn't trust him to judge a pie contest'

Nev Moore, executive director of Justice for Families, poured ice-water on the feel-good atmosphere yesterday when she told the Governor's Council that DSS Commissioner Jeffrey A. Locke is not responsive to the concerns of families that are torn apart by his agency.

Moore held the room spellbound as she calmly made her case in opposition to Locke's nomination as a judge in the Superior Court. He shifted uncomfortably in his chair during her presentation.

"I wouldn't trust him to judge a pie contest," said Moore.

Moore is a respected activist who works with parents and children who undergo the trauma of damage from the agency which is supposed to be helping them. Her revelation a few weeks ago, about state troopers who accompanied DSS workers to seize a newborn baby from a mother in the hospital, has received national outrage, including the Wall Street Journal.

She suggested that the Governor's Council speak with other legislators, especially with the members of the Committee on Human Services and Elderly Affairs, who she said have expressed their surprise and concern that Locke does not address allegations and serious concerns about DSS that are raised in committee meetings.

She said that legislators tell her that ever since Locke took over DSS, the commissioner's office became "locked up tight and incommunicado" and operates under a "siege mentality".

"It's absolutely unforgivable because it's a taxpayer-funded agency and he needs to remember who is writing his paycheck," said Moore.

"We're not talking about an organization that builds roads and bridges as it should, we're talking about an organization that can destroy a family for life," said Moore.

Dishonest and Negative Behavior

Moore told the Governor's Council that Locke displayed a consistent pattern of dishonest and negative behavior in several areas:

Deliberately and knowingly lying to the public in quotes made to the media.

Consistent refusal to even acknowledge communications and concerns from anxious legislators, lawyers or parents.

Ignorance of laws and regulations pertaining to DSS.

Evasion of responsibility for the organization beneath him.

Allowing DSS field workers and supervisors to misrepresent themselves as licensed social workers when they are not.

Refusal to work with the legislature or respond to legislators' calls and communications.

Deliberate violations of federal regulations by filing false documents in order to collect federal funding and not establishing citizen-review panels.

Violation of federal restraint and drugging regulations.

Meeting Room Is Packed

The hearing room was packed with media expecting fireworks over the issue of Edmund Burke, who charges that Locke sent him to jail in 1998 for the murder of a 75-year-old woman by misleading a judge about forensic evidence that was actually helpful to Burke.

Later in the hearing, Councilor Carole A. Fiola told Locke that her antennae were raised by the number of letters she has received in opposition to his nomination. She said the letters specifically mention his temperament and demeanor.

During a break, MassNews attempted to ask Jeffrey Locke some questions. When he heard the name Massachusetts News, he stiffened and said "No!" When pursued, he said "I'm not saying anything to the media."

Governor Jane Swift nominated Locke on July 31 to the position of Associate Justice of the Superior Court. By law, the eight elected members of the Governor's Council must give its advice and consent to the nomination.

The council will vote next Wednesday on the nomination.

Locke Praised Himself

Locke waxed eloquent about public service and praised his own work at DSS by saying he brought an outsider's perspective and "restored the morale of the department". He said he instilled a "sense of teamwork and family" and brought "a quality assurance approach" to the agency.

Locke said he wanted to leave the agency a little better than he found it.

Locke disclosed that there are currently 13 lawsuits against him pertaining to DSS. He downplayed that fact by saying it is not unusual for the head of an agency to be named in a lawsuit.

In a revealing statement to those who grapple with the real-life horror of having DSS snatch their children based on slim or fraudulent pretexts, Locke said he "defends the staff" of social workers, because "you never lay your troops out on the firing line. That leaves the staff to feel free to go do casework."

A throng of supporters, including the chief justices of the Superior Court and Juvenile Court, heaped accolades on him at the judicial nomination hearing on Beacon Hill.

Burke Case Was Muted

The issue about Edmund Burke was muted at the hearing after Burke's two lawyers, Jeff Denner and Robert Sinsheimer came out in support of Locke's nomination. Sinsheimer, who has known Locke since 1983, went so far as to say the Burke matter is likely to make Locke a better judge because he will be more sensitive to the rights of accused persons.

Councilors still expressed their concern that Burke spent time in jail even though forensic evidence did not justify it.

WE NEED A CITIZEN WHO OBEYS THE LAW TO LEAD DSS

massnews.com, 8/31/01

Jeffrey Locke's Departure Is an Opportunity

When State Police troopers burst into the maternity ward of a hospital earlier this month and helped a social worker seize a day-old baby from the arms of its mother, all of us were brutally damaged.

But it took the Wall Street Journal to tell us so. It had a headline on Monday, "Another Massachusetts Outrage" involving DSS. They described the incident as "chilling".

But no one in Massachusetts, media or politician, appear to be aware that anything has even happened.

To make it worse, the person in charge at DSS, Jeffrey Locke, was praised and lauded at a hearing before the Governors Council on Wednesday without anyone even mentioning the incident. Locke was at the hearing because Gov. Swift has appointed him as a judge on our Superior Court.

When Locke becomes a judge (as he surely will in this state) he will be ruling on important cases affecting our fundamental liberties like this.

We Need Law-Abiding Commissioner

We've already lost any argument about the judgeship. Locke will become just another failed politician who will be elevated to our courts.

But it's crucial that we get a law-abiding person to head up DSS. The new person must not be a social worker or someone else who is a part of the system. It should be an outsider who can bring integrity to this department.

It must be someone who understands that our law holds that one of the most important tenets of our society is that a child is raised by his or her parents. Only when a child is abused can the state go to a judge and seek to remove the child.

And the state can never take a child without the prior approval of a judge unless it is an extreme emergency.

How could Jeffrey Locke believe this was an extreme emergency? His DSS had plotted for months to remove the child as soon as it was born. Why didn't he go to a judge before seizing the child as is required by law? Why wasn't the mother allowed to come before a judge and argue for her rights and that of the child?

They didn't do that because DSS knew that they would lose if they did.

And they also know that the judges of Massachusetts always allow them to break the law with impunity. So why should they bother to follow the law?

It may also be a factor that the mother in this case had sued Locke and he was getting even with her.

Why wasn't he asked any of this by anyone at his hearing?

It will sound trite but DSS operates as they do in Cuba or China, but we live in a place where we have Harvard Law School, the Boston Bar Association and all the other bastions of liberty for which we are famous.

Does your child have to be taken before we realize that all of us are under attack when we have lost the rule of law?

Only Nev Moore Challenged It

The only person who challenged the appointment of Jeffrey Locke to be a judge in the Superior Court was Nev Moore, President of Justice for Families and an activist for children and parents who have been damaged by DSS.

Moore held the room spellbound as she calmly made her case in opposition to Locke's nomination as a judge in the Superior Court. He shifted uncomfortably in his chair during her presentation. "I wouldn't trust him to judge a pie contest," she said.

She suggested that the Governor's Council speak with other legislators, especially with the members of the Committee on Human Services and Elderly Affairs, who she said have expressed their surprise and concern that Locke does not address allegations and serious concerns about DSS that are raised in committee meetings.

She said that legislators tell her that ever since Locke took over DSS, the commissioner's office became "locked up tight and incommunicado" and operates under a "siege mentality".

"It's absolutely unforgivable because it's a taxpayer-funded agency and he needs to remember who is writing his paycheck," said Moore. "We're not talking about an organization that builds roads and bridges as it should—we're talking about an organization that can destroy a family for life."

We Can Do Better for Our Children

We must let Gov. Swift know that we expect someone much better than Jeffrey Locke to run this agency which is so out of control.

Let's hope that Gov. Swift will do better by us on her appointment and tap someone who is truly independent of the social worker clique which dominates that agency.

We must really think about the children this time.—

Man-Made Earthquakes: Stage For Nuclear War

Dr. Peter D. Beter AUDIO LETTER® No. 25.

“AUDIO LETTER®” is a registered trademark of Audio Books, Inc., a Texas corporation, which originally produced this tape recording. Reproduced under open license granted by Audio Books, Inc. This is the Dr. Beter AUDIO LETTER®, Box 16428, Ft. Worth, Texas 76133

Hello, my friends, this is Dr. Beter. Today is August 26, 1977, and this is my AUDIO LETTER® No. 25.

It is now almost three months since I recorded AUDIO LETTER No. 24 on May 28, 1977 [MM: CONTACT issue of 8/29/01, page 15]; and as I warned you then, the plans for Dictatorship and War are now being speeded up. At that time, about three months ago, the Soviet program of planting nuclear weapons in the inland lakes and rivers of the United States had turned into an all-out, silent attack on our country. Soviet agents in vans, campers, and trucks were fanning out unhampered throughout our land turning our peaceful countryside into an unsuspected battlefield strewn with nuclear mines capable of destroying our water resources; and at no level of government—local, state, or federal—was anything being done to stop it. Local and state authorities when alerted to Soviet activities in their areas of jurisdiction were shrugging it off in absolute disbelief. They were saying in effect, “Relax. Just trust the Federal Government to take care of everything.”

With this attitude as an excuse, they were and still are shirking their sworn duty to at least investigate conclusively some very specific leads they have been given. But as for the Federal Government, actions such as the waiving of the Jones Act by Treasury Secretary Blumenthal to allow Soviet vessels to ply our inland waterways speak for themselves. And just as in the case of the Fort Knox Gold Scandal three years ago, there’s no effort whatever now to disprove my charges about the Soviet nuclear sabotage of America—but only to discredit them.

I think this parallel makes the current status of the Gold Scandal worthy of comment. After three years of tireless effort by my friend Edward Durell, the Fort Knox Gold Scandal now shows renewed signs of breaking into the open in spite of all the lies and tricks the Rockefeller-controlled Federal Government can do. The international financial community is now more concerned about the massive evidence of fraud surrounding America’s alleged monetary gold supply than ever before, because the sheer weight of evidence now makes it impossible for anyone except the Rockefeller-dominated major media to ignore it. The Carter Administration has become so concerned about this that on July 28, 1977, just last month, Treasury Secretary Blumenthal took the extreme step of going to the Fort Knox Bullion Depository himself. Can you imagine? He had himself photographed by TIME magazine sitting on the same stack of warmed-over junk gold bars viewed at Fort Knox in Compartment No. 33 in September 1974. Then he went to Louisville to deliver his speech, prepared before he left Washington, saying how impressed he was with the wonderful hoard of gold he had just inspected at Fort Knox. Former Treasury Secretary William Simon knew better than to go there personally, even at the height of the public controversy over Fort Knox three years ago. Instead he sent poor Mrs. Mary Brooks, the unsuspecting head of the Bureau of the Mint, to tell the world, “It’s all here.” But now extreme measures are called for in the name of “cover-up” because, while the public sleeps, the powerful financial community shows signs of awakening with a roar. If you would like a very hard-hitting, fully-documented summary of the mountain of evidence that now has the Treasury Department so worried, send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope bearing first-class United States postage for two (2) ounces (24 cents—at the time of this recording) to:

Mr. Edward Durell, P.O. Box 586, Berryville, VA 22611.

Only time will tell whether in fact the Fort Knox Gold Scandal will at last be revealed truthfully to the American people at large; but even if it breaks today, it’s already more than three years overdue. The United States Congress chose to ignore my charges and my evidence when I testified about it in April 1974; and, my friends, we don’t have three years to wait for the truth to come out about the Soviet nuclear mining of the United States. We are on borrowed time!

That is why, after recording AUDIO LETTER No. 24 three months ago, I suspended the AUDIO LETTER to concentrate all my efforts on a campaign to prove conclusively the presence of Soviet nuclear weapons inside our country for all to see. I knew that it was a long shot because none of the citizen groups with whom I was in contact had access to sophisticated equipment of any kind, or much money to spend on it or even much free time. But I believed it was still worth the try, because as I warned in AUDIO LETTER No. 24, only total exposure of the Soviet threat to our nation has any chance of turning aside NUCLEAR WAR ONE. It is, therefore, painful to have to tell you, my friends, that my efforts and those with whom I have been working around the United States have so far been unsuccessful in achieving their primary goal—the physical recovery and public display in a safe manner of a Soviet nuclear bomb from a lake or river. There has been some partial success in spreading the alarm more widely than before, but the total exposure, which is so vital to our survival as a nation, still has not been accomplished.

Since recording AUDIO LETTER No. 24 in May, I have responded to requests from concerned citizens throughout America asking for the locations of any Soviet nuclear weapons in their areas. In many cases upon receiving this information, people have tried to get local or state authorities to investigate, usually without even a token of success, although in two or three cases there does seem to be some genuine interest at the local level. Other people have gone to their local newspapers, but these in general have not bothered even to contact me to find out more about the story. Finally, scattered attempts have been made by groups of citizens in a number of states to send scuba divers down to search the bottom of reservoirs in an attempt to actually find a bomb. These private citizens, who by their own choice have donned diving equipment and spent their own time and their own money to at least try, deserve all of our thanks. I am not aware of a single case in which these private searches were able to be done with the aid of anything more than a hand-carried underwater light, or in rare cases a commercial underwater metal detector, and some divers did not even have this much; and yet they have tried to do that which the Federal Government, spending over $80 billion yearly on so-called Defense, refuses to do. In one case which has been confirmed, two bombs were found and retrieved, not from a reservoir or river but from a saltwater cove in a resort area on the East coast; but these two bombs, instead of being made public, were turned over to the Federal Government by the individuals involved for their own reasons. Otherwise, I cannot confirm that any other bombs have been found or retrieved up to now.

Two months ago what may turn out to have been our one best opportunity to catch some Soviet agents red-handed occurred in Texas. An individual was driving along a country road after midnight when he noticed an old-style green-and-white delivery van with Florida license plates parked for the night on the roadside. It looked like a hippie van, yet was parked with legal precision complete with regulation high-visibility warning markers set out along the edge of the road. Something just didn’t look right about it, and on a hunch my friend found a pay phone and called to ask whether by chance any Soviet vans were scheduled to be on that road at that time. One of my Intelligence contacts quickly checked the available information and reported back that two Soviet trucks should be parked for the night on that road—one of them in the exact location where my friend had seen the green-and-white van. Furthermore, the vans were still enroute to their targets and still had nuclear weapons aboard. My friend then spent the next four hours trying in vain to bring about some decisive action concerning the van. He called a friend who was acquainted with my warnings about the bombs, getting him out of bed at 1:30 A.M.—and together they tried in vain to get the appropriate law enforcement authorities in that area to go with them and investigate the van. Finally, they drove back out to the van at around 3:30 A.M., stopped behind it with their car lights illuminating the van, and took two photographs—one a close-up of the Florida license plate. The next day they went to the local police headquarters and asked them for identification information about the van, giving them the Florida license number. The police used their teletype to check with Florida—and the State of Florida wired back that the license number given them was non-existent and the van unidentifiable.

And so it has gone, my friends. Those who are ready and willing to take action on behalf of our beloved country are hampered by limited resources; and those who do have the necessary resources and authority to take decisive action refuse to do so for an endless variety of reasons. Many simply do not believe, others cannot bring themselves to part with a portion of their own personal wealth, time, and effort but cast about forever looking for someone else to do it. And virtually everyone in a position of authority to act, whether great or small, is not strengthened by that authority but imprisoned by it, afraid to run any risk of a wrong decision that might hurt their career. Meanwhile, time has slipped by waiting for no man, and now the Soviet Union has completed their project of planting nuclear mines in the inland lakes and rivers of the United States. Furthermore, since they still have not been impeded in any way, they are now placing additional bombs at other kinds of targets which will rank lower in priority than our water resources.

My basic task of warning you in advance about the plans of our Hidden Rulers for events to come was completed with AUDIO LETTER No. 24, three months ago. Now, unfortunately, a new phase is beginning for the AUDIO LETTER, because increasingly it will be my duty now to chronicle the step-by-step fulfillment of these terrible plans as they are carried out. Time and again these plans have been delayed, tripped up, and brought to nothing by our merciful God who wanted us to use our heads to see the truth around us for what it is, and turn to Him; but, my friends, you know as well as I do that America as a nation has not done this; so now by our own choice we are going to suffer—and the suffering will get worse and worse until and unless we as a people open our eyes. I realize, my friends, that these are hard words. Many will hear them and reject them outright, but this I know: Events themselves are going to put man in his place in no uncertain terms.

My three special topics for today are:

Topic #1—THE PANAMA CANAL TRAP FOR WAR

Topic #2—THE SECOND BATTLE OF BRITAIN

Topic #3—MAN-MADE EARTHQUAKES TO SET THE STAGE FOR NUCLEAR WAR ONE

Topic #1—Four and a half years ago in early 1973 I wrote my book THE CONSPIRACY AGAINST THE DOLLAR. I ended the book with the following words of warning about the Panama Canal:

“The United States presence in the Panama Canal Zone area is a geostrategic necessity to insure shipping through the canal. It will also become a geostrategic necessity for the new Asian aristocracy, just as Europe became for the New Imperialism.

If the new Asian forces are not understood, but are met with ignorance and arrogance, then the world will indeed be headed not for a ‘generation of peace’ of which President Nixon has so proudly boasted, but for World War III.” (End of quotation from my book.)

By June 1974 I had received hard evidence to the effect that the Republic of Guyana, Venezuela’s neighbor, had become the new Cuba with nuclear medium-range missiles targeted on the Panama Canal as well as targets in the extreme southern United States.

I reported this on radio talk shows all around the United States at that time, together with additional Intelligence to the effect that the Panama Canal was being planned for use in triggering nuclear war on America three to four years later on—that is mid-1977 to mid-1978. In October 1974 I recorded my first talking tape entitled “HOW TO PROTECT YOURSELF DURING THE COMING DEPRESSION AND THIRD WORLD WAR”; and in that tape, recorded nearly three years ago, I repeated my warnings about the plans of powerful men to deliberately involve America in nuclear war and the plans to use the Panama Canal to help trigger this war.

Three and four years ago my warnings about nuclear war to come fell on deaf ears. So-called “detente” with the Soviet Union was in full bloom, after all; and besides, wasn’t the United States the most powerful nation on Earth? And as for the Panama Canal, most Americans then were not even thinking about the Canal, much less excited about it. But now it is three years later. In the short space of a year, what was called detente has been shredded and dumped in the trash basket.

Frightening new estimates of fantastic military spending by the Soviet Union have been disclosed by the CIA, after playing down such spending for 10 years. Well known Rockefeller associates have formed a group called “The Committee for the Present Danger” to publicize the Soviet drive for military dominance, and the Panama Canal has become an issue that grows hotter by the day.

The so-called “surprise attack” on Pearl Harbor nearly 36 years ago disarmed all political opposition to America’s entry into the war in Europe. In one stroke the Pearl Harbor attack created a wave of emotion to go to war. In the same way, the Real Rulers of America are now setting up the American people for another such wave of emotion—this time over the Panama Canal.

The conspirators do not really want any new treaties with Panama despite the lip service in favor of them by their hired hands, such as Carter and Kissinger. Their actual goal is the exact opposite. They want people like Senator Strom Thurmond and Jesse Helms, not to mention Ronald Reagan, to fight the pair of new treaties and defeat them; thus giving Panama an excuse to go to Moscow for help. This is why conservative leaders and organizations are suddenly getting all the publicity they can handle on the Panama Canal issue—courtesy of none other than the Rockefeller-dominated major media.

Since the defeat of the two new Panama Canal treaties will be blamed on the conservatives, they will also be blamed for the consequent events in the mindless march toward nuclear war. The self-styled conservative leaders in Congress, therefore, are falling into a dangerous trap and taking millions of good and patriotic people with them. They look the other way about such things as the Fort Knox Gold Scandal, and they run the other way rather than investigate the Soviet nuclear sabotage of our own country; but the emotional appeal and great publicity surrounding the Panama Canal issue have made it too juicy to resist—and they have swallowed it hook, line, and sinker. Whether the Canal is used as the final trigger for NUCLEAR WAR ONE itself, or whether it plays only a supporting role in bringing on the war is still at the option of the conspirators; but either way the conservatives lose. Even so, this is not to say that Jimmy Carter will win on this issue.

Four days after Carter’s inauguration as President seven months ago, in AUDIO LETTER No. 20, I alerted you that a Carter Watergate was already in the works; and now, my friends, it has already begun. In the three months since I recorded AUDIO LETTER No. 24, the controversy over the personal finances of Bert Lance, Carter’s Budget Director and former banker, has turned into daily headline news. Because of the closeness of the ties between Carter and Lance, Carter’s image has already begun to suffer, but this is only the beginning. Not only is Carter’s moral leadership image being tarnished by his defense of questionable practices by Lance, but more and more questions are being raised in the major media about Carter’s judgment; and once a leader’s judgment ceases to be trusted, he is finished.

Confusion in NATO over what to expect from the Carter Administration is causing nervousness—and recently this boiled over into bitter German protests when a secret White House contingency plan came to light. The plan calls for one-third of West Germany to be conceded in the event of a Soviet invasion. Can you imagine? As of now, only one major factor is preventing a complete rift between the United States and the European members of NATO. That single factor is the hope that Carter will proceed with production of the neutron bomb, a tactical weapon. Without this bomb the increasingly outnumbered and outgunned NATO forces will face hopeless odds in any Warsaw Pact attack; but the American neutron bomb has one weakness that may prevent it from doing NATO any good. It would not be deployed for operational use until at least a year and a half from now, in 1979. Meanwhile, the Soviet Union already has operational neutron bombs.

A neutron bomb is a special version of a hydrogen bomb, so designed that a shower of deadly neutron radiation covers an area much larger than the area affected by the explosive blast. In nuclear weapons terminology, it is a “clean bomb” because it produces very little fallout or residual radioactivity in comparison to conventional nuclear weapons. If exploded above a city, for example, it can destroy all life over a wide area and yet do relatively little blast damage to buildings and structures in the area.

Fourteen months ago in AUDIO LETTER No. 13 I revealed that the Soviet Union already has such so-called clean hydrogen bombs; and three months ago when I recorded AUDIO LETTER No. 24, I reported that seven (7) trucks bearing nuclear weapons and driven by Soviet agents had been stopped by Canadian authorities on May 18 just before they attempted to cross over the border from Canada into northern Idaho. As of the recording date, I had not yet received any further word about any action taken, but now I can tell you more.

The seven trucks were driven by a total of 14 Canadian and American Communists, two per truck. They were apprehended by a special joint unit of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and Army Security, and placed under arrest after the nature of their cargo was confirmed. They were all charged with acts of treason and incarcerated initially at Wainwright, Alberta, but they have since been transferred to one or more other unspecified locations.

Each truck was loaded with two fourteen-foot-long crates, three feet square. Each crate contained a small single-warhead missile, and it was learned by Canadian Intelligence that the trucks were all bound for Lake Superior. All 14 of these missiles were the same type as the 53 previously planted in the Great Lakes, and the warheads were all neutron bombs. Thus the Soviet Union can still satisfy all of the considerations which originally led them to agree to the super-secret “Nuclear Safe Zone” across the upper portion of the United States which I revealed in AUDIO LETTER No. 12 for May 1976.

Since neutron bombs kill people but preserve most real estate, the great industrial and agricultural heartland of America will still be usable for Soviet benefit after NUCLEAR WAR ONE; and the explosion of clean neutron bombs over our northern cities will not produce significant fallout to drift around the globe and land on Russia.

After the 14 neutron-bomb missiles were disarmed, they were divided up—several were sent to Great Britain and several to the United States while several remained in Canada. Within two weeks the neutron bombs suddenly became big news in the United States with Jimmy Carter in the spotlight as the man to decide whether such a thing would be produced or not. By early July, news reports said that the United States had already tested a neutron bomb at the underground test site in Nevada; but what was not mentioned is that this was a test of a Soviet warhead like those now lurking in the Great Lakes—not an American device! Canadian officials are completely baffled at this point by the conduct of the United States Government in keeping all of these things under wraps, but the Canadians are abiding by their obligations under mutual defense treaties not to break the story publicly on a unilateral basis because certain key officials apparently still do not believe that top American officials are deliberately betraying us all into nuclear disaster. And now, my friends, the nuclear mining of strategic points in Canada too has begun, beginning around Montreal—while continued secrecy allows the Soviet Union to build their war trap all around us!

Topic #2—On September 30, 1938, the famous agreement at Munich was reached which was then hailed by British Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain as assuring “Peace in our time”. For years the British and French had watched Hitler’s Germany as it re-armed to the teeth, and the only response had been a policy of appeasement. As a result, at Munich they were negotiating from a position of weakness. And to further appease Hitler, they agreed to the partition of a country that was not even party to the negotiations—Czechoslovakia. But as we all know, the Munich agreement did not bring “peace in our time”. Less than two years after Munich, on July 10, 1940, the skies over Britain suddenly filled with Hitler’s bombers, and the Battle of Britain had begun.

The lightning warfare that had paralyzed and crushed other victims was now to smash Britain as well—or so it seemed. Through the summer and autumn of 1940 the world watched for the invasion of Britain to be launched across the English Channel, but the invasion never came. The world watched with growing astonishment as the Spitfires of the Royal Air Force ruined attack after attack by Goering’s air armada; for the British, in spite of public pronouncements about “Peace in our time”, had learned the lesson of Munich well—and during the short breathing space that followed, the British Government had secretly launched a crash program to prepare for the fight for survival that was looming ahead.

We in America who had not yet experienced the horrors of war on our own soil have had our survival instinct lulled to sleep by propaganda and distractions of all kinds—but not so in Great Britain. Some months ago I revealed that of all the nations of the Free World, only Great Britain is engaging in a sustained, determined effort to stave off military attack by the Soviet Union to the best of her ability. And, my friends, this is still true, because the lessons of the past are not lost on the British. On June 18, 1940, Sir Winston Churchill spoke in the House of Commons to declare that the British were determined to fight rather than surrender, whatever the odds; and that same spirit is quietly being rekindled in Britain today. An internal struggle within the British Government is going on between those with this view and others, some of them very powerful who are Rockefeller agents, striving to induce Britain to lie down and die. But so far there are still enough patriots in the British Government to carry the day.

When I recorded AUDIO LETTER No. 15 one year ago in August 1976, I revealed the navigational coordinates of 64 newly planted Soviet underwater-launch nuclear missiles in the territorial waters of the countries around the world. At that time, Soviet missiles were planted more densely around the British Isles than anywhere else on Earth, because the Soviet Union views England like a giant aircraft carrier that must be sunk to help free the Soviet Navy to explode into the Atlantic unhampered when war comes. The importance of this to the Soviet Union was illustrated the following month, in late September 1976. As I reported in AUDIO LETTER No. 16 for that month, the Soviet Union carried out a massive, extremely rapid deployment of submarines into attack positions along our east, west, and Gulf coasts late in September involving at least 142 submarines. This took place only a matter of days after I had met for well over an hour at the Pentagon with General George S. Brown, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, to discuss the growing Soviet underwater missile crisis with him. The purpose of the massive deployment of Soviet naval power along our shores was a power play to prevent the United States Navy from being allowed to capture a Soviet missile-laying mini-sub that was then trapped in Chesapeake Bay. And as I reported the following month in AUDIO LETTER No. 17, it worked.

The very idea that the Soviet Union is capable of such rapid, massive, and well-coordinated deployments of its huge submarine fleet seems unbelievable to many, and many therefore ignored what I revealed last September about this incident. But just four weeks ago, on July 29, 1977, NATO Intelligence sources in Brussels revealed a recent naval exercise by the Soviet Union that once again exhibited this same capability to fill the oceans with overwhelming numbers of submarines. According to the news dispatch by the British Reuters News Service, quote:

“Eighty-nine Soviet submarines swarmed into the Atlantic Ocean recently in a massive show of naval strength that stretched NATO surveillance forces to their limits, NATO Intelligence sources revealed yesterday. More Soviet submarines were deployed between North America and Europe than ever before, said one senior Intelligence officer.”

And, my friends, this statement is true since the 142 submarines that threatened the United States last September were not all in the Atlantic—many were in the Gulf of Mexico and the Pacific.

Quoting the Reuters dispatch again:

“American and British submarines, which usually trail Soviet submarines, were unable to cope with the rush—and NATO had to resort to other less effective means to keep track of many of the boats.”

Another quote:

“The submarines were accompanied by a large force of surface warships including the Aircraft Carrier Kiev which bears vertical take-off and landing Jet Fighters. Long-range war planes, including some of the 400 supersonic Backfire Bombers that the Russians now operate, flew over the maneuvering fleet from their bases in the Murmansk area, the sources said.”

Another quote:

“NATO views the deployment of the Soviet submarine fleet to sea as one of its most important warning signs that a conflict is about to begin.”

That, my friends, is why the stationing of so many Soviet submarines in attack positions around the United States was so ominous last September.

Notice who was responsible for letting the public know about this latest huge Soviet naval exercise. Not anyone in the United States Government, but NATO authorities in Europe. To quote one more line from the Reuters dispatch, which was omitted in the New York Times, quote:

“The United States Defense Department had no comment on the story.”

America’s Real Rulers do not want us to know even about Soviet practice exercises as huge as the one in April 1977, much less the occurrence of actual confrontations like the one I told you about last September. Great Britain is acutely aware of all these things. She is aware of the increasing handicaps that plague the European part of the NATO alliance, and she’s finding out that the United States can no longer be depended upon for help in time of crisis. She is determined not to be sunk by the Soviet Union.

First, the British have been taking an objective new look at the cold, hard facts of their circumstances. A month ago on July 26, 1977, the Defense Committee of Parliament made public a report that spelled out in clear terms a number of important measures needing revision and upgrading in Britain’s defense posture—and the report begins by discarding the comforting but unrealistic idea that heightened tensions would always provide an advance warning before any Soviet attack. Instead, they’re coming to grips with the need to be prepared for a more likely event of a surprise attack. The Parliament Committee also warned of the threat of Soviet mine-laying in the English Channel and the North Atlantic.

Meanwhile, spurred on by the Soviet underwater missile crisis for a full year now, the British have developed new mine-detecting sonar equipment to enable underwater missiles and mines to be detected. For several months now the Royal Navy has been using this highly secret new equipment built by the Plessey Company of England to keep British waters cleared of Soviet missiles and bombs, without depending any longer on the Intelligence tips I was relaying to them earlier. I would not mention this now except that a recent incident occurred that has already compromised this vital new equipment to Soviet agents.

Recently, the West German Navy, eager to begin using this same equipment to start clearing their own coastal waters of Soviet missiles, was to receive a shipment of the highly classified equipment from the Plessey Company, but a Soviet agent in Britain achieved a remarkable feat of espionage by bringing about a misrouting of this equipment on an East German ship. By the time this vital equipment finally arrived, overdue and damaged, it had been thoroughly studied and photographed by Soviet technical experts. As a result, the Soviet Union may now be able to find ways to defeat even the sophisticated new British sonar, just as they are already able to defeat American seabed sonar defenses in order to plant missiles in our waters.

Despite this setback, the British are working quietly but quickly to prepare to go it alone if need be when war comes, even though they realize that they would not be able to hold out indefinitely under those conditions. Unlike the United States, Britain is beefing up its surveillance of spies, defense installations are being hardened and camouflaged, and the RAF is in the process of going underground just as the Soviet Union has already done.

The British Government now knows, privately, that Great Britain has already been deserted by the Outlaw Government of the United States, and in late last month on July 27, 1977, the British deserted the floundering United States dollar. For a generation and more the pound sterling and the dollar have been linked together in an unofficial way, but no more. The Bank of England announced it would no longer be required to support the dollar in an international monetary float, and since that time British reserves of gold and currency have risen substantially, strengthening the pound, while the American dollar has been sinking in international currency markets. It may be that the British “ship of state” will in the end be unable to stay afloat through the storm of all-out nuclear war, but so far the British still prefer to take that risk rather than scuttling their own ship—as the United States Government under Rockefeller control is now doing!

Topic #3—My friends, the nuclear mining of America’s inland lakes and rivers has now been completed without incident by Soviet agents, thanks to their protection from harassment by Rockefeller agents in the Federal Government. At least three different models of small hydrogen bombs have been utilized so far by Soviet agents in this project.

One is a design which has been in use for the greater part of a decade, as bombs are planted during construction of certain major dams and water projects.

A second type, oval in shape, 17 inches in diameter and 34 inches in length, has been deployed very widely throughout the United States in recent months. It weighs several hundred pounds, and handling is therefore a problem, with the result that great care is always taken to plant these when the area nearby is deserted. Usually, but not always, this is done at night. These bombs are the pride and joy of Soviet boss Brezhnev because they incorporate technology that originated many years ago in his own rocket programs. In areas where the bottom is soft and silt-covered, these bombs are able to embed themselves in the silt. Under ideal test conditions in the Soviet Union, it was found that they were able to penetrate to depths as great as 80 feet; and there are a few locations in America, primarily in the lower Mississippi River, where depths that rival this may actually have been achieved operationally. Best of all, from the Soviet point of view, is their reliability. This system, by which the bomb practically blasts its way into the silt by using a powerful jet of steam at temperatures above a thousand degrees Fahrenheit, uses no moving parts. The jet is started before the bomb is dropped in the water and after that it runs until the fuel is exhausted. The fuel itself, according to my own Intelligence sources, is the oldest, most reliable, and cheapest of all rocket fuels—highly concentrated hydrogen peroxide, which leaves no residue to be detected afterward.

A third type of bomb that is now being used is a small general purpose “H” bomb whose primary feature is compactness. A few of these have been planted in water, but these are mostly being used now in the newest phase of the Soviet nuclear mining program.

First, Washington, D.C. was mined. All of the bridges into Washington are now mined, as are important buildings throughout the city. These include the Capitol building, Senate and House office buildings, the Executive Office building, the Treasury building, seven bombs at Fort Myer, Virginia, the Pentagon, and even the White House itself plus many other points—a total of 57 in the Nation’s capital! In addition, bombs have now been planted in at least 33 of the 50 State capitals. Congress, the President, and State Governments have so far refused to act to protect the people, but now they themselves are being targeted; and symbols of our national pride and heritage in Washington are to be destroyed without a trace!

Time does not permit a complete listing of even the nuclear devices in the Mississippi River, which now contains 158 bombs. As of my latest report on July 7, 1977, every lock in the Mississippi River except No. 2 at Hastings, Minnesota now has a Soviet “H” bomb in or near it. In addition, almost every bridge crossing the Mississippi along its entire length has a bomb planted at one end or the other as of that date; and it was anticipated that by now there would no longer be any exceptions. Thus the Soviet Union plans to be able to cut the country in half, East to West, to anything but air transportation which, under war conditions, will be totally controlled by the Federal Government under the provisions of Executive Orders 11490 and 11921. In addition, the Mississippi is to be ruined as a navigable waterway connecting North and South along the Mississippi Valley. And the master strategy that has been applied to the Mississippi has also been applied to the other great waterways of America, such as the Illinois Waterway and the Ohio River! Now, it remains only to trigger a declaration of “NATIONAL EMERGENCY”—and after that NUCLEAR WAR ONE!

When I recorded AUDIO LETTER No. 24 in May 1977, just three months ago, I warned that, quote: “A horrendous new capability is now in place as an alternate means for creating our ‘National Emergency’; and, my friends, there are ominous signs that this capability is going to be used very soon.” I then gave the locations of seven (7) fission-fusion-fission bombs planted strategically around the undersea trenches east and west of the Philippines where they can trigger massive earthquakes and tidal waves. These seven gigaton bombs are the most powerful weapons ever devised by man, and the disaster that erupts there is planned to work its way around the “Ring of Fire” to produce an artificial West Coast disaster centering on California that will be used to justify a Declaration of National Emergency.

In the three months since I last spoke to you, the Soviet Union has also deployed ten (10) additional super bombs to assist in this diabolical attack on the Earth’s crust itself. These are less powerful than the seven Domsday Bombs planted around the Philippines but are extremely powerful nonetheless. These 10 new bombs are known as “cobalt bombs”, so-called because they are surrounded by a jacket of cobalt.

When the cobalt bomb was first proposed many years ago, it was universally feared and condemned because while it is less powerful than the gigaton bombs in the Philippines, it would be even dirtier in radioactive fallout if exploded in the air. Pound for pound the radioactive cobalt-60 produced by the explosion emits 25 times as much deadly gamma radiation as radium. It decays relatively fast with a half-life of just over five years—but if detonated in the air, some scientists believe the fallout could destroy all human life before the radiation decayed to harmless levels. But as with the uranium-jacket gigaton bomb, the Soviet Union has found a way to use the cobalt bomb, deep under the ocean for geophysical warfare; and having solved the dangerous problems involved in manufacturing and handling such weapons, the Soviet Union now has available an intermediate-yield super bomb that is far cheaper than bombs made from uranium.

Of the 10 Soviet cobalt bombs deployed so far, nine are positioned along boundaries between the slowly-shifting crustal plates that cover the surface of the Earth, while the tenth is targeted on a prime American naval target—Pearl Harbor. Their purpose is to produce a pattern of increasing earthquake and tidal-wave activity as a build-up to the big disaster that awaits the Philippines.

The 10 Soviet cobalt bombs were planted in the following locations:

No. 1: 11 degrees, 8 minutes, 28 seconds South; 118-32-23 East. This is roughly 900 miles southeast of Djakarta, Indonesia, near the East End of the Java Trench, south of the islands of Sumba and Sumbawa.

No. 2: 11-0-0 South, 115-8-34 East. This is around 370 miles west of Location No. 1, deep in the Java Trench, south of the islands of Bali and Sumbawa, Indonesia.

No. 3: 3-13-33 South, 149-0-0 East. This is in the area of the Bismarck Archipelago northeast of New Guinea.

No. 4: 10-57-9 South, 159-30-30 East. This is in a confluence of trenches southwest of Guadalcanal, 1500 miles northeast of Australia.

No. 5: 15-52-23 South, 172-34-50 West. This is in the north end of the Tonga Trench, little more than 100 miles southwest of Pago Pago, Samoa.

No. 6: 12-22-51 North, 145-40-0 East. This is in the Marianas Trench roughly 75 miles southeast of Guam.

No. 7: 37-35-10 North, 144-5-20 East in the Japan Trench, around 350 miles northeast of Tokyo.

No. 8: 23-25-46 North, 108-23-14 West. This is in the deep [7,000 feet] central portion of the Gulf of California between the southern tip of Baja California and the mainland of Mexico, and lies along the same crustal fault line that is known as the San Andreas Fault where it passes through California.

No. 9: 20-0-0 North, 73-52-16 West. This is in a short but deep trench off the East End of Cuba, and about 80 miles due east of the United States Naval Base at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba. And finally

No. 10: 20-54-28 North, 158-48-17 West. This is about 70 miles west-southwest of Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, the headquarters of the United States Pacific Fleet.

The Soviet plan is to artificially create a seemingly natural but disturbing pattern of increasingly widespread earthquakes, primarily around the Pacific Rim. The stars of this preliminary show are to be these cobalt bombs in the oceans, but several artificial earthquakes on land are also to be triggered. One or more of these preliminary earthquakes on land may involve the collapse of a dam in the United States, adding fuel to the fire of publicity over supposedly unsafe Federal dams. Finally, this build-up is to culminate in the supposed natural disaster in the Philippines, produced in reality by the triggering in proper sequence of the seven Soviet gigaton bombs. If all goes according to plan, unprecedented earthquakes and awesome tidal waves will cause death and destruction in the Philippines on a scale unparalleled in modern history, and not incidentally our major naval installations and the huge Clark Air Base in the Philippines will be destroyed. When it’s all over, our naval and other military installations in Hawaii will also be gone, as will our Guantanamo Bay Naval Base and important naval installations on America’s West Coast and in Japan. America will have been dealt a staggering military blow, but the only declaration by the United States Government will not be one of war and retaliation but only of “National Emergency”—in effect, suspending the remaining tatters of the United States Constitution! It all sounds too horrible to be true, my friends, but in actual fact it has already begun!

When I recorded AUDIO LETTER No. 24 three months ago there was no unusual earthquake activity going on; but based on Intelligence made available only to me, I warned that this was about to change, and soon; and just one week ago, on August 19, 1977, an undersea earthquake suddenly erupted just south of the Indonesian islands of Sumba and Sumbawa. The reports of damage and casualties are still filtering in today, one week later; but this quake was rated by some seismic readings as possibly the strongest quake ever recorded, registering 8.9 on the Richter scale. A tidal wave 100-foot high swept in from the south and washed away everyone and everything in its path. This quake, my friends, was produced by the detonation of the Soviet cobalt bomb No. 1 in the list I just gave you. And, my friends, the Soviet Union is wasting no time now. Only this morning just before I began the recording of this tape, Soviet cobalt bomb No. 2 was detonated. The result this time was a less spectacular quake, according to first reports, centered south of Sumbawa and Bali but with a reading of only 6.3 on the Richter scale.

My friends, during the past 4-1/2 years I’ve tried in every way I know to warn America in time for these and other man-made disasters to be prevented; but I am only a messenger, relaying vital information to you for which I myself cannot take the credit. What happens from here on is up to you, your neighbor, our country as a whole. But until and unless my voice is silenced by Federal Emergency regulations, war, or other factors beyond my control, I pledge to you to do all in my power to keep you fully informed about what is happening and where it is leading. Meanwhile, I can only urge you to continue to place yourself in the hands of God.

Until next month, God willing, this is Dr. Beter. Thank you, and may God protect each and every one of you.

With the exception of super-hedger Barrick, all these producers have shown a decent return this year to date. Some of them have shown a meteoric rise. If this rally is sustainable what's the landscape going to look like in six months, or a year?

Planets aligning for gold—

Macroeconomic unstoppable forces

Does anyone remember Mark Barton? A monument should be erected to his memory. He was one of the earliest to be claimed by the dot.com Bubble. Mr. Barton lost his entire life savings Day Trading. Despondent, he shot up the Atlanta brokerage where he traded, killing 12 people on July 30, 1999 before turning the gun on himself. This tragedy was quickly lost in sound bite cynicism, but for a brief moment Barton brought to the fore the uncomfortable and politically-incorrect reality that some people were losing money in the market, despite the spin.

The Bubble, like all before it, would eventually run its course. The media denied that it would ever end, but denial too was programmed in. (For a fascinating look at historical valuation bubbles read Extraordinary Popular Delusions and the Madness of Crowds and Confusión de Confusiones in the double volume published by John Wiley & Sons). Janet Reno and the June 10, 2000 court-ordered break up of Microsoft may have been the trigger that precipitated the inevitable slide. Others blame President Bush. The truth: It was bound to happen anyway. The steep rise in electricity prices in the Western U.S.A. was a harbinger of dot.com doom, since all those Internet servers in Silicon Valley rack up huge electricity bills. Anyone with a brain could have seen that power price hikes in America's largest economy—California, would have serious repercussions. Bubblemania though had spread like a cancer through the whole of society, promising a new paradigm where the laws of economics were suspended. Its lifeblood was access to cheap money. Like the aftermath of a great party, we all now have to clear away the bottles, empty the ashtrays and try to survive through our hangovers.

Wow! And what hangovers! According to credit card tracker CardWeb.com, the average American household owed U.S.$8,123 on credit cards last year, up from U.S.$3,223 in 1991. Consumer debt hit a staggering U.S.$7.2 trillion by the end of the first quarter. Don't count on the U.S. Consumer bringing this baby back, despite tax rebates—they're all maxed out. They have already been turning to home equity loans to preserve the "lifestyles to which they have become accustomed to". On any given day you can see dozens of ads for home mortgages geared to consolidate debt, on CNN and CNBC. There's been lots of talk about the quality of sub-par loans since Superior Bank in Chicago went bust a few weeks ago. Bank of America stopped doing car leases last week. No less than the Wall Street Journal ran an editorial last week about the shakiness of Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac. The U.S. housing market will probably be the last prop of the economy to be kicked out.

On top of all of this we have a declining U.S. stock market, mounting industry layoffs, big problems with Argentina and Brazil debt, the Japanese stock market at a 16-year low, and a rapidly declining U.S. dollar.

No surprise, investors are looking for a safe harbour—not just for wealth creation but wealth preservation, hence the steady rise in gold stocks, anticipating an increase in metal prices. If the Fed continues to drop interest rates, there will be a flight of capital out of U.S. equities and into (???) gold, of course. Gold as an investment with minimal downside risk has been a no-brainer for years because ounces can't be replaced at $U.S.250-270 prices, at least not by most of the industry. Producers have been cushioned by the few low-cost mines out there, and in South Africa, by a depreciating Rand. The simple law of supply and demand would dictate that if new mine supply starts to get severely crunched, prices have to go up. This despite Central Bank sales, which have capped gold rises, but can't do so indefinitely, especially if there is a huge surge in investment demand.

How will it all unfold? From looking at trading volumes it would seem that most investors caught in the tech-wreck are still holding their tech shares. I know that my friends who got caught out still have all their holdings, hoping for some Las Vegas-style last-throw-of-the-dice bailout. All of them are hoping against hope that the U.S. economy will turn around and that Bubblemania will live again. It may take the bankruptcy of some former high flyer, such as Lucent or Amazon to give everyone a wake-up call that their share certificates could end up expensive wallpaper. However, should the broad investment community discover the gold market, particularly gold shares, we could see a boom that would dwarf the speculative 1994-97 mania in junior golds. How so? Remember that the entire gold market is small. I believe I saw a figure of $U.S.20 billion for the whole lot recently. A lot of people in the market actually got out at the right time and made money from tech and are sidelined, looking for the "Next Big Thing"; others are looking to recoup their investment losses. Even accounting for the equity that has been vaporised, a small shift into the gold market could go a long way.

What will the next boom look like?

This market may really get rolling after the American Labour Day holiday in early September, when everyone gets back to work from summer holidays. Circle Tuesday, October 9th on your calendar. That's the day Reg Howe's lawsuit goes back to court. No doubt there will be a lot of media interest in gold that week, and it will be "crash season"....

So with this great conjunction of bullish forces, what will happen if indeed the price of gold shoots to $600 and stays there? Obviously, many people are already anticipating some price rise, hence the movement in gold shares over the last few months displayed at the beginning of this essay. The phenomenon is now gaining momentum and gold shares were mentioned pretty well every day on CNBC last week as the price broke through $U.S.280. The impact of television should not be discounted, since most American households were originally beguiled into stock market investment by "investing as entertainment" on the telly. If gold is portrayed as an alternative to techs on Bubblevision, it will catch on fast. Also, many networks and wire services have consolidated with other media and now share reporting staff. The other comparatively recent phenomenon is the medium you are staring into now—the Internet. A large number of the investing public get their information on the Internet—many more so than in the 1994-97 junior gold mining boom. The Internet sites LeMetropolecafe.com, Kitco.com, the MiningWeb.com and GOLD-EAGLE.com are getting increasing numbers of "hits". How fast will junior gold penny stocks move if they get the same buzz on RagingBull.com and SiliconInvestor.com chat rooms that the techs got?

The legacy of the last few years for the junior miners can be summed up in one word—carnage. Large numbers of companies have been delisted, as the speculative bubble deflated, post-Bre-X. We weren't however looking at a sudden drop from $600 gold that busted the junior market. Gold prices were fairly steady in the $380-$400 range through '94, '95 and '96 as the junior market took off. What would a steady or even steep price rise do now? When investors switched allegiance to techs and dot.coms (at that time "the next BEST thing"), venture capital dried up. Those companies that survived often lost their best assets, because they were unable to pay mounting option fees for properties. Many turned to homegrown projects and hunkered down to weather out the storm. Now, there are lots of junior companies out there with near valueless prospects, and a sad history of having to abandon promising projects, or joint venturing them at discounts to the majors. The majors have taken advantage of the situation to invest in the best of the junior companies; tantamount in large degree to a switch to exploration by proxy. Often this is not a vote of confidence in the junior's exploration staff, but may be a strategic move into a new country, new gold camp, or because the major likes the area geology.

All is not bleak however. A tongue-in-cheek editorial cartoon in the Northern Miner newspaper recently had the caption: "Somewhere out there, a fabulously rich deposit waits to ignite the market. Hopefully, the two people still out there looking, will stumble across it." Imagine the investing public mobilised behind the NEXT big thing! Imagine what would happen if the gold market became the only game in town! Imagine the profits to be made in the next penny stock company to make a colossal gold find! There are junior companies out there beginning to explore again. There are new opportunities. All we need is the proverbial spark to make this market catch fire. With share prices of gold producers on the rise, it is only a matter of time before we see new junior companies sprouting up everywhere and a healthy exploration scene restored.—Dr. Barron is a practising geologist with 17 years gold- and diamond-exploration experience in 10 countries. WAL-MART AND THE RED CHINESE SECRET POLICE, PART 1

By Sherman H. Skolnick, skolnicksreport.com, 8/26/01

To understand Wal-Mart, you have to have a handle on Arkansas. And to figure out Arkansas, you have to be knowledgeable about the Rockefellers. And to fathom the Red Chinese Secret Police, you have to know a lot about the richest family in the world.

To begin. The Rockefellers like to own and operate entire states with a sizeable geography, good natural assets, and a relatively small population. That way, if need be, to win a so-called “election”, they could more or less find it cheap to buy all the votes they may need to install their people. West Virginia is such a state. Like an ancient Colossus of Rhodes, astride the entrance to a harbor, the Rockefellers have a foot on both sides. On occasion, they pretend to be Democrats. Other times, as Republicans. They have installed as U.S. Senator (W.Va., D.) John D. Rockefeller IV, great grandson of John D. Rockefeller, founder of the bloody and infamous Standard Oil Trust. Broken up by a U.S. Supreme Court decree in 1911, the Standard Oil Trust, changing its name slightly to fool novices, is back together again.

Historically, Standard Oil would bomb their own obsolete plants, to blame onto a competitor, thereby gaining public support and strangling competition. (Ida Tarbell wrote early in the 20th Century detailed accounts of Rockefeller crimes.)

As U.S. Senator he calls himself Jay to be cute. His wife, Sharon Percy Rockefeller, has a key position in so-called “public” broadcasting. Consequently, we call it National Petroleum Radio. NPR and PBS would never finger the Rockefellers and Big Oil. (Happily, she has no say-so whatever in local public access Cable TV, where we operate in opposition to the monopoly press.)

We have determined to our satisfaction, by confronting them, that Chicago-based Harris Bank reportedly has dozens and dozens of secret joint accounts of the Percy/Rockefeller Family with so-called “terrorist” Osama bin Laden, tied together through Mid-East construction contracts. Ha! Ha! The oil-soaked White House says they would like to freeze bin Laden’s bank accounts if they can find them. Really?

Another Rockefeller owned-and-operated state is Arkansas. Sizeable land, small population. You cannot be so much as a successful dog-catcher there without the blessings of the Rockefellers. Several terms before Clinton, Winthrop Rockefeller was Governor. Our interviews with middle-level members of the Rockefeller Family convinces us his proper name should be WILLIAM ROCKEFELLER CLINTON. We feel certain, from all we know, that Sludge Willy is the illegitimate great grandson of the unsmiling Rockefeller patriarch.

The Rockefellers are not naive plutocrats. If there ever were ANY documents proving that Winthrop Rockefeller fathered five illegitimate children around the nation, including the person who calls himself “Bill Clinton”, those records, if any, have long since been destroyed.

So please, like some ninny, do not heckle us with “Where are your documents?” Until the Rockefellers are ready to throw away Bill and Hillary as no longer useful, they are untouchable. At the Senate Clinton Impeachment trial, the U.S. Senators certainly understood all this. (As an example, is it necessary for us to point out that the so-called “Watergate Affair” was touched off without a single document?)

It is surprising how some people look at a backward state like Arkansas and yet do not wonder about the so-called great fortunes headquartered there. Tyson Chickens. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. and all their subsidiaries, and J.B. Hunt Transport Services, Inc.

The U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) reportedly has undercover agent reports showing how Tyson, in the past, has been partly financed by dope trafficking. (Of course, their major user, McDonald’s, having their own problems, obviously is not interested to know. Visit our Website story about McDonald’s, “Coca-Cola, the CIA, and the Courts, Part 8”.)

Cynics point to Puerto Rico where Tyson supposedly got some of their chickens. Was contraband tucked into some of the birds who were so old, wags claimed these chickens were eligible for Social Security pensions?

Tyson has supposedly offered their chicken preparation expertise to Red China. Really? The Chinese have been handling chickens for centuries. Do they REALLY need consulting with Tyson? Need we point out, that Southwest China, where Tyson may have visited, are producers of “China White” dope, a major export to the U.S., much, often via Chicago.

Starting about the late 1970s, the Rockefeller banks, such as the First National of Chicago, now to confuse people re-named Bank One, began loaning billions and billions of dollars to mainland China. The promise was that Red China would pay back with gold from their western provinces. BUT, China did not allow in any inspectors to determine if there is that much gold there to be used to re-pay the loans. Instead, China has been allowed to pay back with “China White” flooding into the U.S. All the while the pressfakers keep falsely saying that most of the dope is coming from Colombia.

The American CIA, after all, are the security force worldwide protecting the assets and oilfields of the Rockefellers. So it should come as no surprise that ethnic Chinese, the Riady Family, suddenly got big in Arkansas. A money-laundry vehicle has been Stephen & Co., the Rockefeller-linked bond house, second only to Wall Street, headquartered in Little Rock.

In the 1980s, the CIA was shipping through the southern states, guns to Central America, and return trips of dope. Some originating in Colombia and a few other places. It was centered around a small community in western Arkansas, Mena, and the Mena Airport. The Riadys bought the tiny First National Bank of Mena reportedly as a laundry vehicle to the Chicago markets. (Visit our extensive Website stories about the Chicago Mercantile Exchange, the Chicago Board of Trade, and the Chicago Board Options Exchange.) With the aid of the Rockefellers and through the Riadys, reportedly billions of dope dollars traveled this route.

You can understand how profound the corruption is. Instrumental in the past in covering up this massive dope smuggling has been Asa Hutchinson. Get this. He has been recently named head of the DEA.

Wal-Mart and J.B. Hunt Transport Services: Where did the funding come from in the 1980s, for them to get so big? If you think they spread out simply because they are clever, then you are a firm believer in fairy tales. In simple terms, the backward state of Arkansas, controlled by the Rockefellers, with Rockefeller-agent calling himself “Bill Clinton” (or whatever his real name is), became the shuttle point for the Red Chinese in America.

When it comes to “evidence”, you have to recognize that circumstantial proof can be as powerful as paper records. How about those in murder cases sentenced to the death penalty, not by way of eyewitnesses, but only circumstantial proof, not “documents”.

In its simplest terms, Wal-Mart is a front for the Rockefellers and the Red Chinese Secret Police. Do not the top honchos at Wal-Mart know that their cheap prices are based on production by Chinese slave labor, in camps and factories operated by the Secret Police? By the way, there has been a movement in the U.S. to pay reparations to the descendents of American slavery. Will there some day be a similar movement in mainland China, to compensate the families and descendents of slave laborers?

Items that other stores sell for twenty dollars are sold by Wal-Mart for ten dollars. And Wal-Mart reportedly pays only twenty cents for the item made by slave labor. There is very little about the period of the 1980s as to Wal-Mart, when the Rockefellers were installing the Chinese in Arkansas and in American business. Who was noticing when the Rockefellers were playing their China card?

Who is a major transporter for Wal-Mart and got likewise big in the 1980s? Why, J.B. Hunt Transport Services, Inc., now headquartered in Lowell, Arkansas. Some of J.B. Hunt’s drivers have confirmed to us, off the record, because they do not wish to jeopardize their good jobs: (1) that reportedly they have reason to believe on occasion they are transporting contraband, believed by them to be narcotics and (2) that state authorities, such as in Illinois, know J.B. Hunt trucks are untouchable, not to be stopped for searching such as for contraband, or suspected overloading, or any other trucking or other violations. In Illinois, the trucks are headed for a J.B. Hunt terminal in a Chicago suburb.

On their own Website, www.jbhunt.com, here is how they describe their founder Johnnie Bryan Hunt, “J.B. Hunt embodies the American rags-to-riches FABLE in its most engaging personification. A living example of the AMERICAN DREAM fulfilled. He guided his billion-dollar trucking empire with the same enthusiasm and raw fortitude from which it began. But the young Hunt was an unlikely candidate for financial success of such magnitude.” (Emphasis added.) (At this point the Rockefeller violins start playing.) “Born in 1927 to a family of sharecroppers, Hunt grew up working the cotton fields of north-central and eastern Arkansas.”

We think the term FABLE is well-chosen as is the myth promoted by the monopoly press of “American Dream”. On their Website is the purported “History” of J.B. Hunt Transport Services, Inc. They tell us little about how they got big in the 1980s, at the time the Rockefellers were setting up Arkansas as a Red Chinese outpost in America. And at a time when the Red Chinese Secret Police got bigger and bigger in the U.S. using their front, Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., and its various units.

A few years ago, some local TV stations heckled Wal-Mart with small-time criticisms. Why? Well, Wal-Mart did not advertise much on local TV, so one way of jacking them up, is to start raising small questions about them. Wal-Mart got the message. Now that Wal-Mart advertises on TV more heavily than in the past, you can bet that stories like this one are totally unacceptable to the liars and whores of the press.

To understand the picture that Wal-Mart and other “big dealers” headquartered in Arkansas fit into, you have to study the extensive stories on our Website about “THE RED CHINESE SECRET POLICE IN THE UNITED STATES”. As we have stated, the Red Chinese Secret Police, since shortly after the Korean War, have been allowed, with impunity, to create murder and mayhem on U.S. soil.

In April 2001 a U.S. surveillance plane was forced down in an incident near mainland China. They held those from the plane hostage. For a while, some savvy sorts who know of Wal-Mart’s tie to Red China and slave labor there, started a boycott of Wal-Mart stores. The monopoly press reported little if anything about this.

Why are so many Americans generally so BLANK when it comes to understanding the origins of the supposed fortunes like Wal-Mart? Many grow up knowing only what they are taught from the Establishment’s propaganda school textbooks—and from what they see and hear on the mass media. Seldom is mentioned documented studies, such as Gustavus Myers’ History of the Great American Fortunes, showing they were founded by the most rotten criminals who were never prosecuted and jailed as they should have been. His other heavily-documented book History of the Supreme Court shows our legal system, at the highest level, has been riddled with crime-committing judges. Such as the so-called renowned Chief Justice John Marshall from early in the 19th Century. His gold-framed portrait hangs in many law schools. In Chicago, a law school is named for him. Yet, as Myers documents, Chief Justice Marshall covered up on America’s highest tribunal, the U.S. Supreme Court, where he presided, massive land frauds INVOLVING HIS OWN FAMILY.

Another important book is The Corrupt Judge by Joseph Borkin, showing how important judges were corrupted primarily in patent cases. The press whores are not about to have these books reprinted and promoted as best-sellers. You would be fortunate if you could—on some dusty shelf of a public library—find even one copy.

CHINA’S U.S. AIRPORT AND THE REPUTED CROOKED JUDGES

By Sherman H. Skolnick, skolnickreport.com, 9/1/01

In the Northwest corner of the state, near Rogers, Arkansas, is the huge new Northwest Arkansas Regional Airport. Clinton as President dedicated the new facility on November 7, 1998. Its runways can handle the largest current airplanes and the jumbo jets planned for the future. It has a Free Trade Zone. That means incoming airfreight coming non-stop from overseas supposed to be trans-shipped to places NOT in the U.S., is not subject to inspection by the U.S. Customs and is not subject to Customs duties and fees.

It is a place for huge non-stop air flights from Red China. It has numerous warehouses. Law enforcement personnel contend it is not difficult to evade regulations as to the Free Trade Zone. In-coming, non-stop air shipments from Red China, reportedly containing contraband, can be quietly transferred to another warehouse and re-shipped to U.S. DESTINATIONS. Because of the Free Trade Zone, U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) personnel and other federal authorities, reportedly assert they have no jurisdiction to inspect Red Chinese shipments.

[Sidelight: Ross Perot has in the past made public statements that he is for what is good for America. His son owns and operates a Free Trade Zone airport in Texas. Something to think about.]

What kind of illicit goods are ostensibly coming in to Northwest Arkansas from Red China and other dope and weapons export hotspots? Such as, apparently illegal weapons like AK-47 submachine guns unlawfully headed for inner city narco-terrorist street gangs. To cause turmoil and chaos in America by fomenting shoot-em-ups with big city police. Such weapons are manufactured by a Red Chinese-military-owned firm headed by Wang Jun. He is also head of the Red Chinese Secret Police. The person using the name “Clinton” [see Part One of this series] used to meet from time to time in the White House with Wang Jun. Clinton reportedly turned over to the Red Chinese Secret Police, U.S. financial, industrial, and MILITARY secrets.

In several of my stories circulated and posted on-line in the past, I wrote exclusive details of the highly patriotic group of 24 flag officers—that is U.S. Admirals and Generals—who at least since 1995, had sought under the Military Code to arrest Clinton for treason at the time he was Commander-In-Chief. If he charged them with mutiny, they were prepared, if they survived, to defend themselves with documents proving Clinton’s treachery in aiding and abetting sworn enemies of the United States.

Since 1995, ten of this group have been assassinated, including General David McCloud, head of the Alaska Military District, and Admiral Jeremy Boorda, Chief of Naval Operations, highest naval officer in uniform. And a group of top military, murdered via a sabotaged plane crash, April 17, 1995, near Alexander City, Alabama (two days before the bombings in Oklahoma City, which Clinton used to try to restore his failing power). Assisting this group was William Colby, former Director of Central Intelligence, likewise assassinated. (Our interviews with family members, close associates of the victims—and others tending to have direct knowledge—convince us of the validity of these details.)

Supposed “Independent Counsel” Kenneth W. Starr for four years running after Bill and Hillary Clinton, finally only focussed on Bill’s sex tricks with Monica Lewinsky. Starr spent the bulk of his time in PRIVATE LAW PRACTICE. His private law client? Why, Wang Jun. Also, Starr has been the UNREGISTERED FOREIGN LOBBYIST for the Beijing Government. So the Starr-Clinton episodes were all dirty jokes on the unsuspecting American common people.

When you know the facts, you would understand why we designate the new airport in Northwest Arkansas, as China’s Airport on U.S. soil. Look at a map of the area. Right nearby, in Bentonville, is the headquarters of Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., Sam’s Club and other subsidiaries. As stated in Part One, Wal-Mart reportedly depends on goods from Red China made by slave laborers under the authority of the Secret

Police. Also right nearby in Springdale, Arkansas, is the headquarters of Tyson Foods, Inc., also called by some as Tyson Chickens. They dominate the U.S. chicken market and Tyson exports to more than 70 countries. As stated earlier, Tyson has reportedly been financed in part by dope trafficking. Was their visit to Red China to share chicken processing “expertise” or to reportedly make further arrangements for exports to the U.S. from Southwest China of “China White”, high purity dope?

Once the items from Red China arrive in the “Free Trade Zone” of the Northwest Arkansas Regional Airport, what is the reputed transportation arrangement? Why, of course, it ostensibly is J.B. Hunt Transport Services, Inc. (Refer to details in Part One.)

And what is the court and media infrastructure that tends to support this dirty business? In Benton County, most every judge has stock in Wal-Mart. This is shown by their mandatory financial disclosure reports. One of the few crusading attorneys in Arkansas, if not in the entire U.S., is Dan C. Ivy, of nearby Fayetteville. Look what happened.

Helen Walton, widow of the alleged “founder” Sam Walton of Wal-Mart, slammed her car in an intersection into the vehicle of another motorist. He retained Ivy to sue the heiress of the supposed Walton “fortune” for various damages. Benton County Circuit Judge Tom Keith, according to Ivy and the court record, kept blocking Ivy from taking the deposition of Mrs. Walton and blocking other procedures.

“BENTONVILLE—Fayetteville attorney Dan Ivy is serving 36 hours in the Benton County jail after being found in contempt of court Wednesday by Circuit Judge Tom Keith.” Morning News/NWAonline.net, on-line version of the story, 8/2/01.

Ivy was in the process of arguing a motion to throw out the record of a prior hearing and asked Keith to remove himself from the lawsuit because of the judge’s ownership, as shown by financial disclosure records, of stock in Wal-Mart.

“Ivy claimed Wednesday that the Walton family and Wal-Mart are at the head of a conspiracy to control police officials, media, government and the judiciary in Benton County and to deprive his client of a fair hearing. He maintained that the Walton family and Wal-Mart used various foundations, charitable organizations and personal donations to further their control of the county. Ivy also argued that Walton family financial interests in publication of the Northwest Arkansas Times and Benton County Daily Record and that company’s alliance with the Arkansas Democrat-Gazette represent an attempt to control the publication of information regarding Wal-Mart and the Waltons.” And the same news source of 8/2/01 stated further:

“Ivy claimed that the judge’s ownership of Wal-Mart stock was substantial enough to prejudice him and to make it appear that Keith was party to such a conspiracy. He also noted that judges David Clinger, Xollie Duncan and Donald R. Huffman own Wal-Mart stock, leaving only Judge Jay Finch untainted in hearing lawsuits regarding the Waltons and Wal-Mart.” According to the press report, Judge Keith informed Ivy that he owns 165 shares of Wal-Mart stock and that a separate trust that solely benefits his wife holds 200 shares.” (The Morning News perhaps is not among those owned by Wal-Mart, dominated by them, or with which Wal-Mart has joint business interests.)

Judge Keith ordered Ivy jailed, and the judge rejected the motion to recuse himself and to throw out the record of the prior hearing.

When I found out about this, I called Judge Tom Keith's office. I explained to his secretary I would like the Judge to explain a little bit what happened. The Judge was standing right near the phone, giggling and laughing. His secretary said, "Mr. Skolnick, the judge does not want to talk to you. Call Mrs. Walton's attorneys."

In the 45 minutes after I hung up, my phone rang mysteriously one ring each time for 20 or more times. Each time no one was on the line. Hey, is this some new Red Chinese manufactured gadget for sending messages to troublesome reporters?

Rockefellers' plans/Wal-Mart and the crooked judges in Chicago. More coming.

Stay tuned.—E-mail: skolnick@ameritech.net

TWO MOMS CONTRACT FLESH-EATING STREP IN HOSPITAL DELIVERY ROOM

United Press International, 8/28/01

EVANSTON, ILLINOIS—Two women who delivered babies by Caesarean section at Evanston Hospital in late July contracted the "flesh-eating" bacterial infection necrotizing fasciitis, the hospital confirmed Tuesday.

The hospital said an investigation showed the women contracted the Group A streptococcus infection apparently from a member of the surgical team. Group A strep is the same type of bacteria that causes strep throat.

Neither of the babies was affected by the infection and one of the mothers already has been discharged and sent home. The second mother was in good condition, hospital spokeswoman Joan Trezek said.

"The OB patients were attended by the same surgical team and delivered in the same OR within five hours of each other," the hospital said in a statement.

"This is a very rare, very isolated occurrence," said Dr. Thomas Vescio, medical director for infection control and hospital epidemiology at Evanston Northwestern Healthcare. Vescio cited research indicating there were only 15 postpartum and post-surgical outbreaks of hospital-acquired Group A strep in the United States between 1965 and 1999.

Hospital officials said they believe they have identified the member of the surgical team who was carrying the bacterium. The individual, who showed no symptoms, was put on leave and given antibiotics. The person is now strep-free.

Vescio said no routine screening for the bacterium is conducted because the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention says it would serve no purpose.

"At present no hospital in the country could guarantee they could prevent such an event," Vescio said.

The two women who contracted the disease delivered babies July 31 within five hours of each other. Both have undergone surgery to control the infections.

Hospital officials have not determined how the bacterium was transmitted to the women, with Vescio saying skin transmission was unlikely. Possible airborne transmission is considered "somewhat controversial", he said.

The Illinois Department of Health is investigating the incident.

Some 600 people nationally contracted necrotizing fasciitis in 1999, according to CDC statistics. The disease destroys muscles, fat and skin tissue, killing about 20 percent of victims.

Generally, the bacterium spreads through direct contact with mucus from the nose or throat of an infected individual or through contact with infected wounds or sores on the skin. The disease can spread rapidly and needs to be treated promptly.

Symptoms include fever, severe pain and swelling. The infection may enter through even a minor wound, according to information from the National Necrotizing Fasciitis Foundation and redness around the wound is an additional possible symptom. The NNFF notes that symptoms of the infection may be mistaken for the flu.

'GHOSTS' GROUP THREATENS IRS EMPLOYEES

By Jon Dougherty, WorldNetDaily.com, 9/1/01

A group calling itself the "Ghosts of the Revolution" has issued a threatening warning to the Internal Revenue Service, claiming that agents, employees and IRS offices could be targeted for attacks after Sept. 1.

"This warning is given to all Americans now employed by the Internal Revenue Service," the group said in a four-page communiqué, a copy of which was provided to WND.

"The IRS is a criminal organization in the service of collectivists and socialists. A condition of war now exists between free Americans and the IRS," said the warning. "The failure of the IRS to conduct itself in a lawful manner has brought about the need for this action."

Several copies of the communiqué were sent out Aug. 6, bearing a Casper, Wyoming postmark.

The warning comes just weeks before tax reform advocates, congressional supporters and officials from the IRS and Justice Department are to meet in Washington, D.C., to discuss the nature, scope and legality of the federal income tax and the 16th Amendment.

The hearings scheduled for Sept. 25 and 26 are still on, despite the threat, said tax-reform expert and author Bob Schulz, who plans to attend and participate. Schulz is director of We the People Foundation, a tax reform group that is also sponsoring the hearings.

Besides Schulz, tax-reform advocate Devvy Kidd, tax attorney Larry Becraft and former IRS agent Joe Banister—all hearings participants—also received copies.

Schulz said Rep. Roscoe Bartlett, a Maryland Republican who helped arrange the hearings, also received a copy. He said he and Bartlett discussed the communiqué last week when Schulz visited Bartlett in his Washington office.

However, no one in Bartlett's office was available on Friday to confirm or deny whether the congressman received a copy of the warning. Schulz said the contents of the communiqué weren't made public until this week because recipients said they weren't sure what to do. But he did say recipients immediately contacted the FBI.

A spokesman at the bureau's headquarters in Washington told WND he had not heard of the communiqué. But Peter Gulotta, an FBI spokesman in the bureau's Baltimore office in Bartlett's district said the agency "was aware of the threat".

"I don't know where the threat originated, but we're taking it seriously and looking into it," he told WND.

Schulz also said he had been interviewed by agents from the Treasury Department, but the agency did not return phone calls for confirmation. Schulz said he wasn't sure if the communiqué was sent by "a competitor" or not, but he suggested it could even have come from a government agency.

He noted that all of the recipients, ironically, are associated in some way with this month's hearings.

Some experts say the warning could be the work of a "provocateur"—either a government agent or other faction seeking to discredit the tax-reform movement specifically in advance of next month's hearings, or simply to discredit the movement in general.

The group claims it sent copies of its statement to other media outlets, including newspapers, television stations, magazines, and "select Internet sites".

One such Internet newssite, The Sierra Times, reported that the communiqué "warns citizens to avoid IRS facilities beginning Sept. 1".

Schulz told WND he did not in any way sanction the violence alluded to in the communiqué.

"That's not who I am," Schulz said. "I don't condone that kind of behavior. We don't want to see anyone hurt."

Meanwhile, Schulz said negotiations were moving ahead in selecting tax-reform attorneys and experts to present evidence and make arguments during the upcoming hearings. However, Schulz refused to say whether his group had selected a "lead counsel" to head up the team.

A week ago, WND reported that Robert Bernhoft had stepped down as the group's lead counsel.

"I wish the foundation and the other interested Americans success," he told WND, saying he wasn't "at liberty" to discuss the details of why he stepped down.

"The federal income tax is a slave tax. We're a free people; we're not slaves. There are so many constitutional violations and legal problems with the current tax as it's imposed and collected that the tax will unwind eventually, somehow," he said.

Mike Bodine, a spokesman for the foundation, cited "personality differences" as the reason why Bernhoft resigned.—Jon E. Dougherty is a staff reporter and columnist for WorldNetDaily, and author of the special report, "Election 2000: How the Military Vote Was Suppressed".

YAMASHITA'S GOLD—EYEWITNESS REVEALS TRUTH OF FABULOUS WWII HIDDEN TREASURE

By Sterling and Peggy Seagrave,
South China Morning Post, 9/3/01

In the closing months of World War II, in the Philippines, several of Japan's highest ranking imperial princes hid tons of looted gold bullion and other stolen treasure in caves and tunnels, to recover later. This was the wealth of 12 Asian countries, accumulated over thousands of years.

Expert teams accompanying Japan's armed forces had systematically emptied treasuries, banks, factories, private homes, pawn shops, art galleries, and stripped ordinary people, while Japan's top gangsters looted Asia's underworld and its black economy.

There were 175 "imperial" treasure sites hidden throughout the Philippines. When American tanks were close, the chief engineers of those vaults were given a farewell party 67 metres underground in Tunnel 8 in the mountains of Luzon, stacked with row after row of gold bars. As the evening progressed, they drank great quantities of sake, sang patriotic songs and shouted banzai (long life).

At midnight, General Yamashita Tomoyuki and the princes slipped out, and dynamite charges were set off in the access tunnels, entombing the engineers. Their vaults would remain secret. The princes escaped to Tokyo by submarine, and three months later General Yamashita surrendered to American troops. Japan had lost the war militarily, but the princes made certain Japan did not lose financially.

This grisly event has remained unknown until now, and the hidden treasure was brushed off as a fanciful legend of “Yamashita’s Gold”. But an eyewitness to the entombment has taken us there and given us his personal account. During the war, Ben Valmores was the young Filipino valet of a senior prince, who was in charge of closing all imperial treasure sites in the Philippines. A sometimes sentimental man, the prince spared Ben’s life and led him out of Tunnel 8 just before the dynamite was detonated.

Japan’s looting of Asia was overseen by [then-emperor] Hirohito’s brother Prince Chichibu. His organisation was codenamed kin no yuri (Golden Lily), the title of one of the emperor’s poems. Other princes headed different parts of Golden Lily across the conquered territories. Eventually, Japanese sources told us that Ben’s wartime master was prince Takeda Tsuneyoshi, first cousin of Hirohito and grandson of emperor Meiji.

In 1998, we tested Ben with 1930s photographs of many princes, all the names removed, and he instantly identified prince Takeda, Hirohito’s brother prince Chichibu and other princes.

Ben said he had spent time with each of them, bringing them food, tea and cigarettes while they inventoried each treasure site. When he saw our photo of Prince Takeda, Ben froze, then began softly crooning the Japanese folk song Sakura, Sakura (Cherry Blossoms), which he said Takeda often sang to himself.

In the final stages of work on a biography of Japan’s imperial family titled The Yamato Dynasty, we were told that in October 1945, American intelligence agents learned where some of the Japanese loot was hidden in the Philippines, and quietly recovered billions of dollars worth of gold bullion, platinum and loose diamonds. This information, if true, revealed the existence of an extraordinary state secret, something the United States Government kept from its own citizens for more than half a century. There was no time to include this in the biography. It had to be investigated separately. Here is some of what we have since learned:

After surrendering on September 2, 1945, General Yamashita was charged with war crimes over gruesome atrocities committed in Manila under the order of an admiral, while Yamashita had ordered withdrawing troops to leave the city unharmed. During his trial, there was no mention of plundered treasure, or of looting during the war.

But we now know there was a hidden agenda. Because it was not possible to torture General Yamashita physically without this becoming evident to his lawyers, members of his staff were tortured. His driver, Major Kojima Kashii, was given special attention. In charge of the torture of Major Kojima was a Filipino-American intelligence officer named Severino Garcia Santa Romana, whose friends called him Santy. He wanted the major to reveal each place where he had taken Yamashita, where bullion and other treasure were hidden for recovery after the war. Supervising Santy during the torture was Captain Edward Lansdale, later one of America’s best-known “Cold Warriors”.

Early that October, Kojima broke and led Lansdale and Santy to more than a dozen Golden Lily treasure vaults in the rugged country north of Manila. What they found astounded everyone from General Douglas MacArthur all the way up to the White House. After discussions with his cabinet, President Harry Truman decided to keep the recovery a state secret.

Santy’s ensuing recoveries greatly altered America’s leverage during the Cold War. According to senior U.S. government officials and high-ranking U.S. Army officers, the Truman administration set this treasure aside along with Axis loot recovered in Europe, as a secret political-action fund to fight Communism in the Cold War.

Crudely put, it would be used to bribe statesmen and military officers, and to buy elections for anti-communist political parties. The idea for a global political-action fund based on war loot had originated with U.S. secretary of war, Henry Stimson. During the war, Stimson had a brain-trust thinking hard about recovered Axis plunder, and how it should be handled after the war. Their solution was to set up what is informally called the “Black Eagle Trust”, after the black eagle emblem of Hitler’s Reichsbank in Berlin.

The Black Eagle Trust was first discussed in secret during July 1944, when 44 nations met at Bretton Woods, New Hampshire, to plan the post-war economy. This was confirmed to us by a number of high-level sources, including former CIA deputy director Ray Cline, who knew about Santy’s recoveries in 1945, and continued to be involved in attempts in the 1980s and 1990s to hide blocks of Japanese war loot still said to be in the vaults of banks in New York.

In November 1945, General MacArthur strolled down row after row of gold bars stacked two metres tall during a tour of vaults opened by Santy. From what was seen in these vaults alone, it was evident that over a period of years Japan had looted billions of dollars in treasure from all over Asia. Much of this plunder had reached Japan overland earlier, from China through Korea, but the rest was hidden in the Philippines, unable to be shipped to Japan by sea because of the successful U.S. submarine blockade.

According to Ray Cline and others, between 1945 and 1947 the gold bullion recovered by Santy and Lansdale was moved discreetly to 172 accounts at banks in 42 countries.

There were important reasons for all this secrecy. If the recovery of this huge mass of stolen gold was known only to a trusted few, the countries and individuals that had been plundered could not lay claim to it. Truman recognised that the very existence of so much black gold, if it became public knowledge, would cause the metal’s fixed price to collapse. But as long as the gold was kept hidden, prices could be maintained and currencies pegged to gold would be stable. Meanwhile, the black gold would serve as a reserve asset, bolstering the prime banks in each country, and strengthening the anti-communist governments of those nations.

To hide the existence of all this treasure, Washington had to tell a number of lies. Especially lies about Japan, which had stolen most of the gold. America wanted Japan to become its anti-communist bastion in Asia, where the mainland was being overrun by communists. If American conservatives and Japanese conservatives were to ally effectively against Communism, they had to begin by enlarging their financial resources for the Cold War.

Above all, the source of much of this hidden wealth must never be acknowledged. Washington had to insist, starting in 1945, that Japan never stole anything, and was flat broke and bankrupt when the war ended. Here was the beginning of many terrible secrets.

Because they remained “off the books”, these enormous political-action funds got into the wrong hands, where they remain to this day. We can reveal that in 1960, then-vice-president Richard Nixon “gave” one of the biggest of these political-action funds, the U.S.$35-billion (about HK$272 billion) M-Fund, to leading members of Japan’s Liberal Democratic Party (LDP). In return, he is believed to have sought their support for his presidential campaign that year.

The M-Fund, now said to be worth more than U.S.$500 billion, is still controlled by members of the LDP.

Officially, we are told that Japan’s wartime elite, the imperial family, the zaibatsu (large industrial business conglomerates), the yakuza (Japanese mafia) and the “good” bureaucrats ended the war as impoverished victims of a handful of “bad” military zealots. We are told that Japan was badly damaged and impoverished, barely able to feed itself at war’s end.

In fact, Japan emerged from the war far richer than before, and with remarkably little damage, except to the homes of millions of ordinary Japanese who did not count, at least in the view of their overlords.

Evidence of Golden Lily loot comes also from straightforward legal actions in America. Such simple things as the probating of the will of Santa Romana (Santy), verification of his tax records, and legal evidence of his fortune deposited in the U.S., Switzerland, Hong Kong and elsewhere, provide hard proof that the world is awash with clandestine bank accounts growing out of Golden Lily.

Other lawsuits in the U.S. prove that Golden Lily war loot was indeed hidden in the Philippines. Rogelio Roxas, a Filipino locksmith, found a one-tonne, solid-gold Buddha and thousands of gold bars hidden in a cave near Baguio only to have it stolen from him by President Ferdinand Marcos. Roxas was subsequently tortured and died in suspicious circumstances. Some believe he was murdered. In 1996, a U.S. Federal Court awarded his heirs a judgment of U.S.$22 billion against the Marcos estate.

As the 1951 Peace Treaty was skewed by secret deals, thousands of Japan’s victims have been deprived of any compensation for their suffering. According to Article 14 of the Treaty: “It is recognised that Japan should pay reparations to the Allied Powers for the damage and suffering caused by it during the war. Nevertheless it is also recognised that the resources of Japan are not presently sufficient.” To reinforce the claim that Japan was broke, Article 14 noted that “the Allied Powers waive all reparations claims of the Allied Powers and their nationals arising out of any actions taken by Japan...”. By signing the Treaty, Allied countries concurred that Japan’s plunder had vanished down a rabbit hole, and all Japan’s victims were out of luck. In return for going along with the Treaty, the Allies received portions of the gold bullion recovered by Santy.

We have evidence from former CIA deputy director Cline that the gold bullion Santy and Lansdale recovered was secretly moved to national treasuries and prime banks in more than 42 countries, including Great Britain. We also have evidence from British archives confirming this.

More than half a century later, the last battle of the Pacific War is being waged in courts in the U.S. and Japan where surviving prisoners of war, slave labourers, comfort women and civilian victims of Japan have filed billion-dollar lawsuits to win compensation so mysteriously denied them after the war. In 1995, it was estimated that there were 700,000 victims of the war who had still received no compensation.

Today, their numbers are dwindling rapidly because of age and illness. Backing them is an extraordinary coalition, including international law firms with years of experience, fighting for compensation from German industries and Swiss banks, for crimes committed and money looted during the Nazi Holocaust.

FIRST NERVE CELL-SILICON MICROCHIP GOES LIVE

By Helen Pearson, Nature.com, 9/4/01

"It has a touch of science fiction", admit the scientists who have wired up the first conducting nerve chip. The electronic circuit, grown from silicon and nerve cells, brings brain-repair chips, advanced biosensors and biological computers a small step towards reality.

'Neuroelectronics' combines nerve cells and microchips. It could one day lead to 'neuroprosthetic' implants replacing damaged nervous tissue, and advanced computers mimicking living, learning circuits.

Peter Fromherz and Gunther Zeck of the Max Planck Institute for Biochemistry in Munich placed snail nerve cells on a silicon chip, fencing them in place with microscopic plastic pegs. Neighbouring cells grew connections with each other and with the chip¹.

A stimulator beneath each nerve cell created a change in voltage that triggered an electrical impulse to travel through the cell. Electrical pulses applied to the chip passed from one nerve cell to another, and back to the chip to trip a silicon switch. The circuit literally went live.

Designing circuits by fencing in cells is "cute", says Eve Marder, who studies neural networks at Brandeis University in Waltham, Massachusetts. She says that by letting us create nerve-based circuits at will, the technique "is a lovely way" to probe the workings of the nervous system, for example to investigate how memories are formed.

The main obstacle to neuroelectronics is the difficulty of reliably connecting devices and living tissue, Marder explains. In previous attempts to build such circuits, the nerve cells moved when they grew connections—by caging the cells in, Fromherz and Zeck got round this problem. Using silicon means electronic devices can be built into a standard chip.

Biosensors for testing toxic or pharmaceutical substances on nerve cells and neuroprosthetics are among the ambitious applications for such chips. For example, chips could bridge a damaged section of the spinal cord.

But such projects are still the realms of science fiction, as are "neurocomputers with living neurons or brains", says Fromherz. Meanwhile, nerve networks will hopefully teach scientists how to mimic the brain's properties.

RE: NOTES FROM THE PHILIPPINES

Of course we are lonesome for "home" things and people. But when realization came that we could not do anything about anything back there—we have had to simply let go and let God because this focus COMES FIRST FOR US.

The ones left back "home" are carrying their load in backbreaking heaps and those hands and hearts reach across the oceans and around the globe to hold our hands and share this task.

I get the computer job of these writings and E.J. gets the confusion, from making old equipment work to "trying" to make the new work for the first time. Two-by has kept us in "cleaned air" and new printer-Fax equipment, the price of which is not cheap in terms of the time needed to learn to use it.

The phone line(s) (can't tell whether it is multiple or just multiple use) came in day before yesterday. The turnover of land lines over here is incredible and the phone has not stopped ringing—all "wrong numbers". E.J. finally disconnected them so we could sleep. And, if you have gone to Disneyland and have seen the General Electric display of the "early days"—WE HAVE IT. We have wires strung over the hotel roof, through the sliding doors, off the walls, down the middle of the floor and heaven alone knows what they are for or what they do. It certainly would appear to be a typical CIA operation of some kind. Oh, but—everything works—wrongly.

All, however, is well with this world; I have Spelt bread baking in the bedroom, everything stacked from corner to ceiling with papers and entropy. Who needs order or sanity to succeed?

Night before last we are busy about our work in the mid-evening (around 8:30 p.m.) and the world exploded! By the time I crawled out of the bathroom on hands and knees I thought this is the Big One or Manila is back in the fireworks business. Well, fortunately it was the latter and for the next twenty minutes they shot fireworks at our window. They all burst into full glory just in front of us, raining down debris onto the hotel, but oh, well—. I considered it a very GOOD OMEN of good things to come and accepted the show as our own special confirmation celebration. It was like the whole Tehachapi Fourth right in our window. We never did hear what the show was "for", so we just considered it to be a celebration of year 15 and one more extension of our visa for another 60 days (we hope). Our passports are still gone and the visa expires TODAY, but we think they would have called if anything was necessary that wasn't done. Again, our next extension requires another trip "off shore".

Our passport pages are all full now and we really haven't been much of "anywhere". I think we might just feel like those travelers to Vietnam who really didn't get to see the world after all.

Well, we are now being pleaded with to move to Sulu and you know what, it sounds pretty good to me. After all, the Sultan of Sulu thinks he owns everything in Southeast Asia. Here, however, the palace is built on bamboo sticks and other missing things of modern society. Oh, well, we remain flexible. E.J., as I write here, is downstairs meeting with the people involved—in Sulu that is.

Our friend and "official" from Mindanao has been here all week and lots of things are happening that makes the heart know that THIS IS WHAT IT'S ALL ABOUT and what we don't KNOW is in our best interests in these particular circumstances.

It is a wondrous realization to KNOW that even though we be tiny and but a blip on the passing and changing screen of life, we find that there is always something we can GIVE, and when we GIVE, we receive so much more abundantly than we could have anticipated.

In the wonder of each moment we must look for something to GIVE, that in the next there can be a reward—and we have given and regiven as are our instructions.

I want to share a bit of my gifted journey. We have been here long enough now that Lester of New Zealand has sent yearly calendars which are totally grand. I change my picture of choice whenever the mood changes and I can literally climb the snow-covered mountains or stroll through the rain forest filled with overlapping ferns.

I have also, last evening, gone through the ancient ruins and history of Greece—with National Geographic, and did not have to climb those awful rock stairs to the Acropolis. The MIND is a wondrous thing, friends, and we can handle any circumstance RIGHT THERE. It is ego that WARPS the mind—either through self or through another's manipulation of same.

I am learning that WITH GOD we SHALL change the concepts of a hurting world and then these days, too, will come to pass into history. Will we have done a good job or a wretched-mess-type of tragedy-comedy on the stage of life? All that and without hardly leaving the confines of this room or this immediate location. It is the gaining of proper instructions and circumstances of "the way" and then joining hands and hearts and bringing it into creation. It has taken a very long time to understand this "miracle" of creation.

You show me someone who believes there is no God—and I will show you a SICK and warped person. Furthermore, if we just BARELY squeeze through these hard and lean days—fine, we will have made it through and isn't it always in the very nick of time? Isn't that for which we search always in the LAST place we look?

E.J. just came in, grinning from ear to ear, so I better close this and go get my "debriefing". These are the fun times for us, to plan a meeting together and then debrief to see how well we did in preparing the answers to the right questions.

Well, he ran off to the bathroom. Maybe that was a grimace instead of a grin?—DJE

[E.J.: Naw, it was a grin. We are doing fine—but not quick. It cannot be hurried, so we will just have to keep on keeping on.]

More Gold-Manipulation Games

THE BIS FIRES THE FIRST SHOT

By James Turk, gold-eagle.com (Editorial), 9/3/01

I've been waiting for it to happen, and now the war of words has finally begun. The Bank for International Settlements today fired the first shot.

As reported in today's Financial Times, Giacomo Panizzutti, head of foreign exchange and gold at the Bank for International Settlements, was quoted as saying that he estimated total gold loans to be 5,200 tonnes. As if that weren't brash enough, he went on to say that the 15 European central banks that signed the 1999 Washington Agreement on gold have "lent 2,119.32 tonnes, which is the amount they had lent at the time of the agreement and a total they pledged not to exceed".

The article then went on to present Mr. Panizzutti's analysis of the total amount of gold loans. The somewhat skeptical FT reporter astutely observed: "Analysts find the timing of Mr. Panizzutti's comments interesting in light of an impending ruling by a Boston court." Interesting indeed!

That court ruling is of course the one that will come from the hearing scheduled for October 9th. That day the judge will hear the arguments of the defendants to dismiss the case brought to the federal court by Boston attorney Reg Howe.

It is worthy of note to see that the FT is providing this hearing with worldwide publicity. It is also worth noting the FT rightly acknowledges that the amount of gold loans outstanding is obtaining worldwide attention because of the prodigious efforts by "the Gold Anti-Trust Action Committee (GATA) [which] believes that at least part of gold's price weakness can be attributed to a conspiracy between the BIS, top officials at the U.S. Treasury Department, the Federal Reserve Bank and investment houses".

The FT is generally accepted to be one of the mouthpieces of the cozy cartel of big banks, including those that are defendants in Reg Howe's case. So I guess it is to be expected that the FT puts GATA in a negative light, focusing on "conspiracy" rather than GATA's stated aim, which is to use the U.S. federal court system and other legitimate means to get at the truth. But I'm sure that GATA will no doubt welcome this new publicity nonetheless.

More to the point, however, this FT article requires some thoughtful analysis. This analysis is needed in order to put Mr. Panizzutti's comments in their proper—and unflattering—light.

I know that Reg Howe has gone to great lengths to decline press interviews and other publicity, relying on the principle of fighting his battle in court instead of in the press. Neither Mr. Panizzutti nor the BIS apparently have the same compunction. But even though the FT may willingly give Mr. Panizzutti's point of view the headlines, a close analysis of this article demonstrates that it was aimed more to put forward BIS propaganda than it was to get at the truth. Consider the following:

1) The article says: "And although the BIS official did not explicitly say as much, the estimate [of gold loans] contradicts conspiracy theories that the official sector has undermined the gold price by pumping more than twice that amount into the market." That comment sounds fairly authoritative, but it really is just an FT interpretation. It only has the appearances of authority by referring to the "BIS official". In the interest of open and honest disclosure, however, this statement's significance was completely undermined by the very next paragraph. The FT noted that "Mr. Panizzutti [was] speaking in his private capacity rather than on behalf of the bank". If he was speaking in a "private capacity", why even bother to identify him as a "BIS official" unless to propagandize the supposed authority of his pronouncement? But more importantly, what authority does anybody have when speaking 'on the record' just as a private individual? I think everyone knows the answer to that question—none. So regardless of the outward appearances this article conveys, by acknowledging that Mr. Panizzutti is speaking in a private capacity, any alleged facts in this article have to be seriously questioned, clearly establishing that this article's sole purpose was the propaganda effect it aimed to achieve.

2) That propaganda happens to be the objective is even more apparent in another way, but this time the FT did not have the honesty to provide any disclosure of the facts. The article clearly gives one the impression that Mr. Panizzutti is speaking for the fifteen European central banks (ECBs) that signed the Washington

Agreement. Even aside from the point I made above about the reliability of his information—because he is speaking in a personal capacity—Mr. Panizzutti's remarks have no credibility whatsoever when considering that the BIS was NOT one of the fifteen signatories of the Washington Agreement, an important fact not disclosed by the FT. Therefore, even if he were speaking in his official BIS capacity, the BIS itself has no authority to speak for the fifteen ECBs nor to speak to the Washington Agreement because it was not a signatory. So is it not even more bizarre for the article to imply authority about the Washington Agreement when in fact there is none? It is clear that the article's intent is to propagandize the BIS's own point of view, rather than get at the truth.

3) There is still more evidence of the article's true intent. How can an individual speaking in his private capacity divulge confidential information about his banking clients? It is obvious that any bank officer who valued his job would not disclose confidential client information unless he was told to do so by his higher-ups. This principle is even more important considering that the BIS is headquartered in Switzerland, a country which respects banking privacy. This is more evidence that the FT's intent is to propagandize the BIS's point of view, rather than to present the facts.

4) Mr. Panizzutti's statements also fall short on their technical merit. He speaks about gold loans, but what about gold deposits? Everybody knows that a deposit into a bank is different from a loan to a bank. The money in your checking account is a deposit, but banks also borrow money. A bank liability for deposits is accounted differently than bank liabilities for money it borrows. The BIS alone has 825 tonnes of gold on deposit according to its most recent annual report (see the explanatory note at the end of this article). That amount by itself is 16% of the total gold loans disclosed by Mr. Panizzutti. How much gold do the central banks have on deposit, in addition to what they have loaned? And what about gold swaps and repos? Why hasn't Mr. Panizzutti disclosed those totals? The FT article tells only half the story, but lets the uninformed reader think that it is the whole story. By relying on half-truths like this, it is clear that the article was aimed for propaganda, rather than the truth.

If Mr. Panizzutti wanted to truly speak for some ECB, he could make a valuable contribution by telling the whole truth and presenting the whole picture. He could also make a valuable contribution by answering some key questions.

For example, the Bundesbank accounts on its balance sheet for "Gold und Gold Forderungen", which it translates in the English version of its report as "Gold and Gold Claims". The word "claims", according to my Black's Law Dictionary is "a broad, comprehensive word... to demand as one's own". Therefore, it is apparent that 'claims' could include different types of Bundesbank assets, specifically, gold 'claims' arising from gold loaned by the Bundesbank and gold 'claims' arising from gold deposited by the Bundesbank into other banks. And it is therefore logical that this word 'claims' also includes the Bundesbank's gold swaps, and who knows how many other categories of gold transactions that it may have undertaken. Thus, there are four or more types of assets in this one category on the Bundesbank's balance sheet.

So will Mr. Panizzutti, if he is still inclined to speak for client banks of the BIS, please explain to the FT how much gold the Bundesbank actually has in the vault. Also, how much gold is owed to the Bundesbank in each of these other categories of loans, deposits, swaps and everything else the Bundesbank has done with Germany's gold.

There is also another question the FT could be asking Mr. Panizzutti. Why isn't the Bundesbank preparing its financial statements in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles (GAAP)? This question is not just one that relates to full disclosure of transactions in the gold market, but also has a direct bearing on German law.

Section 26(2) of the Bundesbank Act, which governs the preparation of the Bundesbank's annual statements of account, says: "§26(2) Das Rechnungswesen der Deutschen Bundesbank hat den Grundsätzen ordnungsmäßiger Buchführung zu entsprechen." The English translation of the Bundesbank Act states this requirement as follows: "§26(2) The accounting system of the Deutsche Bundesbank shall comply with generally accepted accounting principles."

This requirement for the Bundesbank is very clear, but what is not clear is why the Bundesbank is violating this provision of the law. GAAP states that gold in the Bundesbank's own vault is different from gold that has been loaned, or gold that has been transferred to others by deposits and other schemes. In other words, gold in the vault is different from 'claims' to gold. The European Central Bank itself acknowledges this practice in its October 2000 report, "Statistical Treatment of the Eurosystem's International Reserves", which states: "... regardless of the type of transaction (i.e. gold swaps, repos, deposits or loans)". In other words, the European Central Bank is acknowledging that the different ECBs do not distinguish between gold in the vault with gold that is out on "swaps, repos, deposits or loans".

Yet, in obvious defiance and contravention to GAAP, the Bundesbank reports only one asset, "Gold und Gold Forderungen", i.e., "Gold and Gold Claims". Clearly, its financial statement does not meet the requirements of Section 26(2) of the Bundesbank Act. Would Mr. Panizzutti please explain why not? Would anyone at the Bundesbank be willing to explain why not?

Readers may recall that the last time the FT mentioned GATA was just before the May 2001 South African Summit sponsored, at great expense, by GATA. And needless to say, that FT article was disparaging of GATA. Given that it appeared just before the GATA Summit, this curious timing to mention an organization that had been in existence for more than two years makes it obvious that the FT was doing the bidding of those who do not want the truth to emerge about the gold market.

I spoke at the Summit. So I know from first-hand knowledge that not only was the Summit well attended by representatives of mining companies, labor unions and African governments, the Summit was also successful in forthrightly communicating GATA's message. And what is that message? That there is an urgent need for open, honest and full disclosure in the gold market. The FT is apparently afraid of this message, or perhaps, the repercussions of what full disclosure in the gold market would mean to its handlers. So rather than seek facts and full disclosure, it appears that the FT is more intent on doing the bidding of the big banks that pay for the full-page advertisements that appear so regularly and abundantly throughout its 'pink-sheets'.

So courtesy of the FT, the BIS has come-out swinging, firing the first shot. It has begun a propaganda war. As the FT itself says: "The case is now at a critical stage as the Boston district court prepares its ruling on whether the lawsuit goes to discovery or is thrown out. BIS directors will no doubt be watching with interest to see whether the judge takes Mr. Panizzutti's comments to heart." That frank and open admission makes clear the timing as well as the intent of the article, which is for the BIS to propagandize its position, rather than to disclose the truth. But this statement also has an ominous and sinister ring to it.

Are we to believe that a federal court judge is supposed to make his ruling based on what he reads in the FT, assuming he even reads it? Or is this some coded message of intimidation threatening the judge to take "Mr. Panizzutti's comments to heart" or else? Let's hope this federal judge is courageous in his willingness to pursue and seek out the truth.

NOTE ON BIS GOLD DEPOSITS: In its 31 March 2001 annual report, the BIS discloses on its financial statement Gold Deposits equal to 2,842.3 Gold Swiss Francs (GF). Then in footnote 2.(a) it says the GF is "equivalent to $1.94149..." (sic) It also says the GF is "0.29032258... grams of fine gold", and finally that: "Items representing claims on gold are translated into gold francs on the basis of their fine weight. Items denominated in U.S. dollars are translated into gold francs on the basis of a gold price of U.S.$ 208 per ounce of fine gold".

These different statements leave open the possibility for different interpretations because the footnote only mentions "claims on gold", which presumably is a BIS asset, and fails to mention "claims to gold", which would be a BIS liability. Therefore, it is uncertain how the BIS actually books Gold Deposits with it—and what weight of gold these deposits actually represent.

I have reported in the article above the Gold Deposits to be 825 tonnes. I calculated this total by taking the GF 2.842 billion of gold on deposit, determined a dollar valuation using $1.94/GF and divided by $208 per ounce, to reach this 825 tonnes total.

Another interpretation would be to convert the GF 2.842 billion Gold Deposit at the 0.29032258 grams rate per GF. By this calculation, the Gold Deposit is still 825 tonnes.

Thus, even though footnote 2(a) does not explicitly refer to the accounting treatment for gold liabilities of the BIS, it appears that their liability for Gold Deposits is 825 tonnes.—Copyright 2001 © by The Freemarket Gold & Money Report; www.fgmr.com

THE GOLDEN AGE OF PAPER

By Bill Haynes, gold-eagle.com (Editorial), 8/31/01

Most people have the misconception that the 1929 stock market crash caused the Great Depression of the '30s. Actually, the Crash of '29 signaled the Great Depression, which was brought on by the Federal Reserve's manipulations of the money supply during the 1920s and 1930s.

In the '20s, the Fed printed dollars in efforts to help Great Britain reestablish its pound sterling as a premier currency following World War I. Because the United States escaped the war unscathed and had supplied most of the Allies' materiel, huge quantities of gold flowed into the U.S. Treasury, making the dollar the world's number one currency. (In the aftermath of war, everyone knows the importance of gold.)

Britain, having long "ruled the world", wanted pre-war status for the pound, but overvalued it. This resulted in the pound being shunned for the dollar and for gold. To shore up the pound, the U.S. Treasury bought pounds with dollars freshly-printed by the Federal Reserve. But, those dollars did more than support the pound, they also flowed into the economy, bringing on the Roaring Twenties, a period of robust prosperity. The Fed's manipulations also produced a bull market in stocks like the world had never seen before.

To correct the excesses, in the late '20s the Fed shrank the money supply; consequently, prices fell. Businesses, which during the '20s had increased production capabilities, cut back and laid off workers. Small, regional banks collapsed as loans went unpaid and because depositors chose to withdraw their funds. To protect themselves, Americans were converting paper money to that "barbarous relic" gold. Consequently, President Franklin Roosevelt ordered banks to cease redeeming paper dollars in gold and Americans to turn in their gold.

At the depths of the Great Depression, the money supply had shrunk by a third, resulting in collapsed prices in nearly all sectors of the economy. With fewer dollars circulating, how could prices do anything but fall? The Great Depression was truly a deflationary collapse, as the Fed shrank the money supply. The Fed's actions also caused thousands of banks to fail, thereby wiping out still more dollars.

(Here is another point about the failed banks of the 1930s. Most were state banks that had not joined the Federal Reserve System. Few large banks in metropolitan areas failed. As a result, large city banks enjoyed reduced competition after the 1930s. In the 1980s, with the Savings & Loan crisis, more competition disappeared—and today the mega-banks are merging rapidly. In a few years, only five or so banks will control 85% of deposits. Congress seems oblivious to this dangerous concentration of power.)

Limited knowledge of the details of the Great Depression causes most Americans to think that a recession, or economic slowdown, must be accompanied by falling prices. This misconception is so widespread that some writers and economists often label a period of falling prices "deflationary".

For example, Richard Russell, noted author of Dow Theory Letters, writes about falling commodities prices and fears "we may be entering a deflationary period". At the same time, Russell was the first to point out that through the first six months of this year, the Fed increased the MZM (money of zero maturity) at an annual rate of 23.7%!

With the money supply exploding and seven interest rate cuts this year, how can prices fall? Easily: over capacity. If the copper industry is producing more than the market demands, copper prices will fall. If the markets see an economic slowdown, prices fall in anticipation of reduced demand. Now, admittedly, that sounds like a recession brings on falling prices, but here we're looking only at the trees (commodities prices) and not the forest (the whole economy).

Although commodities prices may be falling, housing costs continue to rise. Except the NASDAQ, stocks are still at lofty prices. Has anyone seen lower prices for automobiles, despite claims of excess capacity? Yes, rebates are being offered to reduce inventories, but after inventories are reduced, auto prices continue to climb 2%-3% a year. Don't forget medical and food costs. Has anyone seen lower costs in these two vital areas?

In the 1930s, the dollar had a 40% gold backing by law. This limited the number of dollars the Fed could print—but it still printed enough to bring on the Roaring Twenties, which were followed by the Great Depression. Today, the dollar is the legal tender by fiat, government command. You must accept dollars in exchange for "all debts, public and private". And, as everyone knows, the dollar is no longer backed by gold.

Whenever a paper currency has been unlinked from gold, eventually the politicians (or central bankers) print it until it becomes worthless. Why will it be different this time? Because we're smarter? Because Alan Greenspan, "Maestro", as Watergate author Robert Woodward calls him, heads the Fed? Because we have computers and can collect data more easily? Not hardly. Evidence supports the position that computers will facilitate the destruction of the dollar.

During the hyper-inflation of the Weimar Republic (1917-1923), the Germans had to fell trees, turn the trees into pulp, make paper, and then slap ink on the paper to increase the supply of reichsmarks. Today, not nearly as much effort is required. A few people sit at computer keyboards and type in some numbers—and billions of dollars are created.

With money creation being so easy, why not do it? After all, hasn't it become a maxim that 6 to 12 months after the Fed increases the money supply, the economy will grow? Unfortunately, over the long-run, paper money has a miserable track record.

In fact, the Great Depression occurred as the world was moving from gold to paper. It is also significant that the Great Depression started less than 20 years after the establishment of the Federal Reserve System. Ironically, one of the primary reasons given for establishing the Federal Reserve System was to avoid panics.

Before the Great Depression, economic crises were called panics, and generally they were caused by excessive printing of paper money by big banks, but the panics were generally localized to the areas served by the banks. With the advent of the Fed, the Great Depression spread nationwide.

Now that we're on a pure paper system, who knows how bad the next depression will be. But, indications are we could be sitting on the precipice of a big one. A little background is in order.

From about 1815 to 1915, when World War I got really rolling, the world was on a gold standard, which meant the world's major currencies were redeemable in gold and that foreign trade was settled in gold. Even The Economist, the anti-gold weekly news magazine published in London, admits it was a "golden era". Business flourished, world trade expanded, and prices fell.

Yes, prices fell as productivity increased. This rewarded savers, who built investment pools from which businesses could borrow, or from which savers could start new business. The world's economy was sound because it was built on savings and based on gold, a sound money. Unfortunately, after WWI the world abandoned the gold standard.

At the 1922 Genoa Conference, world leaders adopted the gold exchange standard. Under this bastardized version of the gold standard, currencies were backed by gold but also the U.S. dollar and the British pound. Because the dollar and the pound were fully convertible into gold, the gold exchange standard, its architects asserted, would "economize on gold".

The establishment of the gold exchange standard was a giant step toward demonetizing gold and moving toward a paper money system. In 1931, the Brits stopped redeeming pounds in gold—and in 1944, as agreed at Bretton Woods, the mighty dollar stood alone as the only currency that could be considered a reserve to back other currencies.

In 1934, Franklin Roosevelt took another swipe at gold with his April 5, 1933 executive order that prohibited Americans from owning gold. The final blow, of course, was Richard Nixon closing the gold window on August 15, 1971. Since then, the world has been on a pure paper system, one that has seen many confidence crises and currencies collapses. Some currencies, such as the Mexican peso, have collapsed several times.

The cheap money of the 1920s resulted in temporary prosperity, much like a family living on borrowed money. When time came to pay for the excesses of the '20s, it was the most devastating depression the world has ever seen. There are some eerie parallels between the 1920s and the 1990s. Will this decade parallel the 1930s? Do today's recessionary signs signal serious problems ahead?

Just as in the 1920s—when the Fed had a loose money policy to support the faltering British pound under the new gold exchange standard—today the Fed is pumping out money at record rates. Since the first of the year, MZM has grown at an annual rate of 23.7%. Like the '20s, we've had a loose money policy for years, and always in attempts to avert a crisis.

In 1997, a financial crisis spread turmoil throughout Asia and devastated several currencies. In 1998, with the world's financial structure still weak from the Asian flu, the Fed had to put together the rescue of Long Term Credit Management, an aggressive hedge fund whose liabilities threatened the world's banking system. The year 1998 also saw the Russian debt crisis, which the Fed alleviated with still more money. In 1999, the Fed "increased liquidity", i.e. printed massive quantities of money, in fear of bank runs because of Y2K concerns. Now, the Fed is lowering interest rates and increasing the money supply to avert a recession.

Just as all the money the Fed created during Roaring Twenties had to go somewhere, so did the money of the 1990s. Actually, the Fed has had a relatively loose policy since the early 1990s when it sought to bring us out of the last recession. Much of the money, from both the '20s and the '90s, found its way to the stock market, resulting in two great bull markets.

Now, we have to wait to see how serious the corrective bear market and the recession will be. If the stock market parallels the 1929 Crash, we still have a lot of downside in stocks. If the recession begins to approach the '30s, we have much economic pain awaiting us.

It is not pleasant to think that another Great Depression lies ahead. In fact, those who predict another Great Depression are quickly labeled extremists. So, let's consider the other possibility: the worst recession since the Great Depression. The Fed will, however, fight a recession with everything it has.

Unfortunately, all the Fed has is the ability to create money, and after being off the gold standard for some 85 years, we've seen the results of paper money: destroyed currencies and wasted economies. Over the past 30 years, Brazil has had three currencies: the cruzeiro, the cruzado and the real. Mexico struggles from one crisis to the next but sticks with the lowly peso, which just keeps on sinking.

Conventional economic thinking is that the economy has to respond to Fed policies, but that's not always the case. During the 1970s, the term stagflation was coined to describe a stagnant economy and rising prices. In Japan, zero interest rates and massive government spending have failed to revive Japan's stagnant economy, another instance where central bank intervention has failed.

Stagflation for the U.S. economy is a real possibility. And, if the economy does not respond to recent interest rate cuts and increased liquidity, what's the next step? If the economy slips into a deep, prolonged recession, what will be the government's course of action? Will the Fed print more? Interest rates to zero, like Japan? Will Congress cut taxes? Tax hikes? A return to the gold standard? The last is quite doubtful. History shows that governments return to gold only after their people completely refuse paper money. We appear to be a long way from that. So, what will be the government's course of action? Probably more paper money.

Troubled times are on the horizon, and everyone with savings needs to take action to protect those savings. Historically, gold and silver have proven to be the absolute best forms of protection against economic and financial crises. It is true that during the Weimar Republic's hyper-inflationary period, Germans who secured dollars saw their savings survive. In those days, however, the dollar was "as good as gold". Today, the dollar is not backed by gold, and it is being printed in whatever quantities the Fed deems necessary. How many dollars will the next crisis require?

For the last thirty years, since Nixon closed the gold window, the world has been on a paper money system. Never before has the world tried such a risky venture, and now dark clouds are gathering on the horizon. Investors who ignore the clouds are whistling past the graveyard. Now is a time to be afraid and the time to take steps to weather the storm. Fortunately, gold and silver have proven to endure during hard times. Adjusted for inflation, gold and silver are trading at or near records lows, which means they hold little downside risk but great upside potential.—Mr. Haynes has been a precious metals dealer since 1973. TELOS BOOK REVELATION

Widely Known Around Shasta

[P.W.: Thank you, Commander Hatonn, for providing the opportunity for comment on the revelation of the TELOS book (with the hopeful possibility of also sharing it with CONTACT readers, in segments—including your expert commentary) and the ultra-salient events ensuing at this time.

To provide a comprehensive overview and to honor Phoenix/CONTACT'S thrust to aid, financially and otherwise, our Native American brethren, we offer this self-explanatory information packet which begins with the cover letter to Senior Elder Saginaw Grant after he requested a copy of the TELOS book. As you will note with your own reading of this book, it is tantamount to a formal announcement that the Native American prophecies of many if not all tribes/nations are not only TRUE, but are being manifestly realized in this historic moment. Hallelujah! The "encounter letter" is slated to be included on the cover of the next (second) printing of the TELOS book.]

Dear Senior Elder Saginaw Grant,

It was an honor and pleasure to speak with you briefly at the close of the Tehachapi inter-tribal Pow-Wow.

To introduce the enclosed TELOS book, I am including some notes such as a book review of TELOS recently sent to a magazine, including the letter describing my encounter with these highly evolved beings back in 1975. (I would, please, point out that I would never put my name at the top of the letter (as here) but let the publisher put it in her preferred style.)

May the Great Spirit/Wakan Tanka lovingly open your eyes, mind and heart to the truth of this book.

Sincerely and Respectfully,
Mitakuye Oyasin,

Princeton Winton

P.S. I would love to hear from you after you have reflected on this information.

Dear Book-Review Editor,

I regret not having the facility to provide you with more fully prepared text/copy. I'm an editor myself, but only using "hard copies".

May I heartily assure you that reviewing this book in your very comprehensive magazine will be worth the extra effort that I realize this brings to bear on you and your staff.

The enclosed short review is done by request of the author. Please feel free to contact her, or publisher Louise Jones, or me (as may be necessary).

Thank you for your consideration of this astounding book, and again may I apologize for the extra effort it may require of you.

Most Sincerely,

Princeton Winton

P.S. Only a few hundred copies of the TELOS book have been sold—making this a real "scoop" for Sedona Journal of Emergence, and precisely on theme.

TELOS Book Review

I'm sure someone's book on writing style says, "too many superlatives can compile to actually damage credibility". The uniqueness of this book TELOS excepts it from that logic. This book represents God's surprise gift—a catalyst to vastly accelerate our ascension/evolution and lend a new aspect to the concept of "emergence".

If you have ever doubted that truth is stranger than fiction, come aboard for this book. It is readily conceivable that every person in every culture on/in this Earth within five years will know of this book and its content and be reveling in joy at realizing it.

The cosmos shouts in exuberance at the timeliness of this book as the vehicle for grass-roots Humanity to see and embrace the all-solution being offered here—at the very beginning of this, God's Millennium. Now comes realization in real time.

To quickly get you up-to-speed, please read my letter to the author and the publisher after I read the book—it also explains why I am uniquely qualified to review the TELOS book:

Princeton Winton Lemurian Encounter on Mt. Shasta

Beloved Readers,

April 2001

Let me share with you a very unexpected experience. Twenty-five years ago (1975±1), at a spiritual gathering on Mt. Shasta, three regular-looking persons, sitting on a blanket in the meadow beside the trail, waved my companion and me over to visit.

Friendly and straightforward, they went right to the point. They said they were survivors of Lemuria residing in a city/colony underground, beneath the mountain, where Mt. Shasta has been their home mountain for some 12,000 years. They had been sent to the surface to investigate the causes of anomalous readings on their "energy meters". They were to report back their findings to their local council of the causes of energy-related distortions on their higher-tech-than-ours scanning equipment. They seemed satisfied to agree it was the noted effect of thirty or forty serious spiritual truth seekers chanting and drumming around the campfire for hours early evenings.

Their mission basically done, we settled in for several hours of conversation and their willingness to answer all our questions. Their abundantly visible acumen and clarity were so striking, we felt like little children finally meeting wise adults. They projected a rich, constant compassion for our predicament as surface Earth dwellers. Their answers and comments, invariably profound, were often also riotously funny. Their warm, but glaring brilliance clearly marked that they were at a state of evolution so far beyond us, that the ordinary human on the surface would appear as to be "off the scale".

We had parted from (but were still in sight of) our delightful newfound friends when a solitary male figure coming down the slope caught our attention. "That looks like St. Germain," said my friend; leaving me blank, since I had never seen his picture. Then he said aloud, "Are you St. Germain?" The man clad in a simple light-purple robe stopped, smiled, nodded acknowledgement, hands together. On later viewing St. Germain's photographs, I am even more fully confident it was He. From my present perspective, my feeling is that St. Germain's appearance lent even more credibility as well as underlying that something of importance was in progress.

We sat with the Lemurians again later, walked down the mountain with them to the main Panther Meadow parking area where word of the friendly "aliens" quickly spread. Rapidly, they were surrounded with perhaps thirty people firing questions. With their same grace and profundity, they satisfied everyone of their validity. The next day, they showed up again as promised, allowing three meetings with us, for a total of 4 to 6 hours of fascinating talks with them.

I was utterly astonished, to say the least, when I recently came across the Telos book, validating everything they told us then, clarifying and offering solutions to every problem on Earth, from an accessible, capable superhuman source "ready to start exchanging in-home visits".

Perhaps other physical contacts with them will come to light. In all sobrieties, I predict that the Telos book is the book that humanity has been waiting for, and will outsell all other books in history. I mean this with my heart. This utterly unexpected "Gift" from God is indeed a more dramatic story than the "Second Coming" itself. We, as surface dwellers, can utilize this divine help from below to prepare, enhance and guarantee the speedy arrival of the return of the Christ Consciousness on this planet.

It is my opinion that every person who reads this book will assist in raising the mass consciousness threshold, hastening the day of our absolute deliverance into "Total Light" in the Fifth dimension. Please share the Telos book with everyone you meet and assist in the ushering of the seventh golden age of Love, Peace, Enlightenment and true Brotherhood. The Call from "Telos" shows you precisely how to connect now telepathically, so that you can immediately start to participate in this experience of Joy and Deliverance. Thank You, Father.

Sincerely,

At the very crack of the Dawn of Light,
Ellis Princeton Winton, CA. U.S.A.,

Here, in the TELOS book is ringingly real hope for avoidance of many pre-destined destructive Earth Changes by embracing and accepting the proffered help.

As (and after) you read the book the limitless implications evolving here will begin to penetrate your mind. (I've read the book four times and the new vistas are still coming and opening.) Even the author/receiver says when she starts re-reading it she can't put the TELOS book down.

I am through mincing words: GET THIS BOOK!

CONTACT OR SPECTRUM?

I want to briefly respond to a most unusual question from a totally "out of the blue" person: "It appears Spectrum will fail, possibly close, so will you go back to writing for CONTACT or what?"

I have never stopped writing for CONTACT—but I have NOT written, nor have my compatriots written for Spectrum. Tails wag a lot of dogs, my friends. Therefore, "or what" has no meaning.
