The True Terrorists: Zionists/Pharisees

Remember: "Drugs and terrorism go hand in hand."

RE: GLOBAL POLITICS: BUSH AND GMA.
GEARING UP FOR WAR IN MINDANAO? MORE
INSIGHT INTO SEPT. 11, 2001 DEMOLITION OF
THE WORLD TRADE CENTER IN NEW YORK

WHAT WILL PRESIDENT GMA DO IN WASHINGTON?

Hatonn—This refers to the November 2001 State visit to Washington D.C. (While the Philippines is in self-destruct.) Speculation in these matters is a silly game. GMA has already given the U.S. rights to the Philippines; the Bangko Sentral of the Philippines (BSP) has already fallen to the International Monetary Fund and the Elite Bankers, so what is left to give away?

In exchange, the U.S. still won't even help clean up the toxic wastes it left at Clark Air Force Base. U.S. intelligence advisors are already in Mindanao's Abu Sanyaf-land—without any more success at rounding up the bin Laden Cartel than did the Philippine police or military. Something rotten taking place? Of course.

Does this mean that GAIA (as in "we") has no chance? No, it means that we have had to be wiser, prepared, and have solid backing with an offer "they can't refuse". I believe we are doing pretty well on all these points.

Will this topic come up between Bush and GMA at this November meeting of State?

No more than usual, for this is exactly the proper place to have "plausible denial", etc. The WORD has already come forth as to the stonewall technique.

War breaking out in Mindanao is a very strong possibility as general ARMM (Autonomous Region of Muslim Mindanao) elections loom ahead and the Administration's pick of leading government officials is in place. The sabers are rattling, the war cries sounding and more chaos is expected.

The U.S. is obviously "in" to guard the loot they intend to confiscate and protect oil and mineral interests.

The Moros and Muslims just want to LIVE, get that which was contracted and stop the nonsense. And, they have gained a lot of Israeli and U.S. arms to cause a lot of consternation.

And no, our thrust of the moment is not in Mindanao but right in Luzon, so there is NO political involvement to even discuss.

People, there is a great deal more opposition to the actions of the U.S. and Great Britain in this "war on terror" than surely you of CNN will EVER see. But, on the other hand it is that nobody wants war and actually there is nobody who wants to be terrorized.

You have to keep things stirring, however, in and around Israel (especially at Christmastide) to get Armageddon off the ground. Israel is the third leg of the "triangle". This is not new but I am quite sure that most of you will not remember "that" triangle to which I refer. It is quite a crooked-straight line (as good oxymoronic statements go) to the heart of the penile mark of the beast—the circumcision crowd. But then I suppose nobody but Mel Brooks can get away with such references.

Mel Brooks has a way of putting all things into perspective of commercial enterprise, from cut-rate

In fact, if you want good satire, rent Robin Hood and the Men in Tights from your local idiot store. It's only the goyim who can't enjoy the privilege of sharing in such fun. And the Talmud gives full freedom to get rid of the goyim any way the Pharisees choose, or use them to the best advantage as cattle, chattel, or char-servants. And yes, that includes "yours truly".

I welcome that game, however, for in the efforts to capture the game, they have to keep the game going. How can they, after all, reap rewards of wealth if they shut down the game itself? This is one goyim who won't go and which annoys the vipers beyond belief.

TIME TO DO A FOCUS

ON THE TRADE CENTER DEBACLE—AGAIN

Reports come forth and several resources will scatter the information but it quickly gets buried or forgotten. It behooves us to be among those who have facilities to further express the information but to remain neutral so that there is no misunderstanding that we favor war or revolution of the arms variety. We are a source of communications and information from the Light side of presentation.

The following comes with a request to "...circulate this important list as widely as possible." We can do that and sincerely appreciate the opportunity to realize there IS something taking place around the scripted-news lies and disinformation.

[QUOTING e-mail, November 6, 2001. 26 REASONS WHY BIN LADEN'S "WHITE COLLAR" CO-CONSPIRATORS ARE TO BLAME:]

This document is printer friendly. Please circulate this important list as widely as possible.

FOR "AMERICA'S NEW WAR" AND THE IMPENDING WORLD WAR III

1) The "terrorist" attacks were completely predictable and, in fact, predicted. Forewarnings were issued by many patriotic and heroic individuals to government and military officials well in advance of Sept. 11, 2001. For instance, in August, Dr. Garth Nicolson, Ph.D., and his wife Nancy Nicolson, Ph.D., among the world's most esteemed Mycoplasma researchers and Gulf War Syndrome investigators, reported to Pentagon officials that they had confirmed intelligence that on Sept. 11, 2001 a terrorist strike against the Pentagon would be made. Their sources included individuals in key intelligence positions, the mob, and one high-level African diplomat. Their "information was passed on to the Director of Policy of the Department of Defense, the inspector General of the U.S. Army Medical Corps and the National Security Council," Dr. Nicolson wrote. "Unfortunately, it was ignored."

[H: As we go along I might mention that I find some of the resources quite questionable, having found that in several instances, i.e., with the Nicolsons in fact, there are truly some very contradictory actions to their full "patriot" causes, especially regarding the Gulf War Syndrome. We have been blessed with input from others equally qualified, and formerly associated in the scientific research programs dealing with the Gulf War Syndrome. I will leave those parties unnamed for their own protection.]

Likewise, Dr. Leonard Horowitz, the award-winning author of the prophetically titled book, Death in the Air:

Globalism, Terrorism and Toxic Warfare, released three months before the attacks on Washington and New York, correctly predicted such a first strike on New York. For three years, based on government documents and intelligence reports, he had been warning "Metropolis" residents, "It's time to move."

2) On Friday, September 7, Florida Governor Jeb Bush, brother to the President, issued an Executive Order in which members of the Florida National Guard were activated, "for the purpose of training to support law-enforcement personnel and emergency-management personnel in the event of civil disturbances or natural disaster". Perhaps the president and his brother received Dr. Nicolson's warnings or were the source of the warnings?

3) On Sunday night, September 17, CBS's 60-Minutes revealed that President Bush's close associates had suddenly, and inexplicably, sold all their airline stock just days before the terrorist attacks. The story was completely overlooked by mainstream newspapers thereafter.

4) FEMA sent the Urban Search and Rescue Team to New York City THE NIGHT BEFORE the attacks occurred! One FEMA official, Mr. Tom Kennedy, told Dan Rather on Sept. 11, "We're currently one of the first teams that was deployed to support the City of New York in this disaster. We arrived on late Monday night [that is, on September 10, the NIGHT BEFORE] and went right into action on Tuesday morning." [H: How's that for being prepared and efficient?]

5) Osama bin Laden and his band of "Terrorists" could not have pulled off the "sophisticated" operation of four simultaneous air hijackings, and precision directed attacks without the support of one or more "intelligence organizations". This was the expert testimony provided by past CIA Afghanistan operations director and bin Laden's American intelligence aficionado, Milt Bearden, interviewed by Dan Rather to endorse the theory of bin Laden's culpability, Mr. Bearden stated, "if they didn't have an Osama bin Laden, they would invent one."

6) On October 31, 2001, the French daily Le Figaro reported that Osama bin Laden had met with a high-level CIA official in July 2000. At that time, bin Laden was already being sought for trial for his involvement in two U.S. embassy bombings and the USS Cole attack. The meeting was held in bin Laden's private suite in a Dubai hospital. Though he was eligible for elimination, according to President Bill Clinton's intelligence findings, on July 14th he was let go and left Dubai on his private jet.

7) Every expert in the field of terrorism, up until Sept. 11, 2001, routinely explained the fact that certified terrorist organizations operate in an effort to garner worldwide attention and support for their political cause(s). In the case of pro-Palestinian terrorist organizations, their attacks had been traditionally against American military facilities and personnel. This was obviously neither the intent nor outcome of the attacks on the World Trade Center.

8) For weeks preceding September 11, 2001 international opinion regarding Israel and the United States had plummeted to an all-time low. Alternatively, pro-Palestinian attitudes had rapidly increased to an all-time high, particularly following the United Nations Conference on Racism wherein the U.S. and Israel had been chastised for their racist policies. Any intelligent pro-Palestinian terrorist group, such as Osama bin Laden's legions, or intelligence organization(s) supportive to the Palestinian cause, would not have jeopardized the significant gains achieved at that time.

9) Osama bin Laden took his direction and money from the CIA for ten years. During this time, approximately $5 billion was funneled to his organization through hijack op-budgets into a CIA operation known as Maktab al-Khidamar—the MAK. It is clear, as a MAK mercenary army leader, bin Laden's fortune vastly increased during that time. It is said that, "Once in the CIA, always in the CIA." Could this be one of the intelligence organizations about which Milt Bearden was speaking? (See #5 above.)

[H: Gee, wouldn't it be interesting if this whole "WAR" is staged to actually catch the guilty in their own trap? Perhaps it is the war forming against the true terrorists: the Pharisees. It is obvious that the trap has been tripped and perhaps the true guilty players will get so entangled they can't find a way out of the mess they have made. Either bin Laden was betrayed or he knew exactly what was coming down IN CONJUNCTION WITH COUNTERPARTS. TIME WILL PRESENT ITS CLUES.]

10) On Tuesday evening September 12, 2001 previous Secretary of Defense for the Clinton administration, William S. Cohen, explained to CBS News anchorman Dan Rather that the terrorist attacks on New York and Washington were an aberration. He fully expected there to be a full-scale deployment of biological and chemical "weapons of mass destruction" very soon. This reinforced his earlier statements as Defense Secretary that a five-pound bag of anthrax bacteria in the hands of terrorists would likely cause the deaths of hundreds of thousands of Americans. We were particularly vulnerable to this "imminent" threat, he said. Many critical military observers considered these statements treasonous. Reason? At no time in American military history has a top-level official broadcast internationally the country's greatest attack vulnerability. In effect, his statements were akin to giving anti-Americans their marching orders.

11) A sincere U.S. government, truly concerned about the health and safety of American citizens, would be doing everything in its power to advance public health and preparedness. Instead, such critical policy and advice has been left entirely to independent, often ill-trained "experts" at best, and special interests and media producers at worst. The mainstream media has completely neglected the simple things people can do to guard loved-ones, such as natural medicines (e.g., garlic) to ward off infections such as anthrax. [H: I obviously favor silver colloid or whichever of the colloids is appropriate.]

12) In July 2000, the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) endorsed one single, largely untested and highly risky antibiotic, Bayer Corporation's Cipro, for anthrax prophylaxis and treatment. Following September 11, 2001 demand for this drug skyrocketed 1,000 percent, according to Peter Jennings in an ABC News report broadcast September 27. Pharmacies charged $700 per person for a mere two-month supply of Cipro. It is well established that far less expensive antibiotics, including the penicillins and tetracyclines, are highly effective against Anthrax. The Bayer Corporation during and following World War II had been blacklisted by the U.S. Government for being the principle profiteer, in partnership with the Rockefeller Standard Oil Company, for funding the Third Reich, their terrorist organizations, and Germany's war machine.

13) During the first week of October, the media heralded a bizarre anthrax outbreak at the National Enquirer near Ft. Lauderdale, Florida. By October 11, three cases of reported “criminal” anthrax infections had occurred. This form of anthrax—a classic biological weapon strain—is not easily acquired. It is distributed mainly by the American Type Culture Collection (ATCC) of Rockville, Maryland. The curator there is Dr. Joshua Lederberg, who is also the president of Rockefeller University. Preceding the Gulf War, the U.S. Congressional Record (May 25, 1994, commonly called the “Don Riegle Report”) exposed the ATCC for shipping to Saddam Hussein’s Ministry of Higher Education and the Ministry of Trade, nineteen shipments of various strains of Bacillus Anthracis from 1978 to 1988.

14) According to investigators at the FBI, the Enquirer anthrax attack was not likely done by typical “terrorists”, but rather one or more “criminals”. For what motive? Obviously, whoever did this had a motive, and had access to weapons-grade anthrax. That virtually leaves typical blue-collar “criminals” out entirely, since skill in handling and shipping live anthrax would be required for this crime. The fact that, of all places, America’s best-selling tabloid was first attacked, then other mainstream media outlets, speaks volumes about the criminal motive. Since no one has claimed responsibility for this act, they obviously did not do it for personal publicity. Obviously, then, the attack was a white-collar crime by one or more “white-collar bioterrorist(s)”. At least one Rockefeller-linked U.S. biological weapons official, Dr. Lederberg, and Rockefeller-partnered corporation, Bayer (aspirin) that largely financed the Third Reich, and Hitler’s rise to power, had obvious white-collar (financial) motives for these contemporary “terrorist” attacks. This deserves critical consideration and further investigation.

15) On October 1, 2001, Dr. Leonard G. Horowitz sent the FBI, as well as half the members of the U.S. Congress, an urgent request to investigate this matter. Included in this letter was the following statement concerning the links between contemporary terrorist organizations, the global neo-Nazi movement, and possible Bayer Corporation involvement:

The Bayer Company [also linked to AIDS-virus-contaminated blood products during 1980 investigations] evaded U.S. Government controls during and following the holocaust in which millions of mostly Jewish people were used as experimental subjects in medical atrocities overseen by I.G. Farben’s president Hermann Schmitz, who also directed the German-multinational Bayer A.G. [H: I certainly find it interesting, however, that these companies are very definitely Jewish-owned corporations. Please remember that Adolf Hitler [MM: Born as Adolf Schicklgruber] was half Jew. Let’s not just continue the blind-man’s bluff lest you get yourself deaded.]

Of urgent pertinence to the FBI’s current investigation into terrorism’s money trail, a recent investigation into terrorist group funding, issued by The Oklahoma Bombing Investigation Committee (OBIC) directed by Representative Charles Key, found “Neo-Nazi figures have actually been implicated in Middle Eastern special weapons procurement and terrorist activity.” For example, the group reported, “since the 1960s, an old Swiss Nazi named Francois Genaud has reportedly masterminded several airplane hijackings for the PLO.” The now defunct “Odessa” organization, the post-war successor to Hitler’s S.S., according to OBIC, “had numerous documented meetings with representatives of various Arab organizations; and, during the early 1980s, a Neo-Nazi named Odfried Hepp attacked several U.S.

military installations in Germany with bombs. Hepp was later found to have been financed by Al Fatah.” Hepp, OBIC reported, did his Ph.D. on “Neo-Nazi/PLO bombings of U.S. housing, cars and military facilities in Germany.” Given these facts alone, an FBI investigation into this matter is critical.

[H: Without making a fuss here I think you readers must remember something which is often overlooked. There are TWO (2) SEGMENTS of Jewish recognition: Sephardic and AshkeNAZI. When will you STOP accusing the Germans of killing off the Jews? You will note that the Nazis did that so-called holocaust and, if Jews were involved at all, it was in the deathing—and even in Israel today the Sephardic “Jews” are the persecuted. Until you get the players straight, you can’t possibly KNOW TRUTH.]

I am also contacting congressional leaders at this time urging an immediate U.S. General Accounting Office (GAO) investigation into the FDA’s “advisory committee” that sponsored the unprecedented sole endorsement of Bayer’s Cipro for anthrax. Nowhere in the Physician’s Desk Reference (2000) is it claimed that Cipro is especially indicated for anthrax. In fact, Bacillus anthracis is not even mentioned. What is mentioned is that, “although effective in clinical trials, ciprofloxacin is not a drug of first choice in the treatment of presumed or confirmed pneumonia secondary to Streptococcus pneumoniae.” This organism, like anthrax, is an aerobic gram-positive microbe. (Likewise, Bacillus anthracis causes pneumonia in the form of commonly terminal hemorrhagic bronchopneumonia.) Furthermore the PDR states: “WARNINGS—THE SAFETY AND EFFECTIVENESS OF CIPROFLOXACIN IN PEDIATRIC PATIENTS AND ADOLESCENTS (LESS THAN 18 YEARS OF AGE), PREGNANT WOMEN, AND LACTATING WOMEN HAVE NOT BEEN ESTABLISHED.” Alternatively, numerous bioweapons experts have consistently recommended far less costly and time-tested antibiotics to fight anthrax, including the natural and synthetic penicillins, erythromycin, cephalosporins, and the tetracyclines.

As with Dr. Nicolson’s forewarning to military leaders concerning the Sept. 11 Pentagon attack, the above urgent request by Dr. Horowitz for FBI investigation into this matter, to date (Nov. 5, 2001) has gone ignored. This strongly suggests, if not evidences, a conspiracy within our own government—a conspiracy of silence at minimum.

16) Aaron Swirski, one of the architects of the World Trade Center, said they designed the towers to withstand airplane collisions. “I designed it for a 707 hit,” he said. The collapse of the buildings came as a complete “shock” to him and his colleagues.

Van Romero, a demolition expert, former director of the Energetic Materials Research and Testing Center, and current vice president for research at New Mexico Institute of Mining and Technology said that the manner in which the twin towers collapsed resembled those of controlled implosions used in planned demolition. “My opinion is, based on the videotapes, that after the airplanes hit the World Trade Center there were some explosive devices inside the buildings that caused the towers to collapse,” Romero said.

ABC News interviewed people who had escaped “ground zero” on September 11, 2001. One unidentified man said: “We were stuck on the stairs for a while. I came down from the 85th floor. When we were just about to leave the building, there was a blast.”

A woman’s testimony followed: “I got stuck on the stairs. When we got to the lobby there was a blast,” she said.

17) On September 11, 2001 President Bush was in Sarasota, Florida, “reading to children” in a classroom at 9:05 a.m. when his chief of staff, Andrew Card, whispered into his ear, according to the Associated Press (Sept. 12). The president briefly turned somber before he resumed reading... [Next] President Bush listened to 18 Booker Elementary School second-graders read a story about a girl’s pet goat... before he spoke briefly and somberly about the terrorist attacks. Many are curious as to why the “Commander-in-Chief” of the U.S. took about a half-hour before he responded to the national security urgency, or even addressed the tragedies.

18) Pentagon officials had been tracking the second two hijacked planes for almost an hour following the WTC attacks because they simply “didn’t know what to do”. Regarding the plane that crashed into Pennsylvania “Paul Wolfowitz, the deputy defense secretary, said... that the Pentagon had been tracking that plane and could have shot it down if necessary; it crashed about 35 minutes after the Pentagon crash.”

Many are wondering why, if they could have shot that plane down, did they not shoot the plane down that flew into the Pentagon?

19) Vice President Dick Cheney was interviewed on Sept. 12, 2001. When asked where he was when he learned of the attacks, many were surprised to learn that he was alerted by his secretary who was “watching television” in his Washington, D.C. office. In essence, though the FAA had known at least four planes were veering far off their course, while the Pentagon, too, had been tracking at least two of the hijacked planes, Mr. Cheney received his initial intelligence report by way of television through his clerical secretary.

20) “Drugs and terrorism go hand in hand,” wrote investigative journalist and retired LAPD officer Michael C. Ruppert. “Conveniently ignored in all of the press coverage since the tragic events of Sept. 11,” Mr. Ruppert wrote, “is the fact that on May 17 Secretary of State Colin Powell announced a gift of $43 million to the Taliban as a purported reward for its eradication of Afghanistan’s opium crop this February. That, in effect, made the U.S. the Taliban’s largest financial benefactor according to syndicated columnist Robert Scheer writing in the Los Angeles Times on May 22.”

21) “Now U.S. military action will replace the Taliban government and fresh crops will be planted in Afghanistan,” Mr. Ruppert continued, “the slack in cash flow will assuredly be replaced by dramatically increased opium production in Colombia; the revenues from that effort being needed to maintain the revenue streams into Wall Street. Prior to the WTC attacks, credible sources, including the U.S. government, the IMF, Le Monde and the U.S. Senate placed the amount of drug cash flowing into Wall Street and U.S. banks at around $250-$300 billion a year.”

22) Mr. Ruppert also revealed that an Executive Director at the CIA named A. “Buzzy” Krongard is suspected of Wall Street profiteering from foreknowledge of the Sept. 11 attacks. Formerly with Bankers Trust catering to the world’s wealthiest clients of the Deutsche Bank. (The Deutsche Bank is heavily implicated in Dr. Len Horowitz’s book Death in the Air: Globalism, Terrorism, and Toxic Warfare released in June, 2001) In 1999, Mr. Krongard left Deutsche Bank for his present high-level job in the CIA. Enormous quantities of “Put” options were handled through the Deutsche Bank, which allowed the options buyers to earn profits in the event the value of airline stocks went down. The appearance of advance knowledge of Sept. 11 is so strong that to date $2.5 Million of the $20 Million in profits earned on those unusual trades remains unclaimed, possibly by Mr. Krongard, or other affiliates of the CIA.

23) Many journalists have reported that the bombing of Afghanistan, allegedly intended to punish the Taliban for affiliations with bin Laden, is simply a cover for that government's reneging on support for an oil pipeline through Afghanistan from the vast Caspian Sea oil fields. Sept. 11 provided a great excuse to pursue this petrochemical, economic, and "national security" objective.

24) On December 20, 1997, the international newspaper CONTACT: The Phoenix Project, published an interview on anthrax biowarfare threats and vaccinations in which Dr. Leonard Horowitz was asked "about the government's pressure to vaccinate [using the anthrax vaccine] and the bioweapons scare tactics, etc." He responded: "Look at the motive behind the persuasion, and what is it? They're preparing to blame it on the Muslims, Christian patriots, and militia groups. The militia groups are already dysfunctional because they're penetrated by agitators."

This is precisely what followed in the wake of the 9-11 attacks. Muslim groups were blamed for the 9-11 attacks. Christian patriots were blamed for the anthrax mailings. Militia groups were entirely silenced and even implicated. And false patriotism in which Americans welcome the destruction of basic constitutional liberties with CIA command over the entire U.S. military and Government has come to pass.

25) On October 31, 2001 the American people and U.S. Constitutional freedoms were attacked, not by the Taliban government or Muslim terrorists, but by CDC officials who advanced the "Model State Emergency Health Powers Act" that will force masses of people suspected of exposure to broadly-defined "infectious diseases" and biological weapons into concentration camp-like holding facilities for drugging, vaccination and quarantine, without any viable legal recourse.

26) The entire 9-11 tragedy and subsequent threats to U.S. national and global securities fits far too perfectly with standard Machiavellian theory to be overlooked. This ongoing practice—the "problem/reaction/solution" agenda of precisely "managed chaos"—appears to be standard operating procedures for oligarchs historically bent on developing a "New World Order". Sadly now for the American people, as it has been for the Third World, this effort includes killing approximately half of the world's current population.

[END OF QUOTING]

I find this a good list in summarizing some of the pertinent points for consideration. However, it is too confusing to actually point to a co-conspiracy of some kind, White Collar or otherwise, in trying to solve this cipher-trail. Who actually is after whom? The point might well be taken when you simply REALIZE that a lot of rotten apples are in the barrel corrupting the new harvest.

When you, for instance, refer to a "blast", having been witnessed, it should be noted that by far the most experiencing witnesses reported a rat-a-tat-tat series of explosions which could only mean that explosions were being detonated in proper order on the inside of the towers to bring them down efficiently.

It was a set-up deal and whoever bin Laden might or might not be—he COULD NOT have done these deeds. This incident took many people in fully orchestrated, detailed operation to accomplish.

FOLLOW THE MONEY—WHO MADE MONEY AND WHO HAS THE MOST TO "HIDE".

Osama bin Laden would take the credit if he had pulled off such a stunt—it is in the nature of the people involved to do so. But, he said he had nothing to do with it—BELIEVE HIM. He was simply the "chosen one" to take the hit.

Again, FOLLOW THE MONEY and you will find that with all the bank account freezings, etc., it just isn't possible—and I am embarrassed that you literally bite on such nonsense.

You have allowed these Elite Cartels to capture and use every one of your Government Departments—and now they can all act in total SECRECY (from you-the-people) and there is nothing you can do about it.

Thank you for sharing this document with us and may people actually read and think on these things.

An old saw might well be: "We looked hither and yon for the beast and evil afoot, only to find it to be us."

And then there is the really old one: "Show us the bodies!" Where are those 6000 bodies? Where is BatMan when you need him in Metropolis?

RE: DEATH OF WILLIAM COOPER. WORLD TRADE CENTER UNDERGROUND

Hatonn—"MAY YOU LIVE LONG AND PROSPER"—The Vulcan

William Cooper, author of Behold a Pale Horse, died in an "old West" shootout on November 6, 2001.

This is a good example of "live by the gun—die by the gun".

Bill Cooper COULD HAVE left a superb legacy for those to come after. Unfortunately, violence only begets more violence. Apparently in the "shootout" he was shot by an Arizona deputy sheriff and the deputy was wounded.

There is a short tale I will tell and leave go of it. Bill Cooper started out as an honorable witness to, indeed, a genuine UFO, when in the U.S. Navy. By the time of his death this month the tales had grown totally without limits and when no records could be found he claimed "sheep dipping" by the sleazy elements in the U.S. Government, namely the conspiratorial Naval Intelligence and CIA.

Some thirteen or so years ago we honored Bill Cooper and even dedicated a Phoenix Journal to him for his early writings.

He claimed we had stolen his work; in a Journal of over 200 pages we gave full credit for some few pages of use from his work forwarded to us from a friend. Actually, for your information, the information arrived AFTER our writing on the topic. Actually there were only less than 26 pages of his even circulating at that time. Mr. Cooper went berserk and threatened Mr. George Green, even with death, for the honor bestowed. No book of his had been set to print or publication at that time.

However, Mr. Cooper went further in his threats, and the answering machine of Dharma recorded his threats, calling Dharma a "Slimy Little Puke" and screaming he would use every "F.....g law he could find" to throw the book at her.

Later, when the seminar circuit speakers complained that Cooper was taking information from the Phoenix writings and embellishing it, he simply laughed and said, "Well, they used mine so I'll use theirs."

Now readers, we have no limitations; Cooper was a colorful writer; it was, and is, fine. I have objected to the incorrect stories which are total fabrications, but there are a lot of those myths floating around.

It is now stated in "epitaph" that Cooper "was one of the most knowledgeable experts in the field of 'conspiracy science' (superb example of an oxymoronic statement), the Illuminati, Freemasons, UFOs and the New World Order".

He is recognized as a "PATRIOT". No, readers, PATRIOTS do not shoot the sheriff. And, if you shoot a sheriff, expect to get shot.

Going out in a blaze of something you might consider "glory" is not always as it is perceived. I would guess that before the ending of this "tale" there will be some martyrdom inflicted without cause. I suggest you use your own heads and realize that Mr. Cooper had a lot of emotional and addictive causes for irrational behaviors which ultimately did not serve him well.

Further in the "epitaph" by Robert M.: "He was a gun-totin' Westerner who saw himself continuing in the lineage of Davy Crockett and Jim Bowie. Deep within his soul, Cooper possessed and nurtured the mythic image of the Revolutionary American standing at Concord Bridge or on the ramparts of the Alamo. He always said he'd never surrender and that he would go down shooting. William Cooper was true to his word and his conscience to his very last breath."

Mr. Robert M. goes on to end his writing: "Rest in Peace, William Cooper, an American Patriot... Well done!"

Well, Mr. Cooper will not "rest in peace" nor is it righteous to reflect "good American Patriots" in modern-day shootouts in Arizona or anywhere else. WE NEED TO "CHANGE" A WORLD, READERS, NOT FURTHER VIOLENCE.

I would suggest further: The saddest words a man can say is that "It could have been". When will you people get out of your own way?

There is no "rest in peace" for an angry person in violence. That is what another man says as he observes the mayhem. No, a far better "thought" is that the SOUL find redemption and atonement that the life wasted might have value from its mortal experience. And THAT, William Cooper, shall come to pass.

CONFIRMATION AND REALIZATION AT THE WORLD TRADE CENTER.

We have written so much about underground facilities as to find it almost too redundant to speak further on the topic—but you have to look carefully at the World Trade Center "facility" to understand how incredible it is as to what YOU don't know and find difficult to accept in recognition.

You are also going to see that there was no need, really, for anyone to die below the impact points on the Trade Center buildings.

The public recognition is NOW fully presented that there is more space in the underground facility which was UNDER the visible buildings than in the entire Empire State Building. Most of that space was totally undamaged. The question is: Did bin Laden dig that set of tunnels and reinforced underground city? Wow, and my goodness, welcome to Supermanville.

Now it comes, even in the press and first, of course, from “overseas”, this one reference from THE TELEGRAPH, London, Nov. 2, 2001.

[QUOTING:]

A daring plot to steal bullion from vaults beneath the collapsed World Trade Centre has been revealed by police as workers removed gold and silver valued at $452 million.

Scorch marks around the basement door to the vaults suggested thieves had tried to break in to steal the precious metals, belonging to the Bank of Nova Scotia.

The bank denied there was any heist attempt, but police insisted that at some time during the past fortnight, a blowtorch and crowbar had been used on the vault’s entrance. After the discovery, a video camera was set up to monitor the area.

Given the difficulty of getting on to the site and down to the vault, it is suspected the attempt was an inside job.

The bullion was not the only valuable hoard buried beneath the twin towers. There were also caches of drugs seized by federal agents, boxes of FBI evidence—and thousands of Godiva chocolates.

Extreme secrecy has surrounded the operation to protect and remove the contents of the vaults. Most of those who used the basement for storage have kept quiet for fear of encouraging burglars.

The World Trade Centre’s basement lay 70 feet underground, roughly a quarter of a mile below the top floors of the Twin Towers when they still stood. The basement area’s square footage is almost twice that contained in the entire Empire State Building.

Earlier during the rescue and recovery effort, the Drug Enforcement Agency spirited away millions of dollars worth of seized drugs which they stored there.

The Bureau of Alcohol Tobacco and Firearms, however, said it is yet to recover two evidence vaults, including an armoury of illegally held guns, which may affect scores of criminal cases.

[END OF QUOTING]

Now people, there was a whole subway system and STOP “in” the Trade Center complex. So, where are those BODIES of some 6,000 people? HOW MANY TOP-LEVEL EXECUTIVES OF THOSE MAJOR “FINANCIAL HOUSES” HAVE YOU NOTED “KILLED” IN THE TOWERS?

What we HAVE witnessed is unlimited money made off the disaster by those same financial giants BEFORE and after the incident. And now you have a new Jewish mayor for New York who spent over 50 million dollars to win that election.

I simply do not believe that a shootout between a “Patriot” and an Arizona deputy lawman will change this balance of POWER.

Can we actually change anything? That is up to YOU. We certainly do have the POTENTIAL to accomplish exactly THAT GOAL.

I am intrigued by the statement of your idiots in the talking-head series as it is stated: “We’re going to turn this around 360 degrees”. Strangely enough if you count “degrees” you will find that 360 degrees brings you right back to where you started! Our intention is to offer a 180-degree revolution without having a “revolution” or shootout at the old “OK with me” corral.

And those who break the law but “didn’t do anything wrong”—stop it. It CAN be otherwise—but—if you do not break the law, it is truly rare indeed that the local sheriff will shoot you—unless, of course, he is also BREAKING THE LAW.

And no, frankly, I would not ask “Diane” to stand and face the Federal Machine all alone. I would, however, ask that she not give up her valid passport, for she has places yet to go and things to accomplish.

Now, as to the Silver Colloid debacle as to laws and medicines (new or old): IT WILL BE FOUND THAT THERE WAS AN UNLAWFUL CLASSIFICATION OF SAID SOLUTION. HOW do they make decisions on classifications? WHO, exactly, decides what will be classified “how”? You WILL FIND that it was unlawfully handled all the way up the line. That in itself will then include the other products besides silver colloid.

This has nothing to do with Diane, so be careful how you handle this, friends; the point is that she had nothing to do with the sale or advertising, as relative to this case, in any instance. Let us not simply assume otherwise and do foolish things out of ignorance of facts.

The ultimate good that can come is to again be able to offer these products to a public who wants and chooses to use them.

Accomplishing that will eventually be a worthy cause of GAIA—and then it can be done lawfully with all those well-paid attorneys-of-choice and committee.

Let us take one step at a time but never cease building the case with all the information and law you can find on the subject.

Let us get through the immediate muck, however, so that we have no need to fear the “shooting SWAT teams”. In these days of games and guns you will find at the bottom of it all that the original laws are totally flawed and THERE is where you need to really begin to make your inroads.

It is such that things can be secretly railroaded through, just like the Federal Reserve Act of 1913, and ever after it is “assumed” to be “the law”. At the least, barring open use of Silver Colloid is unconstitutional from the “get-go”.

Let us get through these currently difficult days and then there will be plenty for each to do—and support to do it.

The joy to me is that you are beginning to share and discuss, together, things that need doing and attending. This is what “family” is about—not bloodlines.

As for the Ekker-Ekker-Phoenix cases (Horton-Abbott-Green term), we understand that there has been ANOTHER Nevada Supreme Court case dismissed in E-E-P’s favor. It was the appeal for reconsideration of the reconsideration request for reconsideration to the fifth power. We have no paperwork and we certainly have no better reason to think the fiasco over than we did before. However, the Supreme Court is quite annoyed at this grievous assault on their time, so perhaps it is winding down.

There has never been a report of Mr. Green’s bankruptcy case. However, there was a settlement signed by Mr. Green to pay $25,000 and turn over the 110,000 books he took. Neither has had attention in these now more than three years, so we will urge the attorney to make those claims and get that cleared now.

Other decisions will be made as appropriate. There are many causes of action appropriate and awaiting attention by “our side”. One step at a time is the appropriate way to march ahead. In many of these “actions”, including and perhaps especially Diane’s, I would sincerely like to have the backup to make an offer to Gerry Spence that he wouldn’t want to refuse—and let’s start cleaning up some of the Judicial nonsense. How better should we spend our abundance than in starting to clean up our nations?

Things are not very good in Satanville, readers. A lot of very daring citizens have given all they have and continue to face the battle every day, i.e., Free American Press. They changed their name and kept right on marching.

Actually it is that you in the U.S.A. who feel you have freedom, will find you do not. Therefore, you will have the most immediate confrontation as you try to reclaim FREEDOM. You will also have the largest spotlight turned on you but it will be in such a way that you will not be recognized except through the underground media. Remember that CNN is THE only channel which is seen and heard everywhere on the globe—that was not an accident.

Mr. Ted Turner held that company and he is a self-avowed “anti-Christ”, good friends. He even divorced Jane, his wife, because she actually had the audacity to convert and claim “Christianity”. If this is not a direct intent to lie, cheat and steal—then you don’t seem to have learned anything about “Anti-Christ” and Satanism.

Now Mr. Bush comes forth last evening and says this “war” he has going is for the purpose “of saving this civilization”, not just some little war on terrorism. Mr. Bush saving civilization? He has a lot of reconsidering to do before he pulls that one off, I would guess. And yes indeed, that was presented right on CNN and shared with his buddy, Tony Blair.

Would it be different if Gore had won the election last year? What makes you think Gore “didn’t” win? NO, it would not be “better” in any way, shape or form. But indeed, WE do have a few birds in those Bushes flitting hither and yon, so let’s just keep flying, Birdtribes. The Phoenix is just about ready to test those flight feathers. Moreover, we are NOT going to hurt anyone in our soaring pattern.

Progress is not always perceivable to all involved in anything, but the result of our labors filters back from time to time and you KNOW you have made a contribution. Every paper put to press in our own recognition PROVES the point of your contribution.

I would remind you that MAN is not “innately” good, nor is he bad—HE IS. Good or bad is but a perception. However, goodness and evil distinctions are birthed in a “normal” human. Obviously there are “birth” defects which may well render a person to be altered in abilities—but those are INNATELY GOOD for their inability to distinguish against “bad”. All of physical expression, therefore, is a matter of choosing and action.

GOD BLESS AND KEEP YOU CLOSE—AS YOU CHOOSE.—GCH

RE: WHAT IS "MEDICINE"? GOOD vs "BAD". U.S. MILITARY ADVISERS (TO THE PHILIPPINES). WHERE HAS CHRIST GONE? ASSUMPTION OF "GOOD GUY" STATUS

Hatom—PLEASE MAKE SURE DIANE KUNICK READS THIS MESSAGE; HER COMPUTER IS DOWN AND THIS IS MOST IMPORTANT. THANK YOU FOR YOUR SUPPORT, FOR WHEN YOU SUPPORT ONE ANOTHER YOU SUPPORT TRUTH AND THAT BECOMES "COMMUNITY" WITHOUT WHICH YOU CANNOT SURVIVE.

CONTROVERSY OVER "MEDICINE"

WEBSTER'S DICTIONARY:

MEDICINE: 1. A substance or preparation used in treating disease. 2. A science or art dealing with the prevention and cure of disease.

REMEDY: 1. A treatment which relieves a condition or disease. 2. Something that counteracts an evil or compensates for a loss.

ELIXIR: A medicinal solution usually given to sustain life or enhance health.

SUSPENSION: The state of a substance when its particles are mixed with but undissolved in a fluid or a solid.

You might also wish to try for "emulsion" or "homogenized".

So, people, nobody we know offers anything of a possible healing substance or "cure".

There is a suggestion, for instance, that New Gaia and others who labeled products as colloids did, in fact, probably mislabel bottles by calling the liquid a "colloid" as in "Colloidal Silver".

Probably all problems with the FDA would have been solved by correctly labeling the items as a "solution-suspension elixir" (or any one of the three) with no claims of anything other than "has been reported that...".

By NAMING the law which makes colloidal silver a no-no you will note a specific qualification of the substance. Also, there is no law that says persons cannot use the suspension or produce their own solution.

The production of a suspension or emulsion in this reference is accomplished through positive ionization of particles and molecules—of anything, especially for topical use as in lotions or even as topical application to treat the tongue for possible discomforts due to burns (hot soups), "cold" sores or even "thrush".

This silver or mixed elemental suspensions mixed with a lotion, especially over-the-counter fungal lotions for such as athlete's foot treatment, has shown something works to soothe and sometimes heals. It is likely only coincidental but hey, it also cuts down on odor-producing effects and seems to help somewhat to relieve itching.

The same has been found to be beneficial when applied in a simple lotion base (baby lotion) to the diaper rash areas of a baby's bottom.

Therefore, in literal point, Diane Kunick distributed nothing through New Gaia, nor did anyone else, except for inadvertently using incorrect label-statements.

It is the information reflected in the New Gaia reference material which seems to be THE culprit. Diane, it seems, did actually stamp and mail the product listings to customers or potential customers. She only utilized the material already processed for the mailing itself. So, right to the point: Diane Kunick would have no other input on product or, actually, labels.

This is how foolish are your regulations, citizens; HOWEVER, the assumption is that it is acceptable to set forth these regulations, deprive you of anything naturally helpful or that might actually offer some supplemental contribution to good health.

By the way, "health" is continually misused as a term. EVERYBODY HAS "HEALTH", THE ISSUE IS GOOD, BAD, OR AVERAGE.

MEDICINE can be "anything", including a bundle of willow twigs in a "Medicine Man's" bundle.

When you ALLOW, without dispute, the language usurpers to change meanings to suit themselves for judicial purposes, you ERR, for it becomes set in cement as to "their" meaning of any word or term.

Note that a "terrorist" is simply one who annoys "YOU". It is indeed selective in assumption and language presentation.

It is like Nevada Corporations: DO YOU "REALLY" OWN ANYTHING? If you act totally properly, you may well associate with a corporation but you will be lying under oath if you claim to own such an entity—unless you choose to OWN same. AND, YES, THESE ARE THE LAWS, NOT CONJURED WORDS TO MISDIRECT YOUR ATTENTION.

So, does Diane have a good case? Yes, BUT, should she be the one to fight YOUR [?] battles in a Federal Court and pay multi-thousands of dollars to legal counsel? Walk in those shoes before answering.

Facts are that the Feds have no call to pretend to have honor in squashing Silver Colloid. They come along and call Silver Colloid a "New Drug" (meaning after 1938). Then in public press it is called quackery "voodoo" stuff that "does nothing". The ONLY side-effect conjured is a tinge of blue which CAN or MIGHT appear but is "only cosmetic" and non-harmful. Facts are "colloidal" silver will not and cannot turn anyone blue. At best you have to have "available silver salts" to even begin to cause such a coloration.

And by the way, even with the silver "blue" coloration it can be bonded with a higher-frequency metallic "colloid" and washed out of the body.

Silver has been noted to be THE BEST elixir to offer a bonding of a "heavy metal" which is damaging the liver or kidneys of a person from exposure to lead, etc., which will then gradually move the culprit out of the body. It is an electro-magnetic interchange and requires ionized particulate to do its coalition. So observation and speculation is all anyone has with which to even debate an issue.

Now, understand that the case against Diane Kunick takes no notice of fact, use or even voodoo. The entire program revolves around their establishment, right or wrong, of a law which is only spoken of in numbers.

The friendly person(s) from within the loop of New Gaia management/participants/ receivers of FUNDS, who did the formal affidavit(s), had access to the information, for they carefully worded the affidavit to gain legal shelter for referencing "drugs" and "new drugs".

The only REALLY interesting botching was in then presenting a SPECTRUM PAPER of such detailed material—on top of having used those very affidavits indicting Diane Kunick.

You see, in court, the Feds have to prove beyond a shadow of a doubt that Diane is guilty of ANYTHING. However, after having Martin, Young, etc., jumping ship and stealing funds along with the paper and "dumping" New Gaia affiliation (after fully intending to capture the operation for themselves for their own products), there was nobody to do anything or be available for the raids (they set up) except the local people and Diane. It was all orchestrated by said Martins, Bilgers, Moorhead, etc. My doubt is that Ed Young would have been foolish enough to provide the entertainment and then run a paper with detailed information on the very product in point. Perhaps so but it hardly seems Ph.D.-quality intelligence.

Does Diane somehow NEED this activity? No, in fact she can spend her days jumping around with Tony Robbins the entire rest of her life and do Girl- Boy-Scout cookie drives.

She can be subpoenaed in to testify in any case brought before the courts on the consideration of "colloids", ANYWAY.

So, THIS is an excellent cause of action to present citizen questions regarding the legal oppression but not with someone's head on the block over terminology—unless you have a Gerry Spence who is not himself terrified of the little Federal attorneys. Dershowitz would also shred this very case in one presentation—in fact it would be dismissed before it could be heard.

Usually in classifying anything "dangerous" there has to be some proof of the product causing "something" untoward—even Melatonin or vitamin filler. It is the law here, which is so radically WRONG and yet unquestioned, that is at point—not a young mother scattering supplements as simple office manager of some distribution company. In FACT of material in this particular case, there was never a warning, a recognition of doing anything wrong or which products might carry problems or anything—just a raid and consequential CHARGES on three FELONY criminal charges. If there were problems Diane (since she is the charged party) should have some "service" or at the least notification by certified mail after which she could cease and desist or continue but in "knowing or intent". NO SUCH NOTIFICATIONS WERE ISSUED OR RECEIVED. In fact, all of the confiscated material, including the records, working papers, or product has never been RETURNED with or without notification of problems.

Interestingly, there are NOW final statements from the California FDA agent who had visited New Gaia a year prior to the Feds. His report indicates that the only problem he found was very minor and that had to do with "food spoilage possibilities" to do with handling of flour and grain. That in itself stemmed from a loose tile above a desk in the same general area of packaging. That was instantly corrected. That report is now on file with the Federal legal offenders but a copy of said report had to be shared with Diane's attorney in this preliminary pre-court segment of the case itself.

Now, could warnings have been issued? Yes, possibly, and perhaps even probably but those would have gone through the corporation involved at Nevada Corporate Headquarters and to the accountant-records comptroller of New Gaia—BRENT MOORHEAD at NCH, having moved to NCH to become their comptroller. There would be no reason or way to directly serve anything on Diane Kunick because she HELD NO POSITION IN THE BUSINESS STRUCTURE OF SAID CORPORATION INVOLVED.

I can further guarantee that if you produced a tonic out of Hopi Nation Mesa Four of the same harmless material—there would be NO ATTENTION EVEN PAID TO THE PRODUCTS IN POINT IN THIS CRIMINAL CASE.

The lesson I personally want you to learn is that your own brother will cut your heart out if you do anything to cause him to turn against you—on any point, even a slip of the lip. KNOW it—we live with it every day and from the most active and devoted "friends".

Now let us look at one of those things for which this suspension elixir MIGHT be somewhat beneficial, that new terror, anthrax. In the Philippines "anthrax" is abundant at the provincial level of experience and is carried by the livestock. The people "treat" it with some "home remedies" and then go to the hospital for antibiotics if it persists. Other mosquito-bearing diseases are far more important for these people than some simple anthrax spores drifting onto letters and envelopes. Even the President said, "For goodness sakes, just go take a bath."

I would correct a misperception of Dharma's that somehow the charges of "intent to defraud and mislead" are not removed as one of the capitulation and bargaining factors in the "new" agreement plea bargain. It is there in small print but carries the same LIE. Diane has to LIE to even sign the agreement. How, perchance can any one "act with intent to defraud and mislead" with "unproven new drugs" if there was no knowledge that there was such a thing?

There is reference, in small print, to "manufacture" and... This CANNOT be true and I can also guarantee that under oath on any witness stand that Diane could not tell anyone how to manufacture anything under question. So, again, to sign such a statement is LYING UNDER OATH.

No offence intended, Diane, but the only thing they can prove about your participation or you yourself is that you are indeed dumb, perhaps, ignorant at worst and got left holding a very hot bag in which you don't even "own the bag". Most ordinary citizens who sit on a jury do not like this kind of manipulation or injustice.

At the very most you might be slapped on the hand and told not to do this dastardly thing again or any more—but to put the people through the kind of expense this will bring, along with the publicity it will pull when a young mother is up on charges of distributing vitamins and MINERALS (these colloids are ordinary minerals simply put into solution). Furthermore, silver has a recommended daily allowance as a supplement and thus is simply a trace mineral.

So, if no law was KNOWINGLY broken, no harmful substance was under question and there was no intent to defraud or mislead—THEY HAVE NO CASE and yet, sign that agreement and you have NO RECOURSE. FURTHER, YOU WILL BE GUILTY OF PERJURY.

Get this case going and every bit of the information as to who placed charges as well as participants who held responsibilities in said New Gaia will be brought by the court to testify. THAT is what you want, my dear. And, the Feds have to go forth and FIND THEM and order them to testify—that is NOT your problem.

Remember, and this is for Diane: The Feds have to prove beyond a shadow of a doubt (stated in their case) before a jury of 12, that you intentionally acted to defraud and mislead. And, if there is doubt on one charge, surely there is doubt on the other two. And so, if they come up with a dozen more, the facts remain the same.

Being a lousy businessperson is NOT AGAINST THE LAW, citizen, and a jury of peers (citizens) might well understand that condition. How many bad investments have been made while thinking it was a good move? Certainly there would appear to be nothing wrong with distributing that which shows up on a shelf in any health or supplement store in the country, yea, even the globe.

PROOF BEYOND A SHADOW OF A DOUBT AND A LAWYER APPOINTED BY THE COURT FOR YOUR DEFENSE. FURTHER, WHEN YOU KNOW YOUR TRUTH, THE LAWYER WILL LOVE YOU, FOR YOU WILL PROVIDE HIM WITH A CASE HE CAN WIN.

Meanwhile, they also repeat in this AGREEMENT document as well that the Feds must supply you with that above-mentioned lawyer for your defense and, dear one, this lawyer does not have to be a rocket scientist. And by the way—"they" have to get an indictment to even start this fiasco.

Frightening? Yes indeed, but you have nothing on your side to insure you don't get tossed into the brig tomorrow for you sign away EVERYTHING while "they" sign away NOTHING. THIS IS THE NEW FREEDOM IN THE U.S.A. The only security in this instance is to confront and win, get it dismissed or at the least SETTLE the case to obviate double jeopardy the next time your neighbor hates your cat. Parasites are the worst "old" friends you could have had. Consider this opportunity as for clearing out the parasites that have sucked your blood for many years.

This becomes as silly as making a law that you can't sell crocheted doilies but can if they are knitted.

There is also a clause in the law that says you have to have a filed application to handle any of these "New Drugs". Well, how can you have an application if you don't know, number one, and number two, if the materials with which to test the "new drug" are all disallowed, how can you fill their requirements?

Take a good hard look at YOUR ENEMIES and I believe your attitude may find adjustment. They have revealed their evil for all the world to see and thus, hatred will flow forth unto their dying day. The hate grows—it does NOT diminish.

By the way, the only way you can get backup files returned or find the evidence used against you—is to confront and legally retrieve the files. Remember that "they" have all records and backup information on all products, not only from Diane's location or files and have no intention of sharing that information until caused by counsel to do so. This is a game of blind-man's-bluff. You are blind and they can do anything they want by fact or by bluff. This is TERRORISM in its most used form in today's world against citizens.

OTHER TOPICS TO ATTEND WHICH INDEED ARE MISLEADING

You had better be more interested in engines that blow up, taking wings with them, of aircraft "taking off" from airports. Accident? Come now. Nearly 300 people perished in one swoop. How many "maybe" anthrax patients have you found? Enough to even shut the mail service of more than a day? Are you sure? Well, one heck of a lot of Cipro is being scattered—enough at any rate to facilitate the merging or takeover of another MAJOR corporation in the financial game. Check it out as it is pending completion as we write. Bayer is a good-old-boy German BIG BOY firm who helped foot the cost of the Second World War. Lots of antibiotics are better suited FOR ANTHRAX than is Cipro and with myriads less negative side-affects and side-effects. But of course these are "approved" "new drugs" and the doctors and drug dealers smile all the way to the banks. If your side-effects get worse, the smile is ever so much larger.

A more likely source for anthrax bugs is directly from those labs which do the testing and the money-making off the products they have conjured to "heal" or "cure". This is far more apt to be the case than looking for fanatical patriots or bin Laden. Tell me again: Who are the terrorists? I have trouble keeping it straight. Oh well.

This is a question of good vs. bad, I suppose, and note that good is what You do and bad is what you don't like happening against you. It is recognized by us as the deadliest of all human species diseases.

A LOOK AT U.S. MILITARY ADVISERS

Having just experienced the full-bore attention of these special advisers in the Philippines, let us consider what these forces actually are and what they do.

Here is a rather insightful article from The Philippine STAR of November 12, 2001:

[QUOTING "WHAT U.S. MILITARY ADVISERS DO", by Roland G. Simbulan:]

In 1987, the Pentagon inaugurated an independent command to consolidate Special Operations Forces of Army Green Berets, Rangers and the covert Delta Force, Navy SEALs, Special Boat Units, and the Covert Team 6 and Air Force Special Operations and Internal Defense Squadrons.

As a consolidated, composite command, they are now part of what is called the Central Command of the U.S. Armed Forces. These Special Forces command units now operate globally in exercises known as "Joint Combined Exchange Training" (JCET), an indispensable part of key post-Cold War foreign policy.

These are different and should be differentiated from the 25-member Joint U.S. Military Advisory Group or JUSMAG which were never removed and in fact are, today, still attached to the U.S. Embassy in Manila at the "James Rowe Compound".

The U.S. has had JCET operations in various parts of the world for many years, but for the past nine years, they have been almost invisible, free of virtually any U.S. congressional oversight. A 1991 law, Section 2011 of Title 10 of the U.S. Code, which governs money spent on overseas troop deployments, bypasses oversight requirements by giving commanders of Special Operations Forces the authority to deploy and pay for training of U.S. and foreign troops, if "the primary purpose of the training... shall be to train the Special Operations Forces of the Combat Command." The law also allows unreported financing of the foreign country's participation in training by buying fuel, food and ammunition, etc.

Today, there are 47,000 personnel belonging to this most elite unit of the U.S. armed forces—the U.S. Special Forces.

"Special operations" have evolved functions which were formerly the sole purview of the CIA or diplomatic officers, such as collective strategic information on foreign countries, including everything from topography, backgrounds of foreign leaders, evaluation of readiness of foreign troops, potential landing sites, and the like. [H: This, in the Philippines, includes full mapping and strategic information on gold holdings, especially integration with satellite mapping systems, natural resources from ground level and access needs.]

Officially, the justification is that such operations are to facilitate the training of U.S. troops, though deployments appear to hold direct benefits for U.S. troops. U.S. officials maintain that by training foreign troops, U.S. forces are learning how to train foreign troops, one of their main official missions.

The Special Operations Forces advisers may in fact be contributing to counterinsurgency and human-rights violations. But there is definitely a political card played by the JCET adviser. They are a direct instrument of U.S. foreign policy, in fact, they may be the most involved, tangible, physical part of U.S. foreign policy in certain countries.

They have definitely become a leading force in exerting U.S. influence abroad, revising the rules of U.S. engagement with scores of foreign countries where U.S. economic, security and political interests are affected.

JCET operations which are also functioning as Mobile Training Teams have been operating around the world. In Africa, they were in Benin, Botswana, Kenya, Rwanda, Senegal, to name a few. They have also been training special forces units in Colombia, Guatemala and other Central and Latin American countries under the auspices of an "anti-narcotics war campaign and operations".

But the program has been criticized in the past in various South American countries and Africa for contributing to counter-insurgency operations by the trained troops and parliamentary units and providing yet another mechanism for channeling U.S. military training and equipment to favored regimes.

In Indonesia during the Suharto regime, U.S. Special Operations Forces advisers trained the notorious Kopaussus troops, accused by Amnesty International of involvement in kidnappings and torture of anti-government activists. In the case of Colombia and Guatemala, the U.S. role in organizing the death squads and torture squads began with the Special Operations Forces advisers in 1991, when they set up "intelligence networks" under a secret Colombian military high command. The excuse then was officially the war against narcotics. Now it is the war against terrorism.

Small mobile training teams composed of U.S. Special Operations Forces usually train local units in "camouflage techniques, small-unit movement, troop leading procedures, soldier-team development, rappelling, mountaineering, marksmanship, weapon maintenance, and day and night navigation". Also included are "small unit leader training, intelligence, interrogation techniques, rifle marksmanship, first aid, land navigation, and tactical skills, such as patrolling”.

Of course, U.S. military training goes beyond purely military advice as it includes counterinsurgency techniques, according to a senior U.S. Special Operations and Low-Intensity Conflict official who was interviewed by the Washington Post (July 12, 1998 issue).

In many countries, despite mounting evidence that U.S. SOF-trained troops are in the thick of atrocities upon civilian populations, this form of U.S. military support continues.

[END OF QUOTING]

How many of you still feel really secure in the hands of ALL-STATE? (“Control”, that is.)

The interesting side-line of the local Philippines “advisers” is that they went back to Washington D.C. ahead of the president of the Philippines with a list of “old stuff” the U.S. could provide for assistance to the Philippines in this horrid terrorist time of Abu Sayyaf (trained by the CIA with BIN LADEN). This was right AFTER they gathered everything first-hand that they might need in totally wiping out Mindanao as it is known today.

It is, by the way, said TODAY, that the largest terrorist cell from out of Viet Nam is in the Philippines and it is somehow all connected to the Taliban or its terror groups. My goodness, wonders just never cease.

Among these same interesting topics is the just-completed trip of the Philippine President to Indonesia where four “treaties” were signed. One, which is of the most incredible humor, is that there is an effort now to be put forth to stop the sale of ARMS from the Moro tribes in Mindanao to the Indonesian tribes. Say what? Well, let us realize that the arms in point are such as AK-47s, Uzis, rocket launchers, heavy artillery, and bombs along with “mines”.

How, pray tell, would Moro tribesmen get heavy arms of Israeli make—IN THE FIRST PLACE? Much the less, it would seem quite interesting that open trading with Indonesia has to be addressed.

Now, let’s look across the way but still very much a close spot—to Papua New Guinea and Indonesian New Guinea where the tribesmen dress in nothing but a decorated penis shield and headband but often carry an AK-47 instead of a stick-spear.

Who gets credit for destroying the beautiful orb of Earth and God’s PERFECT creations?

So a better question than “Where has Christ gone?” might well be: “Who is Christ?”

Oh, well, Christ was a good guy, it says here in the “good” book. Oh indeed? OF WHICH CHRIST DO YOU SPEAK? “Christ” is NOT A NAME; it is a state of being which is surely reflected in actions. Intent will be reflected in the “actions”.

MAN can’t even get the names straight and yet kills any who disagree or, tosses them into prison at the very least.

It is rather like the ones who say, “You can’t have an investment company with GAIA” (Global Alliance Investment Association). Nobody wants or suggests a financial investment program of any kind. WE SPEAK OF AN ALLIANCE THAT SERVES (INVESTS SERVICE) TO AN ASSOCIATION OF PEOPLE OR ENTITIES STRUCTURED AS LEGITIMATE ENTITIES WHO ARE REGISTERED AND LEGALLY FORMED UNDER THE LAWS OF THE STATE WISHING A COALITION FOR THE BETTERMENT OF SAID SOCIETY AS TO LIVELIHOOD AND FREEDOM OF PRODUCTION, SANS OPEN GRAFT AND CORRUPTION AS THE MAIN PROFIT-PRODUCING INDUSTRY. THIS ALSO PROVIDES A METHOD OF WORKING WITH NEIGHBORS, BE THEY A MAN OR A NATION.

Does anyone out there or in there/down there CARE? Well, not unless it involves SELF.

What is not understood, it seems, is that everything impacts all things—including self.

And so, may the best man win—and HE will!

RE: DIANE KUNICK FEDERAL SUIT OVER DISTRIBUTING SILVER COLLOID AS SOME KIND OF “NEW DRUG”, ETC. MORE ON SILVER COLLOIDS; WHAT IS IT AND THE FDA BULLDOZERS

HAY IS BEST WHEN THAT BIG SPOTLIGHT IN THE SKY (SUN) IS SHINING ON THE FIELDS

Hatonn—So, some of you are tired of the topic of lawsuits and colloids? Sorry, but FREEDOM in TRUTH is the entire thrust of our purpose in this time in this dimension on that which you call Earth.

First of all, Earth only refers to a planet which has certain characteristics, so, as with “Christ”, you have a generic term now accepted as some name or other. Sorry, but your planet “Earth” is basically labeled with naught but numbers and quadrant locations—which wouldn’t make much sense to you so we will remind you that it is “named” Shan. Yes, indeed, just like the little nation in the Golden Triangle called by the same, Shan. However, as with acceptance of less than accurate language we can live with “Earth”; however, you are going to find it quite humorous in other locations with the prefix the same.

So, when we speak of “Silver colloid”, we have so little accuracy in the very statement as to be equally humorous. The facts are that the “silver” ions only carry an electromagnetic CHARGE which would actually read out on more complicated apparatus devices as WATER. Now, how about that? And since when is WATER a “new drug”? How can it be an “old drug”, for that matter?

Does not the FDA have to have cause for classification of substances, like water, to pronounce rules and regulations which deprive you-the-people of the life-form which allows life to maintain? YOU CANNOT LIVE WITHOUT WATER!

Now, if I meet a man in the desert who is all burned, blistered and shriveled; and, I can see that he is totally dehydrated, what have I to face? Okay, let us say that I had just purchased a skin of water for two pesos. So I say to the man, I see that you are dehydrated and water will fix that problem for you—but—I only have that which I purchased for two pesos. Now, sir, if you will pay me one peso I will give you half.

You will have just made two errors in FDA rules and regulations. You have just completed a buy-sell agreement and exchange (if he takes the water) and you have diagnosed a medical condition and actually prescribed a “cure” for same. Obviously the man is choking and therefore suffers from a specific disease (dis-ease).

If that water contains minerals, equally necessary for rehydration, you have compounded your illegal activities and will now have TWO TO FOUR NEW COUNTS (CHARGES) AGAINST YOU. With Silver in the water you could, however, just say right up front, “I have some yellow-tinged water here, I’ll share with you”.

If the man makes a DONATION of one peso, you are okay—if he agrees to take yellow-tinged water.

But wait, please. What is the yellow-tinged bit of this story? Well it is not silver particulate, good readers, for anyone knows that if you look at silver it is certainly silver in color—RIGHT? RIGHT! The yellow is the refractory “ray” of spectrum identification of the presence of microscopically minute particulate—charged.

Note, you creators of silver colloids, that the “fall-out” is NOT golden in color but quite dark silver when “discharged”.

So, Silver colloid CANNOT BE A DRUG SUBSTANCE, for at best you can only have distilled water (if that is what you used in your pot and which is scientifically quite acceptable), you have no “substance” for a “drug” classification—only charged (positively) water.

Why, in using non-distilled water with lots of mineral do you actually end up with more particulate but a far lighter shade of yellow? Because a mineral or substance can only reflect ITS COLOR RAY. EXAMPLE: Positively-charged gold in water IS LAVENDER PURPLE AND BEARS A HIGHER FREQUENCY.

So, would water with food coloring of same colors bear the qualities of, say, the colloids involved? No, because unless you charge the ions with the element of a given “ray” you have “dead” liquid, which would still “treat” “dehydration” but would not offer the “frequency” of other than water, mineral or otherwise.

This is why I chose to ask to have GAIA in the label of anything presented which would reflect on our presentation. GAIA is a universal TERM for life or living. I frankly don’t want to give away more information because I actually hope the FDA Feds will pursue this foolish case against Diane.

THEY HAVE DONE ONE THING WHICH SHOULD CAUSE HER TO MAKE HER DECISION INSTANTLY: “8. QUESTIONS BY COURT. THE DEFENDANT UNDERSTANDS THAT IF THE COURT QUESTIONS HER UNDER OATH, ON THE RECORD AND IN THE PRESENCE OF COUNSEL, ABOUT THE OFFENSES TO WHICH SHE HAS PLEADED GUILTY, HER ANSWERS, IF FALSE, MAY LATER BE USED AGAINST HER IN A PROSECUTION FOR PERJURY OR FALSE STATEMENT.” There are about 30 pages of this “plea bargain” which are even worse and without recourse but “they” can come back at any time and literally hang her.

Mark, please contact Diane and ask permission to run these documents and do so ASAP. [MM: I talked to Diane in person early this morning (11/15/01) concerning said documents and the multiple previous attempts by GCH to have same run in CONTACT. Essentially, they will be published if, when, where and how—in accordance with Diane’s free-will choice.] I will walk this road WITH you; I will NOT do it FOR you.

It also hurts me to find that so few are willing to step out and earn product funds for keeping the paper, etc., moving. We have to beg and borrow and yet there is a plethora of things which would offer good business investments. But no, not after the horse is dead do I want anyone to come build the barn.

Somebody with Internet efficiency, please get us copies of Title 21, United States Code, Section 321(p) and 321(g)(1).

The FDAC Act defined “new drug” as any drug the composition of which is not generally recognized by experts as safe and effective for use under the conditions prescribed, recommended, or suggested in the labeling.

Now a strange thing: “New Gaia Products (NGP) was a manufacturer and distributor of drugs with offices in Tehachapi, California, within the State and Eastern District of California.”

“7. Defendant Diane Eckert-Kunick was the manager of NGP and was responsible for the day-to-day operations of NGP, including the manufacture and distribution of drugs.”

NO, WRONG! I will not disclose accuracy, either, at this time.

THERE IS NO WAY THAT DIANE CAN SIGN THE OFFERED PLEA BARGAIN AGREEMENT WITHOUT LYING ON EVERY POINT PRESENTED AND THEY CAN THEN HANG HER ON PERJURY. YOU DO NOT LIVE IN A NICE WORLD, PEOPLE.

There will be no choice other than, at this time of no money for such “defense” counsel, to use the court’s obligation to provide counsel and in a location suitable for the needs of the “innocent” (unless or until PROVEN GUILTY). At that point, however, the Feds have to provide the costs inclusive of building the case FOR THE DEFENSE.

Diane will, if she signs the “agreement”, be under full probation for the duration of the time handed down in the court. If she misses one visit or does ANYTHING like taking an emergency trip without permission, she will be “remanded to prison for the duration of the probation period”.

Next, the charges are inclusive of several other colloids which information indicated possible positive response, i.e. copper. I use this one because the “copper bracelets” for tennis players, etc., were found to give off just enough copper to the system to improve the “feelings” of joints.

She is also charged with heinous offering of AquaGaia, which is simply a very effective MITOCHONDRIA solution which works on the mitochondrial system within the body, which in turn finds that the little ions thereof like to eat, for fuel, plaque and specifically cholesterol of that BAD variety as determined by the FDA as “being bad”.

So, the products are NOT under charge, ONLY DIANE IS CHARGED with fraudulent and misleading offering AND INTRODUCING “new drugs” onto the market—with intent to defraud and mislead.

This, readers, following a four-place raid in two States of officers/agents BREAKING INTO THE HOME AT GUNPOINT.

There were NEVER any cease-and-desist notices; there has been no return of the records or anything else taken, and readers, THIS IS WRONG! So, let’s please keep the focus on two things: 1) The foolishness, that can be proven incorrect, as to charges and “counts” named, and, 2) Products which are all categorized as “colloids” and without specific cause are lumped into one category of “silver colloid”.

Now, let me scare you just a tad. All that nice SPRING water that you purchase is ASSUMED to be good, safe and carefully bottled. Well, a lot of companies in the Philippines simply use tap-water. It happens every day. But that is not the point. It is often found that “typhoid” can be isolated in that nice Spring Water and the entire source must be locked down. Well, smile, if nothing else—you won’t find typhoid bugs in water with the frequency presentation of silver.

And just who are the “experts” referred to in this LAW on the books? They obviously are NOT experts who present the garbage. The only side-effect is Argyria? Come on now—THAT does NOT come from Silver Colloid or any other colloid. At worst, it could only come forth on perchance a rare occasion from some other silver product—for a colloid of silver is GOLDEN and CANNOT produce an “ash-gray or bluish” anything. PRESENT THOSE EXPERTS, PLEASE!

The other colloids are tossed out in additional “counts” of breaking the law in a felony criminal level of bad doings, without ANYTHING or other reference except to some words in advertising—against Diane when she did not even do the advertising labels or listings of products.

I do, yes, believe that a jury might well be able to find some measure of mercy in “beyond reasonable doubt”. Remember that a grand jury can indict with a simple majority but a jury at trial must render on “reasonable doubt” of intent of any crime and a felony requires only one dissension. I think the odds are better for the innocent TO GO TO TRIAL AND NOTHING SHORT THEREOF.

Meanwhile, please, our friends, continue your research and communications with interested and involved parties and here is a very good place to start questioning your government manipulators who are PAID OFF by the big drug-business cartels—and YOU will provide Diane what is needed to hold the line and yes indeed, she should use the courts and demand her case be done properly through their attorneys because she is now broke and no way to recover from this trauma inflicted by raiding a home at gunpoint with two babies in bed.

And this is all over some foolishness caused by a stoppage of “pay off” to Spectrum staff and the bookkeeper for New Gaia and its Mother corporation called Unlimited Movement, both established by Nevada Corporate Headquarters. The other “informers” simply wanted to make a splash even though that required pure fabrication and lies to get that “revenge” somehow assumed. But it presents a PERFECT opportunity to take a stand for what is RIGHT.

The miscreants simply did not believe it would come to this where anyone would actually “call” them on their misadventures. Well, readers, it is certainly well past time YOU start doing something at every opportunity to serve though it be only a voice from the multitudes, for if you would have any freedom or change—it must come from YOU.

What would her husband and the father involved here have her do in this case? FIGHT! “THEY’ HAVE NO CASE; IT IS PURELY A

RAILROADING THROUGH FEAR AND THREAT.”

Okay, again: They have chosen to hit one single party with charges which have had to be conjured and yet this gives all of YOU a chance to have a voice against the all-consuming beast presenting in many various departments of incredible abuse and misuse.

Diane is but a young mother with children who distributed vitamins and other natural products—basically to be able to afford to keep the paper going and give income to what now turns out to be “enemy” troopers. HOWEVER, PEOPLE, THE CASE IN POINT IS “YOUR” FREEDOM AS A CITIZEN OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA—DEPRIVED BY ASSUMPSIT LAWS OF THAT WHICH YOU MAY WANT TO HAVE FOR YOUR USE. THEREIN LIES THE POINT OF THIS VENTURE.

Yes, we do know others who took a stand and were railroaded anyway. However, one was on the basis of filing internal revenue reports and taxation. And no, the verdict SHOULD NOT have been other than dismissal of the case—but yes, it was otherwise. That case, however, is NOT the same as this case where ONE PERSON is singled out for INTENTIONALLY PERPETRATING FRAUD AND MISLEADING PEOPLE regarding products.

This CANNOT be true, for there was no information or realization of anything deviant from understood laws. Silver colloid is STILL offered right off the Health Food stores’ shelves. I would expect some one juror to at least understand such ignorance, especially when NO ONE has even presented those laws from other than a Felony Criminal PLEA BARGAIN document.

Furthermore, you can make your own, feed your fields of weeds, apply to your “outside”, etc. WHAT A STRANGE WORLD YOU HAVE DEVELOPED, TRAVELERS.

Perhaps this might give you reason to better understand why no one in the cosmic quadrant wants your species in their neighborhood—because there goes the real estate prices.

Now, readers, you may surmise that this case is extremely personal to parents, grandparents and those immediately involved.

WHERE YOU HAD BEST TAKE NOTE, EAVESDROPPERS AND MAIL/INFORMATION SNEAKERS, IS THAT THIS CASE IS EXTREMELY IMPORTANT TO ME REGARDING THE CHILDREN INVOLVED. TEST ME, LADIES AND GENTLEMEN! JUST CALL ME “DAD”, FOR IT ONLY ANNOYS DR. YOUNG BUT IT IS CLOSER TO HOME THAN YOU MIGHT OTHERWISE RECOGNIZE. SOME OF YOU HAVE GONE ABOUT AS FAR AS YOU CAN MAKE IT, MY SO-CALLED “ENEMIES” OF YOUR OWN INTENT AND CLAIM. SOME SAY THAT I AM BUT DHARMA’S HIGHER IMAGINATION? I WOULD SUGGEST YOU JUST DON’T EVEN IMAGINE HOW MUCH “HIGHER”.

Well, every one of the tormentors who, yes indeed, even usurp MYSELF, will be called to testify and the government will have to produce them wherever they are. Then, if need be, we will have accomplished some backup for our cause and perhaps we can engage quality of counsel such as Gerry Spence or his peers of HIS reference to finish the case.

This is not just about silver, my friends; THIS IS ABOUT YOUR CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHTS AS CITIZENS involved here.

I ask Rex to please make sure Diane and Jack get this ASAP for their computer has been “down”. And yes indeed, I thank you each and all for continuing to build the defense and bury everyone with information, for it is ALL GOING TO BE GOOD INFORMATION AND IN THE END—YOU WILL MAKE A TREMENDOUS STATEMENT FOR RIGHT AND RIGHTEOUSNESS.

Now, about that CONSTITUTION which has just been finally killed DEAD, I will speak briefly and then yes indeed, turn to an expert authority on the topic and where you are NOW, pilgrim. If it doesn't make you as a citizen feel helpless, then nothing could, my friends.

I wanted to contact Kunicks before moving on, for indeed I am biased about the Federal case involved in such a heinously deceitful manner but typifies what you have become and until you can consider the smallest of these “causes”, you will never move to secure your freedom UNDER THE CONSTITUTION, UNDER GOD WITH ONE NATION INDIVISIBLE. YOU HAVE ALREADY DIVIDED AND YOU ARE THE SLAVES, CITIZENS. YOU HAVE A GOVERNMENT OF TRAITORS SITTING THE THRONE.

WE WILL BE OFFERING SEVERAL THINGS WHICH MUST BE PUT TO PRINT ON SILVER—FOR THE PEOPLE HERE IN THE PHILIPPINES AS TO EXPLANATION OF THE PRODUCT.

Then, we will offer Dr. John Coleman's (I consider the very best of what he has ever written) article on the Death of the U.S. Constitution.

Do “I” know what you need to do about this atrocity? Yes, but what I know and what you KNOW are, even if the same, not in my prerogative to pronounce upon you. I can, as a professor, discuss needs, errors, possible cures for the injustices—but it means nothing.

You of the (u)nited States of America's midsection have no government. You have been taken over by foreign/alien forces of a Federal Corporation acting on its own rules, its own laws by dictation and YOU are given no options. What you as a united States citizen might do is questionable. What would I do? I would run, not walk, to the nearest Native American Reservation (sovereign state nation) and beg them to allow me in.

Washington D.C. is the seat of the slave-masters and is about as unholy as can be accomplished. You might well just start another national government UNDER THE CONSTITUTION elsewhere—and let Washington go down with its own debt for which YOU and everything you ever had or hold IS THE COLLATERAL. YOU ARE SICK, PEOPLE, AND IT WILL TAKE A LOT MORE THAN SILVER COLLOID OR CIPRO TO HEAL YOU.

GOD SHOWS YOU THE PATH—YOU HAVE TO WALK IT.

So that there is no misunderstanding this message, I AM,

Gyeorgos Ceres Hatonn

If that requires a leap of faith for some of you, so be it.

RE: APOLOGIES TO READERS ON COLLOIDS AND EQUIPMENT. LACK OF COMMUNICATION

BEST LAID PLANS

Is the load too much to follow our plan? No, but the communication is too little and I, for one, feel a bit at a loss as to correct unperceived, I suppose, errors in writings, press and mailings.

As regards Silver Colloid I have to admit that I am totally saturated with the topic as to it, its uses and anthrax boondoggles as well. E.J. has spent untold hours to test apparatus and make Silver Colloid and has the kitchen looking like Dr. Jekyll's Lab.

Commander had been very specific in introducing the subject and specifically asked that the apparatus or “how to” be held at least a week to allow for the follow-up needed before just offering one more confusing program for readers.

We were to run the information, hold up on the apparatus writing until we could get the resources checked out and present information for getting the best-for-least-price equipment.

For instance, the best advertised apparatus we have found with its inverters, converters and controverters is the least functional as to colloidal quality—here in Manila. We will now try to get listings as alternative sources for reader information.

Commander has given a lot of credits and focus to Mark Metcalf for his Silver Colloid research, testing and production. He also has handled the “new” legal red tape in a very professional manner. However, it is not going to be that Commander Hatonn gets anyone deeper in debt to any confrontations over production or use of ANYTHING.

He always offers information, education and sometimes just recreation in our work and for the latter I am grateful, for at the moment I feel pretty discouraged as others have to pick up slack because of misperceptions.

I was instructed to do the writings in such order that the last “apparatus” segment WOULD NOT go in the same paper as did the INFORMATION writings. This for several reasons: 1) We always, if possible, check with suppliers and resources. 2) We must offer solutions if we offer presentations, and, 3) we have no funds available to run double papers in any edition with full knowledge of all responsible parties. 4) We did, because of a double-sized issue, have trouble with mailing, especially in “anthrax land” in the postal service. We finally received our own issue two weeks after the fact. Many second sections were, in addition, lost in the mail which produces difficulty in getting the “missing” connected to the “missed”.

Could we just miss a paper and make up the difference? No, it doesn't work that way and especially now when references and source suppliers must be offered—or at the least, a phone resource given. [MM: As my dear friend P.P. says: “MHC0.”]

I fear that Mark probably had to stay up all night to get everything into the paper to keep the writings on the topic together. I simply don't know what lacks in communication but the facts are that we just send things along as they come off the typewriter so don't know where the mix-ups come. We can't even check on the results of our own contributions because of the distance and any change in routine is obviously unacceptable to the mail service, shipping services or you name it.

We are not doing Silver Colloids in way, shape or form for the U.S. market or even our best friends—we have no further information than does anyone and far less than those with access and time to search the Internet, etc. There is a flurry of interest in the things of which CONTACT publishes. We make every possible effort to meet requests—but never without having used either the product, the apparatus or at the least, giving credit to writers, inventors and/or those who share information.

In noting the “New Drug” classifications as presented against Diane Kunick for distribution with information regarding relative information for supplements, it is seemingly okay to use products if they bear a “food supplement” label, a “no known therapeutic value established” label and/or you do not advertise any personal use. So, one by one the “supplements” get restricted and products such as minerals and vitamins, herbs and any reference to possible good advantages presented will NOW GET YOU TIME IN THE FEDERAL PRISON! No thank you.

One very important thing Commander has always taught us and I am learning it well: The minute a thing or process is made unlawful—STOP doing, presenting or participating IN IT.

The Federal Attorneys haven't the vaguest idea of what they say or do but they have listed items which had NO REFERENCE UNTO THEMSELVES IN ANY WAY OR SORT. The items are just listed there along with Silver Colloid which is the only referenced (under the law) item included.

Those things must be confronted in a whole different set of circumstances while you are destined to eat Cipro or whatever is the killer drug of the week.

Everyone can do that which they will, but I CAN'T DO ANYTHING ABOUT IT. And people, the very ones who claim to bring light and truth to you out of SPECTRUM, ALONG WITH THEIR FRIENDS, LITERALLY SET UP YOU-THE-PEOPLE.

Therefore, in the human aspect of this instruction for any listed product to which we might refer or to which Commander might allude, we offer only that which is informative, educational, and POSSIBLE—as presented through researchers, scientific, or of academic interest in the field of said information or journalism.

What I might or E.J. may think or believe is our own personal opinion. Therefore we refrain from much comment or recognition of anything without the KNOWLEDGE through trial or use of said item. This includes elemental colloids. There is so much data on colloids as to be staggering—but the Federal Court acts only on that which is presented through the Federal Food and Drug Administration—and now, they wouldn't mislead you would they?

If I read correctly, the Feds have removed the accusation that Diane did fraudulently and deliberately with intent to mislead, offer drugs to the public after the issuance of some ban on Silver Colloid. Of course no one in the public even knew there was such a law put on the record having already had it established that such as Silver Colloid was a pre-1938 product.

Watch out for the water, little fish, because it is probably next. Somehow I don't worry about Osama bin Laden nearly as much as I worry about MY U.S. Government "protectors".

After New York again yesterday I find a great hesitation to wanting to even go to an airport, much the less fly. Over here it appears the consensus of opinion is that a ground-to-air (or air-to-air) "something"—which seeks heat—blew off the engine and wing of that plane in Queens. Oh well, only the Shadow knows, I suppose. It is, of course, "just an accident". Planes lose their engines and wings all the time and undoubtedly it was through Pilot Error that they blew off the Airbus trying to leave New York.

E.J. was ill this morning with a staph sore throat that usually lasts over a week but he is fine tonight—"so there" for colloids and curing ANYTHING.

What do we have going in the Philippines today? Well, just a whole bagfull of things which surely are better left unsaid. The orders or mandates about foreigners, especially U.S. citizens, remains in "stay in your cell" mode. The last typhoon (this week) all but wiped out one of the islands here and hundreds of people—mostly because of unlawful logging. So what else is new?

The con-games are still daily and prevalent and always on "Philippine Time". At least we are to the point we recognize the con-production more quickly.

Everything looks better than last week and yes, we also wish we could see into that next month, year or eon—but that is not part of our prerogative it seems. We take one step at a time and deal with one choice and decision at a time, like everyone else.

And no, the "house" thing did not get resolved, to you who inquired—it simply got pulled from the auction block. The house is still advertised for sale in the local paper—so, somebody doesn't get the message of having controversy over said property. YOU did, however, get the immediate deception stopped and we humbly thank you.

It is not that we have any great claim to much of anything but a lot of the thieved items stolen off "our" property, right out in the open and admitted to—were things of the Institute as use items.

I share these things because I must have everyone realize that my opinions are certainly my own—but one thing that is NOT in question, is the MAN UPSTAIRS. Another thing undisputed is the people who have struggled and labored ever more diligently than have we to get this job done. It is not okay to simply toss in the towel and call it quits. We have to DO SOMETHING and the job we have been given is indeed big—but there is no longer any argument over the product, just the political gaming in how best to use it for the most loot to the most greedy.

The Philippines President will be having "coffee" break with Jr. Bush in the next day or so in Washington—and in his schedule I'm sure there won't be great conversation over much since the Philippines is on a begging spree for old and useless war junk—in exchange, of course, for the Philippines. And by the way, one way the Philippines is offered to "pull out" of the economic hole is to borrow some more money—this time, get this, from those biggest office holders in the World Trade Center. Those grabbers didn't even slow up.

We know of people who are going to go without Thanksgiving to send more money to the "victims" of New York City. Say what? They can't even give away all the money or build walls enough to hide the stashes in the ground under those "blown up" buildings. Is it possible you people back home in the U.S. don't get any news AT ALL?

Over here, though, there is no Thanksgiving because there is no food or funds with which to celebrate anything, much the less, any "thank you". So, the people go and stand in the weather which is always HOT and pray and fast then go home to work another con-game of graft and corruption.

Christmas? Well, the only celebration here is going to some rich-man's mall and looking at the decorations. ME TOO. And NOTHING gets cheaper—just more expensive. Everything around is cutting jobs and there is even going to be over a week of "holiday" for government workers because there aren't funds to stay at work. It is fine, they don't do anything but fight anyway, even in Congress. One of the most notable things right now is the wars going on among the JUDGES of the Sandiganbayan (Federal Court) AND the Supreme Court Justices. Even the ex-President in "detainment" is asking to go for medical help to the U.S. while his trial is stopped while the Justices argue and call each other crooks and criminals.

There is little point in keeping the hotels fully staffed and fluffed because there are few business people or certainly, tourists, DARING to come here.

We had a laugh just today as the statistics for crimes were discussed. There was the head of the PNP saying that it just "looks" bad as to things like kidnapping but it is mostly just "foreigners". This right after a full focus on the precious movie star of some 62.5 years old (lady) who was murdered on the weekend. Of course, it didn't amount to much as the ones who snatched her only gouged out an eye and a few fingernails and then stabbed her 13 times. And indeed, right in wonderful downtown borderland Makati. But, they let Erap out of "DETENTION" to go to the funeral parlor. And yes, they still call a funeral facility a "parlor" over here.

Oh enough already. We plan to just keep on as hard as we can and thanking you all the way. So we keep up the "hope"? No, we KNOW this is real, is going to bring fruit to harvest, and we will be very glad we stayed the course; so yes, I suppose that is "hope" but the only consideration is WHEN.

The day has gone on by here with more than the typical interruptions and yet, E.J. after having gotten hit with this infection near midnight last evening, is now up and off to go across the street to attend the copies, broken phone (third one that didn't work) and try for our visa extension due last week and somehow "lost" in the entropy at immigration point of confusion.

We are struck pretty dumb (me) and awfully chagrined that within the last hour the silver colloid kicked in and E.J. was back on his feet and able to "keep on ticking". This stuff has been hospitalizing people around here along with "pink eye" and you name it.

Thank you, "DAD" and Two-by, for the apparatus. And to our Will Park, thank you for the herbs and vitamins. I also want to thank our Greek family for the honey, nuts and "white lightning" which we guess goes with the Greek raisins. Since the WL got through customs we assume it is not as good as what we at first thought it to be.

Then to Margie, Ellen, Rex and Diane thank you for the bread, the headache pills from Costco and the cards and letters that keep the soul somehow glued together a while longer. There is no way to repay all that but we will hang right in there until we find a way. Creator has promised and I believe we hold Him to it and we will be fine. I wish I could send the headache pills to Mark for the headaches we dump on him without better instructions.

By the way, I BLAME Mark and Rays for those weekly papers that always, somehow, make it and also YOU who make it so. And, I had best stop before I get mushy.

We are witness to miracles happening and frankly, it makes these years seems short indeed. Our Dr. C. over here with the use of colloids was here last night to visit. Of course, we gave him the information, Teri, on the PAP IMI machine and longed for both Teri and Bob James. He was so wound up when he left that he was off to work more diligently on the laws, etc.

He did give us some information which I found highly interesting. He said there is no problem with colloids or anything we have (and there wouldn't be in the U.S. either, it appears) if you don't ADVERTISE to the public. Word of mouth is fine.

I suppose if you put a sign on the bottle that reads: "It has been determined that... is hazardous to your health." we probably could sweep the market. Or, should we call it something like Ciprosilve in emulsion?

I still think the best one for today, however, is the "accidental" crash of the blown-apart airliner in New York.

Almost as good, though, is the point of the U.S. "advisers" who have done their thing here in the Philippines. I will offer you the column dealing with "What U.S. Military Advisers Do". I think everyone will find it quite informative, for it is not a "funny"; it is a fact; and it is GLOBAL. Everyone seems to forget that in the provinces of this place, caribou (water buffalo) is the going mode of transportation other than the feet.

And yet, I always marvel at the distractions able to be pulled. You know, like a plane crash to distract from the UN debacle and the emptying of the underground at GROUND ZERO.

Also, never overlook that Philippine Central Bank in working with the IMF ACTUALLY SAID, "GAIA is good but the IMF won't let us use it." And that paraphrase came directly from an attorney who was called in by the bank investigators just three years ago. My goodness, people, where have we been keeping ourselves? Well, it gave us TIME to get so much fodder into the mill as to make it interesting if nothing else. Moreover, Mindanao has such leverage NOW as to be even more interesting. And, all of Commander's writing on Islamic Banking is incredible in its presentation NOW. It is going to work for Native America as well.

We are also told that over in Labuan (off-shore Malaysia) they just about have clearance of our program. And yes, that is very good news.

I'm going to leave this because I feel better just visiting and sharing. Moreover, it is time to watch the next episode of New York Place.

The Colloids did NOT help the weather here; it looks like the "end is near" and that usually means the electricity will fail and I will WISH I had shut this down sooner.

Love and appreciation to each and all of you. If YOU can do it, WE CAN DO IT.—DJE in behalf of E-E

Physical Evidence Of Satanic Rituals

PHOENIX JOURNAL #9 (1989)

CHAPTER 20

REC. #1 SANANDA

MON., NOV. 13, 1989 7:00 A.M. YEAR 3, DAY

Sananda in Light, that we might resume our Journal. Greetings on this wondrous day within Creation. Let it be a most beautiful celebration of life. Blessings be in the truth of our words that we might touch the heart places of our brothers and lift the lamp of knowledge that freedom might abound.

LET US SPEAK OF ANIMALS

You have a heavy load in the past several pages, therefore, let us turn to the beginnings of sacrifice. As long as the Christians utilize rituals which are the same as the Satanists, you shall have this horrendous practice continued. When the Christians become Christians who celebrate life instead of death, so shall your peoples.

Satanic cults are most careful about calling attention to themselves. Your law enforcement officials and others have come upon physical evidence of their activities, however. The most commonly found evidence is mutilated animals, ritual sites, and robbed graves. This is "hard" evidence, dear friends—not something you call UFO demons from cosmic sectors.

Where UFOs actually do enter the picture is that your government realized that soon they would have to confront the cosmic alien cover-ups and presence. A mass attempt was made to play on the Satanic influence to bring panic and fear into an already anxious community of people. What you miss is that that which is perpetrated by the Satanic humans is so much more terrifying than anything you conjure, that you simply do not understand the problem. Brothers from the heavens would not have need of leaving residue or "bodies" lying about. I will say, however, that there have been many craft landings for the purpose of studying the practice of mutilations. There is great anxiety in the cosmic councils that your Earth problem is all but out of hand as to control—and I am sorry, but you are not a species which the cosmic people desire as integrated neighbors. You have been under most careful attention and monitoring. Remember, to correct a problem, the problem must be identified and your cosmic friends and relatives do not understand your fascination with either drugs or your brother's blood—leastly do they understand your fascination with a Christ's blood and flesh and intaking thereof. They see little difference in the practice of those who are of anti-Christ proclamation. Quite frankly, neither do we of the Lighted Brothers. The Christ of 2,000 years past came to show you truth and prove there is no death—and you have partaken of a great lie from onset. I and the hordes of heaven come again to repeat the declaration and tend the cycling of a planet. So be it.

Let us look at facts—historical facts—regarding animals for cult use. You must remember the definition of "cult" which simply means sect, family, band, group, congregation, members, flock, etc. Do not single out Satanists and mystics as cults, for you will be missing the point. Any Christian unit under a given doctrine is a cult; no more and no less.

During your 1970s is an excellent place to begin this portion because mutilations sightings became most epidemic, most especially in your country's Midwestern geographic location.

Usually the victims were dairy cows, but horses and beef cattle were also found dismembered. The theories flew; everything from UFOs to natural predators such as wolves, to pranksters doing it just to drive the local sheriff crazy. Part of the mystery was that in many cases footprints of the perpetrators were never found. In other cases, the animals were found miles from where they belonged.

Some things, however, must be quite clear in retrospect. The animals were killed and mutilated in a deliberate and skillful manner. Judging by what was done to the animals—what body parts were taken, the fact that blood was drained—Satanic cults must surely have played a major roll. The proper-sized organs to be utilized in cult rituals would of necessity be from your larger animals. A penis, for instance, from a small cat would not be proper for the ceremonies.

You will find that mutilations of animals hardly are considered news in this present time, although they continue today in great numbers. To put this in perspective, I must name some names for your ability to research.

Near Elkhart, Indiana, a farmer lost five head of cattle; someone had gone in and cut the vaginas out. He had one cow left, and he was guarding that cow with a shotgun.

Why would anyone cut out the sex organs? In Satanic religion, the sex organs are supposed to contain power. Satanism is a religion based on the hedonism and the belief that the release of sexual energy is one way for you to reach a higher consciousness. You want anything that can add power to your rituals. By taking the sexual organs of an animal, you have some of that energy for your own use.

After understanding what evidence to seek out, the local enforcement officers set about an intense search of the scene. They were able to build up indicators that there was a traditional occult group in the area. As it turned out in this instance, the animal mutilations occurred a couple of days before an important cult holiday.

METHOD OF OPERATION

Autopsy reports from the mutilated animals and informers' reports give the following picture: The occultists will stun the animal on his back with a high-powered electric probe which incapacitates the animal. Then they will spray freon on the animal's throat. The animal is living, but unable to respond. The heart continues to function. They then use an embalming tool (pump) to get the blood out. It is fast and most efficient. Often a farmer can make it to the scene within a few minutes, for there is often noise and cries from the animals. Within a matter of some three minutes a body can be evacuated of blood.

Do not be quick to consider UFOs, for you will be incorrect in your conclusions. Neither is the actual mutilation predominantly the work of Satanists. It is most often deliberate in nature, perpetrated by very human entities for a specific purpose.

Consider a report made to Sheriff Carl Stobaugh on 8-14-79 from Sheriff Gus Anglin (Van Buren Co.) Arkansas, chief investigator, Jerry Bradley (Falkner Co.), Sgt. King (ASP), and this officer, Ray Coffin, Chief Investigator, met with and interviewed a 23-year-old W/F whose identity must remain confidential for safety reasons, in reference to recent cattle mutilations in the area. The following story was related to the officers:

That for five years she was a higher echelon member of a Satanic-worshipping cult which was headquartered in Tulsa, Oklahoma. During her five years there she was involved numerous times in trips to outlying remote areas where cattle were killed and the blood drawn out by use of an old embalming machine, which they had converted to battery power. They also removed the cow's eyes, tongue, sex organs and sometimes the udder.

She related the cult she belonged to was quite wealthy and had a helicopter and several van-type trucks which were used in obtaining the organs and blood needed from the cows to be used in their rituals. She also stated that doctors, lawyers, veterinarians and other prominent persons belonged to this cult and were all taught by doctors and vets how to precisely cut the parts needed and exactly where to stick the needle to draw out the blood.

The blood was put into gallon jugs and kept cool for baptizing new cult members. They were baptized in the same manner in which most churches do except the baptismal vat would be filled with blood which had been extracted from the animals. The eyes taken were boiled and eaten by the cult members at rituals. The sex organs were used in the rituals, also, because the cult believes in free sex to everyone.

When using the helicopter, they sometimes picked up the cow by using a homemade, belt-type sling—and one man would go down and fasten it around the cow, and they would move it and drop it further down from where the mutilations occurred. This would account for there being no footprints or tracks.

When using the van trucks they would also have a telescoping lift which was about 200 feet in length mounted outside the truck and would use that to extend a man out to the cow, and he would mutilate it from a board platform on the end of the boom and would never touch the ground. The apparatus would telescope back into the vehicle much as a wheelchair lift and not be noticed.

She stated that they love the publicity that surrounds the mutilations—and as long as the publicity is in one area they will keep returning because they like to baffle law enforcement.

She stated that they would repeatedly go back to one farm if there were a number of roads coming into the area which would be accessible for a quick get-away route. If not, they usually hit one time and then moved on to another location. They sometimes did three or four cows a night.

The cult usually prefers the dairy cattle but will mutilate any type of cow when no dairy herds are easily found. They will also mutilate cattle which have died if they are still fresh and haven't started to deteriorate. They have mutilated bulls, horses, and dogs to get blood for their rituals. She left the cult about a year prior because one couple sacrificed their 15-month-old baby. They placed the little girl on a table at one of the rituals and placed oil on her body and cut her up with a large knife to prove their love for Satan. She said that after seeing this she realized that the cult was not for love and left. She was beaten by some cult members—a few months after being located—and was apparently left for dead.

She has agreed to cooperate in any way she can as long as her identity is kept a secret, because she fears for her life.

SITES

Locating an actual site used in Satanic rituals is not easy. First, sites are well hidden in out-of-the-way places. Second, if Satanists believe they have been discovered, they will destroy the site and move to another area. This is especially true of buildings that have been utilized for rituals. Some Satanists will move their sites on a regular basis. Third, many of the more prosperous Satanic cults ensure that their actions will not be detected by using private lands owned by members.

Many law enforcement agencies don't report Satanic sites in such a way that the information can be accumulated. If the site is in a park, for instance, it may be recorded as "vandalism" or "destruction of public property". Also, because not all police officers know what a site looks like, they may simply describe it as an area where people congregate.

The following is a direct quote from one officer, Tim Boyle:

"We run across a great number of sites because we patrol the parks. The most impressive site we've run across was in 1985 off Little Falls Parkway (Montgomery County, Maryland). One of our officers stumbled upon it. Very often our officers get out and walk around. They're encouraged to do that. He saw warning signs and walked in a little farther and found this circled area where the trees had been cut out. He just stopped there. He didn't want to deal with it. We tell our officers, now, if you don't want to deal with it, you don't have to. Cordon off the area like a crime scene, and call someone who can deal with it.

"We don't want to interfere with any police officer's religious beliefs, but you don't screw up a crime scene because of your beliefs.

"We don't believe this area was compromised. I asked the officer if he checked the ashes and he said, 'I got the hell out of there.' He got back and filed his report. (published herein).

EXCERPT OF REPORT RD#1417-14-1285

MARYLAND NATIONAL CAPITAL PARK POLICE

MONTGOMERY COUNTY DIVISION

TUES. 12-31-85, 1013 HOURS

CRIME: VANDALISM

On 12-31-85 at about 1013 hours, Lewis on routine patrol observed a worn foot path leading up a steep hill from the B&O railroad tracks (see area map). At the top of the hill, Lewis observed where suspect(s) unknown had cut about twenty sapling trees, value $10 each ($200 total), dug a pit about five feet by five feet by four feet, covered the pit with wood and metal and had spray-painted numerous messages and warnings. Some of the messages were "beware" "Go Back" "You're next" "DEATH 2 YOU" "BURN IN HELL" "SAC RELM RULES". (Investigators don't know what this phrase means.) There were numerous references to demonic and satanic matters such as "LUCIFER", "666", inverted crucifixes and a five-pointed star in a circle. There is also indication of burning and cages for animals.

Lewis left the scene as it was; there was evidence of suspect(s) being there within a few days (Jan. issue of Open University catalog) and no maintenance order has yet been submitted, pending development of suspect(s).

Officer Boyle went and investigated the scene. "They had cleared the trees. They had two fire pits and warnings all along the outside to keep people away. There was a stone altar with candle wax on it, pentagrams and "666" written on it. It had a perfectly done circle, exactly nine feet across. It was done by the book. A lot of work had gone into it. There were cages that were the right size to hold small animals. There were nooses off the trees. (Nooses are often found at Satanic sites because they contribute to the macabre ambience. They are not necessarily used to hang anything.) It was a good way in the woods off some railroad tracks.

"It was two miles from Secretary of State Shultz's house in an affluent area of Montgomery County. There was a large public outcry. People wanted to know what was going on. People called on us for the answers, and quite frankly we didn't have all the answers.

"At the time I said, 'Gentlemen, we don't know what we're doing. I know we have something serious, but I don't know exactly what, so let's handle it like a regular crime scene'.

That's what we did. We dug it out; we used metal detectors.

"We called some priests, but they didn't want to talk. The said to call the archdiocese, because they weren't permitted to talk about it.

"We're very fortunate that we had a good administration. The chief is former U.S. Park Police. He worked in Washington, Boston and New York. He was well traveled and understood that there was an upswing in this kind of crime. Although these aren't his exact words, he basically said that if we wanted to find out about it, we should get our ass in gear and find out about it. We were very fortunate that we had him. Our previous chief would have said, 'Screw it. I don't want to hear about that devil shit.'

"There was evidence that people had been there recently, but we didn't find any trace of bones, human or otherwise, in the pits. The site was fairly new.

"We now hold classes on occult crimes. We tell our officers that we have information from agencies in other states that people have been murdered in these kinds of areas so don't screw it up. We tell our officers that when they're investigating a site, especially one that's being used, be careful of radio communications. They sometimes put guards on the outside of the site who are supposed to have powers to know when the police are coming. We call the power 'Radio Shack scanner'. We have special procedures for radio communications when handling these incidents.

"We're not overwhelmed by Satanic activity, just like Montgomery County isn't overwhelmed with a lot of murders either, but you have to know how to investigate them.

"We did finally work up a suspect who has since moved out of the area. We believe he's practicing his religion elsewhere."

SANANDA

Why am I requiring all of this information? Because you must know what it is you look for. You have grown beyond the allowance of calling it childhood vandalism. If you do not know of that which to seek, you will continue to believe that Cosmic Brothers or nasty little children are playing games and tricks. YOU ARE DEALING WITH SATAN, SATAN'S DRUMMERS AND SATAN'S CHILDREN. OPEN YOUR EYES AND LEARN ALL YOU CAN—INFORMATION AND KNOWLEDGE IS YOUR TOOL—LIGHT IS YOUR WEAPON, FOR SATAN MUST WORK HIS "MAGIC" IN DARK PLACES. NO, DHARMA, WE WILL STOP WHEN WE ARE FINISHED AND NOT UNTIL ALL OF OUR POINTS ARE MADE IN FULL. IT IS DISTASTEFUL BUT YOU ONES MUST STOP HIDING AND COME FORTH AND FACE TRUTH. LET US CONTINUE, PLEASE. BLESSINGS AND OBJECTIVITY UNTO YOU, CHELA—WE MUST GO ON.

I will not do too much more quoting but I will name names, for you ones must know it is an Earth matter and stop dreaming fantasies of fairies and goblins. These are very real human beings and most dangerous indeed. There is nothing too horrendous to prevent their activities. Be most cautious if you find evidence—most cautious indeed—and NEVER go into any area of action without a group of well-armed persons. They will not hesitate one moment to kill and destroy all evidence—ALL. A person will simply have vanished with all traces wiped away—it happens many times EVERY DAY.

ANOTHER CASE, GOLDEN GATE PARK, CALIFORNIA

Police officers from the Richmond station, which takes in some of the Golden Gate Park, received a report of a woman screaming at Julius Kahn playground. This park sits at the edge of the Presidio (you should have chills about now!). When they responded they didn't find anything at first. They saw a gardener's shed that had a light on, and they could hear music coming from inside. There was nobody inside, but they found a pentagram on the floor with a circle perfectly drawn around it and another circle around that. There was also some foreign writing in the circle. There was nothing else that would have suggested anything occult except this circle that was obviously used for some workings.

Later the gardener was queried and was most cooperative—he claimed to be a "hippie" which was most unusual since this incident took place in the 1980s. The gardener claimed to have no knowledge of any activities.

Pay careful attention to what your Park Rangers report, for they are the ones in a perfect position to see results of Satanic activities. Some will even be on patrol while actual rituals are underway or at the breaking up of such ritual services. One such officer encountered a group just leaving the park and later found where they had gathered around a fire, candles were all around and a pentagram was cut into the ground. All participants vanished and were never located.

By the Pasadena Freeway there are drainage ditches that drain into the arroyo. If you walk there, be most careful indeed, you'll see Satanic graffiti, evidence of red and black candle wax as well as the usual white. You will almost always find evidence of sacrificial offerings. There will be bones of animals about the area.

Use your intelligence and think where you would go to honor the devil. You would go where you can either be as he or where you can more heinously desecrate. So you would most surely hold your services in places that are moldy, slimy and that stink of rotteness and dung. Or you would work your way somehow within a group that can function within a given "house or temple of God". You would certainly go nowhere to honor the beauty of God, only to desecrate.

This activity is most wondrous to kids who are bored and out for a lark; therefore, information is often obtained from them regarding these meetings.

A couple of kids were picked up for shoplifting (Thou shalt not steal!), and one told all about a site where he and his friends would hold rituals. This was right in the middle of things in California.

The site was about a quarter of a mile into the woods right off a main avenue. There was a clearing where there had once been a building, for there was a large cement slab. There was a pentagram inside a circle of exactly nine feet in size, painted in white; therefore, someone knew the rules.

There was a brick wall that was used as an altar. You could tell because there was candle wax all over everything. Officers investigating these places are following these incidents because they have had to face the unbelievable "stuff" the kids are into.

In the Golden Gate National Recreation Area a case incident record shows that there was observed a place set up for devil worship in an open bunker area. The area had a figurine painted on the floor. Someone had also drilled holes in the ceiling and plugged them with wooden dowels which had ropes attached which appeared to be for restraining people. There were also numerous candles, athames and other artifacts. This particular place also had bedding in an adjacent room.

Many instances are reported on Mount Lemmon and Saguaro National Monument West. Mostly the sites are crude with inverted crosses and fire pits, but other ritual objects are carefully removed.

Reports at Saquaro National Monument West are constant. Due to the heavy cactus growth and more lenient entrance requirements, local witches find it is a good place to have ceremonies. Further, it becomes most difficult for monitoring because some Native American groups have ceremonies there also.

One site was found which had cremated bones. However, according to a local pathologist, they appeared like commercial cremation remains.

HOW CAN YOU ONES OVERLOOK THE OBVIOUS SO OFTEN? RECENT CASES OF IRREGULARITIES IN CREMATORIALS IN LOS ANGELES ARE SO OBVIOUS THAT YOU MISS IT. A MOST PROPITIOUS PLACE FOR OBTAINING HUMAN REMAINS IS FROM A CREMATORIUM—AND YOU ONES TURN AWAY FROM IT AS IF IT WERE NOT PRESENT.

ALSO, CLOSED-COFFIN BURIALS ARE WONDROUS OPPORTUNITIES FOR BODY ACQUISITION AND FRANKLY, OFTENTIMES THE BODY IS REMOVED FROM A COFFIN BEFORE (OR FOLLOWING) BURIAL—MOST OFTEN BEFORE THE DIRT IS REPLACED.

Now let me point out something most important to you who desire to honor things such as that which you called “Harmonic Convergence”. In the above-named park, following the gatherings to hold hands and chant beautiful words of love, there were found many areas containing cremation remains. It becomes most difficult for the dedicated officers to discern which is in love and which is placed there in destructive hate.

Making it most difficult for the Native Americans is an incident which I will relay to you now.

Mount Lemmon is a prominent landmark. In 1988, for instance, a group of middle-teenagers from Catalina City just north of Tucson gathered at that place. There was a professor at the university who teaches religious studies, and he had built a full-scale Sioux sweat lodge. They located that and thought it would be a good place to have their meetings. They ended up sacrificing a few goats and some chickens at the least. No one will admit to anything and no one will even reveal whether or not there were adult advisors present. Do you see how painful this is to the Native American who is practicing his honor to God?

CEMETERIES

Cemetery thefts and desecrations are considered one of the most heinous crimes by your society. Often, youngsters who want to express their anger in the most destructive and provocative way will vandalize cemeteries and mausoleums. Sometimes the destruction is done for a different reason, however, by adults as well as teenagers for the express purpose of obtaining human remains—especially skulls—for ritual use.

In the Hollywood Mausoleum, where your revered Rudolph Valentino is buried—and after causing over $6,500 worth of damage—someone crawled two hundred feet down a dark, damp corridor to steal a head. Now why wouldn't the cemetery report such? Obviously, it would ruin business wouldn't it?

Every Saturday the 14th, all poorly-guarded cemeteries are looted and vandalized. There will always be found opened graves, often with the left hand missing from the corpse. The left hand in Satanic circles is called “the hand of glory”. In your old days a part of the rituals included the taking of the left hand, drying it and then lighting the fingers on an altar. This is supposed to pay homage to the devil, because the left hand is the path of the devil and the right hand is the path of righteousness. This supposedly gave the devil absolute domain. This represents “his” light. This is exactly what these people are doing these days.

Dharma, you will note that the baby is on its way now, so I will release you to attend Dalene at the hospital—I suggest you move in a rapid but safe manner. So be it, for we shall be there in great force. Blessings and love unto you that all may be in perfections. Adonai

I AM SANANDA

I request that these things of the writings be withdrawn from your attention. So be it.

CHAPTER 21

REC. #1 SANANDA

WED., NOV. 5, 1989 7:00 A.M. YEAR 3, DAY 091

Peace. It is Sananda here to continue with our Journal. You ones must understand that for all pretenses the ceremonies of the Satanic groups are, in some instances, so nearly like some of your more ritualistic groups, i.e. the Catholic mass, that unless you HEAR the words involved, you would think it the beginnings of the same. Also, you might tend to relegate it to the corner of “Native” reverence. Do be most observant of symbols, especially as the children bring them forth—for no child will “accidentally” draw such pictures. So be it. Let us discuss a few of the rituals that you might know of that which you tend and items of which to be aware.

RITUALS

Let us speak first of the “Baptism” ceremony for children. It will be good, Dharma, just to quote it as we want to get this Journal laid aside within the week, please.

Let us just explore the opening statement of the ritual which will be sufficient:

“In the name of Satan, Lucifer, Belial, Leviathan and all the demons, named and nameless, walkers in the velvet darkness, harken to us, O dim and shadowy things, wraith-like, twisted, half-seen creatures, glimpsed beyond the foggy veil of time and spaceless night. Draw near, attend us on this night of fledgling sovereignty. Welcome a new and worthy brother, creature of exquisite magic light. Join us in our welcome. With us say: Welcome to you, child of joy, sweet passion's son, product of the dark and musk filled night, ecstasy's delight. Welcome to you, sorcerer most natural and true magician. Your tiny hands have strength to pull the crumbling vaults of spurious heavens down and from their shards erect a monument to your own sweet indulgence. Your honesty entitles you to well deserved dominion o'er a world filled with frightened, cowering men.”

Let us further quote from Det. Pat Metoyer of California (Van Nuys), for the description of a baptism ceremony is quite picturesque and then we can pass it by.

“I got introduced to a lady whose name was Dia, from the Church of Satan in Van Nuys. I went to a ritual where a six-week-old baby was baptized into the Church of Satan. They tried to find one (a ritual) to show me that Satanism was a real religion. They came up with the baptism. They wouldn't let me attend any other meetings that they had.

“It started at midnight. I got there; it was at a small home. One of the bedrooms had been converted into a sacristy. The walls, ceiling and floor were in matte black. Iridescent paint had been splattered on the ceiling and walls. Even if you put an eight-thousand-watt bulb in that room it would have been dark. There was a huge mural of Satan on the wall. It was a person with human features, red, with horns. There was an altar made of wood, painted matte black. There was the Satanic Bible, black and white candles, a bell and a chalice. They told me not to touch the altar because I was unclean.

“The north wall had effigies of persons who had turned on the organization or who had been brought to the group's attention by one of the members. There was someone's supposed liver in wax with pins in it.

“The only part that got to me initially was that they insisted on taking my photograph. No picture, no come in. So they took my picture. I smiled for them, really no big deal. The reason they wanted my picture was in the event I turn on them at some point they can use that in lieu of fingernail clippings or something else.

“Then they tried to frighten me by saying, ‘In the past we've had people who didn't believe us so we took their photograph and put it in the freezer, and they would get cold chills. Then we would put it in the oven and they would get hot flashes.’ I said ‘Okay’ to all this bullshit.

“Then Dia said, ‘I don't think you believe us.’ I said, ‘That's true. I don't.’ She says, ‘If my aura were to attack you, would that make you a believer?’ I said, ‘No, it wouldn't.’ She said, ‘Turn your back to me, and you will feel my power.’ I turned around and faced the wall. My back was to her. She said, ‘Can you feel anything?’

‘No.’

‘How about now?’

‘No.’

‘How about now?’

‘No.’

‘Now I'm sure you can feel something.’ She was getting frustrated—and I could tell she was getting frustrated. The people there were getting a little antsy. So I said, ‘Ah yes, I can feel it,’ even though I didn't.

“She said, ‘Thank you. You have a little stronger will than I thought,’ as if I was trying to play some mental head game with her.

“You have to equate that with you going to my church, St. John's, and during the course of the mass you get up laughing or screaming. The parishioners are not going to take very kindly to that. It's inappropriate behavior. I felt that my action of not feeling her power was inappropriate to their church, so I said I did. They performed the baptism which seemed like a lot of mumbo-jumbo as they did the opening (stated above).

“At the end they had this meeting where they sit around and talk about what Satan had done for them. People would tell what happened to them since the last meeting. They would tell about the demands they had made to Satan. You never ask Satan, you demand. In other religions you make a petition, you ask for something. Here you demand it. That's what they say they like about Satanism. You never get on your knees. You say, ‘Satan, give me this!’”

Satan has been granted power over the Earth, according to your Old Testament. Therefore they will pay him homage because he is closer to them than God up in heaven somewhere. They are highly “religious” people. Their rituals are precise in intent and the people most devout.

It is here that you come into conflict, for as we observe your Catholic Mass, you will find a most spiritual ceremony, too. By praying and chanting, the congregation and priest are bringing into the church the spirit of Christ. You have the drinking of wine which symbolizes the blood of Christ and the host which symbolizes the taking of mine flesh. Can you even begin to understand how horrendous this is unto mine senses?

The use of blood in Satanic rituals is very important. According to the beliefs, blood contains the life force. If you have it, you have power. They drink it in their rituals and pour it over themselves. You see, man thus far, seems to be unable to isolate and revere the true life source which is totally separate from any physical manifestation.

The same is true in the sacrificing of people. When they sacrifice someone, for the instant just before they die, they supposedly emit their life energy. That power, Satanists believe, can be harnessed for their use. They believe babies are best because babies are pure; they haven't sinned or been corrupted yet. They possess a higher power than adults. When you sacrifice a baby, you get greater power than if you sacrificed an adult. One of the most prized possessions of a Satanist is a candle made from the fat of an unbaptized baby.

They believe that with specific body parts they can use the power contained therein. The head may contain the spirit, and the heart may contain the soul. These are the things that would allow them to be in control. They like to have a finger of the left hand. It is a small symbol of the “left path” which can easily be kept on their person.

A LITTLE CASE STORY OF KIDS AT WORK

This story comes from an officer, Darlyne Pettinicchio:

“This one kid told me about something that happened to her when she was thirteen years old. She's fifteen now (1988). Her parents were divorced. Neither one is really interested in the kid. The mother is involved in some lesbian relationship, and the kid is always running off. From her house, she would look down the hill and see a bunch of kids. They looked like they were always having fun. So, she ended up running away and meeting up with them.

“They had a little cult. The cults I deal with are not formal

Satanic cults. They're kids who get together, take a little from this book and that book, and add a little of their own. They get a nineteen-year-old to be the high priest, and they dabble. In this instance they had a twenty-one-year-old high priest.

"She said one night they brought in three kids who were loaded, and they were going to have a ritual. She said that she was always loaded when she was with this group. She couldn't stand to do it otherwise. I asked how loaded they were. I was trying to get an idea. She said they had to carry them in.

"They brought them in and apparently these three had ripped off the little Satanists in a dope deal. They started the ritual; they rang the bell, they did an invocation to Satan. Then they went out to the hills—she drew me a map—where there was a chain and some trees. They had cans of gasoline, and they did the ritual and brought one guy out and threw him in the middle. They all had candles, and the high priest threw the candle on him and he was torched like that. The girl said he wasn't that loaded that he wasn't screaming and yelling. They just let him burn.

"She said they brought another kid out, a girl, and one of the boys was feeling her up, she got sick and left. She said, 'I knew the same thing was going to happen to me.'

"I tried to get the Los Angeles Sheriff's Office to talk to the kid. Two officers were willing to talk to her—but the public defender stepped in and said no. They would not let her talk. They represented her in another case, and they were afraid that they were going to press charges on her. That wasn't the case, but they wouldn't believe it. The police weren't going to file charges, they just wanted the information. (The case is still under investigation.)"

AND WHERE ARE YOUR CHILDREN ON THEIR PLAY-TIME?

PHYSICAL EVIDENCE

Gruesome? Too much to read? Well, this is what some of your kiddies are doing—and they are being taught the finer points and how-tos by someone higher up! NO, DEAR ONES, YOU DO NOT HAVE SOMEONE WHO IS A CHRIST TO SUFFER ALL OF YOUR RESPONSIBILITIES FOR YOU THAT YOU CAN DO THAT WHICH YOU PLEASE AND THEN FLOAT UP TO HEAVEN IN A LOVELY CLOUDBANK. YOU HAVE A GOD OF JUSTICE; AND YOU SHALL STAND IN YOUR NAKED SOUL BEFORE THAT GOD AND CREATION—AND YE SHALL SPEAK OF THINE OWN JUDGMENT! YE WHO HIDE OF YOUR HEADS AND PRETEND IT WILL GO AWAY, BEAR OF THE BURDEN THE SAME AS THOSE WHO KNOW AND "ALLOW". EVIL "ALLOWED" IS NOT PERMITTED AND ANYONE WHO TELLS YOU OTHERWISE IS FURTHERING THE EVIL WHETHER IN KNOWLEDGE OR UNWITTINGLY. THESE THINGS ARE NOT ALRIGHT! THEY ARE WRONG!

LUCAS COUNTY, TOLEDO, OHIO

I shall preserve the identity of the investigator in this case but it is on file if ones who research are inclined to go to such extent. Its dateline: April 22, 1985, Lucas County Sheriff's Department.

Investigation: Investigator will be denoted by the letter I and the responder by the letter X. It is much more appropriate if you ones of human format read it directly from the human aspect.

I: Now we would like you to speak to us as best you can. The reason why we are here, on last Wednesday I believe it was, the 17th of April, Mrs. Jones (pseudonym, friend of X) contacted me regarding some activity that has been going on in Lucas County, western Lucas County, for a number of years in which there is a group of people. I'll refer to them as a cult that worships Satan.

Right?

X: Right.

I: And part of their activities involve regular masses, meetings, wedding rituals and, on particular days of the year which are important to this group of people, there are human sacrifices. Right?

X: Yes.

I: Okay. Did you have any prior contact with these types of people prior to 1969?

X: Yes. The man that I married in 1965, his father belonged to Satan.

I: Where was that?

X: Down south of the state.

I: Was your husband a member of the group?

X: No.

I: Did he know of your involvement?

X: Yes. He drove me to the meetings, but he chose not to participate.

I: Who got you involved in the Laredo group if it wasn't your husband?

X: My father-in-law. I met a woman named Linda, and she was involved in it. I met other people in Perryville who were invited and that's how I got involved in this area.

I: How big was the group in Toledo?

X: About 100 to 200, but we broke up into groups of around 30 for our meetings.

I: Where did you meet?

X: There was a house right beside a (place of business and address withheld for this Journal). The two buildings connected.

I: This is where the meetings took place?

X: Yes. We played games, blood-draining games.

I: Blood-draining? What do you mean?

X: They need blood for a lot of things. When you bring somebody in for an initiation, you have to take this blood and wash them down with it. They stand on a star made inside a circle, and they wash them down with this blood.

I: Where did this blood come from?

X: It was drained mostly from goats.

I: If you brought in a new recruit, how would you check up on him?

X: There are policemen, members of the cult. Their contribution to the cult would be police checks.

I: Do you have human sacrifices?

X: Yes, mostly babies.

I: Where are the sacrifices held?

X: Houses in the woods.

I: How do you prevent someone from seeing the ceremony?

X: We have guards. They would be watching for "breakers". There are three rings of guards. The first would stop somebody, tell him he's on private property. The second would try to run you off. He might take a shot at you, but it would be just to scare you. The third would kill you.

NOW HOLD TO YOUR HATS

Capt. Dale Griffis gives the following: "I knew things about the Toledo area from my sources that the Sheriff's Department didn't know.

"I said to (Marv), 'That's great. I'll give you an hour-and-a-half lecture on the occult, and I'll get the hell home.' So I gave the Lucas County sheriff's detectives a lecture, and I was ready to go home when Marv says to me, 'We've been holding one thing back. There's going to be a sacrifice tonight. In about an hour.'

"We went to an area of houses near woods and open fields. I told them that if anything is going to happen it will be between midnight and 1 A.M. They had deployed the men around the perimeter.

"I'm going to tell you one last thing. The interviews talked about guards. Instead of a horn of plenty or a sword, he's going to have a shotgun. I don't want you guys going in there unless you've got a Startron (a device that lets you see in the dark) or something like that. They didn't have any of that stuff. They didn't realize they were dealing with dedicated people.

"They had seven men plus Marv and me. Three people on one side, two north of us, two south of us. In the middle were woods, houses and an open area. We had agreed to meet at one o'clock.

"At five minutes to midnight, the lights in the houses started going on, one by one. At one minute to midnight a dog howled and gurgled. That was all I saw or heard.

"About one o'clock we made the pickup, and I debriefed these people. The guys nearest the houses were terrified. They had gone flaky. They said that at the stroke of midnight a girl screamed and they heard people—there must have been thirty to forty people—chanting 'More, more, more'. They were about three hundred feet away; we were about fifteen hundred feet away.

"Back at the station I told them that there was something out there. I said, 'Know who the players are before you move in, because if you don't, if you muddy up the waters, they'll go underground, and you'll never find anything. You've possibly got conspiracy for murder, and God knows what else.'

"They said they heard about another place a mile-and-a-half away where people have been spotted in the woods, down an abandoned lane. They heard they may have been burying some of their stuff there.

"The next holiday that came up, I gave them my Startrons. There were people chanting in robes and hoods, the whole bit. Sure enough, in a tree they spotted someone who looked like he had an automatic weapon. I felt better about telling them not to go into the woods on the first occasion. They would have been outgunned.

"I had given a lecture in Toledo a short time later, and they came to me and said they were going in. I said, 'Are you sure you know who the players are?' and they said yes. I said, 'Make damn sure you do.'

"I'm at work, and I get a phone call from the press. They ask, 'What is your part in the thing that's going on in Toledo?' I said, 'What thing that's going on in Toledo?' He said, 'They're digging for bodies.'

'They're what? I don't know anything about it.'

"I got a call from one of the cops who tells me, 'We're not finding anything.' I said, 'What do you want me to do?' 'You're the one who said it would be there.' I said, 'Do you know what you're looking for?' He said, 'We think...'

"I started screaming at him, 'What do you mean, you think?'

"They described the area as blocked off with red thread, black thread and white thread. All together it was a big area and inside that area was a smaller area encircled with just black thread. It's about five hundred by five hundred and right in the middle of a thicket.

"I got a call from Marv, 'Can you come up here?' I said, 'When I'm done working here I can.'

"They sent Life Flight (the medical evacuation helicopter) for me. We get up there, make a pass over the area, and I saw mini-cam after mini-cam. I wanted to get the hell home. They had been digging for many hours before I arrived. They had bulldozers, backhoes, all kinds of equipment.

"The spot where they were digging was totally new to me. It was the spot where they had seen the large group of hooded people, not far from the Michigan border. Keep in mind that Sheriff Telb did not know they were going to search that day. Marvin Reams was out of town.

"The following day they tell me it's worse today than yesterday, and I tell them, 'Hey, I didn't tell you to dig. Give me some space.' I'm getting static from my own mayor who thinks I'm a nut and would like a piece of me.

"I had my son, Dale, go up with me. I kick myself in the ass because I took him there, too. Ever since that day, he developed heart troubles that he got from ticks in the woods. Dale is there twenty minutes, and he finds a forty-by-twenty building they hadn't even found. The building is six-foot up and in the middle of a bunch of trees. The trees have chains attached to them. It looked like they were used to chain people. There were all kinds of occult symbols on the building.

"I yelled at these people, 'Didn't you do a good search? What the hell's wrong with you?'"

"I told Telb, 'Do yourself a favor. Call the search off. Get these people out of here, and I'll come back and we'll do a search. Take your lumps and let it die.' Telb was set up to look stupid, I believe, by someone who wanted his job (and was on the inside).

"I got my ass kicked from one end to the other when nothing was found. I looked like a real ass, especially in the Columbus Dispatch a few days later."

Foolish, foolish people running about playing games is so very dangerous and causes more discrediting. Pay attention to what was printed in the paper and shudder, because this is the way it is usually handled—again, there are always insiders.

SATANIC MURDERS: A GREAT STORY THAT JUST WASN'T THERE

By James Breiner, Dispatch Assistant Metro Editor

TOLEDO—Hanging from a tree branch next to a rural Lucas County road was what for all the world appeared to be a piece of red string, perhaps six inches long.

It wasn't knotted or arranged in any way. It just hung there about eye level, waiting for the wind to carry it to the ground or for an expert on Satanism to call it a tool of devil worship and possible evidence of ritual murders.

Some 50 people gathered around the string last week and listened as Dale Griffis, a Tiffin, Ohio, police investigator who has a reputation as an expert on Satanism, told them that red string is used to mark boundaries of Satanic ceremonies.

Then Griffis, whose public-relations polish shows his experience in dealing with the news media, did something police investigators rarely do. He led this pack of journalists back into the woods to what is known in the trade as a crime scene and displayed some gay pieces of evidence gathered.

This makes great tape for television and great pictures for newspapers.

The tramp through the woods resembled a nature hike, with Griffis pointing out the sights. Investigators rarely do this sort of thing for fear of disturbing evidence.

Griffis has played a big role in investigating what Lucas County Sheriff James Telb described as the possibility of 50 to 75 ritual murders, many of them supposedly involving newborn infants in a wooded area west of Toledo.

Telb sought Griffis' advice during the three-month investigation marked by reports from several informants who said they were members of a 200-person cult. Telb had Griffis flown in by helicopter Thursday to view suspected sites.

Telb still has no bodies and no other physical evidence that any murders took place, except the reports from informants, none of whom actually witnessed any killings. He stopped digging Friday but said he is still investigating.

What Telb does have is a collection of objects, some odd and some commonplace, that Griffis says are evidence of Satanic rituals.

Take the knife for example. It was found in the trash-littered, ramshackle vacant house a few hundred yards from the alleged mass grave sites.

The 6-inch blade has a somewhat unusual shape, slightly curved and tapering at the point. The handle is wooden. To someone unfamiliar with Satanic cults it looks like an odd kind of kitchen knife. Griffis said it was an athame, a ritual dagger.

When asked what made this knife an athame, Griffis said, "Any kind of knife can be an athame, even a steak knife."

Griffis said he has studied Satanic cults for about eight years and did his doctoral thesis on the subject. Police departments all over the country have sought his advice when confronted with examples of mutilated animals and desecrated graves as well as related drug or sex activities, he said.

At one point, Griffis led the journalists to a small plot of ground set off by several stakes with red string attached.

To the uninitiated, it might have been a failed vegetable garden, but Griffis said it was a ceremonial ground used by the Satanists. A small metal can stood in the center. Griffis said it was used for burning, but there was nothing in it.

In a vacant cinder-block house near the staked area, investigators found a sheet of tin with several lines of letters written backwards. Sheriff's deputies said these are Satanic symbols, but they can't decipher them.

Also found in this area was a headless doll with its feet nailed to a board and a five-pointed metal star tied to its wrists with red string. The star, Griffis said, is a Satanic symbol. A rag and a toy telephone receiver also were attached to it. Griffis said the doll is used in a death ritual.

As for the rag and telephone, he said, "I'm still trying to work that out."

For the skeptical who say that Satanic ritual murders are more rumor than substance, Griffis points to a highly publicized case in Riverhead, New York, in which a teenager was stabbed to death by another teen in what was billed as a Satanic ritual.

Further quoting from the article by Mr. Breiner of an article excerpted from a previous publication:

"On July 4, 1984, police found the body of Gary Lauwers, seventeen, in a shallow grave in a wooded area of Northport on New York's Long Island. According to a statement to police, Ricky Kasso, seventeen, admitted killing Lauwers by stabbing him in the face and cutting out his eyes." (I have already referred to this incident prior to this.) "Kasso said he screamed at Lauwers, 'Say you love Satan', before the boy was killed in a Satanic ritual.

"Kasso and at least twenty other people had belonged for several years to a Satanic cult called 'Knights of the Black Circle', which had previously held rituals in which they sacrificed animals. In 1981, police found the burned carcass of a baby goat on a picnic table in a park where the group often congregated. The group also had painted pentagrams, inverted crosses, and other Satanic symbols in the park. Kasso had an inverted cross tattooed on his arm and had been arrested the previous April for digging up graves for use in rituals. He had stolen a skull and left hand from a corpse.

"Also arrested with Kasso was James Troiano, eighteen, who police say held the victim down while he was being murdered. Kasso told police that Lauwers had stolen ten bags of angel dust from him.

"Kasso committed suicide by hanging himself in his cell several hours after his arraignment. Troiano was acquitted of second-degree murder charges less than a year later in a highly publicized trial in Riverhead. A third youth, Albert Quinones, witnessed the murder and had been granted immunity for his testimony."

Continuation of original press release:

The other example Griffis used was the Charles Manson gang which committed a series of murders in 1969 in Southern California.

So far, there is no physical evidence that anything of this type has happened in Toledo.

Although Telb called off the search, he defended his action in executing a search warrant for a suspected cultist and the unsuccessful search for bodies.

He said there was information that a ritual murder would take place this weekend to coincide with the summer solstice.

"It was too early, based on the information we had, but we couldn't wait until Monday and find that someone had been sacrificed," he said. [END QUOTING]

Do you begin to see how difficult it is? There is never supposed to be evidence left of physical body. If there are bodies found in cult rituals, it is by accident or deliberate intent—or, there is no way to secretly dispose of the body due to publicity, etc.

Capt. Dale Griffis continues regarding this case, "Saturday I went back there with Marv. We pulled up some floorboards on another house and found hatchets, knives. All had a substance on them that was red in color.

"Three weeks later I put out the word to my sources that I'm angry. I want some answers. I wanted to know what was going on up there. I got back reports that we were in the right church, wrong pew. I also got reports that some occult members were near the search team. Were they moving stuff out the back while we were looking at the front? The report is that there are plenty of pieces of evidence around Toledo that there have been many murders—there are bodies but they are stashed very well and have not been found nor are they likely to be discovered.

"It wasn't made public (all this latter information and evidence) because we wanted the whole mess to be over. After the digging incident we just wanted to let the whole thing drop because it has become a circus.

"We found seventy-two left shoes. There was only one man's shoe, the rest were women's and babies'. There was no possibility that the shoes were from a shoe store. There were no tags on the shoes. Some had signs of being a little worn from use. We found six or seven athames.

"Egyptologists will tell you that they find clothes, neatly pressed and folded, in mummy cases. Why? For use in the afterlife. Egyptians believe in the afterlife. So do most Satanists. In the Satanic religion, there's an important difference between the right and left side of the body. When you die, the left side of the body is for Satan; the right side is for God.

"I can't tell you for sure that people were sacrificed. I can only tell you what we found." The Sheriff's department continues to keep this case open.

I have only one last comment before we close this portion, Dharma. Realize this has been included because it must become evident that this reality is taken most lightly, partly from fear. Further, you must realize that when groups are interviewed on your television programs they will, of course, tell you they have no such sacrifices nor do they believe in an afterlife. This is untruth.

Again referring to baptism: You must keep our discussion regarding animal mutilation and blood withdrawal uppermost in mind. Most group rituals of baptism do not merely wipe blood on the member—they are immersed in a vat of blood. Each service requires new blood which requires a great quantity. Some quantity is purchased from slaughter houses under the pretense of purchasing for pet foods and other items which are extracted from blood in other industries. You must become aware.

Let us take a break. We will give you some most disgusting case presentations and then I will give you symbols with which you must become familiar. Further, if you are a parent of a youngster—I request you simply go to your local grocery market, to the news-stand and browse at that which your young skateboarders, etc. are reading these days. It might surprise you greatly. The older teens are going through an immediate "thing" about "mother's milk"—you ones better get those blinders OFF! SO BE IT—AND PEACE BE UNTO YOU.

Please call, Dharma, when you are prepared to continue.

BUSH: OPPOSITION SHOULD AVOID KABUL

By Ron Fournier, Detroit Free Press, 11/11/01

NEW YORK (AP)—President Bush said Saturday that northern alliance forces battling the Taliban in Afghanistan should steer clear of the capital city of Kabul, part of an effort to assure that power is eventually shared among the various tribes of the country.

“We will encourage our friends to head south... but not into the city of Kabul itself,” Bush said at a news conference one day after northern alliance forces claimed the strategic city of Mazar-e-Sharif about 200 miles from the Afghan capital.

Bush made his comments in a session with Pakistani President Pervez Musharraf, who swiftly agreed that the northern alliance must not move into Kabul. The Pakistani leader said if they do, “we’ll see the same kind of atrocities being perpetuated against the people there” as after the Soviet Union left Afghanistan more than a decade ago.

With his remarks, Bush acknowledged for the first time what aides said has been the military strategy from the start to keep the northern alliance from taking Kabul without some kind of post-Taliban governing arrangement being in place that would involve various segments of Afghan society. The policy underscores concern with nation’s long history of infighting and tribal animosities.

Northern alliance fighters relied heavily on American bombing and other assistance in the successful push against Mazar-e-Sharif, and presumably would need assistance to move successfully against the capital.

Bush said he didn’t know whether Osama bin Laden has nuclear weapons, as the terrorist mastermind claimed in a recent interview with a Pakistani journalist. “The only thing I know for certain about him is he’s evil” and that is “all the more reason to pursue him diligently,” the president said.

Bush lavished praise on Musharraf after a private meeting, and opened the news conference with an announcement he was supporting $1 billion in economic assistance to Pakistan, as well as debt relief.

“In our hour of need just after the terrorist attacks on Sept. 11, President Musharraf quickly condemned the evil-doers,” Bush said. “He has shown even greater courage in the weeks since.” He added that Musharraf is “committed to restore democracy in Pakistan”.

For his part, Musharraf said the two men had discussed “Pakistan’s difficulties from the fallout of whatever is happening in our region,” an apparent reference to the anti-American sentiment evident among Taliban supporters, particularly along the Pakistan-Afghanistan border.

The words of support and pledge of funds were fresh indication of the favor that Musharraf—shunned two years ago by President Clinton—has gained since leading his country firmly into the coalition against terrorism being waged in next-door Afghanistan.

Bush was asked about the status of Kabul one day after Secretary of State Colin Powell said the capital should be an “open city” in the post-Taliban era.

He said he and Musharraf share the view that “any power arrangement must be shared with the different tribes within Afghanistan, and a key signal of that will be how the city of Kabul is treated.”

Afghanistan is comprised of numerous ethnic tribes, all of them maneuvering for position in the post-Taliban era they are battling to bring about. Northern alliance groups include Uzbeks, Tajiks and others, while the Pashtun are predominant in the southern part of the country.

Bush passed up an opportunity to comment on Musharraf’s assertion that atrocities might follow if the northern alliance forces moved into Kabul, which is largely Pashtun.

Bush also said the two leaders had discussed Kashmir, a disputed border region claimed by both Pakistan and India, and that the United States “will do what we can to bring parties together.”

Bush stressed that the United States can still accomplish its war aims if the northern alliance does not enter Kabul.

The two presidents met in conjunction with a United Nations General Assembly session, delayed in the aftermath of the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks. Bush addressed the world body earlier in the day, warning all nations they are possible targets of terrorism and urging them to join in the worldwide battle to prevent more attacks.

Heading into the session with Bush, Musharraf had sought military and economic assistance from the United States—and also made clear he opposes any move by the northern alliance opposition forces to enter Kabul.

In addition, he has warned that scenes of civilian suffering—the result of wayward American bombs—beamed by satellite television throughout the world are hurting the coalition’s cause.

Among the concessions sought by Musharraf was the release of 28 American F-16 fighters sold to Pakistan in the 1980s, when it was an ally against the Soviet Union. The planes were withheld by Congress because the Pakistan developed nuclear weapons. Bush did not address the issue at the news conference, but aides said he did not intend to release the planes.

Prior to the meeting, Bush had waived the last remaining sanctions put in place against Pakistan in the 1990s, including some imposed after Musharraf took power in a 1999 military coup.

Administration officials said in advance the administration planned to announce additional aid in the range of $300 million to $500 million. Bush earlier had committed $100 million in economic assistance. The United States and Pakistan also recently rescheduled $379 million of Pakistan’s debt of about $3 billion to the United States.

[JR: Pakistan got chump change (between $300M and $500M) for joining us in our war against terrorism. Their $3B debt to the U.S. has not been retired and they still don’t have the 28 American F-16 fighter they coveted. Bush may call bin Laden evil but he was our well trained CIA/Mossad hired gun in our covert war against the Russians in Afghanistan. One can only speculate what of Bush’s “war aims” will not be met if the northern alliance does enter Kabul. You can bet that the elite masterminds in the secret chambers have plan B ready to go. Their goals and the issues will be clearly defined by the devious minds at the Tavistock Institute, or as GCH might say, Gotcha Institute for sheeple’s indoctrination.]

ARAB SATELLITE CHANNEL AL-JAZEERA’S OFFICE IN AFGHAN CAPITAL DESTROYED BY MISSILE

By Kathy Gannon, SF Gate News, 11/13/01

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP)—An office of the Arab channel Al-Jazeera, which has been criticized by the United States for its coverage of the Afghan conflict, was hit early Tuesday during an air raid. The United States said it targeted the al-Qaida network and didn’t know the television channel was located there.

No one was in the two-story building housing the office when it was hit before dawn, as columns of Taliban soldiers poured south out of the capital, said Ghulal Mohammed, a guard at the office in Kabul’s Wazir Akbar Khan neighborhood.

“It was a rocket, but everyone is OK,” he said. He said the missile did not explode.

But an American official said two 500-pound bombs were dropped on the site, which the U.S. military believed was an office of Osama bin Laden’s al-Qaida network.

The building was “a known al-Qaida facility in central Kabul,” said Col. Rick Thomas, a spokesman for the U.S. Central Command.

“We had no indications this or any nearby facility was used by al-Jazeera,” Thomas said. “We had identified two locations in Kabul where al-Jazeera people worked, and this location wasn’t among them.”

Al-Jazeera’s managing director, Mohammed Jassim al-Ali, said the office was hit before dawn and that nobody was there at the time. He said its 10 staffers were believed to be safe but their whereabouts were unknown.

Asked if he thought Al-Jazeera’s office was deliberately targeted, al-Ali said: “They know where we are located and they know what we have in our office and we also did not get any warning.”

Al-Ali told The Associated Press in a telephone interview from Qatar, where the channel is headquartered, that the equipment was destroyed but staffers were safe.

“We don’t know where our crew members are. We are trying to see how we can communicate with them.”

The nearby offices of The Associated Press and the British Broadcasting Corp. in Kabul were damaged by an explosion that rocked the neighborhood at the same time that Al-Jazeera’s office was hit. Windows in both offices were shattered.

There were no injuries among the BBC and AP staffers in the offices.

Several houses in the neighborhood were targeted by U.S. jets late Monday and early Tuesday. Arabs who apparently belonged to al-Qaida, as well as Pakistani, Chechen and Uzbek warriors who fought alongside the Taliban, occupied houses in the neighborhood.

A Taliban government ministry was across the street from the office, and Taliban anti-aircraft positions were located on a hill nearby.

After the Taliban fled Kabul overnight, fighters from the anti-Taliban northern alliance marched in from the north.

Afghan workers of the International Committee of the Red Cross in Kabul said a rocket fired from a U.S. jet hit a pickup truck, killing four Arabs. The charred bodies of the four unidentified men were taken by the Red Cross.

Al-Jazeera has aired taped statements said to be made inside Afghanistan by bin Laden and his aides, and its reporter Tasir Alouni became familiar to Arab viewers around the world, providing live reports from Taliban-controlled areas barred to most Western reporters.

He often described U.S. missiles hitting civilian areas and killing women and children. The United States has disputed Taliban claims of widespread civilian casualties.

American officials have criticized Al-Jazeera’s coverage of the bombing campaign as inflammatory propaganda.

But the 24-hour station reaches more than 35 million Arabs, including 150,000 in the United States, and the Bush administration has acknowledged its significance lately.

The station recently interviewed Secretary of State Colin Powell, National Security Adviser Condoleezza Rice and Air Force Gen. Richard Myers, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

On Tuesday, Al-Jazeera showed CNN footage from Kabul and live coverage Tuesday from its five-member crew in the Taliban’s home base, the southern city of Kandahar.

U.S. AGENTS WERE TOLD TO 'BACK OFF BIN LADENS'

Independent On Line—UK, 11/7/01

London (Sapa-AFP)—Special agents in the United States probing relatives of Saudi-born terror suspect Osama bin Laden before September 11 were told to back off soon after George W. Bush became president, the BBC reported on Tuesday.

The BBC's Newsnight current affairs programme said that Bush at one point had a number of connections with Saudi Arabia's prominent bin Laden family.

It added there was a suspicion that the U.S. strategic interest in Saudi Arabia, which has the world's biggest oil reserve, blunted its inquiries into individuals with suspected terrorist connections—so long as America was safe.

Newsnight reported it had seen secret documents from a FBI probe into the September 11 terror attacks on New York and Washington which showed that despite the reputation of Osama bin Laden as the black sheep of the family, at least two other U.S.-based relatives are suspected of links with a possible terrorist organisation.

The programme said it had obtained evidence that the FBI was on the trail of bin Laden family members living in the United States before, as well as after, the September 11 terrorist attacks.

Newsnight said Bush made his first million 20 years ago with an oil company partly funded by the chief U.S. representative of Salem bin Laden, Osama's brother.

Bush also received fees as director of a subsidiary of Carlyle Corporation, a little-known private company which in just a few years since its founding has become one of America's biggest defence contractors, and his father, George Bush senior, is also a paid advisor, the programme said.

The connection became embarrassing when it was revealed that the bin Ladens held a stake in Carlyle, sold just after September 11, it added.

Newsnight said it had been told by a highly-placed source in a U.S. intelligence agency that there had always been "constraints" on investigating Saudis, but under President George W. Bush it had become much worse.

After the elections, the intelligence agencies were told to "back off" from investigating the bin Laden family, and that angered field agents, the programme added.

The policy was reversed after September 11, it reported.

The former head of the American visa bureau in Jeddah from 1987 to 1989, Michael Springman, told Newsnight: "In Saudi Arabia I was repeatedly ordered by high-level State Department officials to issue visas to unqualified applicants.

"People who had no ties either to Saudi Arabia or to their own country. I complained there. I complained here in Washington... to the Inspector General and to Diplomatic Security and I was ignored."

He added: "What I was doing was giving visas to terrorists—recruited by the CIA and Osama bin Laden to come back to the United States for training to be used in the war in Afghanistan against the then-Soviets."

Newsnight also said it had seen a document that showed U.S. special agents were investigating a close relative of Osama bin Laden, identified only as Abdullah, because of his relationship with the World Assembly of Muslim Youth (WAMY), which the programme said was a suspected terrorist organisation.

The programme reported it had found where he used to live with another close relative, Omar, also an FBI suspect, in Falls Church, Virginia, a suburb of Washington.

The house was conveniently close to WAMY, it said, and just a couple of blocks down the road was a place listed by four of the alleged September 11 hijackers as their address.

The U.S. Treasury has not frozen WAMY's assets, and insists it is a charity, the programme said, yet Pakistan had expelled WAMY "operatives" and India claimed WAMY was funding an organisation linked to bombings in Kashmir.

The FBI did look into WAMY, but for some reason agents were pulled off the trail, Newsnight said.

[JR: These revelations by the British press (our allies) confirms what was reported by Christopher Bollyn in the 11/12/01 issue of The American Free Press. The democratic opposition in Congress is strangely mute because they too have similar associations and connections and our so-called press is well aware of such alliances. So no news is good news—for them anyway. The Bush family's ties to bin Laden is a serious issue. Bush Jr. has declared a war against terrorism when in reality it is a war over the control of oil just like the Gulf War was. It is curious that President George W. said that this was a new kind of war and a war which would be fought in secrecy. It has to be a secret war because it promotes and protects the private interests of the Bush family and their associates.]

BIN LADEN 'MET CIA AGENT
BEFORE TERROR ATTACKS'

Pravda—RU, 10/31/01

A French newspaper claims a U.S. intelligence agent met Osama bin Laden in a Gulf hospital two months before the terror attacks on New York.

Le Figaro said the meeting took place between July 4 and 14, while bin Laden was being treated for a serious kidney ailment at the American Hospital in Dubai.

During his stay at the hospital, bin Laden was visited by members of his family and the local representative of the CIA, said Le Figaro.

The newspaper claims the CIA agent later boasted to several friends that he had visited the Saudi terror mastermind who at that time was wanted for the bombings of U.S. embassies in Africa and the attack on the destroyer USS Cole in Yemen.

In Dubai, he was reportedly treated by Dr. Terry Callahan, a specialist in kidney ailments and male infertility. He refused to comment.

The American Hospital in Dubai denies that bin Laden had ever been a patient.

Quoting "a witness, a professional partner of the administrative management of the hospital", the newspaper said the man suspected by the United States of being behind the September 11 terrorist attacks had arrived in Dubai on July 4 by air from Quetta, Pakistan.

Several sources had reported that bin Laden had a serious kidney infection. He had a mobile dialysis machine sent to his Kandahar hideout in Afghanistan in the first half of 2000, according to "authoritative sources" quoted by Le Figaro and French radio.

[JR: This was reported in papers in half a dozen countries. Wonder how President Bush explains this since he must have been aware or gave his approval?]

ALIENABLE RIGHTS

By Amira Howeid, AL-AHRAM—Cairo, 11/1-7/01

In the U.S. and elsewhere, the fallout from 11 September may include the end of the era of civil liberties and human rights.

We all knew it was coming. Last Friday, U.S. President George W. Bush signed an anti-terrorism bill that proposes sweeping new powers for the FBI, extending the agency's ability to search citizens, wire-tap telephone lines and eavesdrop on the Internet. The period of detention allowed for a foreign citizen suspected of terrorist activities has also been increased. The bill—which has raised concerns over the meaning of civil liberties in the post-11 September age—came as no surprise to rights advocates in the U.S. and elsewhere.

The U.S.-led alliance's "war on terrorism", now in the fourth week of its offensive against Afghanistan, bypassed internationally-recognised channels of legitimacy such as the United Nations and its Security Council. The result: hundreds or perhaps thousands of Afghan civilians may have been killed (no accurate numbers have been released because the Pentagon says it still doesn't know). But the "war on terror" has meant more than the loss of innocent lives: It has included a myriad of other measures. The blocking of information and images from the war in Afghanistan from reaching the American public, for example. There has also been widespread discrimination against Arabs (and other people of Middle Eastern appearance) both by officials (at Western airports and airlines) and by the Western public. Approximately 900 "suspects"—most of whom are Arabs—have been arrested in relation to the 11 September attacks. In the struggle against "terror", several laws have been bypassed, leading to what civil liberties advocates have described as a serious threat to human rights.

The media debate on the choice between "freedom" and "security"—which is raging in Germany and elsewhere—reflects the chilling options now facing Western societies. But has the choice been made already?

FBI and Justice Department investigators, frustrated by their failure to extract confessions from four suspects, are contemplating resorting to "pressure" according to a report in the Washington Post on 21 October. Among the alternative strategies under discussion are extracting information using drugs or other pressure tactics, such as those occasionally employed by Israeli interrogators, according to the article. Another idea is to extradite suspected terrorists to U.S.-allied countries in which security services can employ threats to family members or resort to torture. And last Sunday, the same newspaper reported that the CIA is contemplating pursuing an assassination policy of individuals—a policy that could extend beyond bin Laden and members of al-Qaida.

Meanwhile, the U.S. State Department—taking advantage of the frenzy and confusion that followed the terrorist acts—endorsed the American Service-members Protection Act (ASPA) on November 5. The legislation authorises the U.S. to use force to "liberate" any U.S. or allied persons detained on behalf of the proposed International Criminal Court (ICC), which will be based in The Hague, Netherlands. It also prohibits U.S. military assistance to those states that ratify the ICC treaty except for NATO members and some major non-NATO allies.

The New York-based Human Rights Watch described the new law as an attempt to undermine the establishment of a permanent war crimes court. "The United States is forging a global coalition against terrorism, and the State Department has just endorsed a bill that authorises an invasion of the Netherlands," said Richard Dicker, director of the International Justice Programme at HRW. "This makes no sense. It hardly seems like a good moment for the U.S. to be threatening sanctions against dozens of countries simply because they want to bring to justice the perpetrators of crimes against humanity."

For many, it is difficult to find any sense in this new reality. The U.S. Coalition's use of force, for example, appears to be contrary to established international law.

This is the case according to William Schabas, director of the Irish Centre for Human Rights. "The use of force is prohibited by the United Nations Charter (art. 2(4)), except in two circumstances: self defence (art. 51) and Security Council action under Chapter VII (art. 42)," says Schabas. "It does not allow the use of force for the purpose of "retaliation". Schabas told Al-Ahram Weekly that "the U.S.-led alliance seems to find support for its action by invoking the right of self-defence rather than the right to retaliate. This is a broad and exaggerated interpretation of the right of self-defence."

Normally, he argued, a person (or a state) acting in genuine self-defence is very clear in explaining and justifying its behaviour on this basis. "But the U.S. and UK, with their talk of retaliation, reprisal, 'bringing terrorists to justice' and so on, invoke grounds that are not really compatible with the concept of self-defence."

Schabas acknowledged that the U.S. does enjoy self-defence rights but pointed out that its actions must be conditioned by "proportionality" and by what is necessary to protect itself from attack. In his words, "the U.S. seems to be taking a view that in the name of the war on terrorism it has the right to attack (or 'counterattack') any country it suspects of being insufficiently unsympathetic to terrorism. In effect, this is the legal window dressing of the pax Americana, a justification to attack any country that the U.S. doesn't like, and at any time." To Schabas, one of the unfortunate consequences of all of this is the "marginalisation of the United Nations, which should in fact be taking the lead according to its noble role under the UN Charter."

Perhaps it was with this super-power mentality in mind that the U.S. Congress adopted the anti-terrorism bill. According to the American Civil Liberties Union Freedom Network (ACLU), "the bill was adopted in near record time with only one public hearing and little debate."

"All this will have terrible repercussions," was the response of International Law Professor Kamal Abul-Magd. "If the law doesn't give you protection, you are more likely to take the law in your hands."

To observers in the Middle East, the new U.S. laws seem to be a glaring paradox. In this part of the world, the anti-terrorism bill sounded like all-too-familiar a tune. "It's almost identical to the 'emergency laws' faithfully adopted by Third World regimes," says Dawoud Al-Shoryan, a columnist for the London-based Arabic daily Al-Hayat. For many years, the U.S. State Department's Human Rights desk has itself issued annual reports clearly condemning such governments and their "freedom tying" policies, human rights abuses and violations in the name of the emergency law. To El-Shoryan and many others, it seems like the U.S. is now taking such "backward regimes" as their role model. He expressed fear that the American "emergency law" will eventually "become an incubator that will lead to similar laws being issued in several other countries, if Washington seeks to extend its application within its anti-terrorism coalition."

It may not be all doom and gloom, however. After all, says Rights Activist Gasser Abdel-Razek, a stronger global movement seems to be emerging as a result of the September 11 attacks. "It will take different forms, understandably, such as anti-war, human rights, environmental, and anti-globalisation," said Abdel-Razek. "But it will definitely be more critical of Western (that is, U.S.) hegemony, even if its supporters don't call it that." [JR: The laws passed by our Congress of puppets poses serious questions over and above the issues of security versus our rights. The terrorist bill signed earlier by Bush borders on repression and oppression as well as control of its citizens not seen since the days of Soviet Russia. We have here extradition of suspects to coerce family members, as practiced in Israel. It's like a scene from a WWII movie where the Nazi interrogator suggests menacingly. "You have relatives living in Germany?" We are going backwards in time to make the world a safer place for whom? The ASPA legislation protects the military from prosecution in the World Court who have engaged in questionable hostile military actions. We, like Israel, will choose which international UN laws we will abide by or ignore. We in the U.S. must realize that the principles and ideals that gained the respect and admiration of the world are no longer in practice in Washington or part of our foreign policies. We have now become the ones who terrorize and plunder the world much like the fierce Khazarian tribes of old.]

ISRAEL PERSISTS WITH DEATH SQUADS

By Phil Reeves, The Independent—UK, 11/9/01

They have blown up cars and kitchens. They have fired missiles from combat helicopters hovering several miles away. They have picked off their victims from afar with high-powered snipers' rifles. There are even plausible claims that they—or their collaborators—have planted explosive devices in telephone receivers and car headrests that blow off a man's head in an instant.

Israel's death squads have not lacked ingenuity in the manner in which they have pursued their government's policy of assassinating suspects in the 14-month war with the Palestinians.

Exactly a year has elapsed since Israel first restored extra-judicial killings to its repertoire of military tactics in its efforts to suppress what began as a popular uprising, turning slowly into an armed conflict.

The exact numbers of the victims vary—the Israeli Prime Minister, Ariel Sharon, who personally approves all such killings, admitted to 20 to 30 in a recent Newsweek interview. But he has stated in the past that Israel will sometimes deny its undercover operations, and refuse to comment on others.

There is little doubt the figure is larger. Statistics collated by the Palestinian Human Rights Monitoring Group (PHRMG) show that at least 59 Palestinians have been assassinated in the past year, including 21 passers-by. Even this may be an underestimate.

The international community has repeatedly condemned the killings, saying they are illegal and that, in the long run, they increase violent resistance to Israel's occupation.

Human rights groups have raised many urgent concerns, from the manner in which Israeli intelligence selects targets—which is not open to scrutiny by any judiciary—to evidence that some victims could have been arrested, instead of killed.

"State enforcement of a policy of assassinations is in direct contravention of international human rights law, and especially of the right to life and the right to fair trial," a statement from the PHRMG said yesterday, "People suspected of illegal activities must be arrested and brought to trial, even in a situation of armed conflict."

But Israel has continued. It argues they are pre-emptive strikes against attacks on Israelis—notably suicide bombers, who have killed 56 people in Israel since this intifada began. It makes no secret of its methods—Mr. Sharon boasted this week that "not a day goes by in which we do not succeed in striking at the murderers".

On 8 November last year, in Beit Sahour, a Palestinian town on the edge of Bethlehem, Israeli combat helicopters blasted missiles into a pick-up truck. They got their man—Hussein Abayat, 34, a gunman from Fatah, the movement nominally controlled by the Palestinian leader, Yasser Arafat.

Posters of Abayat in paramilitary fatigues posing with a large machine-gun still adorn the walls of Bethlehem, where he—like all Israel's victims—is considered a martyr. But the assassins also killed two middle-aged women who happened to be passing, murders that did not discourage the Israel army from congratulating itself on a successful "targeted killing". A monument to the two women stands where they died.

But the most notorious assassination came at the end of August when Israeli helicopters hovering over the West Bank town of Ramallah fired two missiles through the windows of the leader of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, Abu Ali Mustafa, 64, decapitating him as he sat in his swivel chair. As the leader of an established PLO faction—who according to Palestinians was a politician rather than a member of the PFLP's military wing—he was the most senior figure to be picked off by the Israelis.

Seven weeks later, the PFLP sought revenge, by infiltrating a Jerusalem hotel and assassinating Israel's Tourism Minister, Rechavem Zeevi, whose support for ethnically cleansing the West Bank and Gaza of Arabs had long made him an enemy of the Palestinians.

Israel's counter-attack—the largest invasion of Palestinian-run areas in West Bank towns since the Oslo process began—is still unfinished; Israeli troops were still in Jenin and Tulkarm last night. The evidence suggests Israel will now step up the pace of extra-judicial killings.

The pressure from the United States has diminished, not least because America will surely resort to similar tactics in its "war on terror". This week, Raanan Gissin, a spokesman for Mr. Sharon, said Israel will now "be using, when necessary, guerrilla warfare against terrorism rather than large-scale forces moving into the area ... We'll rely more on [military] intelligence." Even Shimon Peres, the Israeli Foreign Minister, who is routinely portrayed in the press as a Nobel Peace Prize-winning "dove", makes no apology for Israel's methods.

This week Mr. Peres was confronted in Paris by a parliamentarian who questioned him over the "murder of Palestinian activists". He retorted that the French had "no experience" of "suicide terrorist attacks", saying that the "the moment a terrorist sets out, it is impossible to stop him. He is ready to die anyway."

But this is unlikely to silence Israel's critics. They say that, in the case of many victims, there was no evidence that they were on a mission to attack Israelis, let alone that they were suicide bombers.

[JR: Not even the most ruthless hit man for the Mafia could boast of so many successful hits as Ariel Sharon, Prime Minister of Israel. Why isn't his face on a most-wanted poster in the UN World Court building? What happened to the Human Rights Watch movement to try Sharon for masterminding the massacres of 2700 Palestinians refugees at Sabra and Shatila in Lebanon in 1982. Milosevic (ex-president of Yugoslavia) is facing trial at The Hague for crimes against humanity. Why isn't Sharon?]

THERE IS NO NEW PEACE PLAN

By Akiva Eldar, Ha'aretz—Israel, 11/8/01

"I am willing to bet my good name that there is no joint Peres-Sharon peace plan," declared Reuven Rivlin yesterday. "Even the statements made by Dr. Sari Nusseibeh about conceding the right of return and the hints of changes in the Palestinian positions on other subjects have not made the prime minister consider a new plan," said the communications minister.

Rivlin, to whom the prime minister's door is always open, sounded completely confident of his diagnosis. "The gaps between Sharon and Peres concerning the final status settlement are unbridgeable. The difference between them is like the difference between the Oslo Agreement and Sharon's security approach."

Rivlin is convinced that all the yarns about a diplomatic plan are mere inventions intended to "save Peres's face". In his view, the only thing Sharon and Peres agree on is that Israel must insist on every comma in the Tenet plan and the Mitchell recommendations. "When that happens, Israel will have to consider entering into negotiations that will require painful concessions."

What concessions is he referring to? A Jordan Valley strip, 20-25 kilometers wide will remain in Israeli hands, and the same goes for the mountain ridge and area south of Ma'aleh Adumim toward Arad. Jerusalem will not be divided.

And no one is saying anything about dismantling settlements. That is exactly the map Sharon used to present to his guests when he was head of the opposition. Claiming this map to be the basis of a new peace plan is an insult to the public's intelligence and memory.

So what is so painful? Rivlin says that, as far as some Likud members are concerned, this approach is already too generous. Benjamin Netanyahu and his people, who are waiting to pounce on Sharon, will not allow him to benefit from the doubt that his "Palestinian state" is no more than political spin, a gimmick. They do not care that the purpose of the "diplomatic initiative" is to iron out relations with Bush and with Peres, rather than with the Palestinians.

Is it possible that when the prime minister talks about "painful concessions", he is really referring to the future licking he is going to get from Netanyahu?

Uri Dan, Sharon's close associate, put Israel Radio listeners at ease yesterday, when he smugly said that anyone who wants to call a bunch of demilitarized enclaves covering less than half of the West Bank and surrounded by a foreign army an "independent state" is welcome to do so.

The Foreign Ministry has known for a number of weeks what everybody now knows—that Bush's peace plan, just like Sharon's peace plan, is a media invention. It is true that before September 11, Colin Powell, in addition to his speech about the Israeli-Arab conflict, planned to dispatch returned Marines General Anthony Zinni to the Middle East. That speech, after undergoing an innumerable rewrites, will soon see the light of day. But anyone reading the telegrams coming from the Israeli embassy in Washington knows it is as far from a diplomatic plan as the Sharon plan is from Clinton's. It will contain neither a mention of withdrawal from the territories nor of a division of Jerusalem.

The American's ambitions end with the Mitchell plan. They say that if the sides implement it, the negotiations on the final status settlement can wait a year, even two. As long as there is quiet.

This says nothing about any particular affection Bush or those around him may have for Sharon. The chair of the House Foreign Relations Committee, Henry Hyde (R-IL) said in a private conversation that "Israel is the problem." In other conversations, they say payoff time will come for Sharon for his Czechoslovakia speech and the incursion into Area A.

For example, on the eve of the next elections, when Sharon will want to show that he can preserve the Land of Israel as well as good relations with the United States.

At present, the White House is not involved in anything that does not help get its hands on Osama bin Laden. A possible meeting between Bush and Arafat may be included under this heading. Apparently, the administration believes that the potential damage to the president from a leak of Israeli information about how Chairman Arafat systematically turns a blind eye to terrorism is greater than the damage that would be caused to the anti-terror coalition by ignoring Arafat's presence in New York.

One way or another, the message sent by Washington to Arafat was that in order to shake the hand of the great warrior against bin Laden, he will first have to increase pressure on his own bin Ladens from Gaza.

Sharon's "diplomatic plan" that never was, was consequently not aimed at checking an American peace initiative that was never born. It is impossible to break an egg that has not been laid. Sharon's move was aimed domestically, at Shimon Peres and Labor Party ministers who very much want to remain in the government but are ashamed to be members of a club willing to accept members like Benny Alon.

Sharon threw them a transparent bone. Even if he did want a diplomatic plan, there is no one to prepare it for him. The most senior political advisor in his office is a mid-level foreign ministry official named Danny Ayalon, lent to the Prime Minister's Office during Benjamin Netanyahu's term as prime minister. The only person submitting any diplomatic plan happens to be director general of the foreign ministry, Avi Gil, Shimon Peres' closest advisor.

Peres told a number of Labor ministers that if Sharon rejected the plan, it would be his springboard out of the government. Sharon did not reject it. As always, he left the dirty work to the Palestinians. And they, as always, did it.

Last month, Labor Knesset member Dalia Itzik invited party members to join a forum she had established—"The New Platform for Diplomatic Clarifications". The first subject on the forum's agenda was the idea of unilateral separation.

Itzik calls it "separation now, peace later". Attached to the invitation was a position paper dealing with the principal questions this concept raises. It stated, for example: "Putting up an electronic fence will mandate the dismantling of isolated settlements built in the heart of the Palestinian population, or in areas that are not closely populated by Israelis." In her words, the fence would reduce terror and would have no connection to the final status borders with the Palestinians.

"If the Palestinians become convinced that terror has lost its ability to sway the citizens of the State of Israel, they will be forced to give priority to the diplomatic option." She foresees 300,000 people demonstrating in Rabin Square in favor of the separation plan.

"From a party aspect, there is no doubt it would be easier to remain outside the government and to let it fail," writes Itzik in her letter to the party members. "But national responsibility does not allow us to stand on the side and say to ourselves 'Let them destroy the country and then we will come and fix things.' This is our country!"...

On the Labor Party benches, they believe that only force can remove their friends from their seats around the cabinet table. Haim Ramon, Shlomo Ben-Ami and Itzik are trying to enlist this force among the members of the Labor convention and the central committee. Ehud Barak wants to join, but the members are afraid that he will be more of a liability than an asset. Unilateral separation is the crane to boost all of them. Their problem is that they can't agree how long an arm the crane should have.

Ramon proposes returning to the 1967 borders with minor adjustments. Itzik favors ambiguity and says everyone understands that a withdrawal of over 90 percent is involved. Ben-Ami talks about 94-96 percent of the Clinton plan.

In order to gain Ben-Ami's support (he was the one who came up with the idea of forcing the Clinton plan on Arafat) for the idea of unilateral separation, Ramon "agreed" that American soldiers would supervise the new borders. Itzik proposes that European and Russian soldiers join in as well.

[JR: The peace talks are off (again) says President Bush, because Arafat hasn't done enough to stop terrorism in the Palestinian territories. How many times have we heard these old tired and worn out excuses from past administrations? The Zionist leaders are so clever, by making it appear that they are willing to negotiate a peace settlement with the Palestinians. They know that if they stand rigidly in the winds of change that world events will change things back to their favor. They don't have to concede anything because they have our money, our technology and soon, our military.]

ISRAEL USES TORTURE IN DEFIANCE OF COURT BAN, REPORT SAYS

By Steve Weizman in Jerusalem,
The Independent—UK, 11/12/01

Israel has resumed systematic torture of Palestinian detainees even though the Israeli Supreme Court banned the practice two years ago, three human-rights groups said in a joint report.

The document cited affidavits from detainees, including a 16-year-old who said he was soaked in freezing water, made to carry a heavy wooden beam while manacled and then beaten.

An Israeli government report on the issue said the ban on torture was still in effect and an official added that alleged violations were being investigated. The government has said that, sometimes, security forces needed to extract information quickly from suspects who might have knowledge of an impending attack.

The Israeli report and the response by the human-rights groups will be submitted to a meeting of the United Nations Committee Against Torture.

The joint document by the Public Committee Against Torture in Israel, the Palestinian rights group Law and the Swiss-based World Organisation Against Torture contends that the September 1999 High Court ruling has been regularly flouted, particularly since the intifada began in September of last year.

The report cites nine affidavits by Arab detainees saying they were interrogated using methods expressly forbidden under the 1999 ruling or by existing Israeli or international law. The groups say they have received about 20 reports of violations since the ruling was passed.

Among these are sleep deprivation, shackling a prisoner to a chair in painful positions for prolonged periods, use of smelly hoods, the playing of deafening sounds and beating, slapping and kicking.

Rami Zaul, 16, who was interrogated in October and November 2000, described how freezing water was poured on to him. He said he was then forced, while handcuffed, to drag a wooden beam with one of his interrogators standing on it. "When I got tired and dropped it I was beaten hard," he said.

An Israeli official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said that in many instances such complaints were unjustified, exaggerated and unsupported by medical evidence and in some cases they formed part of a disinformation campaign by Palestinian groups.

[JR: A country that condones Torture and who deprives their fellow human beings of their dignity and their right to exist should be condemned or ostracized by the rest of the world. The state of Israel was created in violence and because of that violence she will never have peace and it affects the rest of the world.]

TURKEY'S ISLAMISTS MOVE TO OUST ECONOMY MINISTER OVER CRISIS

Tehran Times, 11/10/01

ANKARA—Turkey's pro-Islamic Felicity Party (SP) on Friday submitted a censure motion demanding the dismissal of Economy Minister Kemal Dervis for worsening a severe economic crisis and bringing the country to the point of bankruptcy, parliamentary officials said. The motion accused Dervis of pressuring the government into taking every decision he wished for and nonetheless failing to meet any of the targets foreseen in a tight economic recovery program.

"Foreign currency exchange rates, inflation and state debt have multiplied, businessmen have gone bankrupt and thousands of workers have been laid off," said the motion, a copy of which was obtained by AFP.

A banking sector crisis forced the government in February to abandon a pegged exchange rate regime, disrupting a disinflation program backed by the International Monetary Fund.

Since then, the lira has lost more than 50 percent of its value against the dollar.

In May, Prime Minister Bulent Ecevit's three-party coalition put into force a program of tight reforms to bring the economy back on track with multi-billion dollar aid from the IMF and the World Bank.

The Felicity Party also claimed that the government's decision to send soldiers to Afghanistan upon a request by key ally Washington was a deal in return for cash.

The motion claimed that the entire government was responsible for the economic crisis, but said that the primary guilt lay on Dervis.

Meanwhile, thousands of demonstrators began to gather in one of the Turkish capital's main squares Friday to protest against government policies aimed at tackling the country's economic crisis.

The demonstrators came from all over Turkey as part of a march lasting several days under the slogan "No to Poverty, Corruption and Unemployment".

Routes into the city's Sihhiye Square taken by the march—organized by the country's main trade unions—are being heavily policed with a helicopter flying overhead.

Turkey has been laboring under a severe economic crisis since February which has seen steep inflation, business closures, and thousands of job losses.

Unrelenting inflation has been a major problem for the Turkish economy over the past two decades.

[JR: Any country the IMF offers its assistance to always ends up with a dead economy, a mountain of debt and a government who no longer serves its people. The IMF gets all the assets and leaves the people with nothing but the burdens of debt and the daily struggle for survival.]

GLOBALISING OPPOSITION

By Zeina Abu Rizk,

AL-AHRAM Weekly—Cairo, 11/8-14/01

The newly-founded Arab Forum for Resisting Globalisation held its first conference in Beirut last weekend. The coming WTO meeting in Doha was a constant theme.

BEIRUT—Last weekend, almost five hundred people took part in a two-day conference held in Beirut by the Arab Forum for Resisting Globalisation. Those who attended were treated to lectures on the role the Arab world can play in resisting globalisation, the impact of 11 September on anti-capitalist movements and a call to take action at the upcoming conference of the World Trade Organisation (WTO) which takes place in Doha this month.

The organisers of the anti-globalisation conference, a group of Arab NGOs, held meetings last August and September in Beirut to prepare a new Arab and international movement against globalisation policies. Those meetings involved Lebanese and Palestinian activists in Lebanon, as well as activists from Iraq, Tunis, Morocco, and Sudan. As a result they founded the Arab Forum for Resisting Globalisation.

The forum's goal, as defined by its founders, is to create a permanent Arab network resisting globalisation. The network aims to coordinate the exchange of information and expertise among concerned groups in Arab countries. It will also liaise with the international anti-globalisation movement.

The forum also seeks to represent a unified Arab "voice" criticising globalisation from the standpoint of Arab world grievances.

The forum has already decided to act: one of its first engagements will be the WTO ministerial meeting in Doha. As a result of the Beirut conference, a forum sub-committee approved the tactic of holding popular meetings and sit-ins to protest globalisation, mentioning the Doha conference specifically. Rallies will also be organised to support Palestinians in South Lebanon.

The initial meeting of the new forum won interest from around the world, not just the region. Among the lecturers at the initial meeting was French farmer Jose Bove, who shot to fame by wrecking a McDonald's restaurant. Arab delegates came from Morocco, Algeria, Tunisia, Jordan and Palestine.

Bove's statements were particularly rousing. He said, "Popular demonstrations will be banned [in Doha], which is one of the reasons why it was chosen to host [the meeting]. Despite that, we will face the challenge and have a presence in Doha." He also applauded the involvement of the Arab world in the anti-globalisation movement.

Bove also discussed the challenges raised by globalisation in the wake of 11 September. "We cannot consider what happened on 11 September a setback to the anti-globalisation movement," Bove said. "But we can say that what happened...was one of the results of globalisation, in that it has ostracised large parts of humanity."

Bove then moved his thoughts to the region. He argued that "one of the first manifestations of globalisation was the war against Iraq and the siege imposed upon it."

He also accused the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation (NATO) of being an instrument of globalisation. "It imposes the hegemony of certain states over other states. Those whose interests conflict with the interests of the United States get punished."

Bove then denounced Israel as a "bridge for neo-liberalism", saying his visit to the Palestinian territories last June had opened his eyes to the economic dimension of the conflict in the occupied territories.

Mufid Qteish, a founding member of the forum, spoke, too. He argued that the U.S. has used the events of 11 September to inaugurate a campaign of revenge against the rest of the world. He said America was using international organisations, including the United Nations, to legitimise aggression.

"11 September will mark the beginning of a new, more dangerous and more sombre history," he said.

Qteish also discussed regional issues. Referring to both the Palestinian and Iraqi "tragedies", he said that in the Arab world "all types of oppression" take place, "including embargoes, the confiscation of resources, and an increase in the technological gap between countries here and the countries of the developed world".

Many speakers remarked that, wealth, not religion, was the main thing dividing peoples. Abu Ahmed Fouad, a member in Syria of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP), said globalisation "divides humanity into a great majority of poor, marginalised, and oppressed people on one hand, and a few capitalists on the other."

Dr. Fawaz Trabulsi, speaking on behalf of the National Gathering for Salvation and Change, said the world was not divided between Islam and Christianity, but between "the rich and poor and the arrogant and the oppressed".

Bove concluded that "our slogan is that we must globalise the [anti-globalisation] struggle in order to globalise hope".

Meanwhile, opposition to the Doha meeting is coming from across the region, as well as Beirut. In Egypt, 355 intellectuals and other Egyptians signed a petition aimed at the WTO meeting in Doha. The petitioners expressed their opposition to "liberal globalisation in view of its violation of all peoples of the world and the pressures it exerts on governments to give up their social commitments to their citizens." The petition charged the WTO with being one of the organisations responsible for such policies.

It also warned that "the anti-globalisation movement all over the world is preparing for a new confrontation with the WTO [during its meeting in Doha]," hoping to cause the meeting to fail, as it managed at Seattle.

[JR: The Arab/Muslim countries certainly understand the challenges they face in resisting globalization. One effective though simple plan would be for them to make use of God/Allah's gift called GAIA and incorporate it into their Muslim banking system based on Shariah law. This would be the method and the means which could challenge the West and halt their plans for takeover and control of Arab/Muslim affairs. The use of the GAIA contracts would secure for them the future of their countries and their peoples and would bring peace to them as well prosperity to do their good works as written in the Koran.]

THE TRIUMPH OF HYPOCRISY

Editorial, The Washington Post, 11/7/01

The departure of Bernadine Healy from the American Red Cross is a blow to an organization that profited greatly from her leadership for the past two years. It is also a victory for certain members of the International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies in Geneva—and apparently certain American Red Cross board members—who objected to Dr. Healy's strong and principled stance against the anti-Israeli feelings that have kept Magen David Adom (MDA), Israel's equivalent of the Red Cross, excluded from full federation membership for 50 years.

The denial of unconditional recognition to MDA in the worldwide family of national Red Cross societies because it employs a Red Shield of David as its symbol rather than the Red Cross or Red Crescent is an abomination. Bernadine Healy thought so too. At her request, and with strong bipartisan backing in Congress, the American Red Cross decided to delay payment of its dues to support the federation until bigotry gave way to tolerance. Former secretary of state and American Red Cross ambassador-at-large Lawrence Eagleburger indicated in an Oct. 30 op-ed piece that Dr. Healy's opposition to the federation's policies of exclusion and intolerance ran afoul of some American Red Cross board members and led to pressures that caused her to conclude she had no choice but to resign. There may be other factors that helped contribute to Dr. Healy's abrupt departure. But surely her decision to withhold American Red Cross dues from an international organization that won't admit Israel on a full and equal basis is one the American Red Cross board should have steadfastly supported. Some members evidently were prepared to cut and run.

The extent of the federation's willingness to give in to the worst instincts of some of its member governments, especially Arab relief agencies, is clear in a letter we publish today from Denis McClean, a spokesman for the International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies in Geneva. He writes with evident pride that the federation's member governments "are now preparing to adopt an additional emblem with no religious or national connotations to stand alongside the Red Cross and the Red Crescent as emblems universally recognized as providing protection in time of conflict." In other words, under the proposed deal, the Red Cross and Red Crescent symbols are in, the Red Shield of David is out, and Israel's humanitarian aid society can join—as long as it hides its face. The international outrage goes on. All the more reason, as Dr. Healy courageously maintained, that the American Red Cross should withhold its dues.

[JR: The Red Cross seems to have a dual purpose. It serves the needs of the needy as well as political views. When you have an Eagleburger as the Red Cross' Ambassador at Large (and he is very large), you are also servicing the globalists' needs as well. There are so many disguises the Elite cloak themselves in and apparently the Red Cross is one of them. Another reason for the departure of Dr. Healy is that she objected to the $500 million that is pledged for the New York WTC victims going into the general fund and not designated to the intended victims—so stated the original press release when she resigned.]

DOHA DEAL ON TRADE SHAPES UP BUT HURDLES REMAIN

By Alan Wheatley and Rawhi Abeidoh,
Yahoo News, 11/12/01

DOHA, Qatar (Reuters)—The United States said Monday the outline of a deal to launch a new round of world trade talks was taking shape, but India said that rich-country barriers to textile imports could wreck it.

The clash of views reflected the quickening pace of bargaining on the penultimate day of a five-day World Trade Organization (WTO) meeting whose outcome is deemed crucial to boost confidence in the ailing global economy.

“Less than a good deal is better than no deal at all. No deal would give a very bad sign at the time when the global economy is facing recession,” said Moroccan delegate Nacer Benjelloun-Touimi.

Ministers from the 142-member WTO are meeting in the Qatari capital on the shores of the Gulf amid tight security following the attacks on the United States on Sept. 11.

Armed soldiers guarded the hotel conference center and U.S. Marines stood ready on ships offshore.

Negotiators reported specific progress to settle a dispute over drug patents that has pitted wealthy countries’ desire to protect intellectual property rights against poor nations’ need for cheap medicine to combat diseases like AIDS.

“The text needs to be put to a higher level now. If it’s deemed to be satisfactory—and there are indications that it may well be—then that might well open the way for a breakthrough in that area,” European Union spokesman Anthony Gooch told a news conference.

Disputes between the world’s haves and have-nots have peppered every discussion at the meeting. But a U.S. official expressed guarded confidence that a deal was within grasp.

“We see the pieces starting to fall into place but there is still a ways to go,” the official told reporters.

India, however, warned that a refusal by rich countries to open their markets for developing-country textile imports could block agreement on a new round of trade talks.

“There’s still a deadlock and it could be a deal-breaker,” Indian Commerce Minister Murasoli Maran said.

After a weekend that saw China, the world’s most populous nation, and rival Taiwan join the global trading club, officials said frantic drafting was under way to find acceptable language on issues from farm subsidies to environmental rules.

The questions are arcane but the outcome of a new trade round, which would take several years to complete, will affect the price and availability of goods in shops around the world.

Millions of workers could lose their jobs, and millions of others find work, as industries rise and fall because of market-opening moves on the table in Doha.

The issue of patents—covered by the WTO’s Trade-Related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights, or TRIPS in the jargon—has bitterly divided developed and developing countries.

WTO officials see resolving it as essential to correcting the image that freer trade favors the rich over the poor.

Developing countries, led by Brazil and India, are seeking a waiver on public health grounds of rules that guarantee 20-year patents on medicines.

They say they cannot afford costly Western drugs to treat scourges such as malaria that affect millions and must be able to make or import cheap generic versions without fear of litigation from drug companies or the WTO.

Led by the United States, industrialized countries are reluctant to provide a waiver, fearing its impact on other patents and a threat to the $300 billion-a-year drugs industry.

One U.S. official reported a “better sense of convergence” on the crucial issue but a European envoy said he doubted there would be a deal until the last minute. “We’re not out of the woods yet,” he said.

Aside from the drugs issue, developing countries are wary of European proposals to link trade to strict environmental rules, seeing them as back door protectionism. They insist that rich states must honor past market-opening pledges before they can consider taking on onerous new obligations.

Western governments have made much greater efforts than in the past to reach out to developing countries, which make up 80 percent of the WTO’s membership, arguing that freer world trade is a recipe for greater wealth that lifts all with it.

“Trade liberalization is an essential ingredient in developing countries’ efforts to achieve higher economic growth and reduce poverty,” Deputy U.S. Trade Representative Peter Allgeier said.

[JR: Another meeting will be forthcoming on the hard issues because the WTO’s main goal is to continue to prevent these struggling nations from competing against them in the global market. These debt-ridden countries will continually fight for their survival because whatever assets they owned have been confiscated by the International Banking Cartel who now own everything and everyone. The populations in these countries are dying off because the powerful drug companies won’t allow them access to the cheaper drugs because it would cut into their profits. The UN’s World Health Organization won’t intervene because their agenda is to depopulate these regions and rid the world of such needy types. When that’s done they’ll move on to depopulate the rest of the world and US.]

VAST QUARANTINE ROLE ADVOCATED FOR STATES

By Seth Borenstein, Detroit Free Press, 11/7/01

WASHINGTON—In the event of a bio-terrorist attack using a deadly and contagious disease such as smallpox, public health officials want to be able to close roads and airports, herd people into stadiums, and, if necessary, quarantine entire infected cities.

To make that possible, 50 governors this week are to receive copies of a proposed law, drafted at the behest of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta, which could give states immense power to control their populations.

The proposed Model State Emergency Health Powers Act may be months or years away from enactment by state legislatures. It may be amended beyond recognition. But health officials say major new legislation is crucial to keep smallpox, plague or hemorrhagic fevers such as Ebola from spreading in the event of a terror attack. Unlike anthrax, they are highly contagious.

As a general principle, the draft law says authorities could “require isolation or quarantine of any person by the least restrictive means necessary to protect the public health.”

Broad quarantines envisioned in the draft have never been invoked in the United States. They raise all sorts of logistical, political and ethical questions in a mobile society, public health experts concede. But such quarantines also may save lives.

“If we don’t do it, what would happen? I don’t think we’ve got any choice but to quarantine,” said Dr. Lew Stringer, medical director of North Carolina’s special operations response team that handles disasters and bio-terror.

“The first thing you do is shut down the roads,” he said. “Then you shut down the interstates, you shut down the schools, you shut down the businesses. You’re shutting down essential services, not just nonessential ones.”

Local governments need to practice plans for quarantines like fire drills to ensure they work in an emergency, said Dr. Scott Lillibridge, the bio-terrorism assistant to Health and Human Services Secretary Tommy Thompson.

Thompson said Tuesday: “If we did have an outbreak of smallpox,” a possible quarantine “would certainly be one of the avenues we’d have to explore.”

CDC authorities and a state’s governor would exercise their authority using mobilized National Guard units, said James Lee Witt, former director of the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

Lawyers and public health professors at Georgetown University in Washington and at Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore drafted the plan, in collaboration with representatives of governors, state and local health officials and state attorneys general.

Congress “should give public health authorities strong powers to be able to isolate or quarantine people if necessary for the public health,” said the proposal’s chief author, Lawrence Gostin, professor and director at the two universities’ Center for Law and the Public’s Health in Washington.

Many states already have quarantine laws, but they may not be constitutional, Gostin said. He said his proposal would probably pass constitutional muster because it lets detainees ask a judicial-medical board to get them out of quarantine.

In Michigan, there are legal provisions for the governor to declare a medical emergency and for state agencies to issue a quarantine, said Geraldyn Lasher, spokeswoman for the state Department of Community Health.

Between the Public Health Code, she said, and the Emergency Management Act, “we have about all the areas covered” in case of a bio-terrorism attack and the need to issue a quarantine.

Gostin said the question of quarantines “is probably the biggest issue because it involves liberty of individuals in the public.” He said the proposal would give officials authority to take control of hospitals or stadiums to house quarantined people.

But in the event of a quarantine, some people would likely evade restrictions and spread the infection elsewhere, experts said.

In one simulation, involving a fake plague that struck at a rock concert in Chicago, questions arose about what to do with people who insisted on breaking the quarantine, said Randy Larsen of the AnserInstitute, a security think-tank in Arlington, Va.

Would a National Guardsman, he asked, shoot a grandmother trying to evade quarantine?

Maybe, Gostin said. “You have to use all reasonable force.” Sometimes, he added, that could mean lethal force.

[JR: These quarantine proposals are ominous in structure and in planning. Who wants to be sick with a plague and quarantined in some stadium during inclement or cold weather? It doesn’t seem logical or reasonable does it? Not only that you have militia on guard in the stands armed and ready to shoot to kill if you dare move near an exit in your delirium. Sounds like a scene from a scary movie to me.]

BUSH ISSUES ORDER CURBING RELEASE OF PRESIDENTIAL PAPERS

Washington Post, 11/2/01

WASHINGTON—President Bush signed an executive order Thursday night allowing either the White House or former presidents to veto release of their presidential papers, drawing criticism from President Clinton and several historians.

The order reinterprets the Presidential Records Act of 1978, which put papers of future presidents in the public domain, following a court fight over President Nixon’s papers. It envisioned the release of most sensitive records

Administration officials said Bush's order was prompted in part by a request for 68,000 pages of records of President Reagan, the first president whose records are subject to the act. Under the order, either the incumbent president or the former president—and in some cases, the family of a deceased president—could withhold documents requested by scholars, journalists or others. It also provides that if a former president says the records are privileged, they will remain secret even if the sitting president disagrees. If the sitting president says they are privileged, they will remain secret even if the former president disagrees.

White House counsel Alberto R. Gonzales said any decision to withhold documents could be challenged in court, and that the administration would lose if a particular decision did not have solid constitutional grounding.

The order also covers the records of vice presidents.

"There's a recognition of the importance, for historical reasons, of releasing as much information as we can, being mindful of the fact that there may be reasons that it's inappropriate or harmful to this country not to release certain information," Gonzales said. "I think we would err on trying to release as much information as we possibly can."

Gonzales said the administration plans to "give a lot of deference to the former president." But he said the incumbent president "will be in a better position to decide whether or not the release of documents of a former president do, in fact, jeopardize, say, the national security of this country."

Critics, however, said national security is protected by the 1978 act and other laws and regulations.

The order, citing a 1974 Supreme Court ruling, would also require members of the public seeking particular documents to show "at least a 'demonstrated, specific need'" for the records. The Presidential Records Act, enacted in 1978, does not require any showing of need.

"This is a real monster," said Vanderbilt University historian Hugh Graham.

A Clinton aide said a representative of the president objected to the decision in a recent letter to the White House, arguing that sufficient protections are on the books.

"A government's legitimacy is based on the trust of its people, and when decisions are made on behalf of the American people, citizens eventually have to be able to see the process of how those decisions came to be," the aide said. The letter was written by Bruce Lindsey, Clinton's deputy White House counsel and now the lawyer for the William J. Clinton Foundation.

However, Gonzales said a major reason for the new executive order, which rescinds one signed by Reagan, is that the previous one "gives no deference whatsoever to the opinions of a former president."

Historians said vast troves of documents offering insight into presidential decision-making could be lost. The act applies to the papers of Clinton, Reagan and Bush's father, President George Bush.

Many officials of the Reagan and first Bush administration are back in the White House, and critics contend that the executive order may be motivated by a desire to protect them. A House government reform subcommittee headed by Rep. Stephen Horn (R-Long Beach) will hold a hearing on the dispute Tuesday.

[JR: We have a war being run in secret and now it appears our government as well. Bush's E.O. which reinterprets the Presidential Records Act of 1978 protects the President and Vice President from acts committed against this country or its citizens. By the stroke of his pen, Bush sets himself as the sole ruler/dictator of this country. It is also a blatant declaration that he is no longer bound by his oath of office or the U.S. Constitution he swore to serve and protect. We no longer have a government of the people, by the people or for the people. Just what kind of government are we supporting when we wave our flags, patriots?]

RAPES OF CHILDREN RISE IN SOUTH AFRICA

By Ann M. Simmons, Los Angeles Times, 11/11/01

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa—A recent surge in rapes of children and babies has sparked national outrage as rights activists, medical professionals and others accuse the government of not doing enough to stem the tide of sexual abuse.

According to police statistics, almost 32,000 cases of rape and attempted rape of children were reported from January 2000 to June this year. At least a dozen recent high-profile cases, including the gang rape of a 9-month-old girl in Northern Cape province, have stirred disgust and shock nationwide.

South Africa has the world's highest incidence of rape, with an estimated 58 child rapes a day and the rape of a woman every 26 seconds, according to statistics gathered by rights groups. But activists say the recent flurry of attacks points to an increasingly troubling moral disintegration among South Africans, and many are calling for reinstatement of the death penalty for child rape.

"It seems to be getting worse," said Glenys van Halter, vice president of South Africa Stop Child Abuse, a non-governmental organization. "The children are getting younger, and the men are getting more callous about it."

Six men, 24 to 66 years old, have been charged with the rape and indecent assault of the 9-month-old, who is in a hospital in serious condition and may have been exposed to HIV.

When the men appeared in court Monday, about 3,000 protesters demonstrated outside, demanding the death penalty for the alleged attackers.

Days before the 9-month-old was attacked, a 3-year-old girl was raped, allegedly by her grandfather, and a 14-month-old was reportedly assaulted by two uncles. Child welfare activists say that most attacks against children are committed by male relatives and that a significant number go unreported.

In 1998, the South African National Council for Child and Family Welfare reported that five children were abused every hour and that child rape had increased 74 percent since 1994. Since 1998, the figure for sexually abused children has risen 16 percent, the council says.

Some say that widespread poverty, unemployment and alcoholism are fueling the increase in child abuse.

Exacerbating the problem is the widespread myth in some communities that sex with a virgin will protect one from contracting AIDS.

"Forced sex is one of the biggest reasons for causing AIDS," said Miranda Friedmann, director of Women and Men Against Child Abuse, a Johannesburg-based organization.

The government has come under intense criticism for its response to sexual abuse. According to Friedmann's group's statistics, there were 65,000 cases of child abuse last year but only 1,700 convictions.

Paul Setsetse, a spokesman for South Africa's Justice Department, said that since 1994, the government has instituted special training for judicial officers and established courts specifically for sexual offenders.

[JR: There is much one can say about man's inhumanity to man but when it is directed against innocent babies and children there are no words. This is the world we created so don't expect God to do what we haven't done to change it.]

NEW SETBACK IN MACEDONIA PEACE

By Konstantin Testorides, Newsday, 11/5/01

SKOPJE, Macedonia (AP)—A key ethnic Albanian party demanded revision Monday of a part of the Western-brokered peace agreement for Macedonia, causing a new setback in the Balkan country's difficult peace process.

The Party for Democratic Prosperity said it could not accept one of the 15 constitutional amendments called for in the Aug. 13 peace accord meant to end clashes between ethnic Albanian insurgents and government forces.

Lawmakers representing the rival sides had been expected to pass the amendments in Parliament this week. The reforms could be passed without the support of the dissenting party, but a wide consensus is considered essential for long-term peace.

Naser Ziberi, a top official of the dissenting party, said the group could not accept the draft amendment defining status of Macedonia's ethnic groups, saying it favors Macedonians.

"There must be a new effort to find a new solution" on the amendment's phrasing, Ziberi said. The draft of the disputed amendment was changed last month after protests by hard-line Macedonians, who said it unfairly favored minorities.

The draft text defines Macedonia as a country of "all citizens... the Macedonian people as well as citizens living within its borders, who are part of the Albanian people," and others.

Alan Le Roy, the European Union envoy to Macedonia, met Imer Imeri, leader of the Party for Democratic Prosperity, and tried unsuccessfully to persuade him to support the amendment, Imeri said.

Ziberi's comments, which came as Parliament convened in yet another attempt to try to ratify the accord, drew immediate criticism from other lawmakers who said they were ready to adopt the reforms.

Nikola Popovski, of Macedonian Social Democrats, said that dissenting party's opposition is "unacceptable... reneging on what has been agreed."

Popovski also complained of a weekend meeting between Ziberi, several other ethnic Albanian politicians and the officially disbanded ethnic Albanian guerrillas.

Macedonians negotiated with ethnic Albanian politicians only, and not with the rebels, whom they call "terrorists" bent on dividing Macedonia. The rebels, which recently surrendered 3,800 weapons to NATO troops, said they fought to improve rights for the ethnic Albanian minority, which makes up a third of Macedonia's 2 million population.

Ziberi confirmed the meeting but declined to comment on it.

The peace accord was signed by Macedonia's four largest political parties, two Macedonian and two ethnic Albanian parties, including the Party for Democratic Prosperity.

[JR: Any peace accords brokered by the U.S. or the EU aren't workable and create more incapability with the people who have to live with these short-sighted agreements. Ireland is a perfect example of this—after three years the coalition government of Catholics and Protestants has collapsed and the issues separating the people are still unresolved. Add to that failure the Dayton Peace Accord pushed through by the Clintonistes which was reluctantly agreed to by Israel and the Palestinians. The One World Government can't make every country conform willingly to its visions of governance unless they mean to hold it all together by lethal force. So far that has been their plan.]
