RE: THANK YOU IN THE TOUGH TIMES:
BUT TOUGH TIMES DON'T LAST—TOUGH
PEOPLE DO! INDIAN AFFAIRS (AS IN NATIVE
AMERICA INCLUSIVE OF A FOCUS ON CANADIAN AMERICAN NATIVES)

THANK YOU

Hatonn—When we lost Margie to the team we grieved that loss which seems such a short time ago, and was.

We now must honor Rex for his coming and filling a need when we were needing help following the theft of the paper and other problems which hit from those same participants which made, at the least, things difficult in picking up pieces and moving on while continuing full-bore in the Philippines to get the GAIA services up and running.

Each day in the Philippines brings another step toward that goal realization with total security backing and recognition as we sort the grist from the chaff and get the legal holdings secured. It makes it extremely difficult, however, to have to stop and attend home base distress while still having to plead for assistance in the wake of the damages thrust upon us by former partners who were actually paid while they thieved from under our very noses. You friends have sustained the project and we are now on the downhill slope, it appears, if we can just keep right on marching down the path.

We now can expect legal input from one who was the sitting Supreme Court Chief Justice at the time we came to Manila. The same person then moved to the highest-ranking position in the National Bank. We were told, in fact, years ago that this person had actually sent representatives to the U.S. to the Treasury Department to investigate GAIA and the holdings. It was reported back that surely enough the response was a broad smile without denial but also without acceptance. The response of the parties here was "Well, that is the best news yet, for that indicates it is OK!"

Other political intrigues took place which changed the circumstances but right now it is again, without conflict of interests, an opportunity to present the new information and confirmations. Again, "everyone" knows about Russell Herman but "nobody" will deal with any V.K. Durham. The response is that she is a fraud and unless there can be a "containment" of some kind, it will be most difficult to realize successful use of this asset.

We have prepared well and taken time to thoroughly contain, meet agreements and BACK the assets with collateral as in gold placement.

This, however, requires more time to iron out wrinkles and bumps. Part of that ironing is to give no further information to such as V.K. Durham to send her poison darts. And, we must do this in the midst of a WAR, both against terrorists, within religious confrontations and total political upheaval along with desperate economic problems under total control of the IMF/WB IBC. But YES, it CAN be done and we are doing it.

Meanwhile, back at CONTACT and the Farm, things are difficult at best as people step in to take up slack as Rex decided he needed for himself to "move on" and after further considering input he maintained that position.

I cannot imagine that Rex, however, would be adverse to filling in gaps, showing what his tasks are and how to accomplish them, give passwords and banking information, etc. He said to us that he certainly bore no animosity (his very word) and would train anyone in what were his responsibilities.

Rex had long been quite unhappy in his circumstances and after the loss of Margie, his closest friend, it was no longer fulfilling to attend the farm and associated problems.

Others have stepped in and I would guess that since Rex is staying with a friend in Tehachapi until he leaves to return north that he would assist in sorting or instructing.

Mark has also offered to do what he can to assist with some of the routines, milling, etc., until it is turned over while Bruce has offered to assume responsibility of the Farm itself as to barns, storage, upkeep, etc. This right now is overwhelming because of the mess which has accumulated and a winter-over catch-up ahead. And, no, there are no funds to hire anything done as all are trying to make-do while having access to the place for security of grain, etc., and storage and office space. Since it is a Farm, although the land is residing again with the landowner for his choice of use, the buildings are still leased by “us” for these other purposes but it remains expensive. However, all other places for use are now gone and thus it is a time of making do until we can top over this program.

It appears that little happens but what has been accomplished in these three recent years is beyond a miracle, friends, and as steps unfold even the local spectators are beginning to look upwards to where the help is coming forth. God smiles a lot lately even if YOU might find it difficult.

Yes I know that you can't find all that hope in the Philippines if you have had experience with the attitudes and dramas which make up the Philippines. But under it all, there are the assets to make this program work and it can be done here quite nicely in quiet security for all involved from bank to fish farmer. And yes, we STAY OUT OF THE POLITICAL INTRIGUES OF ANY “MOMENT”. GOD is an equal opportunity employer and servant.

By the way, I have something else of which to remind you: GOD DOES NOT SORT, my friends, YOU SORT SELF. Moreover, God does not coerce anyone to be other than as that person, individual, chooses to be. HE will remind you every time of your prior commitments and note the “changes” presented—BUT HE WILL ALLOW YOU FULL FLEXIBILITY.

You will go and be wherever you choose, for that IS THE WAY OF GOD. We are obligated to remind you to check out your wishes, your choices and that which you consider among your choices. EACH must consider the value inherent in any choice and the negative vs. positive aspects and certainly happiness is a major consideration—but be sure you “know” what you mean by “happiness”. That in itself is heavily dependent on the impact of your choices ON OTHER PEOPLE IN YOUR CIRCLE OF RECOGNITION.

By the way, sometimes you can't see the trees for that big forest. Anyone being in Bakersfield much or needing input and assistance at the local area seem to forget the willing hands and heart of “Lucy”. Erlinda and Betty might well have quite a lot in common as to “jobs” with Lucy. Lucy, in fact, was in the packing in preparation to move to Manila to get this job done. We can't use that kind of help and the problems were massive in such consideration—but she is a WORKER, friends, with willing hands and as I said, heart. When there is a need and we ask, as in equipment, etc., she is there with it in the next post.

Then yesterday the Shenks from Canada sent a Christmas Care package of assembled clothes which are ever so narrowly too small but they took care of the problem by also sending a lot of candy to insure that they would be MUCH too small, all things considered.

Dharma has it all figured out—save the candy and the clothes and by the time they fit the ones that also came from Canada and fit now, will be ready for replacement. Unfortunately, the candy looms there like a magnet for consideration almost as big a good vs. evil.

Now, back to Rex, please. He will have secured the gold pieces which were used for several purposes in his production projects. There were at least 27 ounces in one-ounce rounds and half again as many for fill-in use, at the very least count, so since they are not in the product area and Rex said the raiders didn't take any of that gold (only his own old gold teeth), we have to assume Rex will know where the pieces are located. ASK HIM, for you need the gold either for its value or product usage. Gaiandriana is always incubated, for instance, in the presence of gold and silver rounds. Rex can't help you if you don't ask him. He would be gracious to Valerie, for he worked directly with her and certainly Erlinda would be glad to carry messages. It will be far more difficult once he has moved back to Alturas. We know that Rex had the gold because he sent one of the Maple Leafs to Manila for use here in the Gaiandriana so that we could share with Dr. Cantara in his studies. But just in value alone the gold reserves at the farm would pay for the farm for several months as well as extra paper costs.

However, it was used for other purposes which remain mandatory, so you must make an effort to get them recovered, for the asset is a corporate matter—not something up for grabs by the nearest hands.

My suggestion is to simply list what you need and send a friend to gather the information. The assumption is that Rex has no access to a computer or e-mail if Erlinda has no equipment, so someone will have to go in person to collect passwords, etc. Stop treating this like a communal situation of some kind—this is strictly business responsibility on both sides of this or any issue.

You at the Farm area need to make a special note of the security cellar which I believe Margie and Rex outfitted for themselves should there be some cause for shelter and for any should they be in that area should need arise. As weather patterns change it becomes ever more likely there will be a need for a “root cellar” to offer shelter. And, unfortunately as the talk comes around time after time to “nuclear” weapons use, you must consider possibilities and keep your “survival” needs current and at ready.

These are things which can be overlooked in such a hasty departure as with Rex simply because when both parties to a plan are gone, it is a difficult job to catch everything. But mine is not to linger longer on these singular topics.

Margie's major intent was to be available with a place for her Son and family should a large quake, or emergency, hit the California coast where he is located. He must know that his safety, in her wishes, will be met if that becomes necessary. She felt as a parent alone that it was her desire and total intent to attend that possibility.

We cannot choose that Rex leave anything of those plans to use, for she did legally change out and into his care in those final days of life for his attending. He chooses not to follow through and that is his prerogative but, therefore, we have further obligation to responsibility to Margie. Man lives according to his conscience and therein lays the fact of it.

What IS—IS. And therefore that “is” is that with which we work. We do, however, attend things to the best of our ability but we cannot force our demands on another's conscience.

Thank you for bearing with us through the more “personal” things but this is YOUR program as well as ours and yes, you are also among those we “thank”.

Perhaps, readers, there is too much cynicism to be able to feel that we shall ever accomplish our “objective”. But, we shall and it will belong to all of us who make it possible. This is no longer built on some kind of “faith” or on another's good graces such as strange named players—this is now reality and the harvest time is now in sight. This, of course, presents other circumstances to attend but we recognize that you are ready, willing and able to accept THAT type of change. You have long had every confrontation around to allow you to learn for this next task which should produce in joy, for certainly the “fear” is vanquished even if your trust in “me” is not even present. We made commitments through the years already gone by and we have never changed objectives even in the smallest details. If you don't remember—BRUSH UP, for I repeat: This has always been our objective and commission and there is no deviation here.

Ekkers have only asked one thing from this merry-go-round: an ability to meet the obligations taken unto selves even though the agreements were laid forth and the responsibility is NOT THEIRS. They realize, however, that the only way to have restitution from the takers to the ones who shared is simply to succeed and make that payback their own responsibility. They have arranged that in the first of the larger banking holdings—again, against GOLD.

They have asked, however, that the returns be handled in such a way as to remove the cup from their hands in that we simply first clear all decks with honorable accounting and all legal obligations met as in confrontations, damages, etc. The Ekkers feel strongly that it is not “nice” to try and to beat God out of that which has always been HIS.

Following that basic accounting we can then take up the next steps of growth in funding flow back to projects.

I speak on this at this time because we are going to speak about the Natives and Indigenous people, for the very thrust of our labors is to bring a modicum of capability of life function to our brothers long abused.

Do we have great help from, say, the Native Americans and their “sovereign” councils? No—almost NONE. However, when there are available resources the places for use will appear. The “natives” have been too abused and continue to be abused to the point of wanting something-for-nothing in their demands, for they see no other way or resource. You see, “SPIRITUAL” rattling and drum-beating only calls for the “way”—and the dance is yours to accomplish. Will Ekkers hold strong enough to make it through? Oh indeed, and the native brothers who will serve, know it—even if they do not know Ekkers.

How brave are YOU in the face of the weapons of “mass destruction” aimed at your very hearts? OK, let us consider that circumstance and perhaps give a bit of a boost to pushing this program on over the edge and at least allow Ekkers to remain in this place long enough to get it started. Thank you for that, for you will NOT come up wanting, chelas.

God seems long in evolving into some show of goodness? Well, how long has God waited on YOU?

Let's begin, Dharma, with the message on the shutdown of the Department of Agriculture computers to "avoid hacking". That one measure was an incredible debacle and shut off communications to even the Park Services, Land Management facilities AND CUT THE NATIVE AMERICANS OFF FROM EVERYTHING, INCLUDING THEIR INCOME. This during the Christmas Holidays and HARD winter. You do not have a nice government, people of the lie.

FEDERAL AGENCY IMPROVES SECURITY
AFTER COURT-ORDERED SHUTDOWN

By Timothy Egan,

New York Times News Service, 2/14/02

SEATTLE—After a 10-week court-ordered shutdown of nearly all its computer communications, the Interior Department said Wednesday that it had restored some of them, bringing e-mail back to government scientists, Web service to national parks and payments to nearly 40,000 American Indians.

The blanket electronic closing of a department that manages everything from seashores in New England to Lincoln's birthplace in Kentucky stemmed from a problem that has long been out of sight of much of official Washington but has played havoc with the lives of millions who depend on an agency that is landlord to one-eighth of the United States.

Because Interior could not safeguard the accounting system that manages money for Indians, U.S. District Judge Royce Lamberth on Dec. 5 ordered it to shut down the computer system for the rest of the department. The judge who is hearing the largest class-action suit ever filed by Indians, has already found that the government mismanaged Indian money for more than a century.

During a second trial, to determine whether Interior Secretary Gale Norton should be held in contempt for failing to comply with past orders on cleaning up the department, the judge found that Interior's Websites were vulnerable to hacking.

On Wednesday, Norton promised Lamberth that checks were on the way to thousands of Indians and said about 40 percent of the department's Websites were safe enough from hackers to reopen. The other major Interior Websites remain off-line.

Norton asked the judge for more time to repair the system for managing the Indians' money. She said Interior has hired outside consultants to help speed reform and is seeking an $84 million increase in spending for the effort.

To Indians who depend on the $500 million in annual income the department manages for them as part of historic trust responsibility, Wednesday's promises have a hollow ring, they said.

'LAST IN LINE'

Rosemary Pimms, a Yakima Indian who lives in Seattle on the royalty payments the government manages for her, said: "Nothing new there: The Indian is always last in line."

The checks are not government handouts but money that is owed individual Indians from land leased to outside business interests and managed by the Interior Department. More than 500,000 such accounts exist, though the bulk of the money goes to 43,000 Indians who get regular royalty checks ranging from a few dollars to several thousand. The tribes say the government has lost up to $100 BILLION over the last century because of mismanagement and poor accounting.

"The way these people have been treated recently is an outrage," said Rep. Tom Udall (D-N.M.), whose district is 21 percent Indian. "It's just been a huge injustice. ... The pace from Interior has been like molasses in winter."

Some tribes, including the Blackfeet, the Oglala Sioux and the Navajo, which is the nation's largest, have made emergency money available from their tribal welfare accounts to individual Indians. They say they are furious with Norton.

"Where I live, in Glacier County, Mont., home of the Blackfeet Nation, one of the 25 poorest counties in the United States, I can tell you that many people depend on these payments for the bare necessities of life," Elouise Cabell said last week before Congress. Cabell, a former banker who is a member of the Blackfeet Nation, initiated the lawsuit six years ago. She says the way the government manages Indian money is "a national disgrace". [H: Well, check it against ENRON.]

Interior officials said Wednesday they should be able to pay about half of what the Indians are owed from the computer shutdown, and will work to make up the full amount in coming months. [H: I suppose that is OK if you only need half a house and are only half starving.]

OUTDOOR DATA MISSED

While most of the virtual lockout has been felt among Indians, outdoor enthusiasts have been upset at the loss of Web access to information about 500 million acres run by Interior.

Complaints from people planning vacations to national parks, or simply trying to find out the status of bird species from the Fish and Wildlife Service, have been pouring into the department, officials said.

[H: Now, for some personal input: Try on for size trying to get deadlines for getting cows off some of the BLM lands through the Park Service with trespass fines against you for every day overrun—fright on Ekker's old ranch in Utah as a BIG EXAMPLE following the brother's death over a year past. You see, readers, IT TOUCHES YOU "ALL". Things are now happening to you and not just someone else. Recourse? NONE! Worse, that is exactly what the miscreants do in individual cases where you meet the Feds. They give no allowances except do this or death to you, while they take EVERY right you hold away if you sign their "save your life" options agreements.

This brings me to Diane Kunick—DO NOT SIGN THAT NEW AND MORE INCREDIBLE "BARGAIN".

I suggest you buck up your courage and sever your relationship with the current non-functional attorney called "your attorney" so that the court has cause to appoint one for you to consider even the plea agreement. They won't do so until you have no attorney to deal in between. Sorry, it is just the way it is and yours would rather have you sign anything than do anything—for very large fees, like $50,000 to take on the case full bore. It is life, people, so collect that which remains in the system for your use and demand it be provided or the case DROPPED. And in addition, cause them to reveal all the players who turned in false affidavits against you—for THEY HAVE NO CASE.

We will share these things with you readers, for it IS that important to see what the Feds offer to you who would cross ways with the little prosecuting Federal attorneys and their assistants. I know that it is difficult to stand strong and go through the inconvenience but so too will the Fed Court have to answer for the costs if they pursue this monstrosity of injustice. If Diane signs that ludicrous document, she will be shackled and at their mercy for the REST OF HER LIFE—not just until the fog clears.]

[END OF QUOTING AND ADDED COMMENTS REGARDING FEDS AND COMPUTERS]

Now for you who keep asking from time to time what ever happened to that little Indian tribe called the Dann Clan in Nevada. Well, the same ludicrous theft and terror activities continue with livestock thefts in the ongoing rampage across America.

[QUOTING INDIAN COUNTRY TODAY, Mar. 8, 2002:]

DANN SISTERS HANG TOUGH IN NEVADA

By Valerie Taliman, Southwest Bureau Chief,
Albuquerque Office, Indian Country Today

CRESCENT VALLEY, Nevada—Western Shoshone traditionalist, rancher and grandmother Carrie Dann has spent nearly three decades fighting the U.S. government for her people's right to live and ranch on ancestral homelands.

The struggle has not been easy.

There have been threats, harassment, helicopter surveillance and raids by armed federal agents. There were sleepless nights, months of anxiety and years of fighting a federal "regulatory cavalry" sent to force her off lands the Western Shoshone have lived on for hundreds of years.

On two occasions—once at Thanksgiving—armed federal agents arrived with police convoys and livestock trucks to round up and impound Western Shoshone cattle tended by the Dann family.

One six-day raid ended with 269 horses captured and two killed.

There were even physical confrontations that left her man-handled and cuffed as Bureau of Land Management agents forcibly restrained her from trying to prevent the confiscation of Indian livestock.

"I noticed the new vocabulary being used today is terrorism," Dann said in an interview. "They've been terrorizing us for almost 30 years now. When someone threatens you on a daily basis and says they're going to take your property, your livelihood—to me, that's terrorism.

"It attacks your mind—it's a mental stress on you. I wonder to myself how we continue to go on with this struggle because we're getting pretty old now."

Since a federal agent told Carrie and her sister, Mary, in 1973 that their cattle were "trespassing on public land", the Dann sisters have tenaciously fought a protracted paper war that has gone all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court.

In times of relative peace, the Dann sisters carry on with the hard work of running a ranch: rounding up livestock, calving, branding, castrating, growing alfalfa and tending a vegetable garden that feeds their extended family.

It's a way of life on which the Dann family and many other Western Shoshone have subsisted for generations in the rugged, high desert mountains of what is now called Northern Nevada.

Dann insists that BLM has no jurisdiction to charge her family with trespassing or to levy fines against her for refusing to pay grazing permit fees to the federal government. She estimates that over the years the fines have grown to more than $1 million. She said she has no intention to pay.

“The 1863 Treaty of Ruby Valley only granted rights of passage through our land to White settlers. But we never gave up the land,” Dann insists. “So these BLM raids are an outright armed invasion of the Western Shoshone Nation. They have no jurisdiction over us.

“The real issue is that the United States is attempting to claim control over sovereign Western Shoshone land and people,” she said. “Our land has never been ceded or deeded to the U.S., so it’s not possible for them to just take it and determine that our title to the land has been extinguished.”

Legal scholars who have followed the hard-fought land-rights case conclude that Dann is, in fact, correct in her assertions that the Western Shoshone still own the land.

Rich in traditional knowledge of the natural world, Dann has had to become a student of American law over the years and can now recite a litany of legal doctrines that have impacted their lives.

She says she knows enough about American law to know it isn’t fair.

“I don’t understand under America’s laws how they can say we were paid for our land,” Dann said. “If a White man sells his house to somebody, it’s his until he gets money into his hands. But we never took one cent for our land. The government just paid itself in our name and has been harassing us ever since to get our land.”

When she heads to Washington next week among a delegation of Western Shoshone who are seeking a fair and just compromise to keep their homelands, Dann says she’ll do her best to persuade Congress to honor their human and civil rights.

“We know what the value of the land is—it’s life,” she said. “They can value the land in dollars and cents, but to traditional Indigenous people the value of land isn’t money. We look at our spiritual ties to the land as the most sacred thing and this is part of what the U.S. is trying to take away from us. It’s the sacredness of our lands—what it means to us—that they’re trying to destroy. If they force the money on us, they’ll be making us homeless in our homeland.

“It’s because of our traditional ways that we’ve been able to carry on. If we didn’t believe in who we are as Western Shoshone, and if we didn’t believe in our prayers and spirituality, I guess we would be gone a long time ago.

“But the Earth is our mother and we’re not going to give that up. If we did, what would we do for future generations? We wouldn’t be thinking about our future generations, of our children, our grandchildren and the children yet to come. I guess that’s what keeps us going.”

[END OF QUOTING]

Now, readers, do you really think such as the Dann Clan won’t be ready, willing and able to share “sovereign” lands with us to rebuild their own “nation”? Well, THAT is the purpose of Russell Herman expressed directly to US prior to handing over that assignment and it is our commitment and obligation to see to it that the Native Indians reap rewards from this gift put into our keeping.

We will move on to the “Canadian Holocaust” and those more Northern American Natives (Indians), in another writing. This one is grown too long for handling.

AHO, brothers, we are indeed our “brother’s keepers” in these circumstances. Let us gird up our courage and see this job done, please.—GCH

RE: THE CANADIAN HOLOCAUST—GENOCIDE OF ABORIGINAL PEOPLE

NATIVE AMERICANS LIVE IN CANADA TOO!

The following article is going to, I hope, make you sick enough to DO SOMETHING! We, the cavalry (this time FOR the Indians) are moving as fast as we can but it surely is never quickly enough and somebody(ies) are going to have to be able to show the people the plan or at the least make it known that help is coming if we can ever get off the dimes. I don’t need do other than just present this article and YOU be the Judge in this case of pure horror.

[QUOTING Rev. Kevin D. Annett, MA, MDiv. 2001 The Truth Commission into Genocide in Canada. NEXUS. Feb-Mar, 2002:]

HIDDEN FROM HISTORY
THE CANADIAN HOLOCAUST

Rev. Kevin D. Annett <kevinannett@yahoo.ca> <kevin_annett@hotmail.com> Website: <http://annett55.freewebsites.com/>

Through the Canadian residential school system, the Christian churches along with state authorities, the judiciary, doctors and the police implemented a policy of genocide against the native population.

The following is an edited extract from the report, Hidden From History: The Canadian Holocaust—The Untold Story of the Genocide of Aboriginal Peoples by Church and State in Canada—A Summary of an Ongoing, Independent Inquiry into Canadian Native ‘Residential Schools’ and their Legacy, by Rev. Kevin D. Annett, MA, MDiv.

The report is published by The Truth Commission into Genocide in Canada, a public investigative body continuing the work of previous Tribunals into native residential schools: The Justice in the Valley Coalition’s Inquiry into Crimes against Aboriginal People, convened in Port Alberni, British Columbia, on December 9, 1994, and The International Human Rights Association of American Minorities Tribunal into Canadian Residential Schools, held in Vancouver, BC, from June 12-14, 1998. [H: This story could be told in every nation on the face of the Earth today.]

FOREWORD

Jasper Joseph is a sixty-four-year-old native man from Port Hardy, British Columbia. His eyes still fill with tears when he remembers his cousins who were killed with lethal injections by staff at the Nanaimo Indian Hospital in 1944.

I was just eight, and they’d shipped us down from the Anglican residential school in Alert Bay to the Nanaimo Indian Hospital, the one run by the United Church. They kept me isolated in a tiny room there for more than three years, like I was a lab rat, feeding me these pills, giving me shots that made me sick. Two of my cousins made a big fuss, screaming and fighting back all the time, so the nurses gave them shots, and they both died right away. It was done to silence them. (November 10, 2000)

Unlike post-war Germans, Canadians have yet to acknowledge, let alone repent from, the genocide that was inflicted on millions of conquered people: the aboriginal men, women and children who were deliberately exterminated by our racially supremacist churches and state.

As early as November 1907, the Canadian press was acknowledging that the death rate within Indian residential schools exceeded 50%. And yet the reality of such a massacre has been wiped clean from the public record and consciousness in Canada over the past decades. Small wonder; for that hidden history reveals a system whose aim was to destroy most native people by disease, relocation and outright murder, while “assimilating” a minority of collaborators who were trained to serve the genocidal system.

This history of purposeful genocide implicates every level of government in Canada, the Royal Canadian Mounted Police (RCMP), every mainstream church, large corporations and local police, doctors and judges. The web of complicity is this killing machine was, and remains, so vast that its concealment has required an equally elaborate campaign of cover-up that has been engineered at the highest levels of power in our country; a cover-up that is continuing, especially now that eyewitnesses to murders and atrocities at the church-run native residential “schools” have come forward for the first time.

For it was the residential “schools” that constituted the death camps of the Canadian Holocaust, and within their walls nearly one-half of all aboriginal children sent there by law died, or disappeared, according to the government’s own statistics.

These 50,000 victims have vanished, as have their corpses—“like they never existed”, according to one survivor. But they did exist. They were innocent children, and they were killed by beatings and torture—after being deliberately exposed to tuberculosis and other diseases by paid employees of the churches and government, according to a “Final Solution” master plan devised by the Department of Indian Affairs and the Catholic and Protestant churches.

With such official consent for manslaughter emanating from Ottawa, the churches responsible for annihilating natives on the ground felt emboldened and protected enough to declare full-scale war on non-Christian native peoples through the 20th Century.

The casualties of that war were not only the 50,000 dead children of the residential schools, but the survivors, whose social condition today has been described by United Nations human rights groups as that of “a colonized people barely on the edge of survival, with all the trappings of a Third-World society”. (November 12, 1999)

The Holocaust is continuing.

This report is the child of a six-year independent investigation into the hidden history of genocide against aboriginal peoples in Canada. It summarizes the testimonies, documents and other evidence proving that Canadian churches, corporations and the government are guilty of intentional genocide, in violation of the United Nations Convention on Genocide, which Canada ratified in 1952 and under which it is bound by international law.

The report is a collaborative effort of nearly 30 people. And yet some of its authors must remain anonymous, particularly its aboriginal contributors, whose lives have been threatened and who have been assaulted, denied jobs and evicted from their homes on Indian reserves because of their involvement in this investigation.

As a former minister in one of the guilty institutions named in our inquiry—the United Church of Canada—I have been fired, blacklisted, threatened and publicly maligned by its officers for my attempts to uncover the story of the deaths of children at that church’s Alberni residential school.

Many people have made sacrifices to produce this report, so that the world can learn of the Canadian Holocaust, and to ensure that those responsible for it are brought to justice before the International Criminal Court.

Beginning among native and low-income activists in Port Alberni, British Columbia, in the fall of 1994, this inquiry into crimes against humanity has continued in the face of death threats, assaults and the resources of church and state in Canada.

It is within the power of the reader to honour our sacrifice by sharing this story with others and refusing to participate in the institutions which deliberately killed many thousands of children.

This history of official endorsement of, and collusion in, a century or more of crimes against Canada’s first peoples must not discourage us from uncovering the truth and bringing the perpetrators to justice.

It is for this reason that we invite you to remember not only the 50,000 children who died in the residential school death camps, but the silent victims today who suffer in our midst for bread and justice.

PART ONE: SUMMARY OF EVIDENCE OF INTENTIONAL GENOCIDE IN CANADIAN RESIDENTIAL SCHOOLS.

ARTICLE II: THE INTENT TO DESTROY, IN WHOLE OR IN PART, A NATIONAL ETHNIC, RACIAL OR RELIGIOUS GROUP; NAMELY, NON-CHRISTIAN ABORIGINAL PEOPLES IN CANADA.

The foundational purpose behind the more than one hundred Indian residential schools established in Canada by government legislation and administered by Protestant and Catholic churches was the deliberate and persistent eradication of aboriginal people and their culture, and the conversion of any surviving native people to Christianity.

This intent was enunciated in the Gradual Civilization Act of 1857 in Upper Canada, and earlier, church-inspired legislation, which defined aboriginal culture as inferior, stripped native people of citizenship and subordinated them in a separate legal category from non-Indians. This Act served as the basis for the federal Indian Act of 1874, which recapitulated the legal and moral inferiority of aboriginals and established the residential school system. The legal definition of an Indian as “an uncivilized person, destitute of the knowledge of God and of any fixed and clear belief in religion” (Revised Statutes of British Columbia, 1960) was established by these Acts and continues to the present day.

Then, as now, aboriginals were considered legal and practical non-entities in their own land and, hence, inherently expendable.

This genocidal intent was restated time and again in government legislation, church statements and the correspondence and records of missionaries, Indian agents and residential school officials. Indeed, it was the very raison d’être of the state-sanctioned Christian invasion of traditional native territories and of the residential school system itself, which was established at the height of European expansionism in the 1880s and persisted until 1984.

By definition, this aim was genocidal, for it planned and carried out the destruction of a religious and ethnic group: All those aboriginal people who would not convert to Christianity and be culturally extinguished. Non-Christian natives were the declared target of the residential schools, which practised wholesale ethnic cleansing under the guise of education.

As well, such “pagans” were the subject of government-funded sterilisation programs administered at church-run hospitals and tuberculosis sanatoriums on Canada’s west coast.

According to an eyewitness, Ethel Wilson of Bella Bella, BC, a United Church missionary doctor, George Darby, deliberately sterilized non-Christian Indians between 1928 and 1962 at the R.W. Large Memorial Hospital in Bella Bella. Ms. Wilson, who is now deceased, stated in 1998:

Doctor Darby told me in 1952 that Indian Affairs in Ottawa was paying him for every Indian he sterilized, especially if they weren’t church-goers. Hundreds of our women were sterilized by Doctor Darby, just for not going to church. (Testimony of Ethel Wilson to International Human Rights Association of American Minorities [IHRAAM] Tribunal, Vancouver, BC, June 13, 1998)

According to Christy White, a resident of Bella Bella, records of these government-funded sterilisations at the R.W. Large Hospital were deliberately destroyed in 1995, soon after a much-publicised police investigation was to open into residential school atrocities in British Columbia. Ms. White stated in 1998:

I worked at the Bella Bella hospital, and I know that Barb Brown, one of the administrators there, dumped sterilisation records at sea on two occasions. Some of the records were found washed up on the beach south of town. That was just after the cops opened their investigation into the schools, in the spring of 1995. They were covering their tracks. We all knew Ottawa was funding sterilisations, but we were told to keep quiet about it. (Testimony of Christy White to Kevin Annett, August 12, 1998)

Legislation permitting the sterilisation of any residential school inmate was passed in BC in 1933 and in Alberta in 1928 (see “Sterilization Victims Urged to Come Forward” by Sabrina Whyatt, Windspeaker, August 1998). The Sexual Sterilization Act of BC allowed a school principal to permit the sterilisation of any native person under his charge. As their legal guardian, the principal could thus have any native child sterilized. Frequently, these sterilisations occurred to whole groups of native children when they reached puberty, in institutions like the provincial Training School in Red Deer, Alberta, and the Ponoka Mental Hospital. (Former nurse Pat Taylor to Kevin Annett, January 13, 2000)

Of equal historical significance is the fact that the Canadian federal government passed legislation in 1920, making it mandatory for all native children in British Columbia—the west coast of which was the least Christianised area among aboriginals in Canada—to attend residential schools, despite the fact that the same government had already acknowledged that the death rate due to communicable disease was much higher in these schools and that, while there, the native children’s “constitution is so weakened that they have no vitality to withstand disease”. (A.W. Neill, West Coast Indian Agent, to Secretary of Indian Affairs, April 25, 1910)

That is, the Canadian government legally compelled the attendance of the most “pagan” and least assimilated of the native peoples in residential schools at precisely the time when the death rate in these schools had reached their pinnacle—about 40%, according to Indian Affairs officers like Dr. Peter Bryce. This fact alone suggests a genocidal intent towards non-Christian aboriginals.

ARTICLE II (a): KILLING MEMBERS OF THE GROUP INTENDED TO BE DESTROYED.

That aboriginal people were deliberately killed in the residential schools is confirmed by eyewitness testimonies, government records and statements of Indian agents and tribal elders. It is also strongly suggested by the bare fact that the mortality level in residential schools averaged 40%, with the deaths of more than 50,000 native children across Canada. (See the report of Dr. Peter Bryce to Department of Indian Affairs Superintendent Duncan Campbell Scott, April 1909.)

The fact, as well, that this death rate stayed constant across the years, and within the schools and facilities of every denomination which ran them—Roman Catholic, United, Presbyterian or Anglican—suggests that common conditions and policies were behind these deaths. For every second child to die in the residential school system eliminates the possibility that these deaths were merely accidental or the actions of a few depraved individuals acting alone without protection.

Yet not only was this system inherently murderous, but it operated under the legal and structural conditions which encouraged, aided and abetted murder and which were designed to conceal these crimes.

The residential schools were structured like concentration camps, on a hierarchical military basis under the absolute control of a principal appointed jointly by church and state, and who was usually a clergyman. This principal was even given legal guardianship rights over all students during the early 1930s by the federal government, at least in west coast residential schools. This action by the government was highly unusual, considering that native people were by law the legal wards of the state, and had been so since the commencement of the Indian Act. And yet such absolute power of the school principal over the lives of aboriginal students was a requirement of any system whose killing of aboriginals had to be disguised and later denied.

The residential schools were constructed behind this deception in such a way that the deaths and atrocities that constitute genocide could be hidden and eventually explained. In the Canadian context, this meant a policy of gradual but deliberate extermination under a protective legal umbrella, administered by “legitimate and trusted” institutions: the mainline churches.

It should be clarified from the outset that the decisions concerning the residential schools, including those which caused the deaths of children and resulting cover-ups were officially sanctioned by every level of the churches that ran them and the government which created them. Only such sanction could have allowed the deaths to continue as they did—and the perpetrators to feel protected enough to operate with impunity for many years within the system, which they universally did.

EXPOSURE TO DISEASES

In 1909, Dr. Peter Bryce of the Ontario Health Department was hired by the Indian Affairs Department in Ottawa to tour the Indian residential schools in western Canada and British Columbia and report on the health conditions there. Bryce's report so scandalised the government and the churches that it was officially buried and only surfaced in 1922 when Bryce—who was forced out of the civil service for the honesty of his report—wrote a book about it, entitled The Story of a National Crime (Ottawa, 1922).

In his report, Dr. Bryce claimed that Indian children were being systematically and deliberately killed in the residential schools. He cited an average mortality rate of between 35% and 60%, and alleged that staff and church officials were regularly withholding or falsifying records and other evidence of children's deaths.

Further, Dr. Bryce claimed that a primary means of killing native children was to deliberately expose them to communicable diseases such as tuberculosis and then deny them any medical care or treatment—a practice actually referred to by top Anglican church leaders in the Globe and Mail on May 29, 1953.

In March 1998, two native eyewitnesses who attended west coast residential schools, William and Mabel Sport of Nanaimo, BC, confirmed Dr. Bryce's allegation. Both of them claim to have been deliberately exposed to tuberculosis by staff at both a Catholic and a United church residential school during the 1940s.

I was forced to sleep in the same bed with kids who were dying of tuberculosis. That was at the Catholic Christie residential school around 1942. They were trying to kill us off, and it nearly worked. They did the same thing at Protestant Indian schools, three kids to a bed, healthy ones with the dying. (Testimony of Mabel Sport to IHRAAM officers, Port Alberni, BC, March 31, 1998)

Reverend Pitts, the Alberni school principal, he forced me and eight other boys to eat this special food out of a different sort of can. It tasted really strange. And then all of us came down with tuberculosis. I was the only one to survive, 'cause my Dad broke into the school one night and got me out of there. All of the rest died from tuberculosis and they were never treated. Just left there to die. And their families were all told they had died of pneumonia. The plan was to kill us off in secret, you know. We all just began dying after eating that food. Two of my best friends were in that group that was poisoned. We were never allowed to speak of it or go into the basement, where other murders happened. It was a death sentence to be sent to the Alberni school. (Testimony of William Sport to IHRAAM officers, Port Alberni, BC, March 31, 1998)

HOMICIDES

More overt killings of children were a common occurrence in residential schools, according to eyewitnesses. The latter have described children being beaten and starved to death, thrown from windows, strangled and being kicked or thrown down stairs to their deaths. Such killings occurred in at least eight residential schools in British Columbia alone, run by all three mainline denominations.

Bill Seward of Nanaimo, BC, age 78, states:

My sister Maggie was thrown from a three-story window by a nun at the Kuper Island school, and she died. Everything was swept under the rug. No investigation was ever done. We couldn't hire a lawyer at the time, being Indians. So nothing was ever done. (Testimony of Bill Seward, Duncan, BC, August 13, 1998)

Diane Harris, Community Health Worker for the Chemainus Band council on Vancouver Island, confirms accounts of the murders.

We always hear stories of all the kids who were killed at Kuper Island. A graveyard for the babies of the priests and girls was right south of the school until it was dug up by the priests when the school closed in 1973. The nuns would abort babies and sometimes end up killing the mothers. There were a lot of disappearances. My mother, who is 83 now, saw a priest drag a girl down a flight of stairs by her hair and the girl died as a result. Girls were raped and killed, and buried under the floorboards. We asked the local RCMP to exhume that place and search for remains but they've always refused, as recently as 1996. Corporal Sampson even threatened us. That kind of cover-up is the norm. Children were put together with kids sick with TB in the infirmary. That was standard procedure. We've documented thirty-five outright murders in a seven-year period. (Testimony of Diane Harris to the IHRAAM Tribunal, June 13, 1998)

Evidence exists that active collusion from police, hospital officials, coroners, Indian Agents and even native leaders helped to conceal such murders. Local hospitals, particularly tuberculosis sanatoriums connected to the United and Roman Catholic churches, served as "dumping grounds" for children's bodies and routinely provided false death certificates for murdered students.

In the case of the United Church's Alberni residential school, students who discovered dead bodies of other children faced serious retribution. One such witness, Harry Wilson of Bella Bella, BC, claims that he was expelled from the school, then hospitalized and drugged against his will, after finding the body of a dead girl in May 1967.

Sadly, the two-tiered system of collaborators and victims created among native students at the schools continues to the present as some of the state-funded band council officials—themselves former collaborators—appear to have an interest in helping to suppress evidence and silence witnesses who would incriminate not only the murderers but themselves as agents of the White administration.

A majority of the witnesses who have shared their story with the authors and at public tribunals on the west coast have described either seeing a murder or discovering a body at the residential school he or she attended. The body count, even according to the government's own figures, was enormously high. Where then, are all these bodies? The deaths of thousands of students are not recorded in any of the school records, Indian Affairs files or other documentation submitted thus far in court cases or academic publications on the residential schools. Some 50,000 corpses have literally and officially gone missing.

The residential school system had to hide not only the evidence of murder but the bodies as well. The presence of secret gravesites of children killed at Catholic and Protestant schools in Sardis, Port Alberni, Kuper Island and Alert Bay has been attested to by numerous witnesses. These secret burial yards also contained the aborted fetuses and even small babies who were the offspring of priests and staff at the schools, according to the same witnesses. One of them, Ethel Wilson of Bella Bella, claims to have seen "rows and rows of tiny skeletons" in the foundations of the former Anglican residential school of St. Michael's in Alert Bay when a new school was built there in the 1960s.

There were several rows of them, all lined up neatly like it was a big cemetery. The skeletons had been found within one of the old walls of St. Mike's school. None of them could have been very old, from their size. Now why would so many kids have been buried like that inside a wall, unless someone was trying to hide something? (Testimony of Ethel Wilson to Kevin Annett, Vancouver, BC, August 8, 1998)

Arnold Sylvester, who, like Dennis Charlie, attended Kuper Island school between 1939 and 1945, corroborates this account.

The priests dug up the secret gravesite in a real hurry around 1972 when the school closed. No one was allowed to watch them dig up those remains. I think it's because that was a specially secret graveyard where the bodies of the pregnant girls were buried. Some of the girls who got pregnant from the priest were actually killed because they threatened to talk. They were sometimes shipped out and sometimes just disappeared. We weren't allowed to talk about this. (Testimony of Arnold Sylvester to Kevin Annett, Duncan, BC, August 13, 1998)

Local hospitals were also used as a dumping ground for children's bodies, as in the case of the Edmonds boy and his "processing" at St. Paul's Hospital after his murder at the Catholic school in North Vancouver. Certain hospitals, however, seem to have been particularly favorite spots for storing corpses.

The Nanaimo Tuberculosis Hospital (called The Indian Hospital) was one such facility. Under the guise of tuberculosis treatment, generations of native children and adults were subjected to medical experiments and sexual sterilisations at the Nanaimo Hospital, according to women who experienced these tortures. But the facility was also a cold storage area for native corpses.

The West Coast General hospital in Port Alberni not only stored children's bodies from the local United church residential school; it was also the place where abortions were performed on native girls who were made pregnant at the school by staff and clergy, and where newborn babies were disposed of and possibly killed, according to witnesses like Amy Tallio, who attended the Alberni school between 1952 and 1961, confirms this.

Many girls got pregnant at the Alberni school. The fathers were the staff, teachers, the ones who raped them. We never knew what happened to the babies, but they were always disappearing. The pregnant girls were taken to the Alberni hospital and then came back without their babies. Always. The staff killed those babies to cover their tracks. They were paid by the church and government to be rapists and murderers. (Testimony of Irene Starr to Kevin Annett, Vancouver, BC, August 23, 1998)

ARTICLE II (b): CAUSING SERIOUS BODILY OR MENTAL HARM

Early in the residential schools era, the Indian Affairs Superintendent, Duncan Campbell Scott, outlined the purpose of the schools thus: "To kill the Indian within the Indian".

Clearly, the genocidal assault on aboriginals was not only physical but spiritual: European culture wished to own the minds and the souls of the native nations, to turn the Indians it hadn't killed into third-class replicas of White people.

Expressing the "virtues" of genocide, Alfred Caldwell, principal of the United Church school in Ahousat on Vancouver Island's west coast, wrote in 1938:

The problem with the Indians is one of morality and religion. They lack the basic fundamentals of civilized thought and spirit, which explains their child-like nature and behavior. At our school we strive to turn them into mature Christians who will learn how to behave in the world and surrender their barbaric way of life and their treaty rights which keep them trapped on their land and in a primitive existence. Only then will the Indian problem in our country be solved. (Rev. A.E. Caldwell to Indian Agent P.D. Ashbridge, Ahousat, BC, Nov. 12, 1938)

The fact that this same principal is named by eyewitnesses as the murderer of at least two children—one of them in the same month that he wrote this letter—is no accident, for cultural genocide spills effortlessly over into killing, as the Nazis proved so visibly to the world.

Nevertheless, Caldwell's letter illuminates two vital points for the purpose of this discussion of mental and bodily harm inflicted on native students: (a) the residential schools were a vast project in mind control, and (b) the underlying aim of this "re-programming" of native children was to force aboriginals off their ancestral lands in order to allow Whites access to them.

To quote Alberni survivor Harriett Nahanee:

They were always pitting us against each other, getting us to fight and molest one another. It was all designed to split us up and brainwash us so that we would forget that we were Keepers of the Land. The Creator gave our people the job of protecting the land, the fish, the forests. That was our purpose for being alive. But the Whites wanted it all, and the residential schools were the way they got it. And it worked.

We've forgotten our sacred task, and now the Whites have most of the land and have taken all the fish and the trees. Most of us are in poverty, addictions, family violence. And it all started in the schools, where we were brainwashed to hate our own culture and hate ourselves so that we would lose everything. That's why I say that the genocide is still going on. (Testimony of Harriett Nahanee to Kevin Annett, North Vancouver, BC, December 11, 1995)

It was only after the assumption of guardianship powers by the west coast school principals, between 1933 and 1941, that the first evidence of organized pedophile networks in those residential schools emerges. For such a regime was legally and morally free to do whatever it wanted to its captive native students.

The residential schools became a safe haven—for pedophiles, murderers and brutal doctors needing live test subjects for drug testing or genetic and cancer research.

Particular schools, such as the Catholic one at Kuper Island and the United church's Alberni school, became special centers where extermination techniques were practised with impunity on native children from all over the province, alongside the usual routine of beatings, rapes and farming out of children to influential pedophiles.

Much of the overt mental and bodily harm done to native students was designed to break down traditional tribal loyalties along kinship lines by pitting children against each other and cutting them off from their natural bonds. Boys and girls were strictly segregated in separate dormitories and could never meet.

One survivor describes never seeing her little brother for years, even though he was in the same building at the Alert Bay Anglican school. And when children at the schools broke into each other's dormitories and older boys and girls were caught exchanging intimacies, the most severe punishments were universally applied. According to a female survivor who attend the Alberni school in 1959:

They used the gauntlet on a boy and girl who were caught together kissing. The two of them had to crawl naked down a line of other students, and we beat them with sticks and whips provided by the principal. The girl was beaten so badly she died from kidney failure. That gave us all a good lesson: If you tried having normal feelings for someone, you'd get killed for it. So we quickly learned never to love or trust anyone, just do what we were told to do. (Testimony of anonymous woman from the Pacheedat Nation, Port Renfrew, BC, October 12, 1996)

According to Harriett Nahanee:

The residential schools created two kinds of Indians: slaves and sell-outs. And the sellouts are still in charge. The rest of us do what we're told. The band council chiefs have been telling everyone on our reserve not to talk to the Tribunal and have been threatening to cut our benefits if we do. (Harriett Nahanee to Kevin Annett, June 12, 1998)

The nature of that system of torture was not haphazard. For example, the regular use of electric shocks on children who spoke their language or where "disobedient" was a widespread phenomenon in residential schools of every denomination across Canada. This was not a random but an institutionalized device.

Specially constructed torture chambers with permanent electric chairs, often operated by medical personnel, existed in the Alberni and Kuper Island schools in British Columbia, at the Spanish Catholic school in Ontario, and in isolated hospital facilities run by the churches and Department of Indian Affairs in northern Quebec, Vancouver Island and rural Alberta, according to eyewitnesses.

Mary Anne Nakogee-Davis of Thunder Bay, Ontario, was tortured in an electric chair by nuns at the Catholic Spanish residential school in 1963 when she was eight years old. She states:

The nuns used it as a weapon. It was done on me on more than one occasion. They would strap your arms to the metal armrests, and it would jolt you and go through your system. I don't know what I did that was bad enough to have that done to me. (From The London Free Press, London, Ontario, October 22, 1996)

Such torture also occurred at facilities operated by the churches with Department of Indian Affairs money, similar to the sterilisation programs identified at the W.R. Large Memorial Hospital in Bella Bella and the Nanaimo Indian Hospital.

Frank Martin, a Carrier native from northern BC, describes his forcible confinement and use in experiments at the Brannen Lake Reform School near Nanaimo in 1963 and 1964:

I was kidnapped from my village when I was nine and sent off to the Brannen Lake school in Nanaimo. A local doctor gave me a shot and I woke up in a small cell, maybe ten feet by twelve. I was kept in there like an animal for fourteen months. They brought me out every morning and gave me electric shocks to my head until I passed out. Then in the afternoon I'd go for these X-rays and they'd expose me to them for minutes on end. They never told me why they were doing it. But I got lung cancer when I was eighteen and I've never smoked. (Videotaped testimony of Frank Martin to Eva Lyman and Kevin Annett, Vancouver, July 16, 1998)

Such quack experimentation combined with brutal sadism characterized these publicly funded facilities, especially the notorious Nanaimo Indian Hospital. David Martin of Powell River, BC, was taken to this hospital in 1958 at the age of five and used in experiments attested to by Joan Morris, Harry Wilson and other witnesses quoted in this report. According to David:

I was told I had tuberculosis, but I was completely healthy; no symptoms of TB at all. So they sent me to Nanaimo Indian Hospital and strapped me down in a bed there for more than six months. The doctors gave me shots every day that made me feel really sick, and made my skin all red and itchy. I heard the screams of other Indian kids who were locked away in isolation rooms. We were never allowed in there to see them. Nobody ever told me what they were doing to all of us in there. (David Martin to Kevin Annett, Vancouver, November 12, 2000)

A recurring and regular torture at the residential schools themselves was operating on children's teeth without using any form of anesthesia or painkiller. Two separate victims of this torture of the Alberni school describe being subjected to it by different dentists, decades apart. Harriett Nahanee was brutalized in this manner in 1946, while Dennis Tallo was "worked on by a sick old guy who never gave me painkillers" at the same school in 1965.

Dr. Josef Mengele is reputed by survivors of his experiments to have worked out of Cornell University in New York, Bristol Labs in Syracuse, New York, and Upjohn Corporation and Bayer laboratories in Ontario. Mengele and his Canadian researchers, like the notorious Montreal psychiatrist Ewen Cameron, used prisoners, mental patients and native children from reserves and residential schools in their efforts to erase and reshape human memory and personality, using drugs, electric shocks and trauma-inducing methods identical to those employed for years in the residential schools.

Former employees of the federal government have confirmed that the use of "inmates" of residential schools was authorized for government-run medial experiments through a joint agreement with the churches which ran the schools.

According to a former Indian Affairs official:

A sort of gentlemen's agreement was in place for many years: the churches provided the kids from their residential schools to us, and we got the Mounties to deliver them to whoever needed a fresh batch of test subjects: usually doctors, sometimes Department of Defense people. The Catholics did it big-time in Quebec when they transferred kids wholesale from orphanages into mental asylums. It was for the same purpose: experimentation. There was lots of grant money in those days to be had from the military and intelligence sectors: All you had to do was provide the bodies.

The church officials were more than happy to comply. It wasn't just the residential school principals who were getting kickbacks from this: Everyone was profiting. That's why it's gone on for so long. It implicates a hell of a lot of top people. (From the Closed Files of the IHRAAM Tribunal, containing the statements of confidential sources, June 12-14, 1998)

Such experiments and the sheer brutality of the harm regularly inflicted on children in the schools attest to the institutional view of aboriginals as "expendable" and "diseased" beings. Scores of survivors of 10 different residential schools in BC and Ontario have described under oath the following tortures inflicted on them and other children as young as five years old between the years 1922 and 1984:

- * tightening fish twine and wire around boys' penises;
- * sticking needles into their hands, cheeks, tongues, ears and penises;
- * holding them over open graves and threatening to bury them alive;
- * forcing them to eat maggot-filled and regurgitated food;
- * telling them their parents were dead and that they were about to be killed;
- * stripping them naked in front of the assembled school and verbally and sexually degrading them;
- * forcing them to stand upright for more than 12 hours at a time until they collapsed;
- * immersing them in ice water;
- * forcing them to sleep outside in winter;
- * ripping the hair from their heads;
- * repeatedly smashing their heads against concrete or wooden surfaces;
- * daily beating without warning, using whips, sticks, horse harnesses, studded metal straps, pool cues and iron pipes;
- * extracting gold teeth from their mouths without painkillers;
- * confining them in unventilated closets without food or water for days;
- * regularly applying electric shocks to their heads, genitals and limbs.

Perhaps the clearest summary of the nature and purpose of such sadism are the words of Bill Seward of Nanaimo, a survivor of the Kuper Island school:

The church people were worshipping the devil, not us. They wanted the gold, the coal, the land we occupied. So they terrorized us into giving it to them. How does a man who was raped every day when he was seven make anything out of his life? The residential schools were set up to destroy our lives, and they succeeded. The Whites were terrorists, pure and simple. (Testimony of Bill Seward to Kevin Annett and IHRAAM observers, Duncan, BC, August 13, 1998)

PLANET X (NIBIRU) DUE HERE SPRING 2003?

A group of scientists in Russia in year 2000 held several meetings to discuss the inbound planet discovered from one of their largest observatories. This led to the infamous "2003 Problem"—Reuters news service wire Sept., 13th 2000. The top government officials called for a commission to study the problem which was said to expect to cause "a string of calamities" and "a massive population shrinkage". They openly wondered whether Russia would still even exist as a country afterwards.

Zecharia Sitchin is a world-renowned scholar, author, and archeologist. I've heard enough reports to understand that Zacharia Sitchin occasionally says that X is very close to passing. He will not elaborate on why he says this or give an exact date. This is hearsay and is not something he does regularly or will admit to on the record. So with this in mind take it any way you see fit.

Insiders in NASA and the military privately confirm that many are quietly building dome-homes (strongest structure know to man) in the upper U.S.A. (one of the safest areas). Make a few calls about domes and confirm this for yourself.

Trusting the Pentagon/government to guard itself and relay needed information to protect you is clearly illogical.

Planet X is Nibiru, Wormwood, or THE MOST REVERED HEAVENLY BODY IN ALL ANTIQUITY. After 3600 years on its regular orbit it will pass again in SPRING 2003. It's RECORDED IN ANCIENT TEXTS and the SCIENCE OF ARCHEOLOGY shows its effect on Earth with each passage. Yes, some conspiracies are without merit—ignoring history and science is another matter. The faint red cross to the left of this red object in the middle may be X.

<http://dsc.discovery.com/news/briefs/20010702/kuiper.html#>

In July 2001 the red object "2001 KX76" was disclosed. It's NOT X. This was the original attempt at misdirection. By August 2001 the disinformation had changed to the "LARGEST ASTEROID EVER" and it's now shown as blue. All speculation about a large DULL RED inbound brown-dwarf coming in from that direction was to be avoided. It's the same label on a different object.

(Note: Brown dwarfs are failed stars. They're sort of a cross between a large planet and a star. They're too small and cool to be stars and too massive to be planets. They emit a dull red light within a narrow range depending on how warm or hot they are. Being very dense with strong gravity, its atmosphere attracts a kind of smog or red haze around it).

<http://www.eso.org/outreach/press-rel/pr-2001/phot-27-01.html#note3>

NASA will continue to identify objects ahead and around X to misdirect attention. The normal helpful and professional NASA employees are being evasive and condescending when asked about it. As many know NASA has covered-up evidence of UFOs, ETs, and structures on the moon and mars for quite some time. How NASA has chosen to handle their knowledge of Planet X fits into this same pattern. Over 600+ current and ex-government employees are currently working to change this government deceit within "The Disclosure Project", working on Capitol Hill.

Here's where to find the real X coordinates: <http://www.zetatalk.com/usenet/use90207.htm>

X has INTENTIONALLY BEEN MADE TO SOUND RIDICULOUS and confusing for several reasons. One of which is to avoid causing panic among the world's population. Many Websites and articles continue to be written about Planet X that spread lies. They say it only MAY exist and comes around only once every few million years IF it does. This disinformation is widespread.

X orbits between our Sun and its dark twin. A diagram from the 1987 NEW SCIENCE & INVENTION ENCYCLOPEDIA shows our dead twin sun and the 10th planet.

X's MASS, MAGNETISM and DENSITY is such that it DISRUPTS the surface of EVERY PLANET IT PASSES. In fact, history shows approximately 7 YEARS PRIOR to its passage its far-reaching electromagnetic/gravitational influence changes Earth's core flows TRIGGERING WEATHER, VOLCANIC AND SEISMIC ACTIVITY. Since early 1996 traditional WEATHER has CHANGED DRAMATICALLY, breaking all-time records regularly. The up-tick of QUAKES, VOLCANIC INCIDENTS and changes in ELECTROMAGNETICS are being kept out of the media as much as possible. Weather alone can falsely be blamed on global warming and Sun cycles but not Earth's rumblings at the same time.

Research the advent of PLANET X and the cataclysms it will trigger by passing EARTH. Being prepared and FOREWARNED gives one an EXCELLENT CHANCE to SURVIVE.

BLINDSIDED: PLANET X Passes in 2003, EARTHCHANGES!
By Mark Hazlewood

Even the majority of the Earth-change intuitives' prophecies are tied into or name Planet X.

ALL OTHER NEWS PALES IN COMPARISON TO THIS IMPENDING MEGA WORLDWIDE EVENT OF BIBLICAL PROPORTIONS.

Why do I believe Planet X will be returning in 2003?

A combination of in-depth research and life experience. In the mid-'70s, at age 19, I started work with a solar cell corporation. It had technology that could undercut the cost of fossil fuels and nuclear power. Twelve years later it became clear that there were people that controlled the energy cartel, banks and media that were engaged in a combination of underhanded financial and legal maneuvers to stop us. I wasn't looking to find that these controllers existed. I had no interest in them. I did become acutely aware of them first hand, having watched as they slapped the company I worked with down and effectively shelved the technology.

Fast Forward

Over the years, I've had a casual interest in prophecy in relation to Earth changes. I read perhaps 100-plus differing intuitives' works from various cultures and times around the globe. Many curiously coincided on what was expected and had an approximate time frame of around the turn of the millennium for their occurrence. After concluding that there was a high probability that this was not a coincidence, I figured that Earth changes were possibly part of our immediate future. Because I had no indication of why this would happen or exactly when, I temporarily let it go and lost interest. Prophecy alone did not give me what I was seeking, to be sure. Over the years, I've worked on my dietary habits and studied and practiced yoga off and on. This has had an incremental awakening on my spiritual connection. I know I've a long way to go; at the same time, I see subtleties today I wouldn't have dreamed existed decades ago. For now I'll keep these insights mainly private.

I've an adult son and a grandson. In 1998, about 3 years ago, my son and I both had simultaneous Earth-change dreams of almost the exact same nature. We discussed it, and I decided to probe my spiritual connection for an answer as to the why of these dreams. I wasn't given anything. However, within 36 hours, by my own probing efforts, I had stumbled onto that answer. I discovered that there was a thread in my study of prophecy and intuitives that I'd dropped several years prior, which I'd missed, about a rogue planet, dark star or passing comet. This began my research of Planet X. Along the way, I found an overwhelming amount of archeological evidence that coincided with X's orbit. Earth had been speaking very loudly on a cyclical basis as to when she was experiencing calamities. The majority of archeologists and scientists hadn't studied the ancient historical accounts of Planet X and found the regular approximate 3600-year orbit to fit the pieces of the puzzle together. The ice-age phenomenon was real—but given the wrong name and reasons for its occurrence. From a wide variety of ancient and modern cultures, I found several names for Planet X. I've 34 names for X in this text.

Along the way, I discovered the approximate 7-year period of non-religious tribulations connected to X. This is where, during the dense brown dwarf's approach, its far-reaching electromagnetic and gravitational arms start to slow Earth's rotation while heating up and changing its core flows. This is the reason for much that has happened in the last 5 years. This is the cause, since around 1995, of the worldwide mega weather changes, droughts, fires, El Niño, La Niña, the sudden doubling in deep quakes starting in late '96, the up-tick in mega-quakes of 7.0 or greater in the last two years, quake swarms, domino quakes and the increase in volcanism, among other changes.

The media controllers are falsely blaming widely known and discussed weather changes on global warming or Sun cycles. They are keeping quiet about the same level of abrupt changes in quake or volcanic activity happening simultaneously, although they can't help but report major events hitting populated areas. It'd be quite a stretch for them to blame all this on global warming and Sun cycles too.

NASA discovered and excitedly disclosed having found Planet X. It was December 30th, 1983 that announcement was made by the chief scientist of the IRAS satellite to 6 dailies. I've got all the headlines in my book. Shortly thereafter, the media controllers got wind of the disclosure and clamped down by having them retract the statements. They've since made up an extremely simplistic story to explain away the original perturbations of the outer planets that ultimately led to finding Planet X. As far as explaining away having made the announcement, the best they could come up with is that it was misunderstood.

Only the largest controlled scopes could have seen Planet X until early this year. It was easy to cover up until then. Small to mid-level observatories around the world kept spotting it in early 2001. To quash the concerns, the controllers announced they had found the "Largest Asteroid in history August, 2001".

This asteroid is one of many objects around the area where Planet X is approaching that are being identified. These disclosures and techniques are meant to confuse, pacify and redirect the public's attention away from the brown dwarf.

Occasionally you'd expect, with such an overwhelmingly important worldwide story, that even has intentional leaks, some details would slip out from a few national leaders in the know. Russia's leaders did just that. Here are quotes from them, sent over Europe's Reuters news service wire Sept. 13th, 2000:

"Anticipated Chain of Disasters Due to Hit in 2003" and "Massive Population Shrinkage". They also wondered out loud, on recorded microphone during a parliamentary meeting, if Russia would even exist as a country afterwards.

Zecharia Sitchin carries weight in the scientific archeological community and has a degree in journalism. The enforcer controllers made clear to him what he was allowed and not allowed to say and print early on. Sitchin's colleague astronomer Dr. Harrington of the United States Naval Observatory met with an early so-called accidental death. This happened because of his adamant open disclosures to the media about having found the 10th planet. A loud message was sent to everyone with weight in the scientific community or credible insiders in the know. If you value your life, keep quiet!

The story has another strange twist. Subgroups of these same controllers I keep referring to have their own quiet campaign to get the knowledge out through grassroots sources. I fit perfectly in that category, having no scientific degrees to speak of nor weight in the scientific community. They don't want panic or the collapse of the financial markets to start too soon. I don't either, but my conscience drove me to the edge until I wrote this book. I'm sure you can imagine these controllers have a need to relieve some of their guilt for having held back the information and ultimately costing millions if not billions of lives. Of course they just may want a few more to survive for selfish reasons. This would be so they have plenty to enslave for farming purposes, around their already-stocked fortified enclaves, once they begin to run low a few years from now.

A note about the tragic World Trade Center and Pentagon destruction. We've been BLINDSIDED by these events. There may be some positive changes in consciousness that have come about as a result. It now should be obvious there's one direction to ultimately look in order to protect yourself and loved ones: in the mirror. Government officials can not be trusted to protect us nor give us the information needed in order to protect ourselves. If you've ever doubted it before, you now clearly understand our way of life can and will be completely changed with one day's passing.

Six to eight weeks prior to the passing of Planet X, all will be able to see it in the sky as sort of a red cross with their naked eyes.

Will you be BLINDSIDED by the passing of Planet X in 2003?

BLINDSIDED

Warning, stop right here! Read no further if you don't want to understand how, why and when the Earth's surface is going to change so abruptly, as to possibly leading to taking out as much as 90% of the population in many areas. You'll find why these changes happen regularly, how often, who knows it, and how the information is being given out. You'll also grasp why this may be your first exposure to this knowledge, or at least the first untainted divulging.

There's absolutely nothing anyone can do about it. Our Sun's 10th planet disrupts the surface of every planet in our solar system as it passes on its regular orbit. Earth is not being singled out. Only a few hundred million people will survive. Now ask yourself this question. Do you want to be one of them? Do you have a sincere desire to pick up the pieces and help build a new one? This world's culture has unhealthy and healthy of all ages. Are you healthy and mature enough mentally, physically, emotionally and spiritually to give it a go? If not, forget you ever read this. The details and sources will be worthless to you in the short life you have left. Just keep living from day to day like there's no tomorrow. If you've any unhealthy personal habits like drug use, lack of exercise or over eating, don't worry about changing them. Most won't live any longer doing so. So enjoy whatever small pleasures guilt free from this point on. The things you've been putting off, do them now. You may never get another chance. If you don't like doing something, stop it. There's no point anymore.

Now for the rest of you who want a tomorrow, to be informed, forewarned and attempt to place a reservation for yourself and loved ones in the aftertimes, this could be the hardest-hitting book you'll ever read. The controllers of the media, money markets and the world's government leaders are fully aware and prepared. They are not going to announce the impending calamities, although Russia's leaders did pretty much let the story slip out at least once, which I'll detail a little later on here. For the most part they're only allowing this information out through grass-roots sources. So escape with me here among the grass, and you'll find out the many roots this information is being brought to you from.

Keeping this story out of the major media will delay the collapse of the world's economy, stock markets and real estate prices until the very last days, costing billions of lives. From this point on, don't expect the price of energy to come down much. These corporate energy controllers are fully aware that this is their last hurrah to gouge money from you.

I am not the origin for the information that follows. I have simply gathered together several sources for your perusal. I did not discriminate from where I obtained the information. Part of my motivation is to get you directly involved in looking inward to your own gut feelings and doing your own research. Many already sense something is wrong big time with Earth but can't put their finger on it. Be careful how you view this material. Some have a tendency to ignore all the sources in a body of information that causes great consternation if they determine just one or more are not acceptable. This kind of thinking is illogical. The utmost seriousness has gone into putting together this work of warning. A myriad of sources from the sciences, government, history, politics, legend and Spirit is combined here.

You will do yourself and loved ones a great disservice if your mind-set is to discount all you consider credible when presented side by side with sources your cultural experience and educational programming have not deemed worthy of consideration. Before the time of the greatest events, the overwhelmingly vast majority will see, hear and experience enough to know that our Earth is about to change dramatically again. By the time your awareness peaks into realization, it may be too late to prepare if you don't begin to get up to speed on the situation now.

I've spent my time researching, accumulating, organizing, discussing, and weeding out side agendas. I present this subject in such a way as to bring a quick clarity to the layman or someone who is completely unfamiliar with it. If you've never read anything about the when and why for Earth changes before, this work may be all you'll ever need. Reading up on endless conspiracies, for the most part, will not help you with your life. Understanding only this one may be important for your survival. Nailing down the science that shows the regularity of these events is important to see clearly how close to the end of this cycle we are.

Questions will come to mind when the acceptance of what is about to happen does set in. Will I have time to make it to a safe area? Am I there already? Will I have resources enough to sustain myself over an extended period of time, or the ability to create needed sustenance on an ongoing basis? Do I care to leave all which I hold dear to start anew? Am I just too married to or fearful of leaving my things, lifestyle and community, even at the expense of my life, if I can't take them with me?

Watch your thinking carefully as you read. Your mind may make up unsound reasons for ignoring the obvious to avoid the discomfort of having to prepare. It is an honor to be a vehicle or messenger of this information. I'm one of the many that have chosen or have been chosen or some combination thereof, to do this work. I'm sure I'll meet some people in the aftertimes that acknowledge me for warning and helping them survive one of the most severe physical calamities Earth has gone through.

On the other hand, others may wish they never learned or prepared because of the difficulties presented then compared to their lifestyle before. At that time I would simply say that YOU were primarily responsible for drawing the information toward yourself and determined your level of personal preparation. I'm not fishing now for your future thanks, but am trying to avoid you berating the messenger. Just learning now and not being able to prepare because of family ties or financial binds could end up causing needless worry, prior to your passing on. So, be careful before you jump in too deep here. It's not always better to know.

My belief system tells me that there is a reason for everything. Science is finding greater evidence for order in chaos at every turn. For those who would label me a messenger of doom, please do you and me a favor, DON'T READ THIS BOOK. My focus is to find people who want this information, or who have been drawn to it by whatever means to make their right choice. Staying alive might be a good one. The fact that you're reading this perhaps means that your gut instinct is telling you something is not quite right with the world, and the reasons you've run across thus far have been less than adequate.

There's no doom in being made aware that you live on the railroad tracks, the train is approaching and what time it will arrive, so you can pull up your roots to get the hell out of the way. It's ignorance that will put you in harm's way during the up-and-coming cataclysms. There will be many places that have a good chance of being safe. I'm now going to paint a word portrait using some of my words and mostly those of others. In order to view the mosaic, look at it in its entirety. Focusing too closely on one part or another might result in your missing the big picture.

This work could have been 10,000 pages or more. There is much more than that volume of material confirming all that is presented here. Studying the data and the myriad of different sources becomes very repetitious. I strongly urge you to do your own research if you need more information. Much more related truth is out there. Since I've outlined where to look and what to look for, it will be easy to obtain more sources for this subject matter. If you're like me, once you've seen enough of it, you'll quit looking for more, even though you've come to the understanding so much more exists. You'll then make your plans and go back to living your daily life. On the back burner of your mind you'll know there are some wild times and big changes just around the corner. Plus, you'll know, more than likely, that you'll survive them because of your ace-in-the-hole of being informed. Are you getting my drift here? These events are going to be exhilarating, adventurous and monumental.

Doom, gloom and fear shouldn't be your mind-set whatsoever. The most exciting, serious, unbelievably dramatic scenes you've ever viewed at the movies will be played out in your real life from day to day shortly, whether you watch the previews of this book or not.

Observatory Sightings of Planet X In Early 2001!

In 1983 X was first spotted by the IRAS (Infrared Astronomical Satellite); since then there has been a complete blackout of its existence by the controllers of the media and major observatories. X is now too close to cover up from smaller scopes. For the first time in modern history, in the year 2001, sightings of Planet X are being openly recorded. Three separate sightings from different parts of the world have reported it. The three observatories were located in South America, Switzerland and Arizona. I include two of the sightings and show you where to find the third and future ones later. Here is a short report from the Lowell Observatory in Arizona:

April 04, 2001, 03:06:45, Wed.: The operator described the object as diffuse and of approximate magnitude 11. The coordinates (in degree/minute/second format), with a margin of error according to the operator of +/-20 seconds (about .006 degrees) RA and +/-10 seconds (about .003 degrees) Dec were: RA 05 09 09Dec +16 31 49— In degree format the coordinates are: RA 5.1525Dec+16.5303

Next is an excited confirmed report and then denial from Switzerland.

Subject: 12th planet discovery.

Date: Wed., 07 Feb 2001 23:30:32 +0100

A whole team was contacting every observatory in France—just sent a message. The Neuchatel observatory got it. They are very excited, wondering if it is a comet or a brown dwarf, through the latest coordinates given. The daughter of the astronomer reports that they suspect a comet or a brown dwarf on the process to becoming a pulsar since it emits "waves". For those who would read French, I copy the message below: Salut! [NOT INCLUDED]

We were told by these excited folks who first sighted it, that we would get "at least" an image; next there was a long silence for over a week. Afterwards came the official denial that such a sighting had ever occurred at Neuchatal. As in most cover-ups, believe what is said first, and not what is retracted later. So they possess an image of X.

Later, I'll point out where the coordinates for the three sightings came from, how to find future coordinates, and where you can read about all the curious blocking attempts that happened before the third sighting. The powers that control the major observatories have been quietly observing it for years now. Because X is so close and easily observable, the only thing left for the controllers to do now is to discount what it is. When the fact of X's existence becomes more widespread, the powers that be will be used to drown out the reality of the calamities with words of reassurance. Their power to overshadow the truth is vast. Do expect the cover-up to continue to work for a short while with most.

For the better part of last century, astronomers have noticed perturbations in the outermost planets. These perturbations could only have been caused by another large heavenly body that is part of our solar system. Finding the archeological evidence is simple. The more you dig for evidence, the more you will find of quick regular severe surface changes and pole shifts at every turn. I have more than a sufficient quantity of these studies for you to browse through right here and point towards where to find several others that have accumulated much more. Later I'll show how the Ice Ages fit into the puzzle.

The 12th Planet by Zacharia Sitchin

Turning to ancient history will put the evidence into context. Many past civilizations explain Planet X's orbit length and destruction it causes during its passage in eloquent detail! Start with The 12th Planet by Zacharia Sitchin. Even historians of Astronomy are aware of the legends of a so-called "Star or Comet of Doom" or "Nemesis" that brings with it debris, as in meteors, and causes upheavals. For the most part aware political leaders have no clue what to do about the masses, so of course they aren't doing much. Their attitude is, an honest announcement would cause more problems than not. Writing this book to help and inform others is where I stand.

Finding out what changes Earth goes through and when the changes start, relative to each passage, will show you how many years we've been influenced by X's current approach and when it will arrive. This is not rocket science. It's easy to understand, but sweeping Earth changes in your immediate lifetime are difficult to fathom because of the enormity.

Since 1995-6, Earth's weather has changed dramatically. This is how it starts every time! To understand what the current effects of X are now, weather and seismic activity should be closely monitored throughout the globe. Watching and listening closely to the intentional and unintentional warnings from the world's government officials will add clarity to the picture. Studying legend, folklore and prophecy might finally grab your heart and seal your knowing.

Taking a little vacation time to reserve some time at a small observatory with coordinates and dates to find X, that I'll show you how to get later, might just shock you into action once you've seen it with your own eyes. Now, if you've some extra money, you could pay others to do your footwork for you in terms of further research and observatory time. I do caution you that there is as much disinformation as correct information. Much of the same truth I present here is intentionally mixed with skepticism and fabrications elsewhere.

If you don't do your own research, how do you know which is which [that] is being reported back to you? At some point you'll have to get used to doing things for yourself and possibly for others in the aftertimes. The monetary playing field will be equalized after X's passage. For the first few years, cash will be worthless. Even right preceding the events cash could devalue severely. The longer you wait to prepare, the greater the price you'll have to pay. If you wait too long, you'll pay the ultimate price.

In the aftertimes, barter and co-operation will be king if you luckily end up in the right community. Mad Max scenarios will reign elsewhere for a while, until they play themselves out. At a certain point you will have learned enough to make a prudent decision to leave unsafe areas. Starting with just a search of Pole Shift or Earth-changes information will land you in the middle of a mountain of evidence confirming Earth's surface changes regularly and quickly.

Ice Ages—Grade-School Science

Earth truly is one of the most dangerous planets in the Universe. Remember back in grade school when you were first told about Ice Ages? This was your first big hint that something goes wrong with your home planet Earth on a regular basis. Most of the researchers, who all agreed this phenomenon was real through the science of archeology, just didn't figure out the correct reason for it, or exactly how often it happens and why. Plus, they really mislabeled it. The poles and ice shifting to different parts of the globe are certainly not the only thing that happens. Different areas of the planet would show varying times for the last event when looking for only the effects of ice and cold. Yes, they discovered something absolutely real. No, most of them didn't know the correct why for the phenomenon.

The so-called Ice Ages are thought to have happened over a period of many years. In fact, the great mammoths found with tropical food in their stomachs that were flash-frozen is just one fact from the tip of the iceberg of evidence that shows changes happen very quickly. A little later I'll bore you to tears with Earth Science to show this. There are no so-called ice ages. Earth's crust slips over its molten core periodically as Planet X passes. This shifts the poles to different areas of the world periodically. Glaciers don't just magically start moving up or down from Earth's current poles on a regular basis. The poles themselves shift to different parts of the globe in a matter of hours. All life where the new poles settle flash-freezes instantaneously. A few thousand years ago Greenland was a polar ice cap of Earth. There's still way too much ice there for its latitude relative to the current poles.

You are solely responsible for determining for yourself what is proof or evidence. Even though this is very simple, most do not possess the mental capacity to piece together the varied disciplines to see what's right around the corner, even when laid out as concisely as I do in this short work. If they do see it easily, there's a shorter supply of people that are type "A" individuals that take action in their lives. Most will not want to leave obvious unsafe areas until Planet X is squarely in their view. In this case that will be fatal for the majority. This is just the sort of realization that gets to me. Even at my best I can only expect to awaken a small minority. For those who read, grasp the situation and prepare, you are in a very exclusive club. I don't like being correct on this issue.

Warnings will not be broadcast by public officials over the TV, radio, or newspapers. Warnings will not be broadcast by public officials over the TV or newspapers. Warnings will not be broadcast by public officials over the TV. A knock on the door from government workers of your city or state, saying it is time to evacuate, will not be forthcoming. There are just too many people to deal with. Don't you understand?

There would be no place prepared to evacuate to, or resources available to sustain the many over any length of time. Consequently the call to leave will not come. It's just too huge. You are alone in determining your fate. For those of you who tend to ignore important issues or can't handle the truth, this is one truth that will find you. Will it be when you look over your shoulder and see a tidal wave or a building collapsing down on you or in time enough to reach a safe area?

Remember this if you choose not to move from unsafe areas such as within 100-200+ miles of any coastline. This includes all of California and Florida. Please pay attention to everyone around you as the time approaches if you haven't made your move. You will see families silently moving away with talk of just a vacation, covering up that they are scurrying away to their shelters. Now for those who think God will give you a warning and take care of you. Hold that thought and consider this written work may be your warning.

ARCTIC MAY NOT HAVE BEEN ICY IN ICE AGE

By Reuters, Friday, September 07, 2001

LONDON—Imagine the Arctic Circle in the Ice Age. White and cold are probably two of the adjectives that first spring to mind. But archeologists say a recent discovery of animal bones and stone tools means humans lived there more than 40,000 years ago, and the region then may not have been covered in ice at all. An international team of scientists said this week they had discovered stone artifacts; reindeer, wolf, and horse bones; and a mammoth tusk with human-made marks on a dig at Mamontovaya Kurya in the northern reaches of Russia. The finds are the oldest documented evidence of human activity so far north.

"The bones and artifacts found suggest that the northeast must have been relatively dry and ice-free in this period of the Ice Age," archeologist John Gowlett said, commenting on the research in the scientific journal Nature. "It is not possible to determine whether they were left by Neanderthals or by some of the first modern humans in Europe, but... knowing who made the tools is less important than simply knowing that someone was adapted to the cold conditions," said Gowlett from the University of Liverpool.

Scientists Pavel Pavlov and John Inge Svendsen, who made the discoveries, said they were unsure who the mystery Arctic inhabitants were. "Either the Neanderthals expanded much further north than previously thought, or modern humans were present in the Arctic only a few thousand years after their first appearance in Europe," they said.

Sumerian Descriptions Of Our Solar System

The 6,000-year-old Sumerian descriptions of our solar system include one more planet they called "Nibiru", which translates into "Planet of the crossing". The descriptions of this planet by the Sumerians match precisely the specifications of "Planet X" (the Tenth Planet). Views from modern and ancient astronomy, which both suggest a highly elliptical, comet-like orbit, take Planet X into the depths of space, well beyond the orbit of Pluto. The Sumerian descriptions are being confirmed with modern advances in science. There are actual diagrams on well-preserved tablets from the Sumerian times that show how their accuracy for describing the planets is overwhelming!

United States Naval Observatory Calculations

Recent calculations by the United States Naval Observatory has confirmed the orbital perturbation exhibited by Uranus and Neptune, which Dr. Thomas C. Van Flandern, an astronomer at the observatory, says could only be explained by "a single planet". He and a colleague, Dr. Richard Harrington, calculated that the 10th planet to be two-to-five-times larger than Earth, and it has a highly elliptical orbit that takes it some 5 billion miles beyond that of Pluto.

In January 1981, several daily newspapers stated that Pluto's orbit indicates that Planet X exists. The report stated that an astronomer from the U.S. Naval Observatory told a meeting of the American Astronomical Society, that irregularity in the orbit of Pluto indicates that the solar system contains a 10th planet. He also noted that this came as no surprise to Zecharia Sitchin, whose book came out three years prior.

I've corresponded with one who has spoken with Sitchin in a private group. Sitchin knows that X is very close, but because of his position in the scientific community—well, you figure it out! I'm glad I don't have a Ph.D. in front of my last name or hold weight in the scientific community. Sitchin needs to concentrate on selling more books. He's too hot to talk about what he knows.

In 1982, NASA themselves officially recognized the existence of Planet X with an announcement, "An object is really there far beyond the outermost planets." Today NASA is not being forthcoming about X.

New York Times*, June 19, 1982

Something out there beyond the furthest reaches of the known solar system is tugging at Uranus and Neptune. A gravitational force keeps perturbing the two giant planets, causing irregularities in their orbits. The force suggests a presence far away and unseen, a large object, the long-sought Planet X.

There are mathematical irregularities in the orbits of the outer planets. Astronomers are so certain of this planet's existence that they have already named it "Planet X—the 10th Planet."

Headline News—Planet X Has Been Sighted!

Chief IRAS Scientist JPL, December 31st, 1983

One year later in 1983, the newly launched IRAS (Infrared Astronomical Satellite) quickly found Planet X. This is a summary from the Washington Post from the chief IRAS scientist of JPL in California: "A heavenly body as large as Jupiter and part of this solar system has been found in the direction of the constellation of Orion by an orbiting telescope." Now read that again. The disinformation drain-brain crew did their best to try to rewrite history again after this announcement was made. The public at large must be kept in the dumb-and-dumber category, is their thinking. They can't handle the truth.

The telescope found it right where it was sent to look. These scientists had known of its existence and location for years, but wanted to confirm it with our own technological eyes. This is a fact I strongly urge you to check out for yourself. There have been attempts to cover up this event and rewrite history.

Headlines from a few other dailies read as follows:

"Mystery Body Found in Space."

"Giant Object Mystifies Astronomers."

"At Solar System's Edge Giant Object is a Mystery."

"When IRAS scientists first saw the mystery body, they calculated that it could be as close as 50 billion miles and moving towards Earth."

Tombaugh was given credit for discovering Pluto in 1930, although Lowell spotted it earlier. Christie, of the U.S. Naval Observatory, discovered Charon, Pluto's moon, in 1978. The characteristics of Pluto derivable from the nature of Charon demonstrated that there must still be a large planet undiscovered because Pluto could not be the cause of the residuals, the "wobbles" in the orbital paths of Uranus and Neptune clearly identifiable. The IRAS (Infrared Astronomical Satellite), during '83-'84, produced observations of a tenth planet so robust that one of the astronomers on the project said that "all that remains is to name it"—from which point the information has become curiously guarded.

In 1992, Harrington and Van Flandern of the Naval Observatory, working with all the information they had at hand, published their findings and opinion that there is indeed a tenth planet, even calling it an "intruder" planet. Andersen of JPL later publicly expressed his belief that it could possibly be verified any time. The search was narrowed to the southern skies, below the ecliptic.

Harrington invited Sitchin, having read his book and translations of the Enuma Elish, to a meeting at his office. They correlated the current findings with the ancient records. Harrington acknowledged the detail of the ancient records while indicating where the tenth planet is in the solar system.

It is the opinion of this author that, in light of the evidence already obtained through the use of the Pioneer 10 and 11, the two Voyager space craft, the Infrared Imaging Satellite (IRAS, '83-84) and the data available to Harrington when consulting with Sitchin, that the search has already been accomplished. In fact, the planet has already been found.

It is interesting that Harrington dispatched an appropriate telescope to Black Birch, New Zealand to get a visual confirmation. The data lead him to expect that it would be below the ecliptic in the southern skies at this point in its orbit. On Harrington's early death, the scope was immediately called back. Hmmm—as one observer noted, "almost before he was cold". ... Robert Harrington used to be the head of the Naval Observatory, and Tom van Flandern worked closely with Harrington at the U.S. Naval Observatory. (The Alien Question: An Expanded Perspective, by Neil Freer)

What obvious message do you think was sent to Sitchin, Van Flandern and anyone else in the know, when Harrington suddenly met with an early death at the same time the scope was being pulled back? Sometimes an early death is meant to accomplish more than just keeping one person quiet.

Nemesis Theory, Nemesis Fact

In 1985, numerous astronomers were intrigued with the "Nemesis Theory". This was proposed most recently by Walter Alvarez of the University of California and his father, the Nobel Prize winning physicist Luis Alvarez. They noticed regular extinctions of various species (including the dinosaurs), and proposed that a comet, "Death Star", or planet periodically brings with it a shower of meteors and smaller comet-like objects that wreak havoc, death and destruction to the inner Solar System, including Earth.

In August 1988, a report by Dr. Robert S. Harrington of the U.S. Naval Laboratory calculated that its mass is probably four times that of Earth.

Planet X is 4 to 5 times larger than of Earth, 20-25 times its mass and nearly 100 times as dense. X is a professional wrestler of the planetary community compared to other planets of our solar system. It is a slow smoldering brown dwarf star.

When X passes between Earth and our Sun, Earth will align to its strong magnetic or gravitation temporarily, instead of our Sun's.

For a short while X will be Earth's strongest gravitational voice or influence. Earth's rotation will then pause for a couple days, like it has many times before recorded in several texts from ancient history.

The controllers of NASA and its insiders are fully aware of this. Planet X's destruction and disruption of Earth should change your view of ancient history. The ancients were not the unsophisticated people common history books have led you to believe. Earth societies have reached a pinnacle of development several times before only to be put back in technological and evolutionary time by the wrecking ball of X. Every time the ones left to pick up the pieces and start building over were so busy surviving for the first few decades afterwards, that the elevated cultures they originated from disappeared into myth and folklore.

Many of the advances and discoveries of our so-called modern world took centuries to be rediscovered anew. Listen closely to whatever texts and knowledge from our ancient ancestors that still remain. Their truth is our truth.

Thanks to 2 years of research by Andy Lloyd, another piece to this puzzle emerges. Nibiru is one of many names from ancient culture that reference Planet X. A segment of Andy's research follows:

"The unstable nature of the dark star's orbit means that it has precipitated periodic change to the orbital radii and climates of the terrestrial planets over the last 4 billion years. Among my findings is that Nibiru is a brown dwarf, a failed star capable of emitting only the faintest reddish light, but whose gravity and infra-red energy emission is sufficient to warm its habitable moons. These moons number 7, it seems, and the infrequent perihelion passages of Nibiru are associated with the 'return of the gods'.

"When Nibiru is in close proximity to the Sun, both these bodies become excited by each other. The brown dwarf, in particular, becomes 're-lit' from its slumbering embers and 'flares up' with reddish light. The coronal discharge emitted is then swept back by the action of the Solar Wind, giving the appearance of fiery wings whose flight is directed towards the Sun."

32 Names for Planet X

Ancient history, astronomy, folklore and prophecy record many names for Planet X. The Sumerians called it the "12th planet" or "Nibiru" (translation: planet of passing). Between the Babylonians and Mesopotamians there were at least three names: "Marduk", "The King of The Heavens" and The "Great Heavenly Body". The ancient Hebrews referred to it as the "Winged Globe" because of its long orbit high among the stars. The Egyptians had two names "Apep" or "Seth". The Greeks called it "Typhon" after a feared leader and "Nemesis" (one of its most telling names). Other ancient peoples have given it labels such as "The Celestial Lord Shiva" and "God of Destruction". To the ancient Chinese, it was known as "Gung-gung", "The Great Black" or "Red Dragon". The Phoenicians said it was "The Great Phoenix". The Hebrews called it "Yahweh". The Mayans called it "Celestial Quetzalcoatl". The celestial body was known to the Latins as "Lucifer". Revelation 8:10-12: The name of the star is "Wormwood".

From works of prophecy, there are other names for X. The "Red Star" or "Blue Star" are of the Hopi Indian and Gordan Michael Scallion designation. The "Fiery Messenger" is in the Ramala prophecy. The "Great Star" is from the Book of Revelation. "His Star" is how it is referred to in Edgar Cayce Readings. The "Great Comet" and "The Comet of Doom" is right out of the Grail Message. From an early English prophet named "Mother Shipton", "The Fiery Dragon" was the name she gave, as seen from her second sight. Our solar system's "10th Planet" is "X".

There's also "The Intruder" and "The Perturber" from astronomy. Apparently 25% of all observed comet orbits are being measurably perturbed by the magnetic or gravitational pull of this planet. The largest of our planets' orbits are being perturbed toward Orion.

No matter what the name used, it's the same object that has the same effects before and during its passage of Earth. The Sumerians also had a name for its approximate 3600-year orbit, "A Shar". The ancient Hindu astronomers gave the name "Treta Yuga" for its 3600-year orbit. The destruction X causes even had a label "Kali Yuga". Some of the names given by the ancients are akin to names for god. These people viewed the power and destruction that this planet brings with it to be so significant as to believe it could only come from the hand of god. It's not that they worshipped the planet, rather they just had great respect for the sweeping changes it brought with each passing.

Discovering Archeology, July/August 1999

Look to Discovering Archeology, July/August 1999, page 72. The date 1628 B.C. is given for a worldwide catastrophic event. The planet-wide effect shows up in the growth of trees that can be viewed by studying the narrowed rings from that time. This is approximately 3600 years ago and coincides with Nibiru's return at this time. Page 70 shows a medieval picture with a large comet-looking object, appearing as big or larger than the Sun streaking across the sky horizontally with a giant tail. This is noteworthy because of its comparative size and direction in the sky. It is not headed down toward Earth and yet is still causing much destruction below. The presupposed premise of the article is that a comet impact had to have taken place to cause the global calamities, and yet the very picture chosen from medieval times denotes an object just passing by. Pictured under this massive object moving overhead is a town that is shaking apart with hysterical and even some suicidal people in the streets.

Destructive Brown Dwarf

Planet X's orbit takes it back and forth between two suns. The other sun it orbits around is our Sun's twin. Now, you might think that our solar system is not binary, although most solar systems have been recently discovered to be binary. Our Sun does have a twin. It lies in the direction of Orion. It is not composed of the same material as our Sun and thus will never ignite. It is a dark or dead sun and does not revolve around our Sun like most twin suns do. Why hasn't this discovery been announced, you might ask? It has if you know where to look. It's real simple why the information isn't more widely known.

There's a brown dwarf star that orbits between both suns, instead of around just one of them. Its orbit is rather long, being about 3660 years, so we don't see it go by too often. It is still one of our family of planets in our solar system. It's like a half brother that's been ostracized by its two parents, but still comes visiting habitually. X is kinda like the black sheep of our solar system's family. When it finally comes by for a visit it just screws everything up and then leaves. It happens every time, so I guess the rep is well deserved.

Now stepping back away from humor, if you're going to try to keep a lid on the "destructive brown dwarf" (nothing kinky here) that's currently inbound, it's not a very good idea to notify John Q. Public about the relatively recently discovered second sun that's one of the foci of its orbit. There's no reason to promote important clues if you don't have to. Besides, only very powerful and expensive scopes or deep space probes can see the other sun. This makes it fairly easy to keep it under wraps from the majority. This is one of many reasons the orbiting Hubble telescope live feed is hidden from our view. Hubble was paid for with tax dollars, so you'd think they would give us a live peak. Nope, it's not going to happen.

Diagram Of Our Solar System Includes The Dead Twin Sun

and the 10th Planet a.k.a. Planet X

This diagram appeared in the 1987 edition of the New Science and Invention Encyclopedia published by H.S. Stuttman, Westport, Connecticut, U.S.A. The continuing conspiracy to cover up X falls short when matter-of-fact evidence is found in respected credible publications like this. The article accompanying this diagram was discussing the purpose of the Pioneer 10 and 11 space probes. Clearly shown on the diagram are our Sun's dark twin Dead Star and Planet X, a.k.a. the 10th (or 12th) Planet.

The primary point made was to show the paths of the two probes and how they created a triangulated sighting. The probes just happened to be verifying, through this triangulation, the sighting of Planet X. The history of deep space probes is mentioned because Pioneer 10 and 11 were said to be one of the first. There's absolutely no mention of any controversy about what was out there or what the probes were looking at. The disinformation to hide X's approach and long-known history of devastation it causes as it passes each time, did not reach this far.

It's not hard to imagine a conspiracy as large as this one, just can't weed out all the evidence. It's a big world with a lot of people, publications, and information sources, present and past. You know what could be a great thing about this cover-up? The information that it misses may get a bright light of emotion and attention shone on it that wouldn't normally have been there without the effort of trying to hide it. There's a possibility if this information I present gets out quickly and broadly enough, there might be more people paying attention to X than if there was never any conspiracy to cover it up at all. That thought is just a hope and a prayer at this point.

Encyclopedia Diagram

When a planet's orbit is between two suns, instead of one, that orbit is a bit peculiar. It spends 99.99% of its time slowly going away from one of the suns, after it passes it initially quickly, to reach the half-way point. Then, as if falling like a rock off a cliff, the gravity of the sun it's approaching takes over, and in a relative flash it travels the other half of its journey. X reached the halfway point, after a little over 1800 years of traveling away from the Dark Sun toward our lit one, sometime in the year 2000. It only takes right about 3 years to travel the rest of the distance. In fact, the majority of its journey from halfway to here happens the last 9 months before it arrives. Zoom! It'll be cooking with its greatest speed by the time it passes. Once it crosses Pluto's orbit, it will only take about 90 days to pass right between Earth and the Sun.

X's inbound approach is being closely monitored by our best telescopic equipment on and off Earth, but now small private observatories have started spotting it, which are not controlled. The most accurate calculation for X's next passage is now Springtime, or May 2003. Ouch! I know. I wish it were not so soon also.

Many people have been lulled into complacency because the Y2K problems and a simple planetary alignment were over-hyped; then nothing happened.

Let me try to jump off the page here and slap you up 'side the face. It's the under-hyped, covered-up, and intentionally confusing one that is going to get you.

The preprogrammed laugh track given to you by the media controllers many of you have been playing back and forth to each other every time the mention of a tenth planet or Planet X comes up, is going to break by the end of this book if it hasn't already. This is it! Planet X is The One. It is going to Rock Your World. It's the Big Kahuna. The Main Event. The Real Deal. Let's get ready to get Rumbled! There will be no cable TV required or $40 needed to view this event. It will be live, life-and-death, in-your-face action. You will see it wherever you are whether you want to or not. God help ya. It's time to start praying....

Ancient History Revisited

Each time X approaches, it starts a chain of events that culminates with its passing by and causing our Earth's surface to change abruptly. These changes are the cause of massive death and destruction. History is rich with these stories. Ruins of past great civilizations stand as monuments to these past events. The legends of Atlantis, Lumeria, Mayans and several others going under the sea or abandoned can be completely explained by the regular passing of Planet X. Just off the coastlines of many lands exist remnants of great sophisticated societies, such as found off Florida, Japan, the Mediterranean [and recently near Cuba] and more.

Many from the past didn't draw the connection between what looked to be a large comet overhead and what they were experiencing at the time (volcanoes erupting, earthquakes, land masses sinking and rising, tidal waves, severe weather, fires, floods, droughts and the accompanying food shortages). Some ancient writers simply noted what they thought was a foreboding sign or messenger of the prophets when they viewed X in the sky, instead of the cause for their woes.

Non-Religious 7 years of Tribulation

In 1995, Planet X got close enough that its far reaching magnetic and gravitational arms of influence started to affect Earth again significantly, which increases now daily. The closer it gets to us, the faster it moves toward Earth, and the stronger its magnetic and gravitational effects become. There is an ebb and flow to these events that are akin to the calm waves before the next big set. Surfers would be most familiar with this analogy. Expect things to get worse as it approaches nearer but not in a straight line.

Our own Sun's gravity is what is pulling it closer and faster along with X's own gravitational pull to the Sun. Planet X never collides with Earth or the Sun because of the newly uncovered repulsion force which comes into play as they near each other. There is still great reason to be forewarned and concerned.

Earth now has two strong magnetic/gravitational influences in its vicinity (our Sun being the main one), and its largely iron magnetic core [sic] is heating up because of it. It's like a car with the accelerator and brake on at the same time. Our Sun is pushing and pulling on Earth one way and Planet X is now upsetting this with its own set of influences. A delicate ecological, environmental and planetary balance between our Sun and Earth is increasingly being disrupted by the approach of X as it draws closer with each passing day. All the worldwide unusual weather that has broken all previous records and the seismic activity as of late is perfectly clear.

There's no need to waste time or millions of more dollars on equipment. Inquiring into the why or when things will happen by setting up and programming supercomputers are useless and futile. Today's melting and breaking up of massive glaciers and ice shelves, storms, floods, tsunamis, volcanic and seismic activity, fires, meteor showers, droughts and related energy shortages, etc. (you're paying for it now, baby!), with all the loss of life, are only a preview of what is to come.

Surviving massive death and destruction will make you feel more alive! You've been forewarned. You can do it.

The records of this approximately 7 years of turmoil before each regular passing are part of biblical record from at least the last three times it sailed by Earth. The Jewish exodus and Noah's great flood would be the last and third-to-last passing of X. With ancient historical, archeological science, weather, seismic data, and a small observatory, you don't need prophecy to predict that the same cycle of events are happening again now during X's current approach.

You'd be clueless to ignore it! This is but a minor taste of what the passage will be like. And yet even these relatively small events are the cause of many fatalities and much destruction. Several areas of the world will begin to be severely affected as the date of passing inches nearer, so don't think you can wait until the last minute and then jet away safely.

Time is short. Now, in May 2001, X is 2 years away and approaching from Orion. Check it out for yourself, man! Find an Observatory and get someone to help you. Go and do a careful analysis of the world's weather and seismic activity over the last 5 years and see for yourself how dramatically things have changed from before that time. Then think about the media's explanation of global heating and cooling or Sun cycles. Understand that one volcano can put up more hydrocarbons with one eruption than our worldwide dirty civilization can in a year. So we are the cause of only a minor part of the changes Earth is experiencing, and certainly have nothing to do with the up-tick in the seismic and volcanic activity over the last few years.

Government Posts Picture of Planet X on the Internet, July 2001!

Well, this is the latest addition to this book. Apparently a relatively quiet stir was beginning to brew because of the number of sightings of Planet X from uncontrolled observatories early in 2001. Now guess what the powers that be went and did? In order to quiet the rumblings and concerns, a picture of X was posted on the net to save face. Aren't you thankful that they'd be so kind and considerate? Now, do you think they mislabeled X or told the truth straight out as they know it? Think hard now. This is multiple choice and you have two choices.

I'm sorry, I'm laughing out loud as I write this. Here's what they called it: "2001 KX76, large reddish chunk of something, Kuiper Belt Object". I think the disinformation crew stayed up all night, smoking funny cigarettes and worrying about what they were going to call it, then they finally agreed to label it everything they could think of and nothing at all. "Large reddish chunk of something" is my favorite part of the label they came up with for X. This is the part of the bull that is trying to say "we really truly don't know what it is, believe us please."

Because X is still far away, it of course appears small. So, these slick Willies are trying to say, it is instead relatively small and close now. Well if this object is close and in Pluto's neighborhood, why haven't we seen it before? Why is it red? Why did it conveniently show up in the exact same part of the heavens as Planet X was spotted a few weeks earlier coming in from the Orion Galaxy? If it is so easy to see now, why wasn't it shown to us earlier? Are you thinking about these questions at all!? Disinformation equals lie. Lie equals cover-up. Cover-up equals conspiracy. Conspiracy is that dirty word we've all been preprogrammed to turn our heads away from and snicker at in disbelief. It's time to embrace and romance one conspiracy in your life if you have any desire to keep yours!

Alas, large approaching objects that seem small at first, appear larger over time as they get closer. A year from now, when X appears larger in size because it's much closer, they are going to have to change their story. Hmmm, what new nonsense will they dish out next? How will they account for their changing story? Their BS is going to smell worse and get funnier as they pile it higher and higher. At a certain point when X is just a few weeks away, the BS will stink so bad you'll just get stone cold silence if you question it.

Ask yourself this question. If this "large reddish chunk of something" was close, small, and back-lit from our Sun, why doesn't it appear brighter? Why does it look dull red? Here's an explanation you won't hear from NASA. Maybe it's a slow smoldering brown dwarf star that generates its own dull red light deep in space from the molten fissures on the surface of its crust? Anyway, here is their picture of X [not shown]. Take a good look and read what they have to say, if you like fairy tales. I'll give them credit for their sincere title above the picture. Lies are more believable when labeled with the truth. "LARGE OBJECT DISCOVERED ORBITING SUN".

Large Object Discovered Orbiting Sun

By Larry O'Hanlon, Discovery News, 7/3/01

The discovery of a large reddish chunk of something orbiting in Pluto's neighborhood has reignited the idea that there may be more than nine planets in the solar system. Then again, it could also mean there are only eight planets, depending on your point of view. What the discoverers are calling 2001 KX76 might be one of the largest "Kuiper Belt Objects" or KBOs found in what is essentially a second asteroid belt beyond the orbit of Neptune. Initial reports give 2001 KX76 a diameter of 900 to 1200 kilometers—roughly the size of Pluto's moon, Charon. Pluto itself, it should be noted, is smaller than our own Moon.

Because KBOs are believed to have very elongated orbits around the Sun, they spend a lot of time on dark, centuries-long excursions into deep space. That makes them very hard to find, said astronomer Robert Millis, director of the Lowell Observatory, which was involved in the discovery. Astronomers at the Lowell Observatory have teamed up with colleagues from MIT and the Large Binocular Telescope Observatory to hunt for KBOs on the less remote parts of their orbits. "There are certainly lots of (KBOs) in distant parts of their orbits now and we can't detect them," said Millis.

The possibility that 2001 KX76 has big brothers and sisters again raises the thorny question of what can be called a planet and what cannot. So far there is no good definition of exactly what is a planet, said astronomer Brian Marsden of Harvard University's Minor Planet Center. The matter only gets more confusing when you add KBOs and free-floating planets discovered outside our solar system.

Historically, Pluto was designated a planet when it was discovered in the 1930s because it was thought to be much larger than it is, Marsden said. The 900-kilometer-wide asteroid Ceres was also considered a planet when it was discovered, until its siblings were turned up and revealed the existence of the asteroid belt between Mars and Jupiter. If 2001 KX76 is any indication of larger KBOs out there, it might also lead to the demotion of Pluto from puniest planet to king of KBOs, said Marsden. Millis prefers a third alternative: "There may exist a new class of planets."

I couldn't even get this new updated version of this book out before the fantasy fellas or rather the disinformation crew went and changed their stories about X already. It looks like Planet X has already grown in estimated size from 1200 kilometers or roughly 545 miles across to now as much as 870 miles in diameter. When will this diameter range increase next? They've also added to the long list of funny labels. They're now calling it a "Giant Asteroid", an "icy rock", a "spherical space rock", a "minor planet" and a "Giant space rock".

They even say it's "THE LARGEST ASTEROID EVER FOUND". Wow. Good for them! They found that piece of paper with the additional BS labels for X which they dropped on the floor that night with the cigarette roaches.

<http://www.eso.org/outreach/press-rel/pr-2001/phot-27-01.html#note3>

Pay close attention to these articles. Sometimes the most difficult thing to explain away is just completely left out when piling lie on top of lie. The hardest thing for them to explain away is its color. It's not mentioned in these new articles at all. It is RED! Where do they point that out here? They don't. "The large reddish chunk of something" suddenly has no color.

Asteroids are usually all different kinds of shapes. It also happens to be spherical or round. I wonder why? This object just grew in size in less than a month. They say it is the "largest asteroid ever found now". Well at least they are giving it an up-tick in status it deserves.

Wasn't this object in Pluto's neighborhood a few weeks ago? Now it is "far out in the Solar System". Are these guys confused or just nervous as hell and trying to say everything they can about it except what they know is the truth? If X was found in May, why did they wait till August to disclose it? Why did they lay the blame of the initial find on two separate Observatories in different parts of the world both back in the month of May? Did it take them that long to decide what sort of BS was going to be printed alongside of the picture? Hmmm.

Again, why is there no mention of this object being Red? Is all this sounding fishy to you yet? The astronomer David C. Jewett makes an interesting statement that sums it all up. "Size doesn't matter." So, let's go ahead and ignore the elephant that just walked over the hill in our vicinity. In quotes is one thing Dave had to say, "It fits in with a pattern"—yes, of large red elephants that walk in our backyard.

In the movie Swordfish John Travolta's character teaches the audience how powerful a tool redirecting attention is. Introducing the new virtual telescope is a simple technique to redirect your attention. Naming Planet X the "Largest Asteroid" is just too alarming by itself. So they turn your minds attention away from the Giant Red Elephant in our big backyard toward the new pair of binoculars they found it with. This simple redirecting of your attention away from X to the scope is supposed to help hide several items that have changed from the first disclosure in early July 2001. First, that X's size estimates have increased to the point where it is now being given the label "Largest Asteroid".

The latest picture posted of it shows its color to be blue instead of red. In the July disclosure the statement "large reddish chunk of something" was used. Now there is no mention of its red color and it's suddenly blue. Brown dwarfs are red. If they determined it was time to say it's the "Largest Asteroid"—it's going to get a lot more attention than the first disclosure. They determined this was the time to get rid of the red color to stop speculation around it being a brown dwarf with all the new eyes on its size.

In the BBC disclosure/article there is a heading that is titled "NO DANGER". Why would they mention danger if it's just an asteroid out in deep space? I tell you, I am completely reassured for my safety now that I've read "NO DANGER". I was worried for a minute until I read this quote: "This asteroid is one of the ones we should be least afraid of." Yea, right. Whenever I see the government(s) describing anything, I develop my concern directly in proportion to the basket full of frivolous descriptions and statements purporting no concern! Under the heading "NO DANGER" they say X is an "icy rock". Ask yourself this question. If this is an icy rock, why is it red!? Could it be a red snow cone maybe? Bloody red ice is what these guys have been drinking trying to cover this up. Myself and one friend could have done a better job of creating a cover story to hide this planet. Jesus, what a bunch of bungling fools. Ok, I'm being judgmental to the negative. Perhaps they were told to print one thing and wrote another, so that thinking rational people could see what they were doing and prepare for Planet X's passage. The last line in the BBC article says that a new mythological name for the object is forthcoming. May I suggest "Nibiru". (Translates into "planet of passing"; Planet X's name from ancient Sumierian text)

Giant Asteroid Found Far Out In Solar System

By Frank D. Roylance, Baltimore Sun Staff, 8/26/01

European scientists say object near Pluto's orbit is biggest of its kind.

For 200 years the giant asteroid Ceres has held the title as the largest known "minor planet" in the solar system. Ceres is a spherical space rock orbiting in the asteroid belt between Mars and Jupiter. It is nearly 600 miles in diameter, roughly the distance from Baltimore to Chicago. Now a team of European astronomers is claiming that Ceres has been eclipsed in size by a newly discovered object, found near the orbit of Pluto.

The new asteroid could be as big as 870 miles across, according to calculations by a team led by Gerhard Hahn of the German Aerospace Center in Berlin. The team's news release called the data "decisive... relegating [Ceres] to second place after holding the asteroid size record for two hundred years."

Not so fast, said Brian Marsden, director of the International Astronomical Union's Minor Planet

Center. He said an asteroid's size can't be precisely determined without first knowing both its distance and its brightness, or reflectivity—also called its "albedo". The Europeans have securely fixed the object's orbit and distance, he said.

Too soon to tell

But "it's a little premature for them to boldly come along and give a size, when they're still assuming an albedo". More precise observations are needed, he said. The new asteroid was discovered in May by a team led by Robert L. Millis, director of the Lowell Observatory in Flagstaff, Arizona. It was temporarily dubbed 2001 KX76. It was found in an orbit beyond Neptune, about 4 billion miles from the Sun, in the inner regions of a vast, icy realm of the outer solar system called the Kuiper Belt. The discovery team made a preliminary estimate of KX76's diameter of between 595 and 788 miles, or about half the size of the planet Pluto.

More precise calculation

Thursday, however, the European Space Agency Information Center announced a more precise orbital calculation for KX76 using a "virtual telescope" to digitally search for the asteroid on star photos taken years ago. Coupled to the same assumptions about KX76's brightness, the new orbital data boosted the asteroid's presumed diameter to between 744 and 868 miles. Both KX76's discoverers and the Europeans assumed that the asteroid's albedo lay somewhere between those of another Kuiper Belt asteroid, called 20,000 Varuna, and a typical comet nucleus from that region of the solar system.

David C. Jewitt, an astronomer at the University of Hawaii and co-discoverer last year of the Ceres-sized Varuna, said it makes no difference to science whether KX76 is bigger than Ceres. "It's just a record-keeping thing," he said. The real importance of KX76's size, he said, is that it "fits in with a pattern". More than 400 Kuiper Belt objects of various sizes have been found since 1992. "And that size distribution probably extends all the way up to Pluto [1,426 miles in diameter] and probably includes Pluto as one of those bodies," he said. And, he said, "it's quite possible there are a few objects bigger than Pluto waiting to be found."

Now here is how the BBC in Europe carried it.

By Helen Briggs, BBC News Online

A giant space rock has entered the record books as the largest known asteroid. European astronomers confirmed on Friday that a distant object seen circling our star near Pluto had broken a 200-year-old record. The previous incumbent was the asteroid Ceres which was discovered in 1801.

People who believe that Pluto is just a minor planet will have more proof now. Lars Lindberg Christensen of the Hubble European Space Agency. The new object is much bigger, about half the size of Pluto, and is very distant from the Earth. The asteroid was first spotted in May by astronomers at the Cerro Tololo Observatory, Chile. Follow-up studies put its size at 1200 kilometres or more across.

Major and minor

The asteroid is of great interest to astronomers not just because of its massive size but because it could shed light on the debate over Pluto's classification as a major planet. Some astronomers believe that Pluto, the smallest planet in the Solar System, is not big enough to be considered a true planet and should instead be called a minor planet. Lars Lindberg Christensen of the Hubble European Space Agency Information Centre, Garching, Germany, said the discovery added weight to this argument. "People who believe that Pluto is just a minor planet will have more proof now," he told BBC News Online.

'No danger'

The icy rock is very distant from the Earth. Mr. Christensen said there was no "apparent danger" that it could ever collide with our planet. "This asteroid is one of the ones we should be least afraid of," he said.

Kuiper Belt Objects

Icy planetary bodies that orbit beyond Neptune in the distant region of the Solar System. More than 400 such objects are currently known. They are believed to be remnants of the formation of the Solar System and among the most primitive objects available for study. The observations were carried out at the European Southern Observatory with the world's first operational "virtual telescope", Astrovirtel. "The concept of a virtual telescope is a highly sophisticated science tool that mines all of the databases to find answers to questions," said Mr. Christensen. The technology allows astronomers to combine data from conventional telescopes with a powerful search tool. The asteroid has been designated 2001 KX76 for the time being but will eventually get a real name. As a Kuiper Belt Object, it must be given a mythological name associated with creation.

Estimated sizes, size quotes, locations (or a sampling of BS)

- THE LARGEST ASTEROID EVER FOUND
- 900 to 1200 kilometers
- 595 and 788 miles across
- 600 miles in diameter, roughly the distance from Baltimore to Chicago
- Roughly the size of Pluto's moon Charon
- half the size of Pluto
- distant object seen circling our star near Pluto
- about 4 billion miles from the Sun
- one of the largest "Kuiper Belt Objects" or KBOs
- smaller than our own Moon
- near the orbit of Pluto
- in a second asteroid belt beyond the orbit of Neptune
- massive size
- size can't be precisely determined
- very distant from the Earth
- beyond Neptune in the distant region of the Solar System

If ever there was a smoking gun of a cover-up here it is. There happens to be dozens of articles about this 2001 KX76 now. Here is a clip from one. It has now been confirmed that they have records of this object going back at least 18 years. If it was fainter and smaller back then, now it's clearer, larger and getting closer.

Why do they say it was first discovered back in May 2001 by two separate observatories in different parts of the globe? If you ask them I'm sure you'll get an ear full of credentialed official-sounding nonsense.

Just to drive my point in a little deeper and twist, wasn't it exactly 18 years ago on the last day of 1983 that the chief scientist of the IRAS satellite announced they'd found the 10th planet to 6 daily newspapers? I think the Keystone Cops are in charge of this conspiracy. They admittedly have 18 years worth of data on 2001 KX76 and the 10th planet was officially found 18 years ago.

The first two articles back in early July 2001 mention it being red. There's a picture that shows it to be red to go with the article. This red object stands out in a sea of blue ones like a sore thumb. The half dozen new articles in August don't mention it being red at all. Now there's a new picture to go with the new disinformation. When my son was growing up he described everything to me as happening suddenly. Well suddenly 2001 KX76 or whatever nonsense name they give it is BLUE! Too many slow smoldering brown dwarfs are red perhaps? Maybe they had to change the color in midstream to deflect the brown dwarf questions?

In the entire list of speculative names they gave this object not one time could they say it was possibly a brown dwarf star. They don't sound too sure of themselves so why not mention brown dwarf as a possibility also? Is it a bad word? Now all of a sudden we have the "largest asteroid ever recorded" and it's growing, changing colors and shifting locations. X is red. It's just too difficult to explain away the color and not mention the possibility of it being a smoldering brown dwarf. So why not go and doctor the picture to make it look blue. Sounds good to me. If somebody asks about it, we've got a whole new paragraph of double-speak ready and waiting to explain away the new color. At least now we won't have to mention the new color in the latest articles because most other objects along side of it are the same new color blue. It's difficult to bite my tongue and not say what I think of these people behind this cover-up. Here's the piece that admits they have pictures from 18 years ago.

The latest is this. The label 2001 KX76 has been used to identify at least two separate objects near where Planet X is coming in from. The orbital elements have changed. On the back cover you can see the original double red image from July 2001; one is Planet X. So, this is one the techniques that NASA is using to hide X. To find the latest coordinates, used successfully several times this year (2001) to find X, go here: <http://www.zetatalk.com/usenet/use90207.htm>

The search was successful: The astronomers were able to find several photographic plates on which faint images of 2001 KX76 could be identified—some of these plates had been obtained as early as 1982. The exact sky positions were measured and with accurate positional data now available over a time span of no less than 18 years.

Subject: 2001 KX76 (Labelled on e-group "Thank You all for your support")

Somebody recently asked about 2001 KX76; I'm not taking the time to go check who, but I want to thank you for that question. Because of Sol's answer, ZT, a personal friend of mine—and an astronomer in Italy, I've added and changed part of my text to reflect a new level of understanding about how the disinfo-boys are handling this at NASA.

I just got that in under the wire today before the books got printed. A professional computer programmer friend blew up the pictures of the old red 2001 KX76 and the new one blue one until they were an inch wide. He told me several weeks ago they were absolutely not the same object. I listened, and filed it away in my head, and did not follow up on it. Next an astronomer in Italy told me the orbit elements were taken down at the Harvard site for 2001 KX76, for a few days, and then reposted different. It still didn't hit me yet. Not until the question and answer from Sol/ZT came up on this list did all these things sink in. The new 2001 KX76 was not Planet X. Well, I'm glad this realization came in time enough for me to make a quick change to the text.

THANK YOU

I want to thank John Couch Adams, Urbain Le Verrier, and David Todd for determining that the perturbations or deviations of Uranus portend another planet in our solar system. Their work was done in the mid-1800s. Many others followed with the same conclusions.

Thanks goes to Percival Lowell for his insight and determination to find the 10th planet was so great, he built a small observatory in Arizona to do so about a century ago. He would have been proud to have found out that his own Lowell Observatory was one of the first PRIVATE observatories around the world to have spotted Planet X early on in 2001. I wonder what Lowell would have thought about how the coordinates were obtained? The intuitive Nancy Lieder, who claims to have telepathic communication with a group of aliens known as zetas/greys, supplied the coordinates. No matter how obtained, it's the success that counts.

Thanks to Gerry Neugebauer, who was the chief scientist of the IRAS satellite. Before the media clampdown, he publicly spoke to 6 daily newspapers informing everyone they had found the 10th planet, the last day in 1983.

United States Naval Observatory astronomers Dr. Thomas C. Van Flandern and Dr. Richard Harrington, thank you very much for all your work. They had the technology at their fingertips, at the right time, and publicly announced their certainty of having found Planet X. Sometimes a martyr is needed to shine a brighter light and bring greater attention to an extremely important issue. The largest thanks again goes to Dr. Richard Harrington for paying that ultimate price.

I also acknowledge the "gangsters that rule our world" crowd, for their part in creating this martyr. From their extensive mortal options menu, a so-called accident was chosen—sure, right.

President Vladimir Putin and Russia's parliamentary leaders deserve a special thanks for publicly revealing what they expect to happen in 2003. They may be part of the "gangsters of our world" crowd, but they obviously don't care what the other gangsters think, say or tell them about silence! They govern their own country, and do and say what they want, when they want. I've got to admire that. I hope they'll create a better place for themselves after "the massive population shrinkage" they say is expected.

Thanks go to Andrei Shukshin for writing this story and to Reuters wire service for broadcasting it, Sept. 13, 2000.

I also want to thank the disinformation crew or media controllers for selfish reasons. They've done a great job of keeping this story out of the public's eye. The information that is available has been muddied up to the extent that most still won't consider, understand, accept or see it yet. Thanks for sacrificing millions of lives so I can still go cash checks at the bank today. I do hope to put a kink in their plans with my work here so the house of cards or financial/money/real estate markets of the world collapse a little more quickly than they've got planned. Having said that, my gut feelings tell me their plans will not be changed in the slightest and have factored myself and others like me in already.

So, I'm just another proverbial fly in the ointment.

I've got to give credit to Richard W. Noone, who wrote the book 5/5/2000, Ice: The Ultimate Disaster.

He didn't quite get the correct reason for the pending calamity but only missed the time frame by 3 years. He did 20 times the research I did in areas parallel to my own. If anyone doubts in the slightest that there is not enough scientific or historical evidence of past cataclysms, you're just ignoring it. Go read his book, and while you're at it, Pole Shift, by John White. In fact, I absolutely stand on the shoulders of John, Richard and a host of others, which I'll mention in the back pages. If you truly want to verify the science, history and regularity of these coming events, just start sifting through their reference pages to begin with.

Thanks goes out to the fumbling disinformation crew that have already changed the size, names, locations, and color of Planet X since it was first reported by them in July 2001. They've given the blame of finding X to different observatories in May of 2001 and then went ahead and informed us they had data from 18 years ago. What color and size will it be next? Largest asteroid ever found, huh? Could you be any more obvious? Nice job!

Delores Cannon has written several books of which I've read most. Thank you for your work, Delores. Her 3-volume set of Conversations with Nostradamus is the only collection of books about Nostradamus I'd consider accurate. My mother Naomi paid for Delores to put me under hypnosis a few years ago. I arrogantly thought I couldn't be hypnotized. The hypnotic visions I described—of a large comet-looking object passing overhead and thousands standing around on rolling green hilltops looking at it—will forever be with me. I admit to being embarrassed about the whole experience and wouldn't talk about it for a year afterwards. Then I knew nothing of Planet X or its connection to Earth changes. I thought the whole experience was just a silly figment of my imagination at the time. So, in addition to thanks, I guess an apology is in order to Delores. What I once thought was a complete nonsensical hypnotic session and a waste of my time, turned out to be a significant point in my awakening to Planet X.

To the ancient cultures that left so many clues, fabulous information and several descriptive names for Planet X, I bow down and salute all of you. I wonder what our culture missed, that you all discovered and knew of, which got lost in time and calamity.

Planet X and Earth deserve credit here too. Every time they meet on the fly, a whole world of evidence is created identifying the time frame of their chancy encounter. The work of many archeological crews and the hard scientific studies they've produced are too numerous to mention. These disciplined people deserve so much thanks for all their hard work in uncovering the rather obvious signs and clues over and over again.

My appreciative readers deserve my love and thanks for the confirming material they keep sending me from a wider variety of sources than even I thought existed. Reading their over-the-top reviews and 'thank you's' has motivated me to rewrite and add to the material. It really makes my heart sing to think I could be a cog in the big machine that helped a few.

I must lastly thank author "Mary Summer Rain" and of course "No Eyes", who was her Native American mentor, for their work together. Two books of many authored by Mary I want to mention, Phoenix Rising and Daybreak. To get a glimpse of man's peaceful future, the Earth changes, and what it means to be completely connected, read Phoenix Rising. No Eyes could see the coming changes with perfect clarity. She may have been blind, but I can only hope to see as clearly as she did one day.

U.S. EXPANDS ITS PRESENCE ACROSS THE GLOBE

By Ewen MacAskill, The Guardian—UK, 03/08/02

Today, almost six months after the attacks on New York and Washington, the U.S. is putting in place a network of forward bases stretching from the Middle East across the entire length of Asia, from the Red Sea to the Pacific.

U.S. forces are active in the biggest array of countries since the Second World War. Troops, sailors and airmen are now established in countries where they have never before had a presence. The aim is to provide platforms from which to launch attacks on any group perceived by George Bush to be a danger to the U.S.

Footage released by the Pentagon this week of U.S. combat soldiers in the field in eastern Afghanistan graphically illustrated the extent to which the U.S. has totally overcome its decade-long horror of putting troops on the ground.

Forward bases are rapidly multiplying. Washington announced at the weekend the establishment of yet another base in Central Asia, a region where before September 11 there was no U.S. presence. The new base will be at Manas in Kyrgyzstan.

Until recently, U.S. troops in that country would have been unthinkable, both as a former part of the Soviet Union and also close to the Chinese border. The base will have 3,000 personnel—troops, communications specialists and technical support—and combat aircraft.

According to defence analysts, the intention is to have a host of such forward bases—manned by a few thousand troops and technicians all year round—that can provide support for huge reinforcements as required. These bases are being built in or near any country that Mr. Bush decides constitutes “a clear and present danger”.

Tim Garden, an associate fellow of the London-based Royal Institute of International Affairs (RIIA), said yesterday: “Everyone was expecting, when the Bush administration came in, that it would see America draw into itself and concentrate on long-range capability and reducing its presence on the ground.”

“Instead, they are looking at forward basing in lots of areas that may be of use to them for operations in the future.”

The long and growing list of bases underlines the extent to which the U.S. has shifted from the Black Hawk Down era, when the ugly scenes that accompanied the killing of U.S. soldiers in Somalia in 1993 so scarred the American psyche that the then president, Bill Clinton, vowed never again to commit ground troops abroad if there was any chance of them sustaining casualties.

In support of U.S. forces fighting in Afghanistan, the U.S. has established bases, each manned by 3,000 troops, in Uzbekistan and Tajikistan. U.S. troops are also stationed in Pakistan, close both to the Afghan and Iranian borders.

The U.S. administration says publicly that it will leave the Central Asian bases after the “war on terrorism” is over but privately officials admit they are there to stay.

As well as bases, the U.S. is sending in military advisers to a host of countries. In another move into the former Soviet empire, the U.S. announced in the last week that it is to send to Georgia up to 200 advisers plus Huey helicopters to help battle elements of al-Qaida as well as Chechen rebels.

The U.S., in its hunt for al-Qaida fighters, has been patrolling the waters that encompass Pakistan, Yemen and Somalia. Within the last week, Saana, the Yemeni news agency, disclosed that the U.S. is to send 100 military advisers to Yemen to help its republican guard take on tribal leaders alleged to be sympathetic to Osama bin Laden.

U.S. Special Forces are believed to be in the Sudan working with opposition groups from Somalia, gathering information about possible al-Qaida supporters in Somalia.

In the Philippines, 660 U.S. soldiers are helping to train and equip 3,800 Filipino soldiers in the fight against Islamist rebels, the Abu Sayyaf group, in the mountainous island of Basilan.

Ivo Daadler, an international affairs specialist at the Brookings Institute in Washington, disputed that Mr. Bush had ever been isolationist. He said Mr. Bush was opposed only to the kind of humanitarian interventionism of the Clinton administration in places such as the Balkans, Haiti and Somalia, but not to intervention in what Mr. Bush regarded as America’s interest.

Like the Cold War, he predicted the war will last for years, if not decades, and will be “all-consuming”.

There will be further bases if Mr. Bush resorts to force to implement the policy decision to remove the Iraqi president, Saddam Hussein. The build-up of U.S. forces in the Middle East will dwarf the 50,000 U.S. servicemen at present operating between the Red Sea and the Philippines.

Saudi Arabia, already keen to see the U.S. pull out of its existing bases in the kingdom, is unlikely to allow the U.S. to launch an attack on Iraq from its territory. Instead, the U.S. will have to look elsewhere, to Kuwait and Turkey.

The bases: Afghanistan—Combat role; Pakistan—Bases; Uzbekistan—Base; Tajikistan—Base; Kyrgyzstan—Base; Georgia—Military advisers and base; Philippines—Military advisers; Red Sea—Naval patrols; Yemen—Military advisers; Sudan—Military advisers in preparation for action in Somalia; Saudi Arabia—Base; Kuwait—U.S. will need to beef up presence if action is taken against Iraq; and Turkey—U.S. will need bigger bases in the country if action is taken against Iraq.

[JR: The U.S. is establishing a presence and building bases in countries that in fact we have invaded. The U.S. is relying on Special Forces and advisors to train and equip opposition groups to impose our control in these regions. This is in total opposition to the ideals our country was founded on. Our ancestors fought for freedom, independence and for the protection of the rights of the individual. America was once a nation that the people of the world admired and hoped to emulate. When we Americans allowed our government to abandon its position of neutrality we invited in foreign influences that have undermined and reversed our position in world affairs. What the U.S. now represents to the world is a regime that is corrupt and dangerous and which will in time go the way of all despots.]

REPORT: HUNDREDS OF U.S. TROOPS HAVE ARRIVED IN YEMEN

WORLD TRIBUNE.COM, 03/11/02

LONDON—U.S. soldiers have been sent to Yemen to help in a search-and-destroy operation against al-Qaida insurgents, Arab diplomatic sources said.

The sources said 200 to 400 American soldiers arrived in Sanaa over the last two weeks and are taking up positions in the northern and eastern parts of the country.

The London-based Al Hayat daily reported that most of the U.S. troops are under the supervision of the CIA. The newspaper said the U.S. military force is meant to help Yemen track and capture al-Qaida insurgents.

The regime of Yemeni President Ali Abdullah Saleh has denied reports that up to 600 U.S. troops have entered the country, Middle East Newslines reported. But Yemeni government sources acknowledged that at least 100 U.S. military trainers are meant to arrive in the country to help direct the effort against al-Qaida.

The reports come on the eve of a 10-day Middle East tour by U.S. Vice President Richard Cheney. Cheney is expected to visit 12 countries, including Yemen, in an effort to bolster Arab cooperation against al-Qaida and its Islamic allies as well to form a coalition against Iraq.

Last week, U.S. Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld said U.S. military personnel have been deployed in Yemen. Rumsfeld said Washington intends to prevent al-Qaida from converting Yemen into its next base of operations.

“People ask why we’re in Yemen,” Rumsfeld said. “My answer is, would you like Yemen to become the next Afghanistan? I think nobody wants that to happen, and goodness knows the Yemeni government does not.”

On Friday, a senior U.S. defense official voiced concern that al-Qaida insurgents are fleeing to Yemen. The official pointed to the bombing of the USS Cole in Aden in October 2000, an attack attributed to Saudi fugitive Osama bin Laden.

“Given it’s bin Laden’s father’s historical homeland, it is another place where we think al-Qaida members might flee,” the official said.

[JR: The U.S. had begun secret operations in Yemen before Oct. 12, 2000 when the USS Cole was attacked and made the headlines. We had begun operations to set up a listening post for surveillance and to monitor the ship traffic through the Gulf of Aden into the Red Sea. Having accomplished that, we now find it necessary to have a U.S. presence in Somalia, which just happens to be just across the Gulf of Aden from Yemen. The CIA is supervising and engaging the U.S. military in their covert operations with the excuse that we are preventing future al-Qaida incursions in the region. The al-Qaida has replaced the elusive bin Laden as America’s war cry to expand our War on Terrorism. Don’t be surprised if our next move is to establish bases in the Sudan and Ethiopia which are located along the Red Sea. These bases would be used to monitor Egypt and Saudi Arabia whom the CIA considers as unreliable allies. Defense Sec. Rumsfeld, a little man with the big power, seems to have developed a Napoleonic complex. He takes offence to those who question him and ask, "why are we doing this?" If the press read CONTACT and the American Free Press, they wouldn't have to ask!]

TWO MINDS IN YEMEN ABOUT U.S. TIES

By Michael Slackman, LA TIMES, 03/14/02

SANA, Yemen—When it comes to helping the United States in its war on terror, Yemen is behaving somewhat like a suspect who confesses only because there is a gun pointed at his head. That, at least, is the picture painted by one of the country's most influential leaders.

"We have surrendered to the United States because it is the strongest in the world," Abdullah Hussein Ahmar, speaker of parliament and head of the nation's most powerful tribe, said in an interview Tuesday at his home.

This, in all probability, will not be the message conveyed directly to Vice President Dick Cheney when he makes a very brief appearance here today as part of his swing through the Middle East. Instead, he is likely to hear President Ali Abdullah Saleh repeat his firm and unconditional support for the war on terrorism and his appreciation for Washington's military assistance in the form of a small contingent of U.S. troops. But if Cheney were to spend any length of time in this sliver of a nation at the foot of the Arabian Peninsula, he would pick up on a far more ambiguous attitude, one that recognizes the futility of opposing the world's only remaining superpower but is also deeply distrustful of Washington's aims and objectives.

On the issue of Iraq, for instance, he would hear many people say there is no love for President Saddam Hussein, but there is great anger at the United States for continuing to bomb a sovereign Arab state while maintaining sanctions that are perceived to punish civilians, not the regime.

"65% of Yemenis welcome U.S.," read a recent headline in the English-language Yemen Observer.

"Public opposes U.S. presence," read another recent headline in the English-language Yemen Times.

Both are correct, reflecting the split in the Yemeni psyche. Yemenis want the social, political and economic benefits that cooperation with America might bring, yet they would also like to see the United States brought to its knees for supporting Israel...

Perhaps the best example of the mental contortions taking place here involves the pending arrival of U.S. troops, who will train Yemen's military in anti-terror operations.

"We will not accept any American military," Ahmar said.... "We do not welcome them, and we will not."

Asked about the U.S. troops who are coming to do the training, and the troops already here to pave the way for the pending forces, he said: "That is something different. They are trainers. They are experts..."

When terrorists hit the United States on Sept. 11, Yemen's government unequivocally condemned the attacks. But the country's rough and isolated terrain, and its traditional tribal structure, had made it a perfect haven for al-Qaida operatives. Yemen had to choose, quickly, between becoming a target in the U.S. war on terror or a partner.

It chose the latter, perhaps mindful of what happened in 1990, when Yemen opposed the U.S.-

led effort to liberate Kuwait from Iraq.

Just one year later, international financial aid to Yemen had dropped dramatically—with the U.S. alone cutting its support from $22 million to $3 million. Yemen, the poorest country on the Arabian Peninsula, couldn't afford to take that route again.

So the leadership said it would work with America. But even members of President Saleh's ruling party, the General People's Congress, recognize the fine line he must walk.

"It would have been much better if what is taking place now took place 30 years ago before satellite dishes are showing what is happening," said Sultan Barakani, leader of the GPC's parliamentary caucus.

"What we are afraid of is that such Arab regimes will collapse one after the other," he said, "and that the people will go against their leadership due to the stand of the United States [with Israel]."

It is this fear that has leaders such as Ahmar so ambivalent. "What is between us and the United States is friendship." But when asked whether he welcomed Cheney's visit, he replied, "The visitor who wants to visit, we cannot refuse it, whether we want him or not." [JR: I hope it starts to sink into the consciousness of Americans that our country no longer operates on the principles of truth, honor and trust. Our "cooperative coalition" is based on coercion, deceit and deception and bribes of American aid along with the unwanted presence of U.S. military troops in sovereign countries. The goal of the triad coalition of the U.S., Israel and Britain is to weaken Arab/Muslim regimes and to create their downfall through political unrest and dissent by their own people. They will then step in and put in place their hand-picked leaders who will guarantee compliance and control of the region with Israel as their warden. Will the Triad for Globalism win in this game of dominoes that is designed to collapse sovereign nations?] [PW: And what will be the results of the U.S.-fostered wedge being driven between the peoples and the governments of nations like Yemen?]

TOPPLING HUSSEIN WRONG, MUBARAK ADVISES CHENEY

By Tom Raum, Daily News, 03/14/02

SHARM EL-SHEIK, Egypt (AP)—Egyptian leader Hosni Mubarak told visiting U.S. Vice President Dick Cheney on Wednesday that he believes Iraq is close to agreeing on the return of UN weapons inspectors.

But at a news conference at this Red Sea resort, Mubarak voiced opposition to any U.S. plan to topple Iraq's Saddam Hussein, just as Jordan's King Abdullah II had during Cheney's visit to Jordan on Tuesday.

"It is of vital importance to maintain the sovereignty and territorial integrity of Iraq. This is a must for preserving regional stability," Mubarak said.

One of Cheney's missions on his 11-nation tour of the Middle East is to make a case for widening the war on terrorism to include Iraq.

But Mubarak suggested that Hussein be given a final chance to comply with United Nations resolutions, including those demanding the return of UN weapons inspectors.

"And I think, as far as my knowledge is, that he is going to accept the inspectors," Mubarak said, without elaboration.

"We are going to meet some of his special envoys and tell them that this is a must," Mubarak said. "We will try in this direction as far as we can. Then after that, if there is nothing happening, we'll find out what could be done."

Publicly, Iraq has given no hint it is prepared to accept inspectors. Vice President Taha Yassin Ramadan said Saturday that negotiations with the United Nations will not lead to Iraq's agreeing to the inspectors' return.

Iraqi officials contacted late Wednesday in Baghdad had no comment on Mubarak's remarks.

Bush administration officials insist that inspectors must have a free hand in Iraq, without any conditions on their freedom of movement.

[JR: V.P. Cheney's whirlwind tour through the Middle East has incurred a less than positive attitude from Jordan, Yemen and Egypt regarding the U.S.'s initiative in its "war on terrorism". Iraq won't agree to UN inspections because the U.S. will involve itself and insist that Iraq comply with conditions that may be regarded as unreasonable and therefore unacceptable. The U.S. could then move in unilaterally with U.S. troops to secure various sites throughout Iraq. The Arab/Muslim nations have reason to suspect that the U.S. is implementing Israeli plans of expansion through the war on terrorism. Iraq is just one of several Arab countries we need to gain control of. What spin the Bush administration and the U.S. media will put on Cheney's attempts to win over (un)willing friends will be interesting to see.]

U.S. WITHDRAWS TROOPS FROM AL-QAIDA FIGHT— AFGHAN FORCE SPLITS

By Christine Hauser and Stuart Grudgings, www.rense.com, 03/10/02

GARDEZ/BAGRAM AIR BASE, Afghanistan (Reuters)—The United States unexpectedly announced Sunday it was pulling 400 troops out of a battle against al-Qaida rebels near Gardez as a major split emerged among Afghan forces involved in the fighting.

In a series of dramatic, rapid-fire developments in the biggest battle of the five-month-old Afghan campaign, a U.S. military spokesman said 400 of 1,200 troops in the area were being withdrawn as part of a repositioning exercise.

"We are repositioning," said Major Brian Hilferty. "Operation Anaconda continues," he said, referring to the code name for the eight-day-old offensive that has cost eight U.S. lives since it began just over a week ago.

"This is not over," he warned. "If I were an al-Qaida guy, I would not want to go out for a pizza."

Almost at the same time in Gardez, a major split opened up among Afghan troops involved in the fighting.

The area's top local commander, a Pashtun, demanded hundreds of mainly ethnic Tajiks reinforcements sent from Kabul be withdrawn from the battle and sent home.

"We propose to (Afghan interim leader) Mr. Hamid Karzai to instruct the newcoming troops to go back to their places of origin," Commander Mohammad Ismail, commander of Paktia Province's local Pashtun forces, told a news conference.

"I can assure you we obey and support the interim administration. The point is if the issue of Shahi Kot (site of the battle) is resolved, (Northern Commander) Gul Haider's troops might claim it, which is what we oppose."

“We take this opportunity that the issue of Paktia be purely left to the people of Paktia,” he said.

The Afghan Ministry of Defense, dominated by Tajiks, on Friday sent nearly 1,000 mainly ethnic Tajik forces—including a number commanded by Haider—from Kabul to join the mainly local Pashtun forces. Their arrival, with at last 10 tanks, nearly doubled the size of Afghan forces.

The Pashtun forces have been fighting the several hundred al-Qaida rebels besieged in mountain caves throughout the U.S.-led “Operation Anaconda” attack around Shahi Kot.

Ismail is in charge of operations under Afghan General Atiq Allahuddin, who he said commands Afghan forces in the U.S. campaign.

The United States uses two airstrips on either side of the city where the rival Afghan forces are mainly based.

Asked if the Americans agreed that Haider’s reinforcements should go home, Ismail said through a translator:

“The Americans are not involved in the internal affairs of our country. They are promoting a policy of anti al-Qaida activity. They have not occupied us and are not our bosses.”

“They are supporting us in restoring stability. I stress they are not our bosses. This is an issue decided by our government.”

The sudden turnarounds happened on a day when it appeared that after bad weather, U.S.-led forces were poised for a final assault on what Afghan leader Karzai has described as the last major al-Qaida base in Afghanistan.

However there had been rumblings among some Afghan commanders that they would prefer to give the several hundred al-Qaida fighters a last chance to negotiate a surrender before a dangerous advance across land mine-littered landscape leading up to bunkers and cave entrances.

“I never favored military means and I still don’t, as international resolutions have said that all bloodshed has to cease,” said Commander Ziauddin, who controls about 100 fighters among the 1,000 who arrived with tanks last Friday.

“I don’t see why it has to keep going in this (military) direction,” he told Reuters.

Throughout history, Afghan commanders have preferred to negotiate surrenders rather than engage in costly battles. But treaties frequently collapse within weeks and fighting resumes when either side has regrouped or gained strength.

The U.S. military says eight U.S. troops and seven Afghan soldiers have died and there have been about 100 wounded in what has turned into the biggest battle of the five-month-old war.

In Kabul, Interior Minister Yunis Qanuni said the Afghan government backed the U.S. policy of giving the rebels no quarter.

“Based on the strategy of the interim Afghan administration, it has been decided to purge them,” he told reporters.

“A series of operations are under way to purge them, both by the international coalition and the Afghan defense ministry. The purging operation is going successfully.”

U.S. military spokesman Major Bryan Hilferty told reporters an AC-130 gunship, known as “Puff the Magic Dragon” because of its thunderous firepower, had destroyed at least one al-Qaida bunker complex with rebels in it now that the weather had lifted.

Karzai said Saturday the U.S.-led forces were near victory in the Gardez battle and al-Qaida would be wiped out in Afghanistan when the fight was over.

“That (near Gardez) was the last main base. And the last main base is on its way out,” he told a news conference.

The United States and Afghans doubt that bin Laden or deposed Taliban leader Mullah Mohammad Omar are in the area.

[JR: The Daily Ummat, an Afghan paper, claims their “sources have disclosed that the U.S. has made an offer to the Mujahideen to negotiate and make some deal in exchange for 18 captured U.S. soldiers. Of the arrested U.S. soldiers, two are thought to be senior U.S. military officials.” Could these “military officials” be CIA? Naturally there is no confirmation from U.S. official sources but it is implied that this is the reason for the withdrawal of 400 U.S. troops in this area. How can this be verified when our controlled press only works from reports issued by the military—and even if it were true, it will never be disclosed in our American press. The American combat death toll is always kept secret because if too many deaths are reported it might turn the sheeple against this “War on Terrorism”. There seem to be regular “accidental” helicopter crashes to justify these bodies being shipped home. I guess the families of the combat dead are told their loved ones was killed as a result of an accident and not in a firefight. Today’s war news is totally controlled by the military so truth will always be tainted for the sake of national security and expediency.]

ISRAEL TAKES ARAFAT’S WEST BANK CAPITAL

By Harvey Morris in Jerusalem, Financial Times, 03/13/02

Israeli forces on Wednesday consolidated their grip on Ramallah, Yassir Arafat’s West Bank capital, after the biggest Israeli ground offensive in 20 years.

An overnight session of the United Nations Security Council passed an unexpected, U.S.-drafted resolution “affirming a vision of a region where two states, Israel and Palestine, live side by side within secure and recognised borders”, after Tuesday saw Palestinians strike back with a deadly assault near Israel’s northern border with Lebanon.

At least 41 people on both sides were killed on Tuesday as Israel intensified its assault on targets in the West Bank and Gaza Strip in what a military spokesman said was a defensive campaign to protect “the citizens, the cities and the state of Israel”.

Ahead of the arrival on Thursday of Anthony Zinni, the U.S. Middle East envoy, Shimon Peres, the Israeli foreign minister, told his Spanish counterpart that Israel hoped for a ceasefire by the weekend.

Up to 150 Israeli tanks pushed into Ramallah—a conurbation of 150,000, 15 minutes’ drive north of Jerusalem—in the biggest Israeli military operation since the 1982 invasion of Lebanon.

Residents said they were forced out of their homes as gunfire echoed around the city. “They knocked the door down at around 1:30 a.m. and ordered everyone out,” said Michael Tarazi, a U.S.-educated lawyer who works with the Palestinian Authority.

Journalists were told they were barred from entering Ramallah for their own protection. Troops swept into the al-Amari refugee camp on the outskirts of the city, ordering all adult males to assemble in the main square. Palestinian leaders called on the population to ignore the call.

Israeli troops have rounded up hundreds of fighting-age men for interrogation during recent sweeps of Palestinian refugee camps. On Tuesday the army had to suspend the practice of marking detainees’ arms with identifying numbers after a protest led by Yosef Lapid, a Knesset member and a Holocaust victim.

Colonel Gal Hirsh, the army’s chief of operations in the central command region, said on Tuesday up to 100 “core terrorists” had been captured in the two-week offensive involving 20,000 Israeli troops.

In central Ramallah, a few hundred yards from Mr. Arafat’s compound, the corpse of a suspected Palestinian collaborator, was strung up by the feet from a monument.

Two far-right members of Ariel Sharon’s coalition cabinet announced their resignations, saying he was not tough enough on the Palestinians.

[JR: It looks like Israel was aware of this U.S.-drafted resolution and wanted to secure the Palestinian town Ramallah in order to have more leverage should negotiations for secure and recognized borders between Israel and Palestine be forced upon Israel. It is doubtful that the U.S., the UN nor the rest of the world will force Israel to do anything that isn’t to the benefit of Greater Israel. What is interesting here is “marking detainees” arms with identifying numbers. It seems that Israel is reverting to the atrocities that they themselves condemned the Nazis for doing. There has always been an elusive answer to the logical question as to, “Why would the victims of the Holocaust be tattooed with serialized recorded numbers by the Nazis if they were sent to the camps to be exterminated?” Inquiring minds want to know!]

FBI FAILS TO EXPOSE AL-QAIDA NETWORKS

By Daniel McGroory, The Times—UK, 03/11/02

Thousands of FBI agents have rounded up more than 1,300 suspects across America since September 11, but they have failed to find a single al-Qaida cell operating in the United States.

Tom Ridge, the Director of Homeland Security, admitted yesterday that he suspected that there were active cells in the U.S., but he could not explain why none had been caught.

“I think we should assume and we should operate under the notion that some still are in the United States,” he said.

Security authorities in more than 60 countries have arrested suspects linked to Osama bin Laden, but none of the hundreds detained has yet been found to have any links with terrorism.

Only two of the top 20 most-wanted al-Qaida suspects are known to have been caught or killed: Mohammed Atef, third-in-command to Osama bin Laden, died in a rocket attack on Kabul; and Anas al-Liby, a computer expert who lived in Manchester and is said to have helped to compile al-Qaida’s terrorist training manual, has been arrested. No one in the American military or intelligence services knows where bin Laden is.

While the British and other governments accept that many of their young Muslims travelled to Afghanistan for training in al-Qaida camps, the only American accused of following that path is John Walker, “the American Taliban” who is facing trial in Washington.

Mr. Ridge marked the six-month anniversary of the terrorist attacks on New York and Washington by announcing that there would be a new national threat alarm system based on a five-level colour code.

[JR: The Bush administration has built a war based on fabrications and dis-information and facts that don't add up to the events as related to 9/11. Ridge as Director of Homeland Security (chuckle) can't explain why no al-Qaida cells have been found in the U.S. though he thinks they are still here. Wow, are they invisible or a figment of someone's faulty programming? We should be angry that they think so little of our intelligence that they can parade someone like Ridge whose own ineptness reflects the arrogance of this administration towards us to promote their War on Terrorism. Are they playing ring-around-the-rosy or blind-mans-bluff with the American sheeple?]

RIDGE UNVEILS TERRORISM ALERT SYSTEM

MSNBC, 03/12/02

WASHINGTON (AP)—Domestic security chief Tom Ridge unveiled a color-coded terrorism warning system on Tuesday, and said the nation currently is on yellow alert, meaning it faces a “significant” level of danger.

THE FIVE-LEVEL system comes partly as a response to public complaints that broad terror alerts issued by the government since the September terror attacks raised alarm without providing useful guidance.

The lowest-status warning is green, followed by blue, yellow, orange and red as the perceived dangers intensify.

At the highest level, airports and subways could be shut down and public and government buildings closed—responding the way the nation did on Sept. 11.

Bush administration officials hope the new warning system will work like severe weather advisories that, for example, are used to tell residents to take cover when a tornado approaches their city or town.

The new color-coded system, Ridge said, “provides a common vocabulary so officials from all levels of government can communicate easily with one another and to the public.”

Ridge's office outlined the stages of alert and how government agencies should respond:

Green is a low risk of terrorist attack.

Blue is a general risk, and agencies are asked to review and update emergency response procedures.

Yellow is an “elevated condition”, meaning there is a significant risk of attack. Increased surveillance of critical locations and implementing some emergency response plans are called for.

Orange signifies a high risk of attack, meaning the government should coordinate necessary security efforts with armed forces or law enforcement agencies and take additional precautions at public events.

Red means a “severe risk” of attack and may require the pre-positioning of specially trained teams, closing public and government facilities and monitoring transportation systems.

The alert system is in force immediately for federal agencies, and Ridge is urging state and local governments to adopt it, too. It will be subject to a 45-day comment period, after which it probably will be revised.

There are various alert systems currently in place, for functions ranging from transportation to the weather, and President Bush ordered a review that will place them under a single federal framework. Attorney General John Ashcroft will assign threat conditions in consultation with Ridge....

[JR: Another edict handed down by the domestic security chief Tom Ridge whose talents are indefinable and certainly questionable... color him vague. Do you really think he came up with this color-code alert system all by himself? This rainbow alert system is just window dressing because the government has offered no plans to provide shelters to protect its citizens. What good are the warnings and what purpose are they supposed to serve? When an alert goes out it will be after the fact and we will be on our own to do what we can for ourselves. Federal, state and local authorities will be busy securing public offices, utilities and communications systems. Meanwhile the secret Shadow Government will be well secured and protected in their most accommodating and comfortable underground cities. If you haven't yet realized that you are dispensable and disposable by our leaders in Washington then you are deserving of their indifference.]

ELECTRONIC WAR IN THE AFGHAN SKIES

By Bob Arnot, MSNBC, 03/11/02

OVER AFGHAN AIRSPACE—“Taliban and al-Qaida fighters, we know where you are hiding,” said a voice over frequency 850. “Taliban and al-Qaida fighters, you are our targets.” During the most intense combat undertaken by American troops so far in the Afghan war, the United States Air Force is conducting an electronic combat mission.

“WE'RE SHOOTING electrons, not bullets,” said an electronic warfare specialist, a Master Sergeant nicknamed D.J., who requested that his real name not be used. While the U.S. Air Force has air superiority over Afghanistan, it's using highly specialized aircraft to achieve information superiority as well.

This is the brave new world of information warfare. The plane—called Commando Solo II and attached to the 193d Special Operations Wing of the Pennsylvania National Guard—operated without fighter escorts from a classified forward base of operations (?). Its altitude and route are also classified.

The broadcasting platform can transmit on AM, FM and short-wave frequencies. It's also an airborne TV station capable of using any of the four worldwide television standards. Until recently, these electronic combat missions were considered “black ops”—so secret, the crew was forbidden tell their wives or children about them. Commando Solo II's mission was the first electronic warfare combat flight on which journalists were permitted to travel.

The plane, the oldest Hercules aircraft in the Air Force inventory, is crammed with electronic gear, making it one of the heaviest C-130s still flying.

Six 1,000-watt and three 10,000-watt transmitters occupy the back half of the airplane. The front half contains dozens of electronic instruments manned by an electronic warfare officer and three electronic communications specialists.

Once over Afghan airspace, a conical device, or drogue, is lowered over 300 feet from the bottom of the aircraft. D.J. pulls out a minidisk and drops it into a standard commercial minidisk player. He pushes a play button to begin broadcasting a greeting in Dari and Pashto, the main languages in Afghanistan. Then four minutes later, a broadcast is beamed down in Arabic—targeted at al-Qaida fighters.

Then, over a speaker system in D.J.'s console, fast-paced local music is played.

“Music has not been heard for years. It has huge psychological impact,” said the mission control chief, identified as Maj. John. The music was followed by a carefully crafted statement about the legitimacy of the Afghan government.

Other messages suggested that Taliban fighters surrender because Mullah Mohammed Omar, the Taliban's supreme leader, and Osama bin Laden have themselves fled the battle. The goal is to destroy the enemy's willingness to fight, Maj. John said. The message is heard on the ground throughout much of Afghanistan.

U.S. Army detachment commander Capt. Mark Mauri was with the 4th Psychological Operations group onboard the plane. Mauri, a special forces veteran, said, “We don't do actual propaganda, we use the truth.”

Psychological Operations, known as PsyOps, use country studies, intelligence reports, the current situation on the battlefield and knowledge of the local population to shape their message.

The broadcasts are targeted to “hit the heartstrings” of fighters who have family and loved ones back home, Mauri said. One radio script begins: “Attention soldiers of the Taliban! You do not have to risk your lives.”

Hard-core al-Qaida and Taliban fighters also hear: “Osama bin Laden has abandoned you... because he has no concern for your life... his life is more important than yours... he does not care if you die... he hides in safety waiting for your death. You are dying only for a man who has abandoned you.”

Do these messages work? Military officials point to the 1991 Gulf War, when an estimated 90,000 Iraqis, in interviews conducted by U.S. military intelligence, said they surrendered as a direct result of PsyOps messages.

The same officials say scores of Taliban now held at a U.S. detention facility in Guantanamo Bay in Cuba say they surrendered after hearing PsyOps transmissions. Broadcasts are supplemented by leaflets dropped on the enemy by military planes.

Special operations officials said their information warfare enhances the effectiveness of U.S. and coalition forces on the ground. They call it a “force multiplier”.

“If we get a thousand Taliban on the ground to surrender, that's 1,000 fewer Taliban that American forces will have to fight,” said Mauri.

After an 8-hour tour of duty, the Commando Solo II returned to its classified base as preparations are made for the next day's flight.

[JR: Big Brother with his big eye, ear and now voice in the sky is fighting the war in Afghanistan. It's a technological war that is being tested there using HAARP technology, ELF, EMF frequency waves for brain stimulation to modify behavior, thinking and actions (see CONTACT 6/3/97, pages 12-14). PsyOps was a program developed by MK-Ultra, developed here by the NSA in the 1950s. It is a now a highly refined system and will eventually do away with ground troops. If you can manipulate armies to cause them to surrender, you can control populations and have them become compliant to authority. You can bet we are the next targets for the world rulers to take control of. This technology is no longer science fiction and will be our reality unless we change it.]

INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL TRIBUNAL
TO BE LAUNCHED THIS YEAR

By Mike Wendling, CNSNews.com—London, 03/08/02

London—The world's first permanent international criminal tribunal will almost certainly be created by the end of the year, campaigners said Friday, and U.S. citizens will be subject to the court even though it has received strong condemnation from Republican leaders in the Senate and President Bush.

The International Criminal Court (ICC) will become operational when 60 countries ratify the Rome Statute that set down the guidelines for the tribunal. This week, Mauritius, Macedonia and Cyprus ratified the treaty, becoming the 53rd, 54th and 55th countries to do so.

Europe has led the push for the ICC, with nearly every EU country ratifying the Rome treaty.

After the requisite 60 countries sign the treaty, the Rome Statute will officially come into force two to three months later.

William Pace, head of the New York-based Coalition for the International Criminal Court, predicted that this could happen as early as July. He noted, however, that it would take longer than that before the court becomes fully operational.

"It will take many more months before the elections of the prosecutor and judges are finalized and the court can begin considering cases," Pace said.

The court will be headquartered in The Hague, Netherlands, where the temporary International Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia is currently sitting.

CNSNews.com reported last September that the ICC will spend $15.7 million in its first year, even if no defendants are charged and no trials are held. If the court does begin work on a case, its first-year expenditures will top $30 million, according to United Nations figures....

U.S. citizens will be subject to the ICC due to President Clinton's signing of the Rome Statute in December 2000. Countries that do not ratify the treaty, however, will not be obligated to financially support the court. Non-ratifying countries will also not be able to nominate candidates for ICC judicial posts.

In testimony before the House International Relations Committee last week, U.S. at-large ambassador for war crimes Pierre-Richard Prosper said the ICC "lacks the essential safeguard to avoid a politicization of justice."

Prosper made it clear that the Bush administration prefers the strengthening of national justice systems to an international court, and objects to the ICC's jurisdiction over countries that have not ratified the Rome Statute.

"It does not and should not have jurisdiction over a non-party state," he said.

Citizens of countries that have not signed the Rome Statute can also be tried before the court, but only if the alleged crimes occurred in a country that is a party to the treaty or if the UN Security Council refers the case to the ICC. Countries that have refused to sign the treaty include Libya, Iraq and China.

The court will try cases of genocide, war crimes and crimes against humanity when national courts are unable or unwilling to act. The prosecution of such crimes is currently the responsibility of ad hoc tribunals such as the courts used to try alleged war criminals from the former Yugoslavia and Rwanda.

[JR: The UN now has control of world armies, courts, environmental and land issues and will soon establish a taxing authority—that should wake up a lot of people. It's a done deal unless the issue of sovereignty in the U.S. becomes the prime objective in Washington. If we allow ourselves to let our guard down on this issue it doesn't matter how many countries we occupy... it is who will occupy this country. Remember the past—Rome once was!]

UK, UN MOVING TOWARD
LEGITIMIZING MERCENARIES

By Anthony C. LoBaido, WorldNetDaily.com, 03/07/02

KATHMANDU, Nepal—Despite previous opposition to the establishment and use of private armies, the United Kingdom and United Nations are beginning to warm to the idea of using paid mercenaries to carry out security roles around the world.

Like many former British colonies, Nepal is home to elite mercenaries: the Gurkhas. These soldiers perform important security functions out of the public eye.

For example, the Gurkhas guard the Sultan of Brunei, the world's richest oilman. French Legionnaires stationed in Djibouti are only a stone's throw away from the Suez Canal. Sandline, another mercenary organization, tried to re-open one of the world's largest copper mines in Papua New Guinea, while the mercenary organization "Executive Outcomes" has waged war in Angola and Sierra Leone.

Executive Outcomes now is reorganizing itself and considering a military contract to help the Islamic government in Khartoum wage war on the Christian civilians in the south of that nation.

During the 1990s, the United Nations, British government and Clinton administration officially frowned on mercenaries, soldiers serving for pay in foreign armies or at the behest of private firms. The UN passed formal legislation outlawing groups like Executive Outcomes.

On Feb. 13, however, the much-anticipated Labour government's Foreign Office Green Paper on mercenaries stated that soldiers for hire may have a role to play in "securing peace."

In former British colonies like Sierra Leone, Executive Outcomes brought order, if only temporarily. EO went into Sierra Leone on behalf of the diamond and gem interests held by powerful, private British-owned business interests.

Often, EO and Sandline (who share an office in London) work hand in hand with the British government and its corporate elites. These mercenary groups are often given a cut in the form of cash payments or mining rights in exchange for training government forces to vanquish rebel groups holding lands that house mineral and/or oil wealth.

The British government's Green Paper said that the mercenary armies had a far better human-rights record than UN peacekeepers. UN forces have been documented as having spread AIDS in Cambodia by having unprotected sex with prostitutes, engaged in pedophilia in Africa and roasted a black man over a fire while serving in Somalia. The Canadian unit implicated in the latter action was disbanded by Ottawa.

Former U.S. Marine Steven Weintraub, who served with UN forces in Somalia, told WorldNetDaily, "I was more afraid of the Pakistani troops on 'our side' than I was of the Somali enemies."

The Green Paper also said that the mercenary armies, which it called "reputable private firms", may be able to "do a better job" and "be more cost effective" than the UN forces.

Quoting the Green Paper, "It is at least possible that if the tasks of UNAMSIL (United Nations Mission to Sierra Leone) were put out to tender, private companies would be able to do the job more cheaply and more effectively. There may be a case for examining this option."

The UN has already started using mercenary companies in ancillary roles providing equipment and "security" in various UN operations around the world.

The peacekeeping mission in Sierra Leone costs $600 million per year.

UN Secretary-General Kofi Annan recently stated that he considered sending in mercenaries to "separate fighters" from Rwandan refugees in the Great Lakes region of Africa.

[JR: The world is now an armed camp divided by the armies made up of nations, the UN, NATO and the newly formed EU army. The UN's sanction for the use of mercenaries as a private army of businesses is not a new idea and one that goes back to the Medici and Borgias who ruled Italy through private armies to safeguard their powers. The UN is not about peace! The UN's primary objective is to maintain control through the use of armed forces and subversion worldwide. Wake up, sheeples, if you are not in the circle of those who holds a privileged position of power you will end up in the middle of the bulls-eye surrounded by armies and guns. Nothing of force is lasting and peace is the balance. That can only come through the will of the people of conscience.]

ENVISIONING SECURITY
IN TRAVELER'S SMART CARD

By David Armstrong, San Francisco Chronicle, 03/05/02

Picture this: You're at the airport and there is, of course, a long line at the security checkpoint. You pull out your new Trusted Traveler smart card, a small plastic card embedded with personal data and biometrics.

The machine verifies your identity and confirms that you are not a security risk. Thus cleared for takeoff, you speed through the shorter line reserved for fliers with smart cards and shave an hour, even more, off the time it would otherwise take you to pass through security.

Right now, the card is just an idea, albeit one that is beginning to attract attention and support from both the private and public sectors.

Business and leisure travel groups, corporate executives and politicians are promoting the card, which would be issued to travelers who apply for a card and qualify to receive it.

"This would be a voluntary traveler's ID card, not a compulsory national identity card," said David S. Stempler, head of the Air Travelers Association, a consumer group actively promoting adoption of a traveler's card.

Such a card, dubbed the Trusted Traveler card by proponents, would provide extensive personal data about the cardholder embedded in a microchip and encrypted to guard against counterfeiting or theft, Stempler said.

Done right, it would enhance airport and airline security, and cut down the hassle factor now confronting fliers at the nation's airports.

At least two companies, Maximus Inc. of Rockville, Md., and EDS of Plano, Texas, are developing prototype smart cards on their own for a market that could potentially encompass millions of travelers. Business travelers, who fly more often than most vacationers, would probably be the most consistent users of the cards, according to business travel experts.

But that could be some time off. Many questions about a traveler's smart card remain unanswered. Among them: Who will issue the card, a government entity such as the Department of Transportation, an airline or group of airlines, or an airport or group of airports? Would the card be free or would there be a one-time or annual fee for it? Who would manufacture it? What technology would it use? When could it be ready for broad public use?

"At this point, we don't know the answers," Stempler said. "But we see the need. There's no particular vendor we favor. We want one standard; any vendor could bid on it."

Federal authorization to create a traveler's smart card already exists. The Aviation and Transportation Security Act, passed by Congress last November, authorized the Department of Transportation to come up with a card. So far, DOT has not acted, but support for a card seems to be building....

"This effort needs to be piloted somewhere to get some real-world experience," said Rachel Rowland, a spokeswoman for Maximus, which is developing what the company calls a FlySecure card. The card makes use of embedded biometric data, including fingerprints, and could incorporate iris scanning technology and face recognition....

"Getting a card would be almost like passing an FBI security clearance," Stempler explained. "You would tell where you lived, where you went to school and your travel history, and agree to have that information vetted. It would go back a fair amount of time, 10 or 15 years, to protect against sleeper agents. The applicant would also authorize one or two forms of biometrics, like fingerprints and face recognition."

The DOT has yet to approve such a program due mainly to worries about invasions of privacy, and the newly created Transportation Security Administration's director, John Magaw, who was unavailable for comment, is said to be ambivalent about a card....

[JR: A national ID card was proposed last October shortly after 9/11 by Larry Ellison of Oracle with the enthusiastic support of liberal luminaries like Sen. Feinstein, Dershowitz (Harvard Law) and Attorney Gen. Ashcroft. The traveler ID would be the Trojan Horse to covertly bring about a national ID system. Right now an ID card may be acceptable by the airlines and frustrated passengers due to the deliberate delays and searches at the airports. If you value your privacy and freedom and you don't have a traveler ID, you will be most certainly be subject to thorough searches and screening and long interrogations. This ID travel card could be extended to include all travel, even on interstates and to enter certain cities like N.Y., D.C. and LA. Whether or not the DOT or the airlines approve this program, Big Brother will be at the other end of the ID traveler data base system.]

SPECIAL ED LAW ENCOURAGES 'PSYCHIATRIC DRUGGING' OF KIDS, SAY CRITICS

By Christine Hall, CNSNews.com, 03/04/02

With Congress scheduled to debate a controversial special education law this year, a California group and a handful of celebrity activists are pointing to what they see as the law's incentives for the "psychiatric drugging of children".

"Why are we pouring billions of dollars in here to label kids as mental disordered simply because they may not have been taught to read?" asks Marla Filidei, vice president of the Los Angeles-based Citizens Commission on Human Rights, a group affiliated with the Church of Scientology.

Filidei counts actresses Anne Archer, Priscilla Presley and Kirsty Alley as allies in the fight against giving children mood or personality-altering prescription drugs like Prozac and Ritalin.

Because of federal incentives, school systems are diagnosing kids with "subjective" disabilities that have no relation to any identifiable physical disability or impediment, Filidei said. In return, she added, school systems get more federal tax dollars for every kid they add to special education programs.

While students with severe disabilities are expensive to educate, Filidei suggested, many students who are falsely diagnosed with mental disorders represent a potential financial gain to a school system.

Others take issue with Filidei's claims. The Citizens Commission on Human Rights "have been generally opposed to psychiatry for some time" because of their Scientology roots, according to Dr. David Fassler, M.D., of the University of Vermont. "There's a long history."

When it comes to diagnosing mental illness and disorders in kids, "I actually see the opposite problem, that the majority of kids who have problems are not being diagnosed and getting the help they need," said Fassler. "I don't think that there are incentives in the legislation, and I don't see schools over-diagnosing kids."

"Medication can be very helpful and even life-saving for some children," he added. "But in my opinion, medication alone is rarely an appropriate treatment for these kinds of child psychiatric disorders."

Bruce Hunter, a lobbyist for the American Association of School Administrators, disputes the notion that special education students provide a school system with the opportunity of financial gain. Rather, said Hunter, it's a money-losing proposition because federal law requires the school system to pay for medical diagnoses that, alone, cost more per pupil than the check from the federal government.

However, said Hunter, "there are school systems where kids are being over-medicated. As an association, we've been concerned about that for years."

Like Filidei, Hunter hopes the federal education law will be modified this year to give school systems more flexibility in how to administer special education programs and make procedures "less adversarial" between the school system and the parent.

Over the past few years, there have been some well-publicized instances of parents experiencing pressure and even legal action from school systems and child protective services to put a child on certain prescription drugs....

The federal law that Filidei identifies as a major part of the problem is the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA). Since its inception in 1975, Congress has expanded the scope of the IDEA to include a broader range of disabilities, including more recent conditions like attention deficit disorder (ADD). The law requires schools to provide special education services for disabled students and sends $50 billion per year in federal tax dollars to help cover the extra cost.

According to Filidei, of the 5-million plus kids who are now covered under IDEA, 3.2 million have what Filidei calls "subjective learning disorders".

"If no one can prove any physical abnormality within these children, you give them 'mathematics disorder', 'learning disorder', 'nonspecific learning disorder,'" Filidei said. "Two-point-eight million children are categorized under nonspecific learning disorder."

Dealing with IDEA mandates has also become a problem for school administrators and school budgets.

President Bush has appointed a commission to discuss possible changes to the IDEA. The commission is scheduled to release its recommendations by July 1....

BLIND TO THE WORLD'S DANGERS

By Philip Stephens, Financial Times, 03/07/02

Six months have passed since the kaleidoscope turned. We can make out some of the new shapes but not yet a symmetrical pattern. Even as American troops fight what seems to be the decisive battle against the forces of the Taliban and al-Qaida in Afghanistan, the big question is unanswered. Did the terrible destruction on September 11 mark the beginning or the end?

At first glance the U.S. has emerged from tragedy more powerful than it has ever been. Its vast military supremacy combines now with a renewed readiness to fight wars, to take risks with American lives. We can recognise, too, the appalling complacency that infected the first post-Cold-War decade. How could the West emerge from its triumph over communism only to ignore the deadly threats of chaos and terrorism? How was it possible for al-Qaida to build its vast global network without anyone really noticing? Did anyone know what was happening in Afghanistan? Or care?

Well, all that has changed. Yemen, Somalia, Sudan, failed or failing states about which we knew little and cared less, are now at the top of the news bulletins. Terrorists in a dozen other places we can barely place on the map suddenly matter.

We can tick off, too, some of the big shifts in the geo-strategic balance. Vladimir Putin has seized the chance to bring Russia into a partnership with the West. China was a potential adversary for the first nine months of George W. Bush's presidency. Now Colin Powell, U.S. secretary of state, talks of a "candid, co-operative and constructive" relationship with Beijing. Pakistan has travelled still further and faster. From sponsor of the Taliban, it is now America's friend in the war against terrorism. India too is courted by Washington. The long-present danger of war between these two nuclear powers is now worth worrying about.

The response in Europe has been more complex. The continent has not abandoned its initial, heartfelt solidarity with the U.S. The numbers may be small but there is more than symbolism in the fact that French and German as well as British forces are fighting alongside Americans in eastern Afghanistan.

But some of the old suspicions have crept back into the relationship. Tony Blair's support for Mr. Bush seems unqualified. But elsewhere in Europe the talk, sometimes loud, sometimes whispered, is of a dangerous U.S. unilateralism. Gentle rebukes lobbed to and fro across the Atlantic during the past few weeks remind us that geography and history have created different mindsets. With its mainland violated for the first time in the history of the Republic, the U.S. instinct is to confront its enemies everywhere on the battlefield. The Europeans have grown used to wars fought on their continent and to the permanent insecurity of their geography. Their reflexes tell them to deploy diplomacy alongside troops, try to cajole and contain.

The transatlantic alliance has changed. On September 12 NATO invoked Article V of its constitution. The triggering of this collective defence clause was meant to reassert NATO's strength. Instead it showed how the organisation has lost forever its Cold War status as the alliance. The gesture was appreciated in Washington. But it was seen as just that: a gesture. Thanks, said the Pentagon: don't call us, we may call you. The U.S. does not intend to fight any more wars from NATO's military command centre at Shape in Belgium. Henceforth, Washington wants exclusive control of its military.

NATO will survive—to preserve the form of the transatlantic security guarantee and to extend it to the new democracies of Eastern Europe. Its military expertise may also endure, though not to fight wars against a common enemy. Instead, as one European official has predicted, it may emerge as a military contractor for “coalitions of the willing”. NATO peacekeeping in the Balkans may well be extended to command of the international stabilisation force in Afghanistan.

Many of the pieces in the kaleidoscope, though, are still out of place. There are important fragments missing, others yet to be arranged. We do not know whether the strategic shifts we have seen so far are temporary or permanent.

Take the Russian and Chinese responses to September 11. Their support for the U.S. could well be viewed as opportunism. But it might just signal something else—the small beginnings of a new trade union of nation states, united against a common enemy, each aware it will lose from the dangerous instability that flows from al-Qaida-style terrorism.

American power must be measured against American vulnerability. It is easy, of course, to be mesmerised by all the high-technology wizardry, by the warplanes and aircraft carriers, the intelligent missiles and the smart bombs. The international coalition, this tells us, is there for show. The Pentagon would much prefer to fight the war alone.

The Australian and Danish special forces in Afghanistan, the Czechs in Kuwait and the Japanese destroyers in the Indian Ocean speak, though, to a coincident understanding in Washington that this is a unique war. The defeat of terrorism will be a lengthy, complex endeavour. The U.S. will need those allies. Thus Mr. Bush disavows the idea of nation-building and then commits himself to just that by promising to build a unified Afghan army.

So we see the administration wrestling with the tension between a unilateralist impulse and a multilateral imperative. The rhetoric talks of an axis of evil, of war against Iraq and, maybe, against Iran and North Korea. But so far America's actions point to a realisation that, like the empires of old, it has a thousand porous frontiers.

The big lacuna, though, is a clear appreciation of how the Israeli-Palestinian conflict supplies the essential oxygen for America's enemies. U.S. security depends on peace between Arabs and Israelis. The administration's decision to stand by as the government of Ariel Sharon wages a futile military campaign against the Palestinians is utterly inexplicable to its allies.

True as it is, it is of no help to say that Yassir Arafat must share the blame for the present crisis. The clear and present danger for America lies in the Middle East. It is here in the refugee camps that al-Qaida finds willing recruits; here that the copied videos of the awful destruction of the twin towers are shown and shown again to prove that America can be beaten; here that nuclear proliferation poses a measurably terrible threat to U.S. security. And here where the kaleidoscope could well turn again.

NEVADA CORPORATIONS:

What They Don't Say Can Really Help You

Budget's "Tip of the Week" #5:

Key provisions NOT included in Nevada's corporate statutes

In the first four installments of “Tip of the Week” we took a close look at several very interesting provisions of Nevada's corporate statutes. Sometimes, however, what is NOT mentioned in the statutes is just as important.

In Nevada, as many readers may be aware, there is no statute mandating the issuance of stock. (Nevada is not unique in this regard; several other states' corporate statutes similarly ignore this key issue. What makes Nevada unique is the combination of statutory provisions, non-addressed key issues and actual practices, all of which add up to make Nevada the ONLY state that allows for privacy of ownership and control of a corporation.)

As if to underscore the non-necessity of stock issuance, there is no requirement to hold an annual meeting of stockholders. Yes, there are many references to the stockholders' meeting but nowhere is it stated that any such meeting must be held.

Similarly, Nevada is one of a few states that does not nullify the use of “bearer” shares. It is not that there is a statutory provision endorsing the use of bearer shares or even addressing the issue; it is that the issue goes entirely unmentioned, whereas in most other states the use of bearer shares is statutorily denied.

A major, major issue that is not addressed anywhere in the Nevada Revised Statutes is that of nominee officers and directors. The use of nominee officers and directors has been common in practice in Nevada for more than 75 years and yet this issue, which is the key to privacy of control of a Nevada corporation, is simply not mentioned. Doesn't that make you wonder why not?

Other states (Wyoming comes to mind) have directly addressed the issue of nominee stockholders. In Nevada, however, there seems to be more power granted by not restricting the use of this technique even by defining it.

Nevada only requires a corporation's primary officers to be listed annually but does not abridge the key roles that can be afforded to secondary officers, such as a vice president, who may exercise all of the powers of the president in the president's absence; an assistant treasurer, who may be empowered to sign checks and otherwise fulfill the role of treasurer; or an assistant secretary, who may perform all of the duties of the secretary. When nominee service is used, the primary officers are assuredly absent, empowering these secondary officers, who are never listed in the public records with the Secretary of State.

Finally, since only an annual list of officers needs to be filed, a corporation may change its officers and directors at any time through a proper resolution (a PROTECTED “internal” record of the corporation) without notifying the state to modify the public record.

This listing is, of course, by no means all-inclusive. We trust, however, that it provides the reader with a lot of serious “food for thought” as to possibilities for private control and ownership of Nevada corporations.

GLOBAL ALLIANCE INVESTMENT ASSOCIATION

PUBLIC NOTICE

March 4, 2002

This notice will be construed as a continuation of compliance with provisions necessary to establish presumed fact (Rule 301, Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, and attending State rules). All interested parties have failed to rebut any given allegation or matter of law addressed herein. The position will be construed as adequate to requirements of judicial notice, thus preserving fundamental law. A true and correct copy of this Public Notice is on file with and available for inspection at the newspaper CONTACT which is responsible for publishing the instrument as a legal notice.

This document is to notify interested parties to Global Alliance Investment Association (GAIA) of intent to immediately render assistance to the Philippine PEOPLE adequate funds through GAIA for stabilizing the financial institutions and businesses that they might recover from circumstantial losses through international political interference and intervention.

This notice is being run as a courtesy and public notice of intent to use said assets, first formally recognized January 19, in the Year of the Lord, 2001. At that time the GAIA assets had been duly validated and presented, and notice accepted by the international parties who OWE the DEBT thereof. That Public Notice was the subject of objection and for more than one year GAIA has entertained and responded to the objections of Vina Katherine Durham, who has not only failed to bring the matter to competent court, but has also been forced to disclose documents that irrefutably prove she is neither the wife of Russell Herman, the former custodian of the Peruvian Gold Certificate Bearer Bond called (by George Bush, Sr.) the SuperFund, nor the holder of any interest in Cosmos Seafood Energy Marketing, Ltd., a Nevada corporation established in 1985 to "own" and shelter the asset for God's greater purpose. Her documents have so exposed her forgeries that nothing she might proffer could change anything.

GAIA is an "alliance association", ready, willing and able to serve the global community. GAIA holds rights to claim IMMEDIATE use of funds from this debt unpaid to date against interest accrued and based on hard commodity: gold bullion, coin, or any physical derivative thereof.

GAIA continues to stand, further, ready, willing and able, to make concessions and offer "time" allowance to acquire collateral and will seek all avenues available to establish the gathering in of said hard assets so as not to extend the pain and misery of the people.

We have offered to support the nation of the Philippines and, furthermore, to not interfere with such institutions as the International Monetary Fund, the World Bank operations, or the Federal Reserve or U.S. Treasury. We make this offer at the request of the former holder of these assets as documented and valid, as his last bequest. This very offering can be recognized as an international resource with credit to the United States of America as now making some restitution to those damaged through untoward activities prior to now.

There is a continuing commitment on the part of GAIA to maintain and respect all agreements. However, since the government of the U.S.A. has violated its agreement with GAIA and overtly interfered with the acceptance of the GAIA DEEDS OF ASSIGNMENT FOR CONSIDERATION, using its IMF to influence central banks, there will be assumed no further objection to negotiate use for domestic U.S.A. through the various states and other jurisdictions thereof. The U.S.A. might find it useful to mitigate the anticipated effect of this action by immediately removing, through the IMF, all impediments to the use of GAIA's DEEDs in all jurisdictions.

As of publication of this Public Notice, no NATION need have further reservations regarding the use of the GAIA DEEDs. IT IS HEREBY RESOLVED that a copy of the stamped document returned by the Recorder of Clark County, Nevada will be included as a part of each information package provided to DEEDholders.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, the undersigned have executed and sealed this authorization as of the date hereof.

For the Corporation, dated at Makati, Manila, the Philippines, this 4th day of March 2002.

WORDS OF WISDOM FROM HATONN

CONTACT OR SPECTRUM?

I want to briefly respond to a most unusual question from a totally "out of the blue" person: "It appears Spectrum will fail, possibly close, so will you go back to writing for CONTACT or what?"

I have never stopped writing for CONTACT—but I have NOT written, nor have my compatriots written for Spectrum. Tails wag a lot of dogs, my friends. Therefore, "or what" has no meaning.
