Massive Corporations Collapse: Frauds And Criminals At Work

Trembling House Of Cards: Stock Market, Pension Funds, U.S. Dollar On Brink Of Collapse And Implosion

7/23/02—#1 (15-341)

RE: PATRIOTS OF THE FINEST KIND. MISCELLANEOUS POINTS OF INTEREST WITH MAJOR IMPACT. (STOCK MARKETS, U.S. "DOLLAR"—POSSIBLE COLLAPSE. U.S. TAXPAYERS' LOSSES ALREADY EXCEED $4.2 TRILLION.)

WILL NETWORK OF TRUTH SURVIVE?

Hatonn—I would share the inner thoughts and sorrow as some who have served in dedication to Truth in presentation in alternative to some established "canned" information fabricated for your intake as citizens, both locally to your nation (homeland) and globally as the games intensify with YOU as the puppets under the lies.

This may well have been a grammatically incorrect paragraph above but it states my pointed observations of FACT.

No, we don't "know" the people involved in what

I will offer but the soul appreciation is evident and real. We have counterparts who DAILY find confrontations of staying the course or "tossing the towel" a constant "in your face" realization.

Dharma claims that, at the least, we have potential of having something which CAN make a tremendous difference in "how the world turns". Most people have no notion of such potential. This, however, does not make the journey easier but, rather, infinitely more a burden, for "stopping" is unacceptable. Others can simply resign or quit and, at the least, take a rest. That is not a privilege our team enjoys.

When it seems, at this keyboard, there is no ability to struggle longer, there comes the very necessary boost to the old "keep on, we aren't through" push. When the realization that not only are others depending on YOUR commitment and success along with supporting the project "literally", the choice to quit is put again for another period of time while more unwinding takes place.

Is the overall game hopeless to consideration of change? Of course not but it is often very, very difficult to see and recognize, for you each can only hold a tiny bit of the overall possibilities already in play.

May I walk you through yesterday's happening, please.

Doris was studying this "Farewell" note to Internet friends from Dorothy Anne Seese (no, she had never heard of her). The heart was heavy to breaking having just been presented on Saturday with the news the BEST FRIEND and colleague in the Philippines had suddenly died on Friday night. This is the lawyer who kept everything flowing, legal and would arrange whatever might be necessary if something happened to either Ekker.

Then before the ink had dried in the heart, word came that back in Los Angeles, Paul Lienthal of varied experiences had died as well. Certainly these are two different personalities and one had given help—while the other had taken and basically precipitated the very loss of Ekkers' very property/home. However, Paul had been involved in everything and every meeting of Boards of Directors and was actually the ONE who was to take the rent and tax funds and PAY the property needs. Thousands of dollars later, with help from his colleagues, thousands of dollars went pffft. Yes indeed, the mind is stunned in the flow of everyday happenings.

Oh indeed, this person was involved in every negative association in order to cover his deeds. He was, it is rumored, very close to Kathy who, in fact, now resides in the house itself. No, it doesn't look very good, does it?

So, what can be done? Well, short of quitting this job and running home, yea even to possibility of questioning by the Feds, the Ekkers can't do anything about it except WAIT until timing is appropriate to confront on all fronts. Dharma wonders, however, if there will be anyone left alive to confront OR befriend.

It is easy to have "had enough", take a deep breath and turn back to "living" whatever comes or goes.

Well, fine, but the next confrontation comes in your face as to what will a "return to living" actually "mean"? The U.S., for example, is in such deep yogurt that recovery without some kind of intervention is not either possible or feasible. Moreover, until the bottom shakes out—we WON'T help and we certainly do not see V.K. Durham's Holding Trust saving anything—even herself. It never pays to lie, cheat or fabricate documents as she has done since before Russell Herman's demise but "after" he had taken security measures to protect his entrusted holdings.

Mulling all the self-pity conjurings and a shout of "me-too" came with the weekly mailings from "home base".

In it, Audrey J. had sent a project proposal which had just been denied by Tehachapi as being too dangerous to consider for an urban area—a place for "movie animals" (i.e. Gentle Ben) and a training facility of a very private nature and as a reserve. The people were too afraid of animals which might "get loose". Oh well.

Unfortunately for "their side", this very concept had been a major bargaining point with "ME" by Dharma. If I serve, Sir, may we accomplish at least one thing here in this valley: a wildlife park without killing and with loving care for those less fortunate?

So, this denial of a few "motion picture stars" was a challenge which I seem to have to now bear to get past and on to a consideration of "success". The PEOPLE to handle, love and run such a facility and yea even attached to a humane society facility are WAITING. Fine, we will certainly have to consider alternatives.

BETTER PLACES

OK, Dharma, et al. in the animal business (sans humans of course), let us use our "hope" and also the REALIZATION that if YOU, Dharma, don't succeed with this task at hand—kiss everything, including housing GOODBYE! (God wouldn't bargain would HE?) No, but he WILL hold you to YOURS.

Today, those animals can depend on a place to go and abundant help will be poured into the already existing housing facilities for the lost and forgotten. We will even do something wonderful, in time, for humans in need.

For Audrey, Eric, Diane, Jack and all you other people in that circle—be patient!

A better location for such a project and which has plenty of land would be to get the old Cummings "ranch" (the original one which was turned into a wild-animal hunting club. You know, the kind where you tie a sheep to a tree and hunters come forth to shoot it.)

That property may well not be available but I'm sure you realize that when we break through, it certainly CAN be acquired. It has plenty of EVERYTHING you would need for such a project.

It is very near an Ostrich Farm and many "horse" areas. It is also in the SAME area as Sunshine Valley Farms! Wow, is GOD ever observant! Go, please, where all you need to make this work is MONEY and then let's get the money. Hopefully this can happen while there is still remaining value in the "dollar". Let us pray for holding power for a while longer while we work at getting everything, especially for our people, into gold and secured "somewhere"—for the gold confiscation by the U.S. government is at hand, chelas.

I suggest you get the Drakes onto your team along with the others already into the active business and lay groundwork. The WORST that could happen is "nothing" and you are "there" already, so let us not feed off negative "give it ups".

Please realize that "that" property is ideal and overlooks the valley where the State prison facility is located. I don't think either set of prisoners would annoy the other. I also see the program as a good potential job market. However, we aren't going to dwell on that at this point, for we would want it to be a Foundation of some kind where people can also share participation while building COMMUNITY.

DREAM, MY CHILDREN! THEN, MAKE IT SO!

The other consideration which might well work into something far more dramatic and wonderful is the Broome property off the Freeway. We planned to have that property anyway with the backside ranch reaching to Loraine with its 14 actively flowing SPRINGS for proper water supply.

We also always planned to acquire the Nunes property and orchards. That may not be longer feasible and certainly its location would not be good for an animal park but very good for many other things.

Those were already in our project plans before life took over, the greed mongers tried to grab everything and our people had to move to the courts instead of the fields.

We have given up NONE of our visions and needed projects right in that area of "home base"—but we had to do THIS PROJECT in order to achieve THAT ONE. The sorting of participants has been dreadful and time has claimed many of our partners but our "plans" are not changed, only delayed. Remember: "GOD'S DELAYS ARE NOT GOD'S DENIALS"! Nor, does getting weary merit quitting. Moreover, we still have a ways to go before we sleep or rest. WE SHALL NOT STOP!

Already, to replace Victor Agcaoili, comes another attorney with even better and higher connections and already is working with us on the Tallano properties and cases. He will remain unnamed in this writing—but let it be known that he has already agreed to fill our needs whatever they might be. He also just accepted an advisory position to the President (GMA) and has a long and very distinguished career here in the Philippines. Remember, dear ones, in your dark moments, God never closes a door that at least a few windows get unlocked and a few candles are lit!

But will this new person serve without pay as did VA? It doesn't matter, does it? However, he is already the attorney for "our side" in the whole of the Tallano estate and this coalition only enlarges his positive position EXPONENTIALLY!

I would please like, especially the Rays, Mark, etc., to realize something quite important here as we focus on one who is giving "Farewell to Politics". WE ARE NOT INTO POLITICS—PERIOD, END OF STORY!

God is an equal-opportunity provider. We DO NOT involve in political intrigue. Our business as to publications is to offer truth which is not likely to find its way to your eyes otherwise. Our publications serve communications purposes as well as announcement notices which is an established mode of exchange with, yes, some of those "political" personalities. We remain PRIVATE, not hiding in "secret". Our people demand to have privacy—and NO PUBLICITY WHATSOEVER.

We must deal with WHAT IS! That includes the politics of the place and moment in time as the citizens of any nation deem appropriate. We certainly DO NOT come forth as visitors and try to dictate anything. Moreover, while absent a home country there is no input into the politics of "that" country.

We meet all legal obligations and regulations of all involved nations or peoples.

It is somehow assumed that we "SHOULD" fix the U.S. and all her problems. We couldn't do that even if we considered it our business. Our functional AGREEMENTS do not, at this time, allow direct working relationships with the U.S. as to governmental interchange. We have simply "parked" the corporation in point of reference with its assets placed into security with registration and documentation along with public notice of same.

We are only working with a KNOWN portion of assets available.

V.K. Durham "claims" she has the holdings, entered wills and documents and therefore we do not interfere in any of her business or activities. WE HAVE PROVEN THROUGH THE LAW THAT SHE HAS NO CLAIM ON ANYTHING WE HOLD AND WHAT WE HOLD IS LAWFUL, VALID AND AUTHORIZED.

As an observation, however, it is totally doubtful if she could, through any practices she projects, give a working program—for her documents have been fabricated and she has no intention of collateralizing ANYTHING. All she would accomplish in her own perfect world of manipulation is to destroy the nation—any nation. She certainly is, however, welcome to do whatever she will with whatever she considers hers as a liaison with Russell Herman. All her rantings have only pushed through validation of that which we offer and hold.

All things had to be set into perfection and so it shall be that whatever "time" spent in consideration is necessary.

In the meanwhile, others have served and the overwhelming wave of being swamped by the beast is too much and sometimes a bit of time is necessary to renew, refuel and simply "be" for a period of time.

I do wish to share the document from the Internet, however, for it expresses the problem far better than we can.

LAST POLITICAL COLUMN BY DOROTHY SEESE

One by one—we are losing the wisdom and words of those who have been trying to sound the alarm. I agree with what Dottie has stated below. When I am impressed that my part in all this is done I, too, will leave the scene and wait for That Day. Each one of us has been placed where we are to spread the Word and I hope that I have been able to be a part of helping at least one or two to find their path.

Farewell, Dottie, and thank you for a job well done.
AND FROM DOTTIE:

Hij

Attached is the last of the political articles I intend to write. The article itself explains my thoughts and reasons. Many of you will disagree at this time. All I ask is that you wait awhile before rendering judgment.

God bless,

Dottie, July 10, 2002

FAREWELL TO POLITICS

It's time to move on

By Dorothy Anne Seese

It's been an enjoyable and a hectic three years of writing, both for my Flagship Website, which I will keep, and for the political ezines that ran my columns. Yes, I've tried to quit before, several times in fact. There was always one more thing to write, one more verbal bullet to fire at the global governance satanists whom I detest to the very bone.

Two days ago as of this writing (July 10, 2002), I realized that the war is over, the globalists are in charge, Americans no longer own America or control it, the people are in a charade orchestrated by the powers of darkness and their strings are pulled by this party, or that, so the illusion of freedom is kept alive.

And illusion it is.

Two towers fell and the federalization of America took less than 48 hours to fall into place. People and governments do not react to truly unexpected events that quickly. That was some ten months ago. Now, three huge corporations have fallen and the people are crying for more government controls to protect their assets. There is no end of the people crying for the government to save them from these evil beasts... the notion that people live, play the hand they're dealt the best they can, and die with honor is some historical antiquity, like chivalry or Robin Hood.

Two towers, three corporations (including Global Crossing), four Reichs.

I live in an area northwest of Phoenix, Arizona where the quail are abundant, cottontail wabbits run freely around the courtyard nibbling on shrubs; the Arizona monsoon season of summer thunderstorms with all their furious wind, dust, lightning and occasional heavy rains is upon us. It is a time we dread, six to eight weeks of air from the saunas of Hell and Nature run amuck with its electrical displays and thundering choruses shaking the windows. No vehicle stays clean long in the Arizona monsoon unless it is locked in the garage for the duration. The violence of Nature makes a mockery of the violence of man, and I am reminded that God is, really, fully in control.

We're living in times that I did not wish to live long enough to see. But I have. From my birth in what everyone thought was a free nation, to the heroism and patriotism of World War II, the dreams of my generation for a better quality of life, I've seen the downspiral of dignity, honor, family, morality, conscience, and individual freedom. Whatever else the baby boomers and Generation X did, as a group, they chucked America to the whims of the elitists while playing with new toys and technologies. Government made an appeal for a "great society" in 1965 and proceeded to lead the sheep to the slaughter after first fleecing them of every shred of wool that might have been the moral and emotional fiber of this nation.

It's been a long way down, baby, and we haven't hit bottom yet.

In the two years I've been listening to talk radio, I've heard the American people change their song from "We Want to be Free" to "Come Save us Lord Government". It's incredible that a "free" people could be crying over the airwaves for federal officers everywhere. Such a generation can't handle freedom! And they will not be bothered by it. The Government, and the shadow behind it that has for decades planned and orchestrated the present evils, will never again allow the people to seriously consider revolution. The war is over, the globalists have won, and I refuse to play charades with the shadows or join the revolution of the deceived who tilt at windmills in a nation whose Constitution and Bill of Rights are monuments to a might-have-been but got-thrown-away. The people proved that the grand experiment will not work because the people will not take personal responsibility. They are all Linuses dragging a government-issue security blanket.

Could we have foreseen this day fifty years ago, as did the elitists who were then planning for this celebration of the victory of globalism, could we have stopped it? I think perhaps yes, but not if it is in God's plan for the end-times and final Judgment. The fact is, we didn't see it; we thought freedom had been secured forever by our victory over Hitler, a rather minor player with a dramatically hideous part in the march to Armageddon.

If I don't write about politics, then what? I don't know and at this point, it isn't important. If it is written, it will be on my Flagship site, and if it isn't written, the Flagship site will be there as long as my gracious Aussie netfriend agrees to host it. Politics is not the only subject covered on the site, so there is room to do various things, when the time is right.

This is my Appomattox, and hopefully I can surrender the sword of the pen as gracefully as General Robert E. Lee surrendered his sword to Union General Ulysses S. Grant. That was a sad day for States Rights, and the death knell of the Tenth Amendment which has now been buried and embalmed in historical acrylic, a mummified testimony to the inability of the people to overcome the power of corrupt government, or the power of self-interest.

My thanks, of course, to the ezine editors who published my work over the past two years that it has been on the Internet. While I haven't met one of them personally, I feel as if I know them, and I appreciate their tireless work in the hope of restoring America for Real Americans. I do not see that day coming, nor do I see a war that can be won because it is already lost. The globalists let us rant and rave among ourselves, preaching to the choirs and the faithful, with hardly a smirk of recognition that we even exist, save to serve their purposes of continuing the smoke-and-mirrors games they play with us and our energetic patriotism.

So here is my keyboard, my "sword of the pen" and I hand it over to the same shadows that announced the final death-stroke against America on September 11, 2001.

Hopefully, there will be many quails and bunnies in the yard tomorrow, scampering around as if they know the God that Americans forgot. That, of course, was the true downfall of the U.S.A. When Americans allowed the God of our fathers to be spat upon in public, then God withdrew His almighty hand from over our nations and this... this is what we have... a totalitarian state replete with misplaced patriotism and a distorted concept of "freedom".

For those of you who believe in our Lord Jesus Christ... look up.

[END QUOTING]

Now, readers, think about why a person could possibly toss in the towel, so to speak.

Well, it is more and more obvious that even the WTC was intentionally destroyed and there are now PICTURES showing approaching missiles in air and then hitting the towers. The EXPLOSIONS are also shown as from WITHIN and perfect demolition of the buildings themselves along with some others in the adjacent lots. No, this is not conjured games—this is FACT. The only problem awaiting answer is WHO, WHOM, WHAT, AND HOW IT COULD HAVE TAKEN PLACE BEFORE THE EYES OF THE PEOPLE.

Then next, you find that not just at the World Trade Center were incredible inside dealings taking place but now you have to face the fact that you are losing your proverbial shirts as massive corporations collapse at the hands of the frauds and criminals. Are you in "freefall"? What else?

GLOBAL FINANCIAL AND ECONOMIC CRASH IMMINENT

By Michael C. Ruppert

[Copyright 2002, From The Wilderness Publications, <http://www.copvcia>]

Stock Market, Pension Funds, U.S. Dollar on Brink of Collapse and Implosion; Theft and Fraud Losses to U.S. Taxpayers Exceed $4.2 Trillion

[Ed. Note: The last time FTW issued an emergency economic bulletin to its subscribers was Sept. 9. At that time a derivatives investment bubble on the verge of implosion, a 900-point drop in the Dow Jones average and a pending liquidity crisis signaled a crash on the order of 1929. Only the attacks of Sept. 11 and massive intervention from the U.S. Treasury and Federal Reserve prevented the collapse. Investors blamed the ensuing market losses on the attacks.] [H: So, stay tuned and we will show you what they did on July 19th as America sold and government bought.]

The situation now is much, much worse as more factors combine to suggest that foreign investors and trust in the U.S. economy might soon be a thing of the past. Your pension is at risk today and your home may be at risk in six months to a year.

One economic analyst has suggested that a nuclear exchange between India and Pakistan might be the perfect cover for the biggest financial wipe-out in human history. I think that an ill-conceived and risky invasion of Iraq might serve the same purpose. From consumer confidence, to corporate accounting, to the dollar, to gold, to foreign-capital flight, to pension-fund wipe-outs, to the derivative bubble, to debt, there is not a single economic indicator that is not flashing red.

The warnings are as clear, explicit and well-documented as were the warnings received by the U.S. government throughout summer 2001 that a terrorist attack against the World Trade Center would take place during the week of Sept. 9 using hijacked airliners from United and American Airlines. Nothing was done to prevent that and apparently nothing is being done now in spite of the fact that $4.2 trillion of your money has been stolen right in front of your eyes.

There was no "single" reason for the attacks of 9-11. I have cited oil, drug cash and geopolitics as three of the primary motives for the U.S. government's complicity in allowing the attacks to happen. But what also cannot be overlooked is the fact that 9-11 effectively masked a major economic crash that was certain to occur. That crash has not been averted by the extraordinary financial maneuverings of the Bush administration that followed 9-11. It was merely postponed for a very short time.—MCRJ

July 8, 2002, 4 PM PDT (FTW)—Reuters, London published a story June 27 based upon an interview with billionaire financier George Soros. The headline read, "Soros Blames 'Bush Factor' for Dollar's Fall". George Soros is a man to be reckoned with, emerging from WWII as someone who allegedly cooperated with Nazi occupation troops by identifying assets to be seized, the European financier is one of the most powerful financiers on the planet. He is credited with successfully assaulting the currencies of several nations, including Britain's pound. He recently participated in the World Economic Forum in New York where he was seated on the dais with the likes of Zbigniew Brzezinski, Hillary Clinton, Shimon Peres and academics from Ivy League colleges. It is more than just a case that when Soros speaks, people listen. The truth is that when Soros speaks, markets move.

His comments were brutal.

"The international financial system is coming apart at the seams. There is a lack of confidence. That's what I call the 'Bush factor' in the economy." There is a liquidity crisis in financial markets, said Soros. "Everybody's going home. The Swiss banks are going home. The strengthening of the yen clearly shows repatriation." Translated, that means that foreign capital is fleeing the United States in the wake of as yet not fully realized accounting scandals that will, according to Fox News on July 6, take an estimated $600 billion in value out of the U.S. stock market this year. One of the many smoke alarms triggered by this is the fact that the U.S. economy needs an estimated $1.5 trillion per year in new foreign investment just to remain solvent.

Reuters quoted Soros as saying that the global economic downturn had "exposed the weaknesses of corporate America and how the U.S. administration runs the international economic system." Soros is aware of what FTW and noted economic thinkers like Catherine Austin Fitts, former assistant secretary of housing, and British economist Chris Sanders of Sanders Research have been saying for years: as much as half of the value of the U.S. financial markets is derived from criminal endeavors, whether it is the laundering of drug money or the fraudulent "cooking" of financial statements to boost profits.

PUMP AND DUMP

It's a simple scheme, really. The mafia knows it quite well. By whatever means necessary, drive a stock's price higher and higher. Make it look like a mover, even if it's a dog. Cook the books and get suckers to buy in, helping to drive the price even higher. When you think the balloon will pop, call all your buddies and sell your shares. That effectively steals all the money that the suckers put in. When the stock crashes, the suckers who weren't part of the scheme will take the loss, whether they be individual investors or the New York City police and fire pension fund.

The U.S. stock markets have been pumped to the breaking point, and they are trying very hard to dump right now. Most sober analysts have agreed for a long time that the prices are over-inflated by as much as 50 percent or more; that price/earnings ratios, now averaging more than 30-1, should properly be corrected to about 15-1. That means the Dow should be at 5,000 or lower. We'll talk about how the meltdown is being temporarily prevented later. It is first necessary to examine the severity of the crisis.

If I mention the "bookkeeping problem" that's threatening Wall Street right now and asked you how many companies were being investigated for or had announced "overstated earnings", how many would you say? Six? Eight? Try 17. Seven of them are energy companies, and this adds another degree of imperative for Congress to force the White House to compel full disclosure from Vice President Cheney's 2001 energy task force. But he has a problem there too. One of the companies under investigation for fraudulent bookkeeping is Halliburton. Cheney was its CEO until taking office, and the fraudulent accounting occurred while he was the boss.

Did you think that WorldCom was a big one, having illegally claimed $3.8 billion in earnings to boost its share price? On July 5, according to Newsday, the energy giant Reliant Resources "restated" its 1999-2001 earnings by chopping off $7.8 billion in revenue. Just today it was disclosed on CNN that the pharmaceutical giant Merck has overstated its revenues by $14 billion.

At the core of all these accounting problems is a non-transparent form of corporate bookkeeping called "pro forma". As opposed to the more transparent and rigid practice called GAAP (Generally Accepted Accounting Practices), pro forma bookkeeping allows for all kinds of manipulations like hiding debt as income, double booking revenues and sneaking drug money onto the bottom line. What has yet to be fully explored by any of the major media is which other major corporations use pro forma bookkeeping. The reason is that all of the major media companies use it too. Also on the pro forma system are GE (NBC), AOL/Time Warner (CNN), Microsoft (MS-NBC), Viacom (CBS), Disney (ABC), IBM, Intel, Cisco Systems, Sun Micro, Tribune (The Chicago Tribune and the L. A. Times), The Washington Post (NEWSWEEK) and the New York Times.

The accounting scandals are starting to nip at the heels of these and other cornerstones of American capital markets. Trading of GM shares was halted June 27 after "unconfirmed market rumors of accounting irregularities". And New York Times reporter Gretchen Morgenson offered the suggestion in an April 14 story that GE might be cooking its books. Thanks to PBS's Lowell Bergman in a 2000 report, we already know that GE has been called on the carpet for accepting drug cash, lots of drug cash, as payment for the good things it brings to life. So has Philip-Morris.

How much foreign capital can Wall Street expect to attract, let alone retain if foreign investors expected to be wiped out for leaving their money here? American investors, especially pension funds are still putting money in or leaving it in place in the stock market. Are there other alarm bells that mom-and-pop investors should be hearing? What will happen to the value of the American brand name as a trustworthy place to invest money if GM is ultimately revealed to have cooked its books?

A look at the real health of the stock market is revealing. On April 26, the International Forecaster made two chilling observations:

"At the time of the AOL Warner merger the combined companies were worth $290 billion. They are presently worth $85 billion. Their quarterly loss is estimated to be $50 billion. This could be the business mistake of the new century.

"The downgrade of Bristol Myers Squibb to Aaa by Moody's leaves only 8 AAA-rated companies left. They are GE, UPS, AIG, ExxonMobil, Johnson & Johnson Berkshire Hathaway, and Pfizer & Merck. In 1990 there were 27 AAA companies and in 1979 there were 58."

[H: Now, readers, what do you think is going to happen to those Enron entities, i.e. in Tehachapi, California as a good example, where the wind parks were simply changed out to GE? Doesn't bode too well for the industry or those "jobs", does it? This has happened over and over around the globe.]

THE DOLLAR

Soros was extremely upset about what was happening to the U.S. dollar, which has been falling against various currencies for about a month. The key to understanding this lies in the lesson I learned at an economic conference in Moscow in the spring of 2001. Almost all countries in the world use the U.S. dollar as their reserve currency. They have bought trillions and are holding them. If another currency becomes more valuable or is viewed as more stable, then the world will switch currencies, and trillions of dollars will come back into the country—inflation would be inevitable and the dollar would lose its value.

[H: We are continually asked what happens should the dollar collapse, as relative to our program? It doesn't matter, for our program only deals with GOLD as in pricing—and gold prices will hold anywhere. This will be referenced as to the topic of "Gold" just ahead.]

In the week ending July 5, the dollar closed consistently at or near parity with the Euro. As of this posting it sits at (US) 99 cents and has been hovering there for more than a week. (It is now under the Euro.) Since various economic "reforms" from the 1950s to the 1970s removed the dollar from the gold standard, it has been a fiat currency, unconnected to any measure of intrinsic value. The full faith and credit of the United States—along with its military—have given the dollar its value. The Euro is partially backed by gold and there have been lingering but credible rumors for years that the U.S.'s gold reserves have been moved to Europe.

Soros told Reuters, "But the declines in the markets have gone somewhat further than what would be the natural consequences of the previous exuberance.

"The decline in the dollar came as a surprise to me. I attribute it to lack of confidence in the management of affairs by the United States, its unilateralism, the pursuit of national self-interests and not living up to the responsibility of being the dominant financial power in the world, not taking care of the system."

What is Soros setting us up for? The pumping of the stock market occurred while Bill Clinton was president. Yet he's blaming Bush. Is another Herbert Hoover being created before the big crash? The signs are there. Britain's paper the Independent ran a June 28 story headlines, "WorldCom scandal: Currencies: Latest Wall Street disaster sends investors all over the world running for cover". The lead read, "The U.S. dollar yesterday moved to the brink of free fall, a nightmare scenario for the world economy, after reverberations from the WorldCom scandal triggered panic among investors."

That was before the announcements about Reliant and Merck. The story painted a glum picture. "This is threatening to become a disorderly market," David Bloom, global economist at HSBC said. "There's no better way to show loss of confidence in a country than through its currency."

Quoting another financial expert, the Independent reported, "If the dollar's decline turns explosive, this could compound the problems of the U.S. asset markets as currency losses raise fears of massive capital flight out of the U.S."

GOLD

For years the price of gold—the ultimate smoke alarm signaling a failing economy—has been artificially suppressed by paper traders who are capable of flooding the commodities markets with gold future options when the price needs to be kept low. Why low? Because rising gold prices have always signaled inflation and/or a lack of faith in the financial markets. Years of efforts by the Gold Anti-Trust Action Committee, or GATA—while not being successful at halting or fully exposing the artificial manipulation of gold prices by the Federal Reserve, major banks, the Bank of International Settlements and major commodities traders—have opened the eyes of many to overt manipulations in gold pricing.

As one investment banker told me recently, there is five times more paper gold than there is actual gold out of the ground. If gold prices ever pop, they'll be out of sight.

Over the past year, certainly since 9-11, gold prices have often moved in exactly the opposite direction (lower) from what conditions would dictate. The financial effort required to do this requires the support of powerful state banking institutions and cash to service the paper. Gold has risen in price from around $280 an ounce nine months ago to a high of around $327 in recent weeks.

That's a return on investment of 16 percent—far better than the Dow has done this year.

In our last economic bulletin FTW noted that the Dow had lost close to 900 points. Since March of this year, it had lost before the profit-seeking 300-point rally of July 5, almost 1,600 points. Yet even as the economic news worsened last week, the price of gold peaked and then started to fall. As of this writing it sits at $312 an ounce. The gold price dropped as the worst economic news was hitting the streets. Why?

As one astute gold watcher, Jay Taylor, summed it up in an October 2000 newsletter, "Every single time there is concern about a stock market debacle, gold is bombed. Always."

On June 5 GATA described one of the recent moves to "fiddle" with gold prices. "MiningWeb.com has just reported an explanation for the plunge in the gold price today. The plunge, MiningWeb says, 'came in the wake of a large after-market trade in New York last night, with an unnamed fund liquidating 5,000 futures contracts, a move which knocked the price first to $326/oz, then to $324/oz, and finally to $321/oz. The sale was executed using the 'Access' system on Comex, which allows for anonymous trading by large funds.'"

There are unmistakable signs of market manipulation now with regards to both gold and stocks. Who is it that keeps the markets from correcting, only making the inevitable crash that much worse? It's called the Plunge Protection Team, or PPT. And now it has to have the liquidity to flood both the gold and the stock markets with enough cash to keep the bubbles from bursting. This, at the same time that major banks like J.P. Morgan/Chase and Citigroup sit atop huge derivatives bubbles that had been estimated at between $150 trillion and $300 trillion. Most major U.S. banks have heavy exposure as a result of the mushrooming financial scandals. All of these bubbles require cash, and this is the liquidity Mr. Soros is rightly worried about.

Rep. Ron Paul, R-Texas, has been challenging the gold manipulation for years. He has been one of the few fiscally sane voices anywhere on Capitol Hill. His website has a listing of his writings and much needed legislation he has or is sponsoring.

Only recently have there been signs that the PPT is also working in the U.S. equity (stock) markets.

THE PLUNGE PROTECTION TEAM

The Washington Post acknowledged the existence of a select group of four who could and would intervene in markets to prevent massive capital flight and a run on shares that would cause an economic collapse if there weren't enough cash to pay out during a massive sell off. In his Feb. 23, 1997 story headed "Plunge Protection Team", Post reporter Brett Fromson identified the Federal Reserve chairman, the Securities and Exchange Commission chairman, the chairman of the Commodities Futures Trading Commission, and the secretary of the Treasury as the team's key players. The intervention of the team in the 1998 crash of Long Term Capital Management, after it became wildly overexposed in the gold market, revealed that private institutions such as Goldman Sachs, J.P. Morgan, Merrill Lynch and other major banks could be involved as well.

Fromson quoted a former team member as saying, "In a crisis, a lot of deference is paid to the Fed. They are the only ones with any money." Or, I might add, the ability to print it.

Pointing to the 1987 stock market crash, the single largest crash in history, Fromson observed, "The Fed kept the markets going by flooding the banking system with reserves and stating publicly that it was ready to extend loans to important financial institutions, if needed."

On April 5, 2000 New York Post reporter John Crudele reported that the stock market had turned back from the abyss. After a 500-point drop that looked like it was leading to a meltdown, "someone started buying large amounts of stock index futures contracts through two major brokerage firms—Goldman Sachs and Merrill Lynch. Unless the brokers tell, there is no way of knowing which of their clients were making the purchases. The market rebounded."

Calling it the PPT, Crudele both referred to the 1997 Washington Post story and suggested that private banks were acting as team captains. Gold activist David Guyatt, relying on information obtained from GATA Chairman Bill Murphy, pointed to the PPT in October 2000. "The hand of the Plunge Protection Team (PPT) is clearly visible for the first time. The entire short gold play over the last few years is a technique that has been used to 'prop up key stocks' and 'fund futures' operations. In the simplest form it works like this: Borrow (at negligible interest rates) someone's [America's, Germany's, Britain's, Goldman Sachs'] gold and sell it in the market. This gives a handsome pool of near-interest-free dollar cash. Whenever the stock market looks shaky, or key stocks come under pressure, dive in and buy, buy, buy.

"But it is not only necessary to manipulate the stock market to succeed. It is also necessary to manipulate the gold price and keep the price of gold below the price PPT sold the leased gold for. This is a game of double jeopardy. The problem the PPT now has is that there is virtually no more official gold left to borrow."

The causes of this intervention were a pending NASDAQ crash and the imminent downgrading of IBM and intel stocks. And the PPT's hand has been noted recently from as far away as Australia. Progressive Review editor Sam Smith recently quoted a story by Richard Bromby of the Australian Financial Review:

"At 2:32 Wednesday [June 26, 2002], New York time, something extraordinary happened at the corner of Wall and Broad streets. The New York Stock Exchange's Dow Jones industrial index—struggling since the opening bell after the WorldCom fraud revelations—threw off its problems. From an intraday low of 8,8926.6, the Dow shot skywards to its high of 9,160 at 3:29 PM. Could it be the work of the much talked about, but never seen, Plunge Protection Team? There is a belief that this team represents a powerful and secretive hand that is ready to act at any time the Dow looks ready to tank big-time.

"London's Observer newspaper last October reported it had information the plunge team was preparing to spend 'billions of dollars' to avert a repeat of 1929 and 1987."

The problem is clear: With a strong dollar the PPT has demonstrated that it has enough cash to suppress gold prices or to save the stock market. It may not have enough cash to do both—especially if the dollar were to suddenly lose its value. Then, all of the chickens that have been locked out will come home to roost with a vengeance.

As The International Forecaster reported on April 26, “The American consumer has run out of credit and buying power. All bets are off if the housing and credit bubbles break and that’s a distinct possibility. Debtor’s prison is drawing nearer. House and Senate conferences are deciding on a new set of rules for Chapter 7 bankruptcy. If the Plunge Protection Team weren’t manipulating the market, with all these scandals, the Dow would already be at 4,500.”

REALIZING THE EXTENT OF THE DESTRUCTION

Not all of the money looted from American taxpayers is going to support the PPT market manipulations. A lot of it is just being stolen.

According to the Standard and Poor’s Website, “domestic equity allocation” (stock market) of U.S. pension fund investments was near 50 percent by the end of the 1990s. It has topped 50 percent since then.

Before the 2000 presidential election, candidate George W. Bush promised that he would tap the Social Security Trust Fund only in the event of war, recession or national emergency. On Sept. 11, he was quoted by his budget director, Mitch Daniels, as saying, “Lucky me! I hit the trifecta!”

It’s not a question about stealing a little here and a little there. It’s a question about open, full-scale looting—but only from the pockets of the American people who, in my opinion, will soon have almost nothing left. Let’s look at the hard numbers of what has been taken and from where. These numbers are by no means exhaustive. It’s just what we know about.

Social Security in 2001 (USA Today/Washington Post) $34 Billion; Social Security in 2002 (est.) (house Budget Committee) $160 Billion; Federal Employees Retirement System (Wall Street Journal 6/13/02) (to meet 2002 budget deficits) $42 Billion; Civil Service Retirement and Disability Fund (ibid) $2 Billion; stolen from the Dept. of Defense in 1999 (Cong. Record and Insight magazine) $1,100 Billion; stolen from the Dept. of Defense in 2000 (CBS News) $2,300 Billion; stolen from HUD in 1999 (Cong. Record) $59 Billion; Shareholder Equity lost to Financial Fraud in 2002 (Fox) $600 Billion.

TOTAL: $4,297 Billion PENDING THEFTS of Social Security (by 2010) (Washington Post citing Cong. Budget Office figures) $845 Billion.

An anecdotal story reveals the damage to pension funds. If you think that Social Security will be a safety net, please read the above section again. Of course we all know about the Enron employees who were wiped out. But according to the New York Times on April 3, New York City’s pension system has lost $9 billion in the wake of recent stock scandals. Imagine the impact if local governments declared bankruptcy or defaulted on their pension obligations. It has been estimated that the California State employee Retirement System (CALPERS) has more than 90 percent of its money invested in the stock market.

A WORD ABOUT HOUSING

Most Americans believe that their homes are their last, best retirement insurance. Yet many Americans have mortgaged their homes for 120 percent of value. Their loans are backed with the full faith and credit of the U.S. government through various agencies such as Ginnie Mae, Fannie Mae, Freddie Mac, and the Federal Housing Authority.

The International Forecaster has predicted that “40 percent of Fannie and Freddie’s loans are going to come back and haunt them. We envision an S&L-type bailout of $2.4 trillion down the road. This will be the biggest financial disaster in history.”

The full faith and credit of the U.S. government lie behind these home loans. If the homeowners go broke in an economic crash, they default. If the U.S. government goes broke—before or after that point—it defaults, and the holders of U.S. debt ultimately have the right (especially under WTO and globalization) to foreclose on the collateral—your home loans. In the worst case scenario most of the United States could legally be owned by all of the countries holding U.S. debt—better described as T-Bills, or U.S. gold, or U.S. stocks.

CONCLUSIONS

The Great Depression was not an event that wiped out U.S. capitalists. It was an event that made the rich even richer by transferring the wealth of the people into the hands of the already wealthy. Legendary is Bank of America’s rise to affluence through real estate foreclosures from 1929-37. Don’t believe for a minute that the richest of the rich will be hurt by the coming collapse. The only ones hurt will be you and me.

George Soros is a member of the Bilderberger Group, a collection of the wealthiest individuals on the planet. It includes, from the U.S., both Democrats and Republicans, and from Europe and Asia the richest “old” money that can be found. U.S. participants in this year’s conference included David Rockefeller, Henry Kissinger, former Treasury Secretary Larry Summers, former CIA Director John Deutch and George Soros. It was just after this year’s meeting which ended in early June, that all of the revelations about corporate fraud started to really hit the news. One wonders if it had been on the agenda.

I also note sadly a recent financial report from the Denver area stating that mortgage foreclosures were going through the roof. This, at the same time that Reuters (July 2, 2002) reported that corporate layoff announcements had risen by 12% in one month. In this context Bush’s tax cuts seem worse than bad judgment. As former Assistant Secretary of Housing Catherine Fitts pointed out to me in a last-minute e-mail, “By 2010, when (and if) the Bush tax reductions are fully in place, an astonishing 52 percent of the total tax cuts will go to the richest one per cent. Put another way, of the estimated $234 billion in tax cuts scheduled for the year 2010, $121 billion will go to just 1.4 million taxpayers.”

Unless you can convince me that gravity might suddenly reverse direction, this collapse is inevitable and imminent. It will be unspeakably brutal. How long do we have? Maybe weeks. Maybe months. Maybe only days. But the house of cards is already starting to collapse all around us. A major terrorist attack, the folly of an invasion of Iraq or a nuclear exchange between India and Pakistan would only be a momentary diversion from a much greater tragedy.

[END QUOTING]

YES INDEED, IT CERTAINLY IS AS BAD AS IT HERE APPEARS!

We have another more current document to share but fingers are refusing to work well after sitting here for hours and finding 21 pages later that we are in “overload” for this day. We will add on the additional pages tomorrow and let Mark align them properly.

Readers, if you want to KNOW what is taking place, then I suggest you go back and really study this writing. It is coming down around you and still you can’t seem to move outside your allotted space appointed by your controllers.

We simply can’t do it FOR you and, moreover, we continue to work with too little from week to week as to have to consider not even printing a paper. How sad, for you understand not that which has come upon you.

May the Light shine around about you and may you allow your mind to comprehend that which is upon you—while you can still attend selves.

God blesses and keeps each and every one who asks.

OPPORTUNITY TO PARTICIPATE

There are many ways in which one can participate in the glorious unfolding of this once-in-many-eras opportunity to beneficially change this planet. While some of us have the honor of participating directly—involved in it as we are with our day-to-day work—you, the reader of this newspaper, can join with the Mission in other ways: specifically, through your financial support of this effort and your positive thoughts and prayers.

Know that it is YOU who sustain the Mission by all that you think and do. YOU are “the wind beneath our wings”.

Financial contributions will, as always, be treated as loans.

Positive thoughts are promised an even greater return. So, if you thought this message wasn’t for YOU—simply because you cannot afford a monetary contribution—THINK AGAIN!

RE: MEDIA MONOPOLY, MANIPULATED AND FALSE TESTIMONY, PRAY TO HOLD THAT DOLLAR

COMMENTS REGARDING THE ABOVE TOPICS

Hatonn—I am somewhat appalled we are called upon to reconsider topics as in “rerun mania”. However, if you can be caused to look at the facts again and again, then there is hope for outliving the lies of such things as consideration of “Free press”, Freedom of speech, etc.

The point to always remember in consideration of negative thoughts on YOUR POINTS is to look closely at your own position and preferences.

By this I mean exactly what is inferred here as you have your own opinions and wishes regarding everything, including where you shop.

We get the nagging outrage about corporations such as Wal-Mart supercenters opening more and more outlets around the U.S. and now, the globe. WHO is outraged? Well, but of course, other businesses hurt by lower prices and greater varieties of services and inventory. WHERE DO “YOU” SHOP?

I note that all of our people “HAVE TO” SHOP AT SUCH AS WAL-MART! Or did you wish to shop at Neiman Marcus OR I. Magnin’s? Oh, I see, you “want to” but can’t? Well, where else might you go for your general needs and plastic cups? As your job markets drop and thus income tanks, where are you going to go to “survive” “interesting” times?

Readers, the world is in change, flux, upheaval—CHAOS in every consciousness stream.

Businesses provide a service if they wish to stay in business and fair or unfair as to practices, this is the way of it. Like it or not, it still remains in the choices of the people that those businesses fall or grow.

Whether or not you wish to face it—Wal-Mart found a need and filled it. Money manipulation and corrupt business accounting simply are the result of exactly that: corruption and greed. Are you also going to stop shopping at Costco? Of course not, for what people are going to do is complain loudly and go right on buying bargains or variety where they find them.

“But the little businesses can’t survive,” you complain.

Who complains? The small businesses, of course. While YOU shop where you can find the best bargains and that is especially true where quality and brand names are concerned.

Right now, as a for instance, in old home town Tehachapi the local business people are trying to prevent two businesses from setting up shop: Walgreen’s and Wal-Mart. This, as Big K-Mart is failing to be able to keep high inventories and varieties, etc. Walgreen’s is a “drug store” become supermart. But there is already another such chain store in the neighborhood.

What will happen if they are prevented to set up shop in Tehachapi? The people will simply continue to go to Bakersfield where there are Wal-Mart’s and Walgreen’s (and Costcos and Home Clubs)—or continue to get whatever they have to have “in-between” “city” trips at the local shops.

Is this BAD? Is this GOOD? IT SIMPLY IS.

“But all the clothes look the same and we may as well go for uniforms,” comes one complaint. Wow, then get a sewing machine at one of the above-mentioned stores and make your clothes—they will usually look quite “different” from anyone else’s.

“But Wal-Mart isn’t even good to its employees,” you say? Who says? They seem to have a constant lineup awaiting hiring opportunities. Nobody forces anyone to work at Wal-Mart, buy at Wal-Mart, or generally even walk past Wal-Mart. THAT is one of the few freedoms left to you.

Face it: YOU want all the breaks and none of the inconvenience.

Offering better services, larger variety, etc., is still CAPITALISM at work.

This points up my observation nicely: YOU DEMAND MORE AND MORE CONSTRAINTS AND BUY INTO THE PRESENTATIONS OF THE MOUTHS WHILE NOT EVEN CONSIDERING THE VERY POSITION OF “SELF”.

HOW MANY OF “YOU” HAVE HAD TRULY SAD CONFRONTATIONS WITH, SAY, WAL-MART? REALLY? BE CAREFUL WHAT YOU SAY AND/OR “REPEAT”.

No, we have absolutely no interest of any kind in Wal-Mart!

If you think big business will not merge to get the most buck for the cluck, then you have been out of life far too long. And yes, it is totally sad to find the things you once held dear—GONE WITH THE WIND!

Why will they do that? Because it is profitable to them—and YOU will support it.

Stores selling chickens are not the problem. Huge corporations shipping chickens worldwide is not even the problem. The network shipping frozen chickens stuffed with drugs IS THE PROBLEM. Do you really think Tyson chickens are “better” than Foster Farms? They are even cheaper. So, what might be in those trucks overflowing the highways and byways that have signs posted on their sides: “Tyson chickens”? You don’t know do you? Those trucks, for all YOU know, are carrying toxic waste or spent fuel rods.

I can promise you, however, that you will buy whichever brand of chicken gives you the best purchase quality and price. Moreover, all the moaning and complaining you will do about “genetically altered” anything is truly a moot argument. Some genetically-altered plants are so much BETTER as to outweigh any consideration of lesser crops.

There is no food left to harvest after the locusts eat every plant to the ground—altered or otherwise. BUT, corn which displeases bore-worms will give you food and BETTER quality. Bore worms and beetles are not really all that good for you. The hungry man just wants to eat—to survive!

Moreover, you are going to have to turn to other building materials than wood or you will have not more forests. Ah but—who is going to establish alternative methods and products? “Someone else”?

We tried to facilitate several products to solve that very problem using compressed earth-clay and another cement-based light and formed panels. All that happened was that PARTNERS actually tried to destroy the messengers and rip off the funds! God provides and you destroy! God creates and Satan promptly counterfeits. Then you join Satan and complain and blame God. It is up to you either way.

We find that, right in small-town, U.S.A. (Tehachapi), the people won’t even allow a place for motion-picture animals while doing a battle over Wal-Mart and a drugstore. More interesting is that the animals are trained and are more harmless than the majority of the pets running around everywhere. When priorities get displaced, readers, then you can only become puppets or functional slaves.

My example can go further in that if you have “free-will”—YOU WILL STILL GO TO SUCH AS WAL-MART AND ALL THE LYING ABOUT IT IS MOOT.

You now clamor for more and more regulations to insure your safety and “freedom”. That is always the way it is just before you become a police state. The only thing left at this point is which manipulator gets to be the King string-holder. Fighting over whom gets the fishpond after the fish are all dead is hardly worthy of effort.

COMMUNICATIONS MEDIA

The complaint is that certainly the “news” is controlled just as is ALL of the media. Well, what can you do about it? The little papers serve a purpose but are blotted out as soon as the Big Boys get tired of the annoyances and you get tired of supporting them. NONE of them have more than “in-debt” standing while worsening.

The world news consists of BBC and CNN and the offshoots liberally scattered around the globe—run by the same manipulators.

Rupert Murdoch who owns Fox News Channel just happens to be a luminary of the secret Bilderberg Group.

NBC is owned by GENERAL ELECTRIC, one of the biggest, and growing, corporations in the world.

ABC is owned by the Disney Corp. and is noted for providing their workers with atrocious wages and working conditions—or so claimed.

CBS is owned by Viacom which is another huge media conglomerate that owns, among other entities, MTV, Showtime, Nickelodeon, VH1, TNN, CMT, 39 broadcasting television stations, 184 radio stations, Paramount Pictures and Blockbuster Inc.

Now those SAME corporations have tentacles all over the globe while back at the ranch fewer and fewer huge conglomerates are controlling virtually everything that the ordinary world citizen sees, hears and/or reads. It was planned that way and so it has become.

No, we have no intention of FIGHTING anything, for at the same time many of you prod us to “do something” we find that the only thing really desired is to simply get more and more “protection” which insures the demise of people who would change the circumstances.

I don’t even intend to cause ripples which will cause a negative response from the government of any nation, bend any (NOT EVEN ONE) law of the land or even the secret ones pulled out when convenient. If we break a regulation it is purely because of accidental oversight and will be corrected at the very earliest time possible from the moment of discovery of said blunder. WE WILL NOT SERVE OUR ENEMIES!

You can feed the dragon if you choose and we will keep right on down the road of service—for as long as we can do so—but that is ALL we can do and it will suffice our needs. We will serve our assignment commitments just as accepted as commission from upstart years ago (at least 15 of them being in the 343rd day of that 15th in reference) with nothing else save this as a target goal.

Others may well change direction, quit the journey and for whatever needs might come, have to stop whatever might be called to cease and/or desist—right or wrong. We will not, for others must wait our accomplishment to serve their own.

ILLNESS BY FLUKE OR VIRAL CRYSTAL LIFE FORMS

Every day you are hit with some “another” kind of bacteria or developed life form to kill you and for which there is no known cure or treatment—even from the major chemical houses called Pharmaceutical companies.

It is as with cloning of any kind or creation of this or that manifestation copies: You can’t control those things once out of the “Arc” or Pandora’s box (same thing). Once a “thing” has been constructed it will get out of control by somebody somewhere. Then when such as a bacterium, virus or crossbreed of parasite mix/match becomes a self-duplicating “thing”, you are in for trouble.

Do I have answers for possible treatment of new strains of old diseases? That is beside the point as we, like anyone else, must offer nothing which is not fully approved and “we” aren’t going to get ANYTHING passed and approved. Where have YOU been that would even cause you to ask?

With that in full conscious realization you might very well wish to reconsider how to turn silver and such into that harmless, but said to be useful, colloid. We might even remind you of how to achieve such solutions but once burned, we keep our hands OUT of the fire. Besides, you need something with which to rebuild that immune system and restructure (clone if you will) your very DNA strands. It takes drias to accomplish that in a general “water way” simplicity. And you have to have some balanced mitochondria to allow cell fuel conversion.

I can give you an example of a new hit to your global communities and see what your chances might be of escaping the bugs once started on their global travels. Don’t you remember the Asian flu(s)?

The U.S. is playing with an outrageous new strain of smallpox which puts anthrax to shame as a naughty toy. But this other “ultra superbacteria” is already into the system.

Just sharing:

[QUOTING Philippines, The DAILY TRIBUNE, Friday, July 26, 2002, pg. 11:]

SOUTH KOREAN DOCS FRANTIC AFTER FINDING ‘ULTRA SUPERBACTERIA’

SEOUL (AFP)—South Korea’s medical world was put on alert last Wednesday as researchers spoke of superbacteria resistant to the toughest antibiotics spreading in Asia.

There is no effective weapon against the deadly bacteria because their unique enzyme breaks down antibiotic substances, according to a Yonsei University Hospital research team.

Team leader Lee Gyung-Won said the bacteria were among the most worrying problems for doctors as they spread quickly through hospitals.

His team tested body waste samples from 7,275 patients from 28 hospitals and found 82 people infected with the bacteria with a new type enzyme called VIM-2.

The bacteria with VIM-2 enzymes was first reported in FRANCE in 2000. It is the first time the superbacteria have been discovered in Asia.

“The superbacteria was a result of excessive use of antibiotics,” Lee told reporters.

The bacteria are resistant to Carpapenem, the most powerful antibiotic, he said.

LEE SAID VIM-2 IS ESPECIALLY DANGEROUS BECAUSE IT INVADES OTHER BACTERIA AND RENDERS THEM IMMUNE.

“This makes bacteria resistant to antibiotics and patients vulnerable to Sepsis or blood poisoning,” he said.

[END QUOTING]

Well, not to worry about finding a solution to the death and dying problem by means of accepted medicines—for the WHO (World Health Organization) who introduced AIDS so effectively is onto the “traditional natural medicines”. Yea, even to calling them “new drugs” and putting little vitamin dealers in prison for passing them on as supplements. Etc.

WHO is really hitting hard at China who has put out something in that “traditional” field that seemingly has affected FOUR women taking it for diet control. Now, let’s be nice, for surely NO ONE has ever been hurt by a pharmaceutical company’s outrageous presentations, but nobody shuts down, unfortunately, the ENTIRE natural-traditional market. WOW!

What really happens is that, again, once badly burned, you won’t find anyone setting about offering anything a second time, even by mistake. If you don’t believe me, check with New Gaia and Diane Kunick.

Ah but—we know, don’t we, that the adversary was after us (inclusive of me) and ultimately the only one they could even consider to annoy was Diane because the “turning in deviant” informers, lied, cheated and yea, even stole—as in money and property.

The interesting but good news is that the Feds had to admit as much and did in fact, in the case itself, say that “Ekkers were not indicted...” and then something about “fled to Manila...” and thus and so.

No, there was NO WRONGDOING AND THIS SAYS AS MUCH. HOWEVER, it also indicates that by accepting a “bargain” that the case is not settled other than as a “guilty” plea.

Ekkers will NOT come home until our task is concluded in this area of Southeast Asia—and then only to counter the accusers, clean that slate and put aside those incredible two-legged parasites.

Painful? Yes indeed. Impossible? No indeed. The mischief makers keep building the cases against themselves while NOW, THE FEDS ARE RECHECKING THEIR FILES AND TRYING TO CLEAR THEIR OWN ERRORS AND OMISSIONS, NOT TO EVEN MENTION THEIR “COMMISSIONS”.

But for Ekker grandparents? Well, Dharma says the truth: “If we can change the world for those grandchildren and the other children in pain and hunger, we can go a lifetime without seeing our families—for death would present the same absence without merit or purpose.” So, we all work a little harder, smarter and more diligently where we can do so.

The accusations and foolish hits only show us where the enemy thinks we are weak. For that we are grateful for, so far, we are found sound and certainly NOT WANTING.

By the way, in a practical way of consideration: When you have lost everything (EVERYTHING), it lessens the NEEDS to a bare minimum. In other words, it leaves both hands free to do the work in progress without miserable distractions. What can be put on “hold” shall be and what can’t—pffft!

By the way, to family and friends—THAT TRAVEL ROAD RUNS “BOTH” DIRECTIONS—IF YOU NEED TO SEE THESE TRAVELERS WHEN THE WORKLOAD PERMITS SUCH LUXURIES AS “TIME OFF” TO SMELL THE PLUMERIA.

Check it out: The child in deepest Africa is NO LESS God’s citizen than are the U.S.A. dwellers. When you stop looking at the blinding glare of a flag blindfold, you will realize what I just said here.

By the way, our own little business ventures can as well be accomplished FROM the U.S.A. without even need of registration here as from here—only better. Considering the opposite it is noted that what we need to accomplish back in the U.S. can be done beautifully right from Manila or elsewhere. THAT IS THE BEAUTY OF LEARNING ALL THE LESSONS GOD OFFERED DURING THOSE LONG (OR PERHAPS SHORT) 15 YEARS.

“But old people can’t get around much any more,” you say. Well, then quit expecting E.J. and Doris to keep swinging on the Moon and I hardly consider a wonderful airplane ride a total imposition—for you waste far more comfort just running to the gym and back.

So why am I spending time on these reminders?

BECAUSE it is time to move on and get that mind-set in order so that we are ready, willing and able to hit the new “runway” running instead of bogged in useless baggage.

There are a lot of things to clear and attend—and then conclude in many areas of experience in order that others can take up the cudgel hammer and MOVE ON. In other words, we need to do “ours” and step aside while allowing others to DECIDE what it is they wish to do with their lives and purposes.

A lot of goodly company friends put a lot of eggs into one basket to incubate these Phoenix chicks. It is just about hatching time—WHAT WILL YOU DO WITH YOUR CHICK? Perhaps you will just want to retire and, beloved friends, there is nothing wrong with that if that is truly what you WANT TO DO! Most people do not want to retire just when they get wise enough to do something worthwhile for mankind and for self. Perhaps you can just be a volunteer to feed some animals at Audrey and Eric’s “animal farm” or take a puppy to visit the orphanage or elderly home. If you can still “COMPLAIN”, then you can still offer positive prayers—if you want to! Or, don’t laugh too hard: be a person in that elderly or rehab facility to be available for a volunteer to share a puppy so he/she can feel good about sharing..J! Or, just sit around being a grumpy old foggy..L!

By the way, chelas, it is better to be conscious of confronting the hits all around you NOW than waste time on something “maybe” (like an asteroid) 20 years from now. Fix the NOW and you won’t have to worry about the THEN.

Make this a good day and likewise will be tomorrow.—GCH

TOP SECRET NAZI EXPEDITION

Let us again turn our attention to the location of the bases. Even in this area Hitler had planned far ahead and at long range. Obviously guided by the possible occupation and subsequent loss of Germany itself, he had cast around for land still available for colonization and found that Antarctica was, at that time, the only continent still unclaimed. With his usual dispatch, a polar expedition was organized—the preparation of which was kept secret. The force consisted of several large vessels, at least two of which were aircraft carriers, not the present-day type but rather large ships with float-equipped airplanes on board. The planes were rocket-catapulted off special ramps at the end of the ships and retrieved out of the water via a crane. This secret Nazi Expeditionary Force was headed by Kapitan Ritscher and took place in 1937-38. The force landed in the area of Queen Maud Land and established bases there. Large float planes of the Dornier-Wal type, with the unusual pusher-puller propellers were used to explore a huge area of Antarctic terrain. Over 11,000 photographs were taken for mapping purposes. Significantly, a Swastika flag was dropped every 20 kilometers to substantiate the German claim to that land, comprising over 600,000 square kilometers in all. In this way, not only was a terrain claimed by Germany, larger than Germany itself, but more significantly, for the first time, ice-free oases (warm lakes) were found by this secret Nazi expedition. They were photographed along with Alp-like mountain ranges of over 4,000 meters in height. Naturally, the explored areas were given German names and so you have today places like “Ritscher Gipfel”, or, “Ritscher Peak”, named after the leader of the expedition. The hot oases amongst the eternal ice were called “Schirmacher Seen Platte”—“Schirmacher Lake Group”. These are also often referred to as the “Rainbow Lakes”. The different-colored appearances of these inland lakes are caused by algae found floating in the sweet water and vary in color from lake to lake as the algae color differs. The waters are warm enough to allow swimming and bathing with just bathing suits and swim trunks.

Added credence to the secret-bases thesis is found in remarks attributed to Joachin von Ribbentrop at the outbreak of the war: “In accordance with Germany’s long-range political strategy, we have taken into firm possession the Antarctic area, called New Swabia (New Schwabenland) to ensure a safe retreat in case of necessary.”

If you compare the German area to the size of the United States, it is huge in comparison.

Other factors make Antarctica an ideal place for these bases. There is no rust, no germs, and consequently very little illness or decomposition. Food remains edible forever, since the entire region acts rather like a giant freezer. The shed, for instance, where Scott spent some months pre-WW I, before he launched his ill-fated antarctic expedition, was recently discovered. The food which remained in the shed, from almost 70 years ago, was still as fresh and edible as on the day it arrived in Antarctica—and wooden boxes, tin cans, cups, candles and paper (in fact everything), are as well preserved as if by inanimate suspension. Antarctica has no flies, no bugs, and no bacillus can survive the cold temperatures of the surface location.

20TH-CENTURY SECRET?

Could all of this have taken place in the 20th Century without detection? Hardly! What steps were taken to discover the truth? What has been done on your placement to do something about the secret bases now that their existence has been established and established beyond a doubt? Why did the world not hear about these incredible events? Good questions indeed and it is surely past time that you-the-people open your eyes and look around.

Obviously, Hitler’s escape was discovered immediately, otherwise the statements of Stalin and of Eisenhower and all other quoted sources would be an exercise in insanity. It has even been totally recognized that the Nuremberg War Crimes Trials were staged, to a great extent, in the hope that the “Last Battalion” could be drawn from their impregnable, inaccessible hideouts, and thus force the Fuehrer’s hand. A large armed force of elite troops surrounded the whole of the Nuremberg area during the long agonizing months of the typically-Bolshevik show trials. Perhaps there are readers who will be able to recall from newspaper pictures or newsreels the “tight security” that existed in the whole of Germany during those trials. Some S.S. men were actually caught, tried and convicted for attempting to free their leaders, but when the cry of strangulation and torture was over, the Fuhrer was still nowhere to be found. Some UFO overflights and activities were reported but no actual armed clashes or incidents took place.

Washington, Moscow and London then decided to really “get into the act”; in fact, eight countries in total decided to do some “scientific” work in Antarctica, of all places!!! A large expedition, lavishly financed, was quickly put together. It consisted of over 4,000 specially selected elite U.S. Navy troops along with an eight-month food supply. Thirteen ships under the overall command of Admiral Byrd made up this purely “scientific” expedition, composed mostly of military-types and very few scientists.

The U.S. Antarctic battle fleet left Norfolk, Virginia on Dec. 2, 1946—three distinct battle groups, comprised of the Mount Olympus, Admiral Byrd’s command ship, the ice-breaker, Northwind, the catapult ship Pine Island, the destroyer Brownson, the aircraft-carrier Philippines Sea, the U.S. submarine Sennet and the two support vessels, Yankee and Merrick, as well as the two tankers Canisted and Capacan, an additional floatplane carrying ship, Currituck and the destroyer Henderson.

At the same time it was announced officially that a similar English-Norwegian force was operating in a support capacity in Antarctic waters around Bahia Marguerite. A Soviet contingent was also participating in the “research”.

U.S.A. CONVOYS IN ANTARCTICA

The Soviet participation is an interesting one, since Winston Churchill had already spoken of an “Iron Curtain” and felt that “they”—the crusaders to Europe had “killed the wrong pig”. Obviously Churchill realized that they should have destroyed Bolshevik Russia and not Germany. So be it.

The general public (YOU) was told that the “RESEARCH” mission was interested in locating uranium and studying the weather. Admiral Byrd, who had already undertaken a similar, though much smaller and speedier, investigation of the North Pole was asked why he had recommended the establishment of armed observation camps. His reply, “Because the pole lies between us and our enemies”—El Mercurio, Santiago, Chile, July 7th, 1947. Further questioning as to which enemy he meant, since the Axis powers had just been defeated and had “unconditionally surrendered”, brought no response from the “great” man.

It was soon learned, however, that as well as the scientific jobs, the mission had the task of “observing the activities of a foreign power in the South Pole Region”. Questioned further on this part of the expedition’s activities, Adm. Byrd reportedly replied, “To break the last desperate resistance of Adolf Hitler, in case we find him in his Neuberchtesgaden inside ‘New Schwabenland’ in the Queen Maud Land region, or to destroy him.” How interesting indeed.

Also most interesting, the Byrd expedition was equipped with the very latest devices, amongst them were thermo-magnetic detectors.

The U.S. expedition duly arrived and landed in Antarctica. With them the very latest in military gear, gadgets and troops. With them the very latest in military carriers, helicopters, floatplanes and every other conceivable military apparatus. Bases were established and quickly expanded. Observation planes were sent out all over the region. Thousands of photographs were taken and mapping missions flown.

One particular flight stands out amongst all those reported and one with Adm. Byrd, himself, aboard. The instruments went totally haywire and the performance gauges and altimeters behaved in a most erratic manner, causing Adm. Byrd to abort the flight and return to base on “visual” control. All instruments returned to normal as soon as open terrain had been reached.

It was reported, and it is true, that Admiral Byrd located the Secret Nazi Base (among other things we shall speak of later) and was approaching it when the above incident took place causing abandonment of the flight, but not before he dropped an American flag and a bomb or two on the approximate spot of the base. This was done, of course, to warn Hitler he was not entirely safe even in his Shangri-la.

RETALIATION

Woops—what of an error or two? Vengeance was swift and the Fuhrer was not in a humorous mood. Within 48 hours, four of Byrd's planes had been lost, some without a trace and others without any survivors. Adm. Byrd hastily abandoned all his efforts and disembarked, with all his force, for home.

PRESS INTERVIEW FOLLOWING DEPARTURE

On board his flagship Olympus he gave the following startling interview, translated from the Spanish as it was reported in the paper El Mercurio, Santiago, Chile on March 5, 1947. It appeared on the front page under the headline "On Board the Mount Olympus on the High Seas".

"Adm. Byrd declared today that it was imperative for the United States to initiate immediate defence measures against hostile regions. The Admiral further stated that he didn't want to frighten anyone unduly but that it was a bitter reality that in case of a new war the continental United States would be attacked by flying objects which would fly from pole to pole at incredible speeds. (Earlier he had recommended defence bases at the North Pole). Admiral Byrd repeated the above points of view, resulting from his personal knowledge gathered both at the north and south poles, before a news conference held for International News Service."

During the press conference the Admiral also stated that in a quickly shrinking world the United States could no longer derive any sense of security from its isolation or on the geographic distance of the poles or oceans. The Admiral affirmed once again his belief that the entire Antarctic continent should be closely watched and surrounded by a "wall of defense installations, since it represented the last line of defence for AMERICA". (THESE DEFENSE MEASURES HAVE SINCE BEEN TAKEN.) Admiral Byrd further stated that no one could give a more accurate accounting of the true significance of the situation than he could, since he had had occasion to employ the latest scientific developments and from what he had learned he could make comparisons, for he had encountered the effect of the secret weapons.

When Admiral Byrd had arrived back in the U.S. and the significance of his findings had found their way into the press, he was mysteriously hospitalized. No hard information was ever unearthed but his grand statements to the press in South America and on board the Olympus were not appreciated by the powers in Washington. Less appreciated were the actual facts regarding his expedition which I shall enlighten you about a little bit further on in this writing.

He was among the first victims of a long string of prominent people "removed from circulation" for their honest belief in Unidentified Flying Objects and encounters with higher forces.

You can gain great insight into important conclusions from the foregoing:

1: The final outcome of WW II is yet to be decided. This is borne out by the late General and former President Eisenhower's statement—"The Second World War has not yet ended," and corroborated by Admiral Byrd's alarming phrase "in the case of a new war". Hitler's Last Battalion is waiting for its golden opportunity to be "the tip of the scale" in any conflagration yet to come. SO BE IT, BROTHERS, SO BE IT!

2: Hitler has defended his secret lair as successfully against Byrd as he had his numerous headquarters in Europe, during the war against the Allies. Byrd was forced to retreat and to acknowledge the superiority of the UFOs, and their secret weapons.

3: The over fifty small wars since 1945 including Korea and Vietnam, were supposed to provoke a premature "showing of hands" by the Last Battalion.

4: The "New Third Reich" has maintained its crucial time/technology advantage over its WW II adversaries—even decidedly increased it.

5: Idealism (spirit) has triumphed already over Materialism (money), since only the German state was destroyed but not the ideology of National Socialism.

6: There has been a 30-year cover-up by brain and more often by brawn, about the true identity of the UFOs or at least many of them. Their origins have been known, but deliberately suppressed by the rulers of the Unholy Alliance of 1939-45.

7: The real and only reason for the insane UFO cover-up, now falling apart, is to be found in most UFO's German origin. The Allies in East and West have told so many lies about the barbaric, sadistic behavior of the Nazis, that they now fear widespread panic amongst their populations, should the truth become known. After all, if the Nazis are still around, would it not be logical and natural for them to take revenge one day? With UFO power? Come now—what does the symbol of a swastika really mean? LIFE ONGOING AND WITHOUT END! No, I did not say that I adore and cherish the Third Reich—I said that the swastika means Life! All the liars are not yet out of the woodwork, my friends.

WHY THE BIG UFO COVER-UP?

For over 40 years some of the world's most imaginative people have wondered about the "strange" behavior of their governments when it comes to the questions of the UFOs. If the UFOs are extra terrestrial and the humans on your planet have no "defense" against them, then why annoy these beings by orders to "SHOOT TO KILL"? It is interesting that once again you see perfect harmony of approach between the U.S. and the Soviets. In the '70s there was a very detailed report about the Soviet Air Forces having stumbled upon some secret UFO bases in far off Mongolia. The Soviets went in their usual barbaric style, bombed and burned everything to the ground. This was well documented by Dipl. Ing. A. Schneider in the Viennese newspaper, K.Die aktuelle Serie, P.a., Sat. Sept. 14, 1974 as follows: [QUOTING:]

... the following remarkable report reached us today from the Soviet Union: April 24, 1970 was a day that all hell broke loose. A supersonic Soviet jetbomber in a secret mission from Moscow to Vladivostok was lost without a trace over Siberia. The pilot was in voice contact with ground control stations when suddenly the transmission was interrupted. An intensive search by nearly two hundred planes was quickly organized over the area where the pilot was last heard from. Almost simultaneously a number of pilots reported to ground control, "We are not alone up here, above us are flying objects, maybe 25 or even more. They are huge, they are so high we cannot get near them." That same afternoon in Krasnojarsk, red alert was sounded and troops were deployed around the city because an entire formation of these silvery, silent visitors circled over the scared town. Apparently, entire salvoes of ground-to-air missiles were fired at hundreds of flying discs which crowded the airspace of the Sino-

Soviet-Mongolian frontier area. There was a concerted action by the strange intruders against the town of Ulan Bator, where all flights seemed to emanate from and end. A spokesman for a group of touring German students said after returning from Mongolia, where they had been at the time of the "UFO invasion", "That the Soviet Union had destroyed a secret UFO base of immense proportions consisting of many miles of subterranean tunnels, and dozens of pyramid-like structures in the northern area of Mongolia." However no photographic proof or documentary evidence exists. The Soviets are always very secretive. [END QUOTING]

After Admiral Byrd's hasty retreat from Antarctica he not only suggested bases around both poles and a ring of armed camps, but offered this plan: Turn Antarctica into atomic test ranges where atom and hydrogen bombs could be dropped to be "tested". Well, this is a quote from an incorrect source—it was not Admiral Byrd who suggested such a thing, he was simply blamed for it.

A strange thing, however, happened as soon as such a plan was put forth. Capitol Hill in Washington, D.C. received an official visit. There is not a UFO fan who has not seen the historic photograph of an entire "swarm" of UFOs flying over the nearby Congressional Buildings and the White House in perfect formation. Interesting to note that the Antarctic test-site idea was never again seriously considered.

Hundreds of sightings took place around the world from Japan to Korea, where you have a particularly good example of a UFO de-materializing in front of the cameras. One must then ask, "Why do these UFOs always show themselves, but why do they not land?" etc., etc., etc. Well, realizing the fear responses and the need to keep the lies hidden—it is indeed unsafe, isn't it? This is appropriate for terrestrial ships as well as extraterrestrial visitors.

The UFO cover-up is most similar to other actions of the other unholy alliances such as the mass murders of Operation Keelhaul, at Katyn, Dresden and Hiroshima. Let anyone dare to "not conform" with "the establishment's" version of things and you can see people being hounded, defamed and persecuted on a daily basis—not the least of which are our own scribes—just for receiving this information.

LITTLE MEN WITH AGREEMENTS?

More distracters and I will investigate herein. Let us look from some other viewpoints, please.

Often, your UFO fans have advanced the theory that the strange flying objects come from distant planets and galaxies to check on your "atomic experimenting", and some people state "contactees" have been told that the UFOs would prevent an atomic war on the planet Earth. Why should we? Why should we care? We certainly do not demonstrate any great desire to colonize the Earth—at least not in any great numbers. Well, perhaps some of these "aliens" are already scattered about Earth. We have all sorts of reasons why we will not allow atomic devastation to wreck your planet:

These are speculations as presented by some sources who feel an alliance exists with space aliens, etc. [QUOTING:]

a) The UFOs are, by now, driven by electromagnetism, consequently all secrets surrounding electric power have been discovered. Since all modern communications and guidance systems are based on electronics, it is an easy task to "listen in", decode and prevent the start or to re-direct whilst in flight, any vehicle or space craft, now in use by the “allies”.

b) The destructive power of atomic weapons is therefore much more of a threat to the powers who possess them and have them stored in silos, in subs, in planes or on their own soil than to those countries who do not have these weapons at all, since they could quite easily be set off by remote control from the UFOs, before they were even launched.

[H: Please keep in mind that these are projections put forth from your placement—not mine.]

c) The UFOs will undoubtedly prevent atomic war to prevent the extinction of the White Race. At the moment the White people are outnumbered ten to one on the planet and should there be an atomic exchange the ratio would be a hundred to one in the White’s dis-favor. [END QUOTING]

Well, a few of your better thinkers have found some interesting conclusions which might be worth pointing out.

No man of the calibre of Adolf Hitler, deeply committed to the survival and resurgence of Western Culture, would ever allow this tragedy to happen to the White Race if he could at all help it.

There is a most interesting aside which I might note for you. Perhaps a few of you readers will already know the following, that in the region of the South Pole (Antarctica), and to a lesser extent the North Pole, it is possible to escape from the earth’s magnetic pull and death through radiation because the Van Allen Belts open up, funnel-like, at both of these extremities. It is possible to launch a spacecraft—with very little radiation protection—from this area, avoiding enormous weight; a crew needs no radiation-protective gear.

Now I am going to lay forth some other speculations which might bear contemplation.

You must remember that Hitler had massive feasibility studies of space stations, based on very specific and valid data.

He authorized launching an artificial satellite to be rocketed into space in 1947 with the A9-A10 rocket, in a steep angle away from the axis of the Earth, and counter to the Earth’s rotation. From this point it would have been possible to observe any spot on Earth within any given two-hour time period, and hit any spot on Earth with accurate missiles, bombs, radar-guided or other gadgets such as “mirror beams” or “death rays”.

The Rosenbergs mentioned these platforms in their testimony during their espionage trials. They called them “Warships of space”. Where did they get this information about top-secret plans, not realized by the Allies until some 25 years later? From the same documents that gave them the atomic bomb, of course. Yes, this would definitely seem as if spaceflight was already known to a mysterious group of beings, would it not?

PROF. DR. JAMES GREENACRE

The American astronomer, Prof. Dr. James Greenacre and four of his colleagues made an astounding observation from Flagstaff, Arizona Observatory and reported it to a Conference on “Moon Problems” in New York City in May of 1964. Because of the UFO cover-up policy still in force in the U.S. government, Prof. Dr. Greenacre was only able to give his report verbally to colleagues who were present at the Conference. Here is roughly what he said: “On 29 Oct. 1963 we observed several colorful spots on the Moon, the spots moved in formation across the motionless face of the Moon.”

One month later Prof. Dr. Greenacre observed the same phenomena. The May 1966 issue of UFO Nachrichten Vol. 117 reproduced what Dr. Greenacre had stated he had observed: “Prof. Dr. Greenacre saw on or close to the Moon at least 31 spacecraft of gigantic size. Some were from 300 meters to 4.8 kilometers long. They were in motion while being observed through the telescopes. Also, clearly discernible were numerous smaller craft approximately 150 meters in diameter, which moved past or alongside the huge craft, the “mother craft” occasionally changing color, as in the often-reported, pulsating style.” (The distance from the Earth to the Moon is 384,000 kilometers). This was the end of the report.

The American Professor thought at first the Russians might have beaten the Americans to the punch. But not so! So, therefore, who is out there in the wild blue yonder? Well, Prof. Dr. Phillips of Berlin, Hitler’s wartime comrade, claimed he knew. He even sent the author much information on the subject, some charts and time tables of his flights and they match, my friends.

Before we leave this area of investigation and take a break, we have to look into the repeated reports of “glowing” or “pulsating” lights emanating from UFOs. You can find an interesting reference to this phenomena from a brilliant German metallurgist who had created “a metal harder than diamonds” called appropriately enough “Impervium”. This metal glows alternately in the colors of the rainbow when heated to a high degree. This seems to tie up another loose end and again, the timing is interesting. The metal was used for the first time commercially in 1935-36. The laboratories were located not at Schramberg as Michael X reports but at Starnberg and Starnberger See. However, this could be a simple spelling error by someone not too familiar with the German language. Oh, so much to learn, haven’t we?

Dharma begins to see the handwriting on the wall and is quite unnerved at this time, therefore, I request a break and allow settlement. It is fine, chela, everyone keeps nagging for “new” information and perhaps it is time to begin to scatter it around a bit. You will stay closely in the Light shield, chela, for as we tread on the proper toes the nasties will get more intense. So be it—the God of Light and Truth shall prevail and this Word will go forth. Yes, I know ones are quite dead who have spoken of these things—I do note, however, that you are quite healthy and we intend to keep that status current.

I move now, to stand-by that we might have a break.

In love and total Light of Radiance I salute you for your service.

Hatonn to clear, please.

CHAPTER 12

REC #1 HATONN

FRI., MAR. 30, 1990 9:00 A.M. YEAR 3 DAY 226

Hatonn present this morning that we might continue work on the Journal. I come in the Light of the Radiant One and clear all negativity from this place. We shall speak of this herein, Dharma, for knowledge is your shield.

The vibration pulses of which you are so acutely aware within the past 48 hours are intentional indeed. While you ones were absent a new monitoring grid was integrated into your electrical system within your dwelling. You will find that circuits will overload quite easily in effort to lose of your computer data, etc. You will be bombarded with ELF cycles through the equipment. You are “field” recycled in that your own nervous system counter-balances the energy integration. For a while you will be acutely aware of the vibrations from all things you touch, for the cycle impulses are different from your own and you will note the clash of sequence perception until you adjust. Know it is intended and that you are in protection. However, I request that you remain conscious of the input and challenge to your system in that you are constantly aware and recognize all changes.

Your system will automatically adjust but you will find exhaustion your constant companion for a while during the adjustment and all within the property will recognize confusion, depression and sleepiness until all is in total integration.

I speak of these things herein because we choose to make a public statement of conspiracy attempt to stop of your writing. We herein place the conspirators on notice that we can play this game far more perfectly than they can bombard. I ask, however, that all entering your physical space take extreme care and use superior caution. As the script plan is unfolded unto you ones, the seriousness of the impact must be ever present. You are to use caution—not fear. Be receptive to intuition (all of you) regarding any and each who enters into your space. I did not say to be distrustful—I said to “pay attention”. This is both for the guest/visitor as well as for self.

The readers of these Journals must come into realization that the material to which they are now being made privy, is truth, is dangerous, and is your very guideline to change as well as transition.

The threats have now been officially laid at my table to cease and desist with the bringing forth of these truths “or else”. Dharma has requested that she be allowed to continue our work and we place her in protection, however, there is great risk in many forms. We are now to the point of “picking-up” where others were forced to “leave-off”. The game gets rougher as we move along. Therefore, I must ask patience and indulgence of the readers in that we must work rapidly on the Journals and personal kibitzing over nit-picking attitudes of personal nature will probably be set aside to respond to later in the upcoming weeks.

I humbly thank each and every one of you who have so generously given of your time and efforts. The training has been exceptional and the pressures constant. The building shall begin shortly and you will have great success. It is not the building of good business that is the problem; it is, rather, the bringing forth to public view of these atrocious lies which have been perpetrated and perpetuated through the last decades. As we tell you of the truth and then give you PROOF of same, it will be hard indeed to comprehend—and yet you will all find it logical, reasonable and totally valid.

We of the higher Command ask your patience and indulgence and an open mind that you might receive in clarity and purity of integrity. The very hope and subsistence of your placement depends upon your changing of attitudes and ability to rethink circumstances. So be it—and I plead for the granting of your attention and kindness.

Dharma, ye shall not be yet given to remember these things, for it is unsafe, chela. Allow the “fog” to bring you comfort and security instead of confusion, for it is your safety net—believe me, chela, “they” know you know nothing of these things any more than any reader of the material.

The information is coming forth from several locations of which you must remain basically unaware, for that, too, is your security shield. All “they” can do is discount—and discounting can no longer be successful as the logic of truth comes into the attention of mass consciousness. Hold tightly to my hand, little one, and fear not, for the Hosts of the heavens walk with you and the valley of the shadows is just that—shadows. The physical is ultimately of no importance what-so-ever and the time is at hand to bring these things into public awareness. So be it in the Light of God Source. There is no darkness in this place, in this receiver nor in the entities from which she receives. We come as the Hosts with the Master Teacher in the service of the Universal Source.

Allow the above message to remain within the writings of the Journal. We shall now move on to continuation of the Journal material.

We were speaking of the Antarctic, counterfeit money and conspiracy.

A LOOK AT THE ANTARCTIC

It is important that you ones have input of general geographical and physical nature regarding the area of your arctic regions, both South and North. We shall deal herein with the Southern location, for most of the incredible activities are being exploited there.

Your Admiral Byrd wrote great dissertations regarding his experiences in that location beneath the arctic area and he was discredited and finally, murdered. He was declared insane and promptly taken out of public circulation—he was murdered as a broken man as was Forrestal, Priore, Rife, Tesla and hundreds of other great men.

Byrd met with the beings of alien locales and his documents can be obtained—through your rather underground resources; therefore, I shall not dwell at great length in this chapter regarding that matter. I wish to give you purely physical data for confirmation at this writing. Further, for you ones who have access to your National Geographic journals—please refer to April 1990 which will be released shortly. Ah yes, Dharma, you need to know that more than do others. In fact, we shall utilize a map or two from their presentation that you might have confirmation. There are no coincidences, chela, and ye shall be given all the credentials and confirmation that ye need.

If you will look at a globe of your planet, you will find that there are two land masses close to the Antarctic regions—South America (namely, Argentina and Falkland Islands) and Australia. This is most important indeed in deciphering logically that which we give unto you.

Let me note right here that you of the U.S. have great bases in Australia with space flight, data collection, exchange shuttle facilities, nuclear testing and great underground facilities for security and survival.

Now Australia (remember that Australia is a branch of Great Britain) has endorsed plans for a commercial space launch station using Soviet rockets, to be built on the Cape York peninsula in the continent’s remote northeast. The plan is for a $450 million installation to be functional not later than in the mid-90s. This, too, can be confirmed from reliable sources on your placement. Further, what of the USSR offering to make available to Japan over 59 technologies in the military and space fields as part of an effort to establish joint ventures with Japanese industry? Soviet officials have actually proposed joint ventures that would give the Japanese access to the Soviet Buran space shuttle.

Still sleepy??? Do you still wonder about the importance of the Falkland Islands off Argentina?

WHY DO YOU THINK THERE IS ALL THIS MASSING OF WEAPONRY AND WAR MATERIALS DOWN BY THE OLD ISOLATED ANTARCTIC? COULD IT BE THAT HATONN IS GIVING YOU SOME FACTUAL AND TRUTHFUL INFORMATION? LET US REFER TO IT ALL AS THE “TACKY TACTICS” OF THE CENTURIES. THEY OF THE CONSPIRACY KNOW FROM WHENCE THEIR BIG BAD ENEMY SHALL ARISE! THEY ALSO KNOW WHERE THE MOST SECURE LIFE-SUSTAINING LANDMASSES SHALL EMERGE FOLLOWING AN EARTH POLE SHIFT—YOU WILL FIND THAT THE ARCTIC REGIONS WERE ONCE BLOOMING TROPICAL LANDS. TIME TO WAKE UP YOU SLEEPYHEADS, THE ALARM CLOCK IS RINGING OFF THE TABLE. SO BE IT—WHILE ONES PICK AT WHETHER “DHARMA’S JESUS SANANDA” IS “ANOTHER’S” THE TIME CLOCK IS TICKING WILDLY. SHE WILL NOT BE GIVEN TO FURTHER DEBATE OVER THE MATTER—YE ONES SHALL GO WITHIN THINE OWN SELVES AND FIND YOUR TRUTH, FOR YOUR BROTHER HAS NO MORE TIME FOR THE FOOLISH DISTRACTIONS. YOU ARE GOING TO HAVE A WAR AND YOU HAVE NO SHELTERS—GET ON WITH IT, CHELAS, FOR YOUR EXISTENCE IS AT STAKE.

I give Bryan Hodgson of National Geographic great honor and appreciation, for I shall utilize his updated information to great extent in these current chapters, for you need the confirmation of Earth scientific published material. Perhaps as you move along in truth you will subscribe to the Geographic to support the works of these outstanding researchers.

The Antarctica is larger than Europe or Australia, but it has no “native” human population. It contains more than two-thirds of the world’s fresh water in the form of ice, yet some areas receive less than two inches of precipitation a year. Antarctica is the highest, coldest, most desolate place on the globe (on the surface of it). But it irresistibly draws visitors. The fifth largest continent is a giant outdoor laboratory where scientists strive to decipher clues to our planet’s history and detect early warning signs of global pollution. That which is called “Earth’s last terrestrial frontier” is drawing increasing international attention—and only a minute fraction of a percent of humans have the slightest idea as to “why”.

In 1959 thirteen nations joined the twelve original signatories as voting members of the Antarctic Treaty. Research stations were constructed and a voting coalition was formed to be eligible for voting on control of resources on the continent. There are some 40 year-round bases on Antarctica at present (known publicly). Fourteen additional nations have gained observer status, introducing a strain of international politics to a gentleman’s agreement that guaranteed only that Antarctica would be used for peaceful purposes—without specifying clearly what those purposes might be. And there you have it. NO PLACE IN YOUR ABILITY TO ATTEND IS ALLOWED PEACEFUL EXISTENCE—NO PLACE! THIS IS NO DIFFERENT AND ALL REALLY IMPORTANT AND “SECRET” BASES AND INSTALLATIONS ARE ALLOWED NO VISITORS OR RESEARCHERS, AS YOUR MAJOR POWERS HAVE THEM SEALED OFF BY TERRITORIAL CLAIMS.

In October 1989 in Paris, the 15th biennial treaty meeting was thrown into turmoil by an unscheduled debate sparked by the announcement of France and Australia that they had revoked their approval of a 1988 agreement prohibiting minerals exploration without the unanimous consent of all members. Instead, they joined environmental groups demanding an outright ban on minerals activities and establishment of Antarctica as a world park. Some nations, such as Chile and Argentina, saw this as the first direct threat both to the treaty and to territorial claims they had agreed to hold in abeyance. (AND YOU THOUGHT THE RIFT WITH ARGENTINA AND CHILE WAS OVER DRUG DEALINGS!)

Antarctica has never been truly isolated but I doubt any of your little school children realize this—were you taught this? Although it is surrounded by a barrier of swirling ocean currents and ferocious winds and crowned by a gigantic ice sheet averaging nearly two miles in thickness, this coldest region of the planet is a powerful weather maker for the Southern Hemisphere. Its frigid waters surge along the deep seabeds into the Northern Hemisphere, modifying ocean temperatures and carrying nutrients to nurture marine life.

More recently, scientists have discovered that Antarctica is a sensitive barometer of mankind’s use and abuse of the planet.

Comparing today’s atmospheric gases with those trapped in core samples of ancient Antarctic ice, they have found that the burning of fossil fuels has helped raise carbon dioxide to the highest level in history. Some have warned that this might cause a melting of the ice sheet by trapping heat from the Sun. Other scientists have learned that man-made gases called chlorofluorocarbons, trapped over Antarctica by a stratospheric vortex of winter winds, react with spring sunlight to release chlorine atoms that destroy much of the ozone, which helps protect living organisms from harmful ultraviolet radiation. This is accurate enough to allow it to go undebated by me, at this point. Man always precipitates his own environment and therefore a debate at this point would be futile and useless. Further, this segment of writing is from the scientific viewpoint of very human observers and is not for my input. Let us just tell this segment as human sees it.

EARLY WARNINGS

As early as 1975 scientists had warned that Antarctic waters were being overfished. In 1980 an agreement was reached on a Convention for the Conservation of Antarctic Marine Living Resources. By 1983 Soviet fishing fleets had seriously depleted the population of Antarctic cod around the French islands of Ferguelen. Other fisheries appeared on the verge of destruction.

There is a fish at South Georgia called Champscephalus gunnari, which was most popular and is now most endangered. A fishing limit of 10,000 tons of gunnari was recommended by a group of involved nations in 1986. However the Russians immediately reported catching over 69,000 tons—seven times the proposed limit. They claim the numbers estimates were wrong and that the protein would go to waste unless fishing is done at the optimum level.

At this point the good old U.S. Congress got into the act and requested a major study of Antarctica’s marine ecosystems. This put up all sorts of wondrous distractors and gave excellent reason for infiltrating the area and checking on the security systems already in place. Oh, of course, Congress thought it was all a study of marine life—most of your Congress is as ill-informed as the masses of the population.

WHAT IS REALLY HAPPENING

With all the military intrigue and installations, ships from many countries come into the waters of Antarctica claiming to be research vessels but are actually otherwise. For instance, in 1989 an Argentine supply ship Bahia Paraiso ran aground after hitting underwater rocks near Palmer Station, apparently because of inaccurate navigation charts. Thousands and thousands of gallons of diesel fuel fouled beaches and killed untold numbers of wildlife. Where was Exxon when you needed them?

The Soviets have intensive activity of massive amount and take marine life in uncountable amounts. Reports which could be verified were that the Soviet vessels were taking over 20 tons a day of guntheri at Shag Rocks. At the South Shetlands some 18 vessels were taking krill at 85 tons a day and at the convergence 400 miles northeast of South Georgia, one boat reported catching two tons of squid within a few hours.

Right across the Strait of Magellan and Cape Horn you find Punta Arenas, Chile's southernmost city. It is a thriving commercial center, whose harbor, shipyard, airport, and communication facilities have made it the major gateway to the Antarctic Peninsula and is only a couple of hours flight to King George Island, site of Chile's Teniente Rodolfo Marsh station and airfield.

There are eight other nations which have research stations on the island: Argentina, Uruguay, Peru, Brazil, Poland, South Korea, the Soviet Union, and the People's Republic of China. King George's popularity stems more from its location, only 600 miles from Punta Arenas, than from its scientific potential. This should also tell you readers a lot of information.

It gets easier and easier to get to Antarctica as the French and British are building new airstrips. On the continental ice plateau you can land ski-equipped aircraft almost anywhere. It is also easy to land large-wheeled transports on areas of permanently bare ice, such as those near the Vinson Massif. The U.S. plans to establish a base there to give regular airway from Punta Arenas to the South Pole. Further down the coast from Punta Arenas is a place called Ushuaia—which means “Jesus” or in Hebrew—Jesuhia or Yeshua (spelled for pronunciation). How do you suppose that could have happened? Surely the Pale Prophet couldn't have gotten into that region also! So be the mysteries of “time”.

Chile's base on King George Island is actually a colony, with quarters for some 240 airmen and scientists. Many sign on for two-year tours and live with their families in a suburban-style apartment complex called Villa Las Estrellas, which has its own bank (of course), post office, commissary, hospital, and a school-house which serves around 11 students.

This complex, together with the tourist facilities, reflects Chile's long-standing policy of “proving up” its territorial claim to a large sector of Antarctica, even though such claims are held in abeyance under the treaty.

Argentina has a similar policy. There is an Argentine Army base on the tip of the Antarctic Peninsula a hundred miles south of King George Island called Esperanza.

Why am I giving all these nitty details which hold no interest for you? Because they had better start holding interest for you—for you will be hearing a lot about them very shortly in what you perceive as your future.

Argentina and Chile have been frequent adversaries to the U.S., but their huge and overlapping territorial claims have made them allies within the Antarctic Treaty organization. Issues such as mineral exploitation will loom very large in 1991, when under terms of the treaty any voting member may propose a reexamination of its provisions.

STRANGE CROSSROADS

The Antarctic Peninsula and its island chains have been an international crossroads since 1820 when Russian explorer Bellingshausen arrived to claim first sighting of the continent after braving the savage weather of Drake Passage in wooden ships.

Today's mariners are better equipped, but some things have not changed. Storms are quick to form and deadly.

The U.S.A. has ongoing “studies” under the guise of NSF's Division of Polar Programs and travels the region's rich bird and marine life habitats regularly (too regularly), since 1965 when the jaunts could no longer be kept secret due to the traffic in the area. Note that Byrd's expedition was in the '40s and continuous monitoring was begun at that time.

One of the major stops on the “scientific” journey is Deception Island, where a placid lagoon fills the ten-square-mile caldera left by an ancient volcanic catastrophe. Don't count on it remaining simply “ancient”. Today one can find a smattering of abandoned buildings and wooden boats that line the haunted shore which still steams with volcanic heat.

Records show that in 1924 the entire bay literally boiled, blistering the paint on a fleet of factory ships used to process some of the thousands of whales killed in these waters. There have been major eruptions in 1967, 1969, and 1970 which destroyed Chilean and British bases.

This is in the area of the Bransfield Rift and is a very active volcanic zone. It has widened considerably over the past several years and recent seismic activity can tell you the magma is welling up again.

The type of magma found in that area creates a fairly quiet eruption above ground, since it is highly fluid and has time to cool to crystals when it contacts air. But on the seafloor it reacts instantly with water to produce a tremendous explosion. There will be ongoing and more frequent eruptions in the current “time” segment.

The food chain of the Antarctic is under heavy study. Microscopic plants called phytoplankton bloom in the ocean each spring, nourishing vast swarms of the shrimplike crustaceans called “krill” (interesting label) that form the main food for many of the continent's creatures. Commercial krill catches now approach 500,000 tons a year, and scientists are concerned about the effects of heightened levels of ultraviolet radiation on phytoplankton.

So far you have no way to measure the volume of krill swarms accurately but one must look at the population of penguin colonies which numbers in the hundreds of millions and they feed only on krill.

Now, how do you suppose the Cooper group came up with a name like O.H. Krill in relationship to visiting “aliens”? Little grey men from outer space? Oh, I think not! Are these plots set up by your “free-people” government? Oh, I think most definitely, yes!

Krill have some interesting points about them, not the least of which is that they present an almost unlimited food supply for the human inhabitants of Earth.

KRILL

The life span of krill is around seven or so years. They reproduce beginning in the third summer. The eggs are laid between mid-December and early March with the eggs sinking to between 600 and 1,200 meters before hatching while moving into the warm incubating waters. The larvae hatch and ascend through the water “column” to begin maturing. Ocean currents can move krill swarms far out of reach of bird colonies and protect the growing babies. An adult krill can go without food for as long as a year and survive nicely, larvae as long as two months without nourishment—a necessary defense against seasons in which phytoplankton are scarce or hard to find.

But now you have an interesting happening. The krill feed on phytoplankton which use sunlight to produce food by photosynthesis, utilizing carbon dioxide and such primary nutrients from the sea as nitrogen and phosphorus, plus trace elements. The threat of increased ultraviolet radiation pouring through the ozone “hole” over Antarctica has made the question of the effect on phytoplankton a most appropriate and urgent one.

Isn't this just getting more and more interesting? What about those Rainbow Lakes—and more important, what about that ostensible Rainbow City(s) of mythology—past and current? Ah so! The little phytoplankton glitter like jade, others are brown, etc., the microscopic seawater is a wondrous garden of the sea with a brilliant three-dimensional universe crowded with exquisite translucent organisms. There are tintinnids which are cone-shaped and which feed on bacteria, and squarish-looking organisms which are diatoms. Their outer shells are made of silica, so they are really like plants in glass houses. A tiny sample will contain over 10 species of these minute single-celled organisms which link up to form colonies that look like a string of beads. The species and numbers change continually, decreasing as winter darkness approaches.

The lovely part of the lifestream of these little wonders is that they can adapt to increased amounts of ultraviolet radiation by producing their own Sun-block pigments or by using a mechanism that, through exposure to daylight, enable them to repair UV damage. Would this not indicate that selective evolution indicates that these little fellows have experienced this same type of cycle prior to now?

The Australians are developing a sunscreen preparation for use by humans based on UV-absorbing compounds found in coral. Similar compounds have been found in fungi. Eighty-five percent of lichens in Antarctica have compounds that absorb radiation in the ultraviolet ranges.

Before we discuss the ozone and ultraviolet radiation, let us take a rest-break, please. I shall move to stand-by. Thank you for your attention and you, Dharma, for your service. Salu, Hatonn to stand-by.

BUSH: SEC WILL ABSOLVE CHENEY

By Bob Kemper, Washington Bureau, 07/18/02

WASHINGTON—President Bush declared Wednesday that he is confident Vice President Dick Cheney will be cleared of any wrongdoing in the Securities and Exchange Commission investigation of Halliburton Co., the Texas energy services company Cheney once ran.

“I’ve got great confidence in the vice president,” Bush said, breaking with White House policy to not comment on the investigation. “When I picked him, I knew he was a fine business leader and a fine, experienced man, and he’s doing a great job.”...

The SEC is investigating the accounting practices of Halliburton, where Cheney served as chief executive between 1995 and 2000. Congressional Democrats charge that Cheney was CEO when Halliburton allegedly used the same kind of misleading, profit-inflating accounting practices that the White House is trying to curb in corporate America.

Bush, the nation’s first MBA president, and Cheney have come under intense partisan fire for their earlier business dealings as accounting and financial scandals rock public confidence in American business and in the stock market.

Judicial Watch, a Washington-based public interest group that often sues the government, estimated in a stockholder fraud lawsuit that Halliburton overstated its earnings by $445 million between 1999 and 2001.

Embattled SEC Chairman Harvey Pitt pledged this week to “take whatever action is appropriate” should his agency find evidence of wrongdoing at Halliburton.

Cheney has remained silent on the SEC investigation. ...

Even as he defended Cheney, Bush again deflected questions about his own business dealings more than a decade ago at Harken Energy Corp. in Texas, where he served as a director. The president said he sees no need to ask the SEC to release all of the documents from the agency’s investigation of him for suspected insider trading in 1991, when his father was president.

Responding to Freedom of Information Act requests, the SEC has released some documents that suggest it did not have reason to press charges against Bush for selling $848,000 in Harken stock prior to the company’s announcement that its losses would be greater than expected.

Those documents leave some questions unanswered, such as why the SEC never interviewed Bush. Still, Bush said no further releases were warranted. ...

The White House has been protective of Harken Corp. documents. Last week, Bush told reporters they would have to look at the minutes from Harken director meetings if they wanted to know how he voted on particular financial issues. But White House aides later refused to provide, or to help others obtain, such documents.

Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle (D-S.D.), who has repeatedly called on Bush to release the SEC documents, has charged that Bush and Cheney are hypocritical in demanding that corporate America change the way it does business when they personally have benefited from many of the same sort of financial maneuverings. ...

The White House is deeply concerned that the extended decline in the stock market and public anxieties over corporate misdeeds could cost GOP incumbents their jobs as stock-dependent retirement nest eggs shrink and the economy lags further.

White House aides worry that an economic decline could undermine Bush much the way it helped undercut his father in the early 1990s when voters wondered if the elder Bush understood the economic strain felt by average Americans.

The current president, who aides say, is determined not to repeat the mistakes that cost his father a second term, has spent much of his time in recent weeks trying to reassure investors that the economy is on the rebound. ...

[JR: While the sheriff is trying to get the goods on Cheney, Bush is singing Stand by Your Man. Pres. Bush is also guarded and evasive about his own misdeeds while director at Harken Energy. These two desperados aren’t going to volunteer any information or admit to any wrongdoing. After all, they were only doing what everyone else did during the rip-roaring ’90s. Bush and Cheney and their bushwhackers rode hard and fast right through the middle of the stampede of greed, while Clinton and the Democrats taunted us all with the war cry... “It’s the economy stupid!” Bush and the Republicans are now in the headlines because the market and economy was cut off on their watch in an ambush followed by a wild shootout at the Wall Street corral. Don’t expect any big changes or reforms from these two dudes from the Lone Star State. It will soon be the Democrats’ turn to play the good guys in the white hats riding in on the winds of reform to rustle up what is left. We’re in for some real hard times, little dogies.]

GADHAFI OPENS WALLET TO SELL VISION OF AFRICA

By Laurie Goering, Tribune, 07/18/02

JOHANNESBURG—Moammar Gadhafi is hardly accustomed to running for office, but there is no question he is on the campaign trail in southern Africa.

After grabbing the limelight and the microphone at the recent launch of the African Union in Durban, South Africa, Libya’s dictator has swept up the continent in an armored 70-car motorcade, his open checkbook in hand. ...

Considered a flaky renegade in the Arab world, Gadhafi now wants to lead Africa, and with a potent combination of populist rhetoric and checkbook diplomacy he is working his way into the hearts and minds of the continent’s poorest nations.

But his vision for Africa—one of fierce independence and slashed ties to the West—stands at odds with that of a new generation of sub-Saharan African leaders, who are trying to bootstrap the failing continent into a new era of respect and progress by promising democracy, good governance and respect for human rights in exchange for new investment by developed nations.

“Through our actions, let us proclaim to the world that this is a continent of democracy,” said South African President Thabo Mbeki, the leader of the new progressive movement, at last week’s launch of the African Union, which replaced the Organization of African Unity. ...

No one doubts that Mbeki and his allies hold the upper hand in Africa at the moment. But there also is little doubt that Gadhafi—and other old-style authoritarian leaders—are complicating efforts to rally Africans to the new campaign and to build a new reputation for the troubled continent.

“That Gadhafi is so well received and feted by leaders and people alike shows the difficulty South Africa has in propagating this new message,” said Greg Mills, national director of the South African Institute of International Affairs. ...

Gadhafi has made no secret of his long-held desire to unify the continent into a United States of Africa, with a single government conveniently based in Tripoli. Africa, he insists, needs a new style of leadership but not the democratic formula dictated by the West.

At last week’s African Union meeting he campaigned hard to have a new Africa-wide parliament based in Libya, which has no parliament of its own, and pushed to hold another African Union meeting in Libya later this year. He also proposed barring African nations from signing international treaties with countries outside Africa, apparently to position himself as the continent’s only donor and sponsor. The organization is still considering the proposals.

Gadhafi also has been a stern critic of NEPAD, the effort by Mbeki and other African leaders to win new Western investment by promising democratic rule, good governance and protection for human rights in return. Africa should accept the West’s help, Gadhafi argues, but only as long as it does not “impinge on countries’ internal affairs”. ...

“Gadhafi is seen in Pretoria as a real loose cannon,” said John Stremlau, the head of international relations at Witwatersrand University in Johannesburg. But many African leaders—including Mbeki—prefer to have him participate in the process rather than sabotaging it. They want him “in the train but not near the engine,” Stremlau said.

The Libyan leader has built a sizable political coalition for himself, in part by paying the back OAU dues of 11 poor African nations, but observers believe he does not yet have the political clout to push through at least most of his proposals to concentrate African power in Libya.

“He wants an army for Africa in Tripoli, a parliament in Tripoli, a president in Tripoli. That sounds like an empire to me rather than a union,” said Dumisani Hlope, researcher at the Center for Policy Studies in Johannesburg. “We’d be substituting European dependency for Libyan dependency.”

But Gadhafi’s fiery persona and his hefty bank account clearly have won him friends. Amara Essy, an Ethiopian and the outgoing secretary general of the now-defunct Organization for African Unity, praised the Libyan leader last week as “completely imbued with the vision of a strong, independent and dignified Africa.”

[JR: Well if Gadhafi is making a tour through Africa with a big checkbook to win friends and influence people he is just taking a page from our own book on U.S. foreign diplomacy. This is not a spur-of-the-moment enterprise. Left out of this article is the fact that Gadhafi has been working for 20 years to help create and build a united Africa and needs only one more state to complete his United Africa States. Africa and its people have been exploited and under the control of the West more than any other country because of its vast resources. Reform is much needed in Africa to give Africans a chance to be self-governing and have a role in world affairs and not the world running its affairs. Africa is no longer the Dark Continent it was a century ago. Gadhafi could be the light that can lead Africa if his vision for Africa’s future is the one all can see.]

NIGERIA SET TO LEAVE OPEC

By Leo Lewis, The Independent—UK, 07/21/02

In a move that would trigger a crisis in global oil markets, Nigeria could be on the brink of walking out of OPEC.

Sources close to the 11-member oil cartel say Nigeria, its fifth-biggest producer, could threaten to resign as soon as OPEC's next scheduled meeting in September. That would in turn produce a level of internal discord not experienced for decades and could, says one analyst, "threaten the organisation's very existence".

The issue has arisen from Nigeria's growing barrel production ambitions. Each member is supposedly bound by a quota set when the cartel meets and calculated to keep oil markets stable.

Not only does Nigeria—along with some other members—have an undisciplined history of over-production against those quotas, it is now pursuing opportunities that will raise national output still further. Observers have commented that Nigeria's possible use of spare capacity "would appear to represent flagrant disregard for the current structure of quotas".

As Bank of America oils analyst Richard Savage explained, Nigerian capacity expansion plans have set it on a collision course with OPEC, and leaving the cartel is emerging as a likely option.

"Nigeria's opportunities for the rapid expansion of its oil industry represent the most significant threat to OPEC unity for at least five years and potentially since the oil price crisis of 1986," he said.

"To think that OPEC's second tier would be thrown into battle for market share ... conjures up a nightmarish picture of fractious debate and oil market destabilisation." [JR: Is Nigeria moving away from OPEC so that they can gain independence from the control of the Western oil cartels and form their own partnerships? Could this also be a bridge to connect and move forward Gadhafi's plans for a United States of North Africa? It is just speculations as to possibilities, as answers will come in time. We can only hope it presents a positive beginning for Nigeria.]

DISCONTENT FESTERS IN AFGHANISTAN

By Liz Sly, Tribune, 07/19/02

KABUL, Afghanistan—A groundswell of discontent in the Pashtun community is calling into question the ability of President Hamid Karzai's month-old administration to sustain the loyalties of Afghanistan's largest ethnic group.

The assassination of a top government official and powerful Pashtun warlord, Vice President Abdul Qadir, and the mistaken bombing by U.S. forces of Pashtun villagers in southern Afghanistan only reinforced the alienation from the central government for many Pashtuns.

"Pashtuns are very dissatisfied with Karzai. They wanted a big change during this loya jirga, and Karzai couldn't bring any change," former Education Minister Rasul Amin said, referring to last month's national assembly that saw Pashtun leaders fail to wrest key government posts away from Northern Alliance officials. "I think it's too late now for him to win the support of Pashtuns."

For the time being, the grumbling is unlikely to generate any kind of organized opposition. The Pashtun tribal belt in eastern and southern Afghanistan has been in disarray since the collapse of the Taliban regime, with local tribesmen more likely to fight each other than the central government.

In addition, as long as U.S. forces are in the country and firmly backing Karzai's administration, no faction is likely to dare mount an outright challenge.

But over the longer term, it is hard to see how a government can rule effectively from Kabul without the support of Pashtuns, analysts say. ...

Officially, Pashtuns account for 40 percent of the Afghan population, with the remainder divided among a number of other ethnic groups. But years of bloody conflict have made any national census impossible, and Pashtuns believe they are now in the majority.

Although Karzai is Pashtun, the perception is that he has fallen unduly under the influence of the Northern Alliance, dominated by Tajiks, an ethnic minority that took control of the most powerful institutions of government when its fighters swept into Kabul.

"Karzai has done nothing to stand up for Pashtun interests and he's finding it difficult to check the power of the Northern Alliance," said a Western diplomat. "Pashtuns feel they've lost him, that he's not anymore one of ours, that he's gone over to the opposite camp. ..."

At public appearances since his inauguration, Karzai has been flanked by powerful Northern Alliance warlords, even though they hold no post in his government.

The problem is not just one of ethnicity. There are Pashtuns in the Northern Alliance, and there are Tajiks and other groups that share Pashtun misgivings about the return to power of the same warlords who failed to bring about peace after the collapse of the communist regime in the early 1990s.

With the Northern Alliance dominating the army, the police and the intelligence forces, many Afghans no longer see the central government as neutral.

"The main power in government is still in the hands of those same warlords," said Jawid Kohistani, a Tajik and former mujahedeen commander attempting to form a democratic political party. "I don't see Afghanistan moving toward political pluralism or true democracy."

Most members of the Taliban were Pashtuns, and Pashtuns also feel they are being unfairly made to pay for their ethnic affiliation to the ousted regime. The U.S. operation to hunt for al-Qaida is focused on the Pashtun-dominated south and east, where Taliban remnants are most likely to hide. ...

If Pashtuns challenge official policy, they run risks, including possible attacks by U.S. warplanes, said Pir Gilani, a Pashtun leader and former mujahedeen leader.

"The Pashtuns are facing a big problem today. As soon as they open their mouths to express their dissatisfaction with the government, they are labeled al-Qaida or Taliban," he said. "This is very dangerous because it makes all Pashtuns feel angry."

[JR: The government in Kabul is the Northern Alliance set up by the U.S. and the Western oil barons. Karzai is merely a figurehead because the power is in the hands of the ones who made him their man in Kabul. He and the Pashtuns tribes are beginning to see this now all too clearly. As long as the U.S. and NATO have troops in Afghanistan the Pashtuns will be prevented from gaining control and will be forced to remain fractionalized and their tribes ruled by rivalry among their leaders. This is how the British gained control after the Arab uprising led by British Col. T.E. Lawrence (Lawrence of Arabia). Once in, the British and the French carved up Arabia into what is now the Middle East and Saudi Arabia with leaders handpicked to further their interests about oil. The same game is being played out in Afghanistan today.]

THOUSANDS PROTEST U.S. OVERTURES TO NATION'S REFORMISTS

Daily News, 07/21/02

TEHRAN, IRAN—Tens of thousands of Iranians took to the streets of the capital Friday, chanting "Death to America" in a furious backlash against President Bush's overtures to Iranian reformists.

While the turnout was not unusual for an anti-U.S. rally, the protest was significant in that the participants included those who are seeking to change the Islamic regime, notably Foreign Minister Kamal Kharrazi.

Last week Bush denounced Iran's government but expressed support for those Iranians who spoke out on behalf of a reformist cleric who resigned as a mosque preacher early this month to protest the influence of hard-liners in government.

Many reformers fear that statements of support from the U.S. could hurt their cause. There is such hostility toward America that reformists who promote closer ties with Washington risk being branded as stooges of the great Satan, as the United States is known.

The demonstrators, many of them families, marched under a scorching Sun in front of Tehran University. They chanted anti-American slogans and burned effigies of Uncle Sam and Bush.

[JR: You can bet that the unnamed "reformist cleric" has been in touch with our man at the CIA. The U.S. is involving itself into Iranian affairs to tip the balance of power in the Middle East. Iraq won't be the beneficiary of our political activism but will deal with an armed invasion. The Iranians got it right...we are the Great Satan promoting the evil ones' One World Government.]

U.S. TRIES TO EASE TURKEY'S CONCERNS

By Catherine Collins, Tribune, 07/18/02

ISTANBUL—Deputy Defense Secretary Paul Wolfowitz said Wednesday that getting rid of Iraqi President Saddam Hussein is not a question of if but when, as he concluded several days of talks with Turkish officials.

Wolfowitz said he had useful meetings with political, business and military leaders in Turkey this week in a mission that was as much political as military.

"We came to listen, not to push for decisions on anything," he said in preparing to leave Turkey for the United States. "We are interested in the Turkish perspective on a whole range of issues."

Although no date has been set or specific strategy decided, Wolfowitz made it clear that President Bush is determined to see a change of leadership in Turkey's neighbor to the south.

"The president has said that there is a problem [Iraq] and it is not a problem that we can live with indefinitely," Wolfowitz said. "But he has not yet made a decision about what to do about this problem. But before a decision is made, we need as good an understanding as possible about the impact on Turkey, as Turkey will be the country most affected."

Turkey would play a major role as a staging area for any U.S. military assault on Iraq, particularly in light of the reluctance of Arab nations to participate.

U.S. and British warplanes already patrol the "no-fly" zones over Iraq from the Incirlik air base in southern Turkey. But if a large-scale attack on Iraq is launched, Turkey would probably play host to a far greater arsenal of U.S. planes and troops, according to military planners in Turkey.

Wolfowitz's visit was intended to consult with Turkish officials and to win assurances from generals and key government officials.

The problem is that no one can be certain who will be in control in Ankara in the coming months. The visit coincided with a political crisis that led Turkey's three-party coalition government to agree to hold early elections in November, a move that could complicate any military operation against Iraq.

While Turkey has remained a staunch American ally, its military and civilian leaders have consistently opposed taking military action against Iraq as part of Bush's war on terrorism.

Defense Minister Sabahattin Cakmakoglu said on state-run television this week that Turkey did not "at this moment" approve of any U.S. attack on Iraq. "We respect Iraq's territorial integrity, political unity and sovereignty," he said.

Chief among the Turkish concerns is that a sudden change in the Iraqi regime could cause a power vacuum that could lead to the creation of an independent Kurdish state in northern Iraq. Turks fear that would spark a return of its Kurdish insurgency, a 15-year conflict in which 30,000 people have died.

Wolfowitz repeatedly sought to reassure the Turks on that issue during his trip. "We have been very clear in expressing our firm opposition to a Kurdish state in northern Iraq," he said.

Economic fallout from a military attack on Iraq is also a concern, especially because the Turkish economy has begun to show signs of recovery from the worst recession in nearly six decades....

Emphasizing the ties between Turkey and the U.S., Wolfowitz said the partnership between the two countries is economic as well as military.

"We want to help Turkey's [economic] recovery," he told the Turkish Economic and Social Studies Foundation in a speech this week. "We want to help promote Turkey's economic growth and we want to help Turkey become competitive in the global economy."

The United States has helped to engineer loans from the International Monetary Fund to stabilize the country's economy and aided it in covering the cost of leading the international peacekeeping force in Afghanistan.

The Bush administration has prodded its European allies to look favorably upon Turkey's...[sic]

Against the backdrop of their country's political uncertainty, Turks have watched Wolfowitz's visit carefully this week, assessing the potential political and economic impact.

"The immediate impact would be negative, of course. But the mid- and long-term impact could be beneficial," said Cem Duna, a retired Turkish diplomat and a director of the leading business organization. "It would be good for Turkey if such an operation were to bring about a workable stability in Iraq."

[JR: Wolfowitz is back on the prowl again setting up the traps with the government and businessmen in Turkey for a U.S. attack on Iraq. Notice the link between government and business when it comes time to hatch or plan for a war? Wolfowitz said he came to listen and not to push Turkey on any decision. He must be walking on a tightrope to be so understanding or else he is desperate to get Turkey's cooperation. You can be sure he will use whatever input he gleans from these meetings to refine the sharp edges on our policies against Iraq. Sure the Turkish economy is improving thanks to the infusion of funds from the U.S./IMF coffers. Neither businesses nor governments care about the individuals who are on the other end of the guns or bombs. Turkey might consider deferring making any solid commitments to Wolfowitz's proposals until a new government is in place. Our unstable U.S. stock market and vague economy should weigh heavily in their deliberations. How can we really help Turkey and go ahead with plans to fund a major war against Iraq with our own serious economic problems? This is the really big question Wolfie can't answer yet, let alone guarantee. The U.S. has no other manufacturing industries other than the war industry. A war won't improve our economy or create more jobs. The only ones who will profit are the banksters, arms and weapons manufacturers and dealers.]

IRAQ EQUATION HAS MINUSES FOR BUSH

By Howard Witt, Tribune, 07/21/02

WASHINGTON—A few months ago, back when the Iraqi National Congress was still beaming satellite television signals into Iraq, the dissident group used to boast of the value of propaganda broadcasts in its campaign to oust Iraqi dictator Saddam Hussein. ...

The Iraqi National Congress recently shut down the satellite broadcasts for lack of funds. But the gap between claim and reality that the broadcasts laid bare is illustrative, and it afflicts virtually every aspect of the debate over the Bush administration's declared policy of removing Hussein from power.

An array of plans for a possible U.S. invasion of Iraq, ranging in size from a few thousand special operations soldiers to up to 250,000 troops, are circulating through the Pentagon. Some administration advisers favor an Afghanistan-style attack that utilizes local opposition forces on the ground. The CIA is reportedly working on covert efforts to promote a coup. ...

What concerns critics in Congress, the military and the worlds of diplomacy and academia is that so little public scrutiny has been applied to any of the alternatives the Bush administration is considering, or to the implications of a unilateral U.S. move to oust the Iraqi regime. ...

...The administration has offered no proof that Iraq was involved in the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks or that it has provided weapons of mass destruction to terrorist groups. European, Russian and moderate Arab leaders do not share Bush's sense of urgency and regard Hussein as well-contained within his borders; they oppose the notion of a U.S. invasion of Iraq.

"The consequences [of an American attack] will not be confined to Iraq," said Egyptian Foreign Minister Ahmed Maher.

He warned that U.S. action against Iraq could ignite hostility across a Muslim world already incensed over Israel's treatment of Palestinians and consequently threaten the stability of Egypt, Jordan, Saudi Arabia and other U.S. allies in the Arab world.

Each of the approaches the White House is said to be considering rests upon assumptions for which the evidence is often uncertain.

Earlier this year, Bush was reported to have authorized the CIA to accelerate efforts to promote a popular uprising or military coup against Hussein.

Such a result would spare the United States from direct military involvement in Iraq but would also likely result in the exchange of one military dictator for another. Moreover, it assumes facts that are nowhere in evidence inside Iraq: the presence of a political opposition capable of organizing an uprising or a military echelon strong enough or brave enough to attempt a coup. ...

"The coup model," said one congressional foreign affairs expert, "has very little chance of success."

This option, promoted by Iraqi exiles and some hawkish civilians in the Pentagon, anticipates a limited corps of perhaps 20,000 U.S. Special Forces soldiers assisting a vanguard Iraqi force led by Kurdish fighters from northern Iraq and American-trained dissidents. It would resemble the U.S.-led campaign in Afghanistan, which used Northern Alliance fighters to oust Taliban and al-Qaida extremists. ...

Yet Kurdish participation in such an attack is far from certain. The Kurds, with 40,000 men under arms, are reluctant to risk the relatively stable region in northern Iraq that they have carved out under the protection of U.S. and British warplanes patrolling no-fly zones.

The Kurds are still bitter over their abandonment by the first Bush administration after the 1991 Persian Gulf war, when Washington urged an uprising but then did nothing to help when Hussein sent in his army to crush them. ...

The Afghan model also assumes that Iraq's many opposition forces—fractured among Kurds, royalists as well as Shiite and Sunni Muslims—can unite and cooperate in a military campaign. ...

A full-scale U.S. invasion of some 250,000 soldiers—half the size of the Gulf War force—backed by overwhelming air power is the option proffered by the Joint Chiefs of Staff to take on the weaker Iraqi army.

But the political and diplomatic costs of deploying such a force would be substantial. It would require months of preparation and buildup, during which time Hussein could be tempted to launch a pre-emptive strike. It would mean defying world public opinion and crossing allies.

Some military experts are now proposing an alternative, middle-size force of 50,000 to 75,000 troops who could be deployed more quickly and would not leave as big a footprint in the region. But such a force would have to rely more heavily on Iraqi dissident allies for success and it would be insufficient for a long-term occupation of Iraq if the nation disintegrated with Hussein gone.

[JR: The Bush Adm. keeps hinting to us and to the world almost weekly now the various plans the U.S. has under consideration to destroy Saddam and along with him Iraq and its people. The President never mentions that grim aspect in his talks in the promotion of this war. Bush's latest lament in selling this war is that the U.S. will not much longer be able to tolerate the situation in Iraq. What phantom menace is Bush referring to here? If most of our allies are still cool to the idea of attacking Iraq you can bet your fiat dollars that the Zionists in Israel will be only too happy to join us. If caught in the spotlight of controversy Israel will defend her actions with her usual ploy that she is defending her right to exist by eliminating her enemies. Israel has Iraq at the top of her hit-list because she is aware that the Iraqi army is known to be fierce and formidable fighters who will fight to the end no matter what the odds. Iraq has much incentive to be a worthy match for her enemies. The U.S. should not underestimate the Iraqis' resolve for the war that we intend to give them.]

IMMIGRANT BIAS IS NO LONGER FOREIGN TO THE DUTCH

By Frida Ghitis, Perspective, 07/21/02

Over the years the Netherlands has become the embodiment of Nirvana for liberal politicians and advocates of progressive social ideas. But a recent political earthquake here points to a shift that had been in the works for some time, a political transformation that is not only reshaping the Low Countries, but reaches much of the continent, and has the European left-wing scrambling to regain its footing.

The Dutch still ride to work on their bicycles. Gay marriage is still legal and uncontroversial here, as are coffee shops offering varieties of marijuana on their menus. But multiculturalism and immigration are now becoming dirty words. The country has taken a sharp turn against waves of immigration that make the sound of Arabic speech as common on the streets that line Amsterdam's canals as the ringing of bicycle bells.

The day the Earth shook in Holland came in early May, when maverick politician Pim Fortuyn was killed just two weeks before national elections. The assassination drew the spotlight to Fortuyn's ideas, which were already making many in the country nod quietly in agreement and murmur, "Something's got to change."

Fortuyn's message, like that of just about any populist politician, appealed to emotions simmering in the nation's psyche. In neat, easy-to-remember phrases, Fortuyn argued that immigration was hurting the densely populated Netherlands.

The country, he said, "is full..."

On election day, the voters gave the cold shoulder to the ruling Social Democrats, setting the stage for a right-wing coalition in which Fortuyn's party will wield enormous clout.

Only Holland could have given the world an openly gay right-wing politician, but the experience of the Netherlands reflects a trend found in much of today's Europe. The backlash against immigration is such that in the latest summit of European leaders in Spain, curbing immigration topped the agenda.

Right-wing parties have made enormous strides in country after country in Europe, and anti-immigrant politics has been their not-so-secret weapon.

The truth about immigration in Europe is hard to come by. Statistics are contradictory, some showing a sharp rise, others showing a decline in the last decade. Illegal immigrants, almost by definition, are virtually impossible to count. The reality, nonetheless, is that Europe, with an aging population, needs immigrants to sustain its economy. But at this moment economic growth is slowing, and immigrants are convenient scapegoats. Immigrants are seen as stealing jobs, increasing crime and exploiting the largesse of Europe's generous welfare system.

For liberal politicians it has been difficult to make their case that the newcomers are needed. Until now, every effort they've made to shield themselves from the issue has proven fruitless.

As Fortuyn pointed out, much of the problem stems from cultural differences between native Europeans and new arrivals. In fact, it is quite possible that the real problem is not so much with new immigrants, as with the European-born children of those who arrived in recent decades. Many of them have held fast to the culture of their parents, maintaining the gulf that separates them from the mainstream of the new land. ...

Struggling to find a successful response, politicians across Europe are looking closely at the Dutch experience, coming on the heels of right-wing advances in Denmark, France, Portugal and other European countries.

In Britain, Tony Blair has become a champion of immigration reform. When his home secretary remarked that foreigners are "swamping" British schools and then refused to apologize for the statement, Blair expressed his full support for the minister.

As politicians wrestle with the issue, life in Europe is changing for newcomers.

Multiculturalism is now very '90s. The new watchwords are integration and assimilation. Following the lead from other European countries, the Netherlands is preparing to introduce tough laws limiting welfare benefits for immigrants, making it easier to deport illegal arrivals, and compelling new residents to learn the language and the culture of the progressive country they want to call home.

[JR: The populists are the battering rams that are breaking through the barriers that separate the citizens from their governments. They are getting the attention of the One World Order clique as the populists' influence and popularity grows throughout Europe. The populists aren't just about the immigration issue but are also about sovereignty, corruption in government, lack of jobs, and about the citizens of this world having no voice in the affairs of their country. Their detractors say the populists offer simple solutions to complex problems. Well the elitists' powers have always been sustained through the lie that the privileged are the only ones you have the capability to understand the complexities of government. Their mission since the reign of kings has always been to govern through our ignorance and to keep us confused in order to discourage us from ever demanding changes from them. Our self-proclaimed betters always become alarmed and fearful when we begin to question and demand answers from them. This is what is beginning to happen today through the populist movement.]

FOREIGN WORKERS FLOOD INTO ISRAEL

By Uli Schmetzer & Mark Weiss, Tribune, 07/15/02

TEL AVIV—Michelita de los Reyes is a Catholic by faith, a maid by profession and a Filipina by citizenship. She also is part of a demographic phenomenon that could make Jews a minority in Israel by the end of the next decade.

A 37-year-old mother of three from the Philippine island of Palawan, Reyes mingles easily with the Thais, Chinese, Africans and Eastern Europeans who gather Sundays at Tel Aviv's Central Bus Terminal to exchange grievances, job-hunting tips and experiences. ...

The kibbutz and moshav farming communities of today's Israel rely almost entirely on foreign labor, a far cry from the days when working on the kibbutz was part of the Jewish pioneering spirit and kibbutzniks were considered members of the elite.

Today even middle-class Israelis can afford to hire a foreign housekeeper such as Reyes.

Ayoub Karaa, head of the Knesset Committee for Foreign Workers, estimates this foreign workforce—two-thirds of whom, Reyes included, are unregistered—may already number as many as half a million, or 9 percent of Israel's population. Others put the figure at 300,000.

"I've been warning people without success that Jews in Israel will become a minority. It could happen by the year 2020. But this is too weird a concept for Israelis to accept," said Karaa, who is not Jewish. ...

There are an estimated 1 million Israeli Arabs with full citizenship in the Jewish state, and recent research indicates that the Muslim birthrate outpaces Jewish births by 3-1 in Israel.

The influx of foreign labor is due mainly to nearly 22 months of Israeli-Palestinian conflict. The Jewish government has banned 180,000 Palestinians from crossing from the territories to their jobs in Israel. Employers needed replacements—fast.

The door was open for economic migrants. They came in droves from Eastern Europe and Asia looking for a better future. About 70 nations are now represented in Israel's foreign labor force.

Many foreign workers, like Reyes, already have helped relatives and family members to come and work in Israel, where they can earn about $1,000 a month, far more than the typical $100 a month back home.

Some observers say that if Jews become a minority in Israel, it would be a blow to the Zionist concept of building and defending a land whose main mission was to absorb Jews from the Diaspora.

In the pre-state period and the early years after independence, pioneers viewed the employment of Hebrew labor as an essential element of the Zionist mission. The farmers of the kibbutzim and the manual workers were valued as the Zionist elite, the new Jew building the land.

But after the 1967 Middle East War, Israel's standard of living began to improve rapidly. The economy expanded, partly fueled by the availability of cheap Palestinian labor from the recently occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Now, the pioneering spirit is largely dead. Most Israelis, even those out of work, refuse to take low-paid, physically demanding jobs. Employers preferred to hire Palestinians because they would work longer hours for less pay. Today, the same is true for foreign workers. ...

There are about 60,000 legal workers from the Philippines in Israel, 40,000 from Romania and 35,000 from Thailand. Others come from China, the former Soviet Union, Africa and South America. In Haifa, Turkish workers are bused every day to their jobs in the naval shipyard. A part of Haifa is known as "Little Turkey".

"We have to offer incentives to Israelis to do these jobs again—incentives like cut tax rates, free transport and good wages," said Yuri Stern, a deputy minister for labor in Prime Minister Ariel Sharon's coalition government. ...

Even if peace comes to the region, the future for Palestinian workers in Israel is not bright.

"We will never go back to the numbers and proportions of Palestinian labor as it was before the intifada," Stern said. "Employers would simply not take the risk to their own lives."

Stern has become a front-line advocate for legalizing rather than expelling foreign labor. He argues that a legal non-Jewish workforce would avoid exploitation by low wages, generate more tax revenue and prevent the kind of abuses now common. Crooked agents in the countries of origin and in Israel charge exorbitant fees to smuggle their human cargo into the country, mainly on tourist visas. Some Israeli employers confiscate the passports of their illegal foreign workers so they cannot seek other jobs. ...

Stern scoffs at the idea that non-Jews might someday outnumber Jews. "Most [foreigners] will go back home after they made some money," he said.

Many foreign workers, meanwhile, are dissatisfied.

"We are at their mercy," said Reyes, the maid. "We are too scared of being deported and we'll put up with anything. Some of us hardly go out."

She is paying $3,000 to an agent in Manila who helped her find work. Some Chinese say they had to pay unscrupulous agents $8,000 for being shipped in tourist convoys into Israel.

Hanna Zohar, director of the Workers' Hotline, said the influx of foreign workers has eroded Israeli values.

"We have become a nation of exploiters and have created a pool of second-class citizens with no rights," Zohar said. "This can't be healthy for Israel. We can no longer distinguish between right and wrong." ...

"Here, they have no rights whatsoever, including basic health care," she explained. "For the most part they are entirely at the mercy of their employers."

But still they keep coming. ...

[JR: Desperate people are being imported from Third World countries to find work in countries other than their own. Israel is no better nor worse than any other country who exploits these helpless workers for profit. The difference here is that these workers play a part in Sharon's plan to rid Israel of the Palestinians after successfully evicting them from their lands and depriving them of their jobs and their ability to survive. If the disenfranchised Palestinians are not worthy enough to live among the Jews in their Zionist Israel what makes them think that these foreign laborers will be any less tolerant of Zionist indifference than the Palestinians? The false Jews are content to allow others to have a conscience about such matters because the only thing that they care about and has value is power and money.]

UN COUNCIL APPROVES DEAL ON WAR CRIME COURT

By Evelyn Leopold, Daily News, 07/12/02

UNITED NATIONS (Reuters)—The UN Security Council voted unanimously to exempt American peacekeepers from prosecution by the new global war crimes court for a year, a deal that ends U.S. threats to UN missions around the world. ...

"It offers us a degree of protection for the coming year," U.S. Ambassador John Negroponte said after the vote. But he warned countries—in effect Washington's closest allies—they could expect "serious consequences" if any American were ever detained by the court. ...

The resolution asks the tribunal to allow a 12-month grace period before investigating or prosecuting UN peacekeepers from countries that do not support the court "if a case arises" and "unless the Security Council decides otherwise".

It expresses the council's intention to renew the resolution in a year but does not commit it to do so, as Washington had wanted in its search for cast-iron guarantees.

Following fierce objections from allies that included the 15 European Union members, Canada, Mexico and others, the United States backed away from seeking permanent immunity for its soldiers and civilians.

As soon as the resolution was adopted, the logjam was broken and the council extended the UN police training mission in Bosnia and a smaller one in the nearby Prevlaka Peninsula. Both were in danger of being terminated on Monday by a U.S. veto if the court dispute were not settled. ...

Opposed to the court as an affront to U.S. sovereignty, the United States also fears frivolous complaints against soldiers and officials.

After declaring he was pleased with the vote, Negroponte, warned there would be consequences if any American was brought before the tribunal.

"No nation should underestimate our commitment to protect our citizens," he told reporters after the vote, a reference to pending U.S. legislation to rescue any American that would come before the court in The Hague, Netherlands.

Negroponte said the United States would "never" ratify the 1998 Rome treaty establishing the tribunal and repeated his threat to put all UN peacekeeping missions at risk "throughout the globe" had the resolution not been adopted. ...

France's UN ambassador, Jean-David Levitte, who submitted many of the amendments to the original U.S. text, said he was satisfied. "For us what was paramount was the authority of the newborn International Criminal Court," he said.

"There is no blanket immunity given to peacekeepers or soldiers participating in operations authorized by the Security Council. There is no preventive, permanent and general immunity and this for us is what is most important," Levitte said.

Most council members believed the issue was ideological and that U.S. worries its soldiers or civilians could come to the court for systematic atrocities were illusory. The court, for example, only steps in when countries are unable or unwilling to prosecute mass murderers or other systematic abuses.

Some supporters of the court, however, believe the resolution amends a 1998 treaty establishing the tribunal through the back door.

"We think it is a sad day for the United Nations. We are extremely disappointed with the outcome," said Canadian Ambassador Paul Heinbecker, who organized dozens of countries to speak out publicly against the U.S. stance. ...

The deal was difficult to reach in negotiations that stretched over three weeks. Even after the United States agreed to a 12-month exemption at least seven council members, led by France, refused to vote for the resolution and obtained further last-minute changes.

Some 76 nations have ratified the 1998 Rome treaty, creating the court, and 139 have signed it.

[JR: The way I see it, the U.S. has only postponed the inevitable for a year. What is interesting though... of all the countries on this globe, only 139 have signed it and because "half" of those that signed it have ratified it, this International Criminal Court has assumed authority over "sovereign" nations that not only refused to sign the agreement but openly oppose it. I can see why giving power and authority to this ICC would make certain countries nervous and even reluctant to provide Peacekeepers. It has already shown that it is politically biased and selective in those that have been brought before this court such as Milosevic and yet claims it has no jurisdiction to bring Sharon up on charges. Who decides the merit of each case or does the court just need a consensus of world leaders? With the U.S. antagonizing so many countries by backing Israel then guess who will be targeted.]

FOREST SERVICE ORDERS REMOVAL OF POLES FLYING AMERICAN FLAG

By Audrey Hudson, Washington Times, 07/22/02

The Forest Service has told California vacationers to remove poles flying the U.S. flag from property the service has leased to them.

The order has angered one lawmaker, who has written the government, demanding that it "rescind this silly order".

David Knickerbocker, an Army veteran and retired police officer, has been ordered to remove his flagpole, which has flown the American flag for more than two decades outside his summer cabin in the Eldorado National Forest.

"I feel it is at times like these our country needs to be showing our unity and patriotism, not promoting ill-thought decisions, which prohibit flagpoles on United States soil," Mr. Knickerbocker said in a letter to Rep. Richard W. Pombo, California Republican.

The "no-flagpole order" came from Debbie Gaynor, recreation forester, who said in a letter to Mr. Knickerbocker that "flagpoles are not authorized for recreation residences and must be removed" for him to continue leasing the land.

"My flagpole has been up for more than 23 years, and like many in our cabin tract I am a patriotic American who has a flagpole," Mr. Knickerbocker said.

The Forest Service directive "outraged" Mr. Pombo, who wants Forest Service Chief Dale Bosworth to overturn the decision.

"At a time when wildfires are burning up much of the West, and Americans throughout the country face terrorist threats, it would seem to me that USDA Forest Service employees would have better things to do than to tell our citizens not to use flagpoles," Mr. Pombo said in a letter to Mr. Bosworth.

"Are flagpoles more dangerous than forest fires? I urge you to rescind this silly order to remove flagpoles that fly our American flag and urge our field offices to return to more important matters," Mr. Pombo said. ...

A Forest Service spokesman said Mr. Bosworth was out of town Friday and was unable to comment.

The National Interagency Fire Center that day reported that more than 49,000 fires have scorched 3.5 million acres of land this summer. In California, more than 4,000 fires have burned 142,000 acres.

Fire restrictions were placed on the Eldorado National Forest on July 12 through the end of the fire season, meaning that no campfires or charcoal barbecues are permitted outside designated campgrounds. ...

In addition to general cleanup and clearing fire fuels from the area, Mr. Knickerbocker was ordered to take down a clothesline tied to a tree and to paint his aluminum door a dark color to better match the cabin.

Mr. Knickerbocker also was informed that his hot tub had not been approved by the agency. "Saunas, spas and hot tubs may be approved if incorporated into the main structure or deck, are not visible by neighbors or from public vantage points, and do not cause negative environmental impacts," according to the regional directives for recreation residences that Miss Gaynor cited in her letter.

[JR: This is just another way of showing who is in control. They certainly know that this kind of foolishness will draw the ire of Americans and it is for that reason we are seeing so much nitpicking and irrational demands by these programmed bureaucrats. "If you're putting holes in the ground where Native Americans once resided, that needs an archaeological review," Forest Service spokesman Frank Mosbacher said. Now where in North America haven't the Native Americans resided? It is not the Native Americans making these rules but the BLM, BIA and the Forest Service carrying this digging or drilling of holes to the extreme... only to incite and cause ill feeling towards Native Americans.]

CONGRESSMAN CALLS FOR CRIMINAL PENALTIES AT VACCINE MERCURY HEARINGS

By Valeria Williams,
WFAA-TV, mercola.com, 07/03/02

A United States congressman is calling for criminal penalties for any government agency that knew about the dangers of Thimerosal in vaccines, and did nothing to protect American children.

WFAA research showed that the FDA began asking questions about the dangers of Thimerosal back in 1972. By 1992, the preservative had been pulled out of dog vaccines and contact lens solutions because of the risks.

However, it remained in vaccines for children until last year.

Government health officials squirmed uncomfortably in their seats June 20 as more evidence emerged suggesting that they misled the public.

"You mean to tell me that since 1929, we've been using Thimerosal," Congressman Dan Burton (R-Indiana) said to the officials, "and the only test that you know of is from 1929, and every one of those people had meningitis, and they all died?"

For nearly an hour, Burton repeatedly asked FDA and CDC officials what they knew and when they knew it. And when memories seemed to be a bit fuzzy, the congressman produced old memos as a refresher.

One memo, from 1999, states that the FDA had an "interim plan... already in place for many years" to get rid of Thimerosal.

...Burton has proposed bringing criminal charges if it's proven the government agencies were involved in a cover-up. ...

Government accountability is something that parents of autistic children have been asking for for years.

Burton asked the question several times June 20, but never got a direct answer.

Thus far, within the government, Burton has been a minority voice, but he has subpoena power, and he keeps threatening to use it.

"So what you do is keep making the case, and keep trying to get the message out to a broader and broader audience so that people start saying 'Why?'" Burton said. "When enough people say 'Why?' change starts to take place."

[JR: Not enough members of our self-serving Congress seem to care enough about the chemicals being added to the vaccines that are being used to experiment on our children and on us. Remember the bogus Swine Flu vaccine? Like Rep. Burton said, enough people have to make this a hot-button issue so that so that we can get rid of one more "additive" in our vaccines. Hopefully Rep. Burton won't be the lone crusader in his fight with the non-compliant CDC and FDC.]

U.S. PLANNING TO RECRUIT
ONE IN 24 AMERICANS AS CITIZEN SPIES

By Ritt Goldstein, www.smh.com.au, 07/15/02

The Bush Administration aims to recruit millions of United States citizens as domestic informants in a program likely to alarm civil liberties groups.

The Terrorism Information and Prevention System, or TIPS, means the U.S. will have a higher percentage of citizen informants than the former East Germany through the infamous Stasi secret police. The program would use a minimum of 4 per cent of Americans to report "suspicious activity".

Civil liberties groups have already warned that, with the passage earlier this year of the USA Patriot Act, there is potential for abusive, large-scale investigations of U.S. citizens.

As with the USA Patriot Act, TIPS is being pursued as part of the so-called war against terrorism. It is a Department of Justice project.

Highlighting the scope of the surveillance network, TIPS volunteers are being recruited primarily from among those whose work provides access to homes, businesses or transport systems. Letter carriers, utility employees, truck drivers and train conductors are among those named as targeted recruits.

A pilot program, described on the government Web site www.citizencorps.gov, is scheduled to start next month in 10 cities, with 1 million informants participating in the first stage. Assuming the program is initiated in the 10 largest U.S. cities, that will be 1 million informants for a total population of almost 24 million, or one in 24 people.

Historically, informant systems have been the tools of non-democratic states. According to a 1992 report by Harvard University's Project on Justice, the accuracy of informant reports is problematic, with some informants having embellished the truth, and others suspected of having fabricated their reports.

Present Justice Department procedures mean that informant reports will enter databases for future reference and/or action. The information will then be broadly available within the department, related agencies and local police forces. The targeted individual will remain unaware of the existence of the report and of its contents.

The USA Patriot Act already provides for a person's home to be searched without that person being informed that a search was ever performed, or of any surveillance devices that were implanted.

At state and local levels the TIPS program will be coordinated by the Federal Emergency Management Agency, which was given sweeping new powers, including internment, as part of the Reagan Administration's national security initiatives. Many key figures of the Reagan era are part of the Bush Administration.

The creation of a U.S. "shadow government", operating in secret, was another Reagan national security initiative.

[JR: The Shadow Government with its Big Brother plans were initiated under Pres. Reagan and is now in full operation under the ever pliable Pres. Bush. Everything is out of the closet now and there needs to be no more hedging or denials by our jailers in D.C. The agency to oversee this domestic "spy on us" network will be mega agency FEMA. The Iron Curtain with the red, white and blue flag on it has come down on the once noble U.S.A. Americans are no longer free individuals but are now citizens of the One World Government. Most people won't even notice and that is the sad part. The much maligned conspiracy theorists got it right again!]

NEVADA CORPORATIONS:

Built-In War Chest For NV Corporations

Budget's "Tip of the Week" #4:

NRS 78.752—Insurance and other financial arrangements against liability of directors, officers, employees and agents

In this very litigious society, anyone can sue anyone for almost any reason at any time. Corporations are not exempt from being sued but anyone suing a Nevada corporation could be surprised at just how resistant to attack Nevada corporate structures can be. (Important side note: To avail your Nevada corporation of the protection inherent in Nevada's statutes, you should always ensure that the other party to any contract agrees that the contract is made in Nevada and any disputes are to be resolved according to the laws of Nevada.)

Let's look at a provision of Nevada law that affords a Nevada-based C corporation amazing defensive capabilities: NRS 78.752, which was added in 1987. Here's how it begins (emphasis added):

1. A corporation may purchase and maintain insurance or make other financial arrangements on behalf of any person who is or was a director, officer, employee or agent of the corporation, or is or was serving at the request of the corporation as a director, officer, employee or agent of another corporation, partnership, joint venture, trust or other enterprise for any liability asserted against him and liability and expenses incurred by him... or arising out of his status as such, whether or not the corporation has the authority to indemnify him against such liability and expenses....

Paragraph 2 states that "other financial arrangements" may include the creation of a trust fund; the establishment of a program of self-insurance; the securing of its obligation of indemnification by granting a security interest or other lien on any assets of the corporation; and/or the establishment of a letter of credit, guaranty or surety. Specifically excluded from this protection are "...intentional misconduct, fraud or a knowing violation of law...". In paragraph 4, we find that "In the absence of fraud... the decision of the board of directors... is conclusive...".

Thus, when a Nevada corporation is sued and the litigant names as co-defendants any of the officers, directors, employees or agents of the corporation, the corporation is entitled by NRS 78.752 to set aside funds for the liability asserted. Since many suits "go for broke", quite literally, a Nevada corporation can often set aside ALL of its assets so that they may be used to defend itself. At best, the attacker is likely to end up with a "mouthful of dirt", as the Nevada corporation defends itself to its utmost.

Sometimes it is just as important what the statutes do NOT say. Next week, we'll examine some key provisions NOT included in Nevada's corporate statutes, which greatly enhance PRIVACY aspects.

WORDS OF WISDOM FROM HATONN

CONTACT OR SPECTRUM?

I want to briefly respond to a most unusual question from a totally "out of the blue" person: "It appears Spectrum will fail, possibly close, so will you go back to writing for CONTACT or what?"

I have never stopped writing for CONTACT—but I have NOT written, nor have my compatriots written for Spectrum. Tails wag a lot of dogs, my friends. Therefore, "or what" has no meaning.
