Mexico’s Burning Due To Chase Manhattan Bank Orders To “Eliminate Zapatistas”

Just about everybody who makes even half an attempt to follow the news has been more than a little curious about the fires ravaging southern Mexico. Some kind of “blanket of silence” prevailed for many days. Then, when the regular, controlled media finally did “discover” the story, it got played-down as insignificant—while half of the southern United States chokes in thick smoke and haze. Do you smell manipulation by the dark elite yet?

Then we find out a little more about the fires: that they’re burning underground (400 degrees F, just 4" below the surface) as well as above-ground, and that they’re marching along a most curious straight-line path. Hmmm. Do you smell an engineered event by the dark elite yet?

What horrible, and yet curious, fire conditions are plaguing Mexico! Natural events? Do you longtime CONTACT readers for one moment think so? Remember also the escalating volcanic and UFO activity there.

Elsewhere in this week’s CONTACT (pages 23-24) we present some of the more usual news material that has been making the rounds as curiosity grows about this matter. But leave it to superb researcher and frequent contributor to CONTACT, Calvin Burgin, to dig-up THE connection which sends a chill of familiarity and contempt through one’s nervous system.

TREATED RATS REGAIN FUNCTION AFTER BRAIN DAMAGE

From THE DAILY NEWS, Los Angeles, 5/19/98: [quoting]

Brain-damaged rats that were given injections of an experimental treatment grew new nerve fibers that once again let them climb ropes, grasp food pellets and remove sticky tape from their front paws, scientists reported Monday.

Experts said the research could help lead to new approaches to spinal cord and brain injuries in humans. These injuries are particularly devastating because damaged nerve fibers in adults do not regenerate on their own.

The growth of new nerve fibers in the rats enabled them to recover their ability to function to “an amazing degree”, said Martin Schwab of the Institute for Brain Research at the University of Zurich in Switzerland. “If you test these animals for hand function, precision movements, you find a recovery of the behavior which is almost 100 percent.”

The study by Schwab and his colleagues at the University of Zurich appears in the June issue of the journal Nature Neuroscience.

The researchers first cut through nerve fibers in a small area of the rats’ brainstem, where the upper part of the spinal cord joins the front of the brain. That knocked out fine motor control of the animals’ front limbs. In humans, that area controls such movements as typing on a keyboard.

Regeneration of brain and spinal cord nerves is naturally inhibited by proteins in the protective sheaths of the nerve fibers. So Schwab and his colleagues devised an approach to neutralize the proteins with a specially engineered antibody, called IN-1.

Rats injected with the antibody sprouted healthy, new nerve fibers in undamaged regions of their brains and spinal cords that took over for the damaged ones. The nerves sprouted and built new connections “which automatically seem to be the right connections”, Schwab said. The damaged fibers also showed some regeneration.

The ability of the antibody to promote new compensatory growth, rather than just repair damaged nerve fibers, could be useful in treating stroke, the researchers said. Strokes tend to damage one side of the brain only.

The human central nervous system contains growth inhibitors similar to those found in the rat. Schwab already is collaborating with a large biotechnology company to neutralize them with antibodies.

“It’s an important and interesting study,” said Michael Beattie, a neuroscience professor at Ohio State University who specializes in spinal cord injury and regeneration. He called Schwab’s results “very encouraging”.

“This study re-emphasizes the role of the noninjured nervous system in compensating for the loss of function after damage,” he said. “The work they’ve done suggests that they’re on the right track to understanding how to produce therapies that can enhance repair and recovery of function.” Story Landis, scientific director of the National Institute of Neurological Disorders and Stroke, part of the National Institutes of Health called the study “very promising”, she said.

“What makes it promising is they’ve shown a remarkable regrowth of axions (nerve fibers), sprouting of axions and functional recovery. This should definitely be tested in primates,” she said. [End quoting]

If only more medical technology were made available to the public, rather than being kept hidden for private financial reasons.

DRUG CARTELS STUNG

Millions Seized In ‘Dirty’ Money

From THE DAILY NEWS, Los Angeles, 5/19/98: [quoting]

Federal prosecutors announced the end Monday of the largest drug-profits laundering investigation ever, an undercover probe that started in Los Angeles, and spanned six nations, leading to more than 100 arrests.

Operation Casablanca became public when indictments of 97 people were unsealed U.S. District Court in Los Angeles. The banks were accused of laundering money for Colombian and Mexican drug cartels. “Today we have hurt the drug cartels where it hurts the most—in their pocketbooks,” said U.S. Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin in a written statement. The investigation started in 1995 and revolved around a warehouse in Santa Fe Springs, where undercover agents said they received drug money for deposit in bank accounts they had opened. Investigators said more than $65 million, which they believe was drug money from the Mexico-based Juarez and Colombia-based Cali cartels, was processed by the banks.

“Some of that money made it back to the drug deals,” said U.S. Attorney spokesman Thom Mrozek.

Federal officials were not sure how much of that money was seized directly, but said $35 million in cash, more than two tons of cocaine and four tons of marijuana were confiscated in spin-off investigations related to the money-laundering probe. [End quoting]

No doubt, Rubin and his gangster cohorts are overjoyed since they are probably the biggest profiteers of this confiscation. Does anyone really think that this cache of narcotics will be destroyed?? Does anyone really think that this “dirty” money will be destroyed or handed over for a worthy cause such as helping people break their addictions? I have very serious doubts. This was a sting operation used for one cartel to gain control over their competitors while we-the-people footed all the expenses of the operation—is my take on this.

SEAGRAM SEWAGE

From THE SPOTLIGHT, 5/18/98: [quoting] Seagram, Inc., the Canadian liquor giant owned by Edgar Bronfman, head of the World Jewish Congress, has earned the first “Silver Sewer” award. The award was presented by Sen. Joseph Lieberman of Connecticut who says Seagram, through its subsidiary, Universal, has “lowered not only themselves but us all” with media fare such as talk shows hosted by Jerry Springer and Sally Jessy Raphael. Seagram is also coowner of Interscope Records, which features Marilyn Manson, who targets similar trash to kids. [End quoting]

Thank God for a congressman willing to call it like it is. If only 400+ more would do so.

DIVIDE AND CONQUER

From THE SPOTLIGHT, 5/18/98: [quoting] Traditionally, non-English-speaking immigrants to the U.S. sent their children to public school where they quickly learned the English language. The children, in turn, taught their parents. More recently, bilingual classes, enhanced with federal funding, were sold to the public as easing the language transition for kids. They have proven instead to hinder their learning of English while making excellent vehicles for political indoctrination. California residents have a citizens’ initiative on the ballot, Proposition 227 to abolish bilingual education, even though by 2010 over two-thirds of California’s school children will be Hispanic, Asian or Black. The education empire and the federal administration oppose the initiative. [End quoting]

Divide and conquer is always the elite’s and their minions’ game. Assimilation through common language is a thorn in the elite’s—you know what.

LOSING PROPOSITION

From THE SPOTLIGHT, 5/18/98: [quoting] Since NAFTA, Mexico’s auto exports to the U.S. have more than doubled, to $23 billion. Meanwhile, U.S. auto exports to Mexico have grown about 9 percent, to $8.3 billion. Greg Woodhead, an economist for the AFLCIO, reports that there are 18 million more cars “on the market” than people will buy. This oversupply portends a profit squeeze which will hit the American autoworker hardest, as he receives three times the Mexican (or Asian) factory salary. [End quoting]

Look for many more layoffs, in a lot of industries, as the economy continues to “boom”.

NO HONOR AMONG

From THE SPOTLIGHT, 5/18/98: [quoting] For unannounced reasons, the transnational agents hammering out the Multinational Agreement on Investment (MAI) in Paris, have declared a six month hiatus. The MAI is to be presented as a treaty constituting the final step to completion of worldwide dominance over each nation’s sovereignty by purely commercial interests. [End quoting]

We have six months to lay the pressure on congress and all national leaders to prevent this from being passed. Don’t miss and waste this opportunity.

FOSTER SUICIDE
COULD MEET IN A
PHONE BOOTH

Excerpt from THE SPOTLIGHT, 5/19/98: [quoting]

A radio broadcast between Tom Valentine and Christopher Ruddy of the Pittsburgh Tribune-Review. [Bold for Tom Valentine.]

Ken Starr has been under fire for calling in members of Monica Lewinsky's family to testify, but he's never put Vince Foster's family on the grill and asked them to testify. If anything, his immediate family would surely be able to shed some light on things.

Mrs. Foster was questioned by the FBI but I don't think any of them have ever been put before a grand jury.

Didn't one of Ken Starr's chief investigators on the Foster case quit in disgust?

Yes, this is the story of Miguel Rodriguez, a very tenacious prosecutor (who happens to be a liberal) who went into the case, thinking that there wasn't anything there, and when he got into the case, he said, "My God, this may be a murder. At the very least there's some sort of cover-up involved. We need to investigate further."

Rodriguez told Starr there were some problems about using the FBI to investigate since the FBI might somehow be implicated. But Starr didn't let him do his job and in several months he was forced out. Two of his own assistants quit over this. And who does Starr bring in to handle the investigation and close it down but someone who was close to the Clinton White House? Mark Tuohey.

Tuohey signed off on the case, saying it was a suicide. Then Tuohey quit Starr's office and joined the law firm that represents Hillary Clinton's former law firm, the Rose Law Firm, before Starr's own office. This goes to show you how close everything is in this investigation.

Why haven't our television commentators brought this up?

They don't want to talk about this. They have decided that the public should not hear about this. They've decided that this is an issue that is not acceptable for the public. I think we're going down a dangerous path and that there's been a terrible abuse of power in this administration.

Start with the day that Clinton came into office. He fired all the U.S. Attorneys. He later fired the FBI director. He took over the White House Travel Office and attempted to put Billy Dale, the head of the travel office, in jail on trumped-up charges.

[Consider] the fund-raising scandals; the FBI "filegate" scandal. I think this is serious stuff. The fact that we've let this go by and that Congress hasn't measured up to the threat that this poses is very worrisome. [End quoting]

Do we really think one brother of this evil brotherhood will not cover for the others against "we the people"? Lawyers are "brothers" in their English Bar brotherhood, and Billy, Hillary, and Ken Starr are members.

ECONOMIC CONTRAST

From THE SPOTLIGHT, 5/18/98: [quoting] Taiwan, for the first time in 17 years, has a quarterly trade deficit of $60 million. It's government attributes the red ink to the collapse of finances in Asian nations resulting in canceled orders and a dearth of new orders. In the past 27 years the U.S. has been in the black on trade only twice, and then in very modest figures. Our current trade deficit is

$12 billion per month. [End quoting]

This also will result in many layoffs in our country, in the midst of that "booming" economy.

CLEARED OF KILLING

A judge ruled he was acting within his authority when he fired at a separatist's wife during the Ruby Ridge siege.

Excepted from THE ORLANDO SENTINEL, 5/15/98: [quoting]

A federal judge on Thursday dismissed an involuntary manslaughter charge against an FBI sharpshooter for the death of White separatist Randy Weaver's wife during the siege at Ruby Ridge.

U.S. District Judge Edward Lodge ruled in an 18-page order that Lon Horiuchi was acting within the scope of his federal authority and was honestly discharging his duties when he fired the shot that killed Vicki Weaver on Aug. 22, 1992. [End quoting]

Notice how they use the buzz-word White separatist. Also the judge has just given carte blanche for indiscriminate killings as long as you're wearing a federal enforcement badge. Are we going to be the next victim of this sanctioned manslaughter, or are we going to stop it?

LAWYERS:
RUSH TO CASH
IS DAMAGING STANDARDS

Excerpted from THE ST. PETERSBURG TIMES, 4/12/98: [quoting]

Executives at Sporicidin Co. figured they needed a few good lawyers back in 1991. Instead, they wound up with a few dozen.

Altogether, 53 lawyers and paralegals from the Washington law offices of Baker & Hostetler logged time trying to convince federal regulators that the Rockville, Md., company's sterilizing solution should be allowed on the market. After spending about $830,000 in legal fees in less than a year and a half, Sporicidin's executives hired an auditor.

Among the auditor's findings: $24,053 for injunction papers that were never filed, $5,891 for seven people to research one statute and $177,251 for time spent by the army of staffers to update one another on progress in the case.

"They were just throwing lawyers at the problem and billed heavily from the word go," said John Toothman, an attorney for Sporicidin.

Lawyers representing Baker & Hostetler dispute some of these particulars, and say the overall fee reflected the complexity of the case, which required negotiations with three government agencies. Further, they say, executives at Sporicidin greatly complicated the work by issuing contradictory instructions to the firm's lawyers.

Whatever the outcome of this case—now part of a pending malpractice suit—it comes at a moment when many corporate attorneys say their profession is being overwhelmed by pressure to snare clients and bring money into their firms. Those pressures, according to academics and lawyers, are profoundly changing the culture of corporate law by giving rise to a bill-or-die ethos that many lawyers find dispiriting, yet impossible to ignore.

Professors who study the business of law say associates and partners are billing hours that suggest superhuman concentration, outright fibbing or an eagerness to log time even if the expense isn't a worthwhile one for clients. And firms are less vigilant about making sure they don't represent anyone whose interests could collide with those of clients they already represent, according to the former head of the American Bar Association's Associates Ethics and Responsibility Committee.

Occasionally, clients get miffed and sue, but the public rarely hears much about lawyer misconduct because, unlike doctors, corporate attorneys nearly always resolve their problems in confidential, out-of-court settlements. [End quoting]

This is merely the icing on the cake of a profession that has generated more sad-but-true joke books than any other.

"BUCKETFULS" OF DNA NOW POSSIBLE AND HUMANITY MAY BE DISPENSABLE

Excerpted from <www.4bypass.com>:

"Watch out, people," said the introduction to a recent Internet posting that was followed by a news item. "This could be a final key in the process that would complete with the near-extinction of all people on the Earth. Since 1973, the Human Genome Project has been grabbing and storing up genetic samples from all the diverse genome [haploid set of chromosomes with the genes that contain the genetic material of an organism] fields in the world. Why?? They could repopulate the Earth in a few decades in the case of some global catastrophe. Since Henry Kissinger, Ted Turner, the Royal Family and other globalist elites have boldly stated the need to reduce world population up to 95 percent, this could be a news story of major import.

"News story of major import?" Paranoid delusions? Reality-based uneasiness? You decide:

"By drawing upon Nature's own DNA-copying techniques, University of Rochester chemist Eric Kool has developed minute rings of DNA—dubbed "rolling circles that can crank out more copies of the genetic template more cheaply than ever before", read the Jan. 21 dispatch in the American Reporter. The U.S. Patent Office has approved the patent, according to the article. "It's now feasible to make bucketfuls of DNA, an amount we can't even begin to approach with other amplification techniques," Kool said. [End quoting]

This sounds like sci-fi, but it certainly isn't. Slowly but surely the public is being made aware of secret technology, now way down the road of development.

U.N. OFFICIALS CONSIDER FEWER INSPECTIONS IN IRAQ

From THE ORLANDO SENTINEL, 5/15/98:
[quoting]

In a compromise reached by U.S. and Russian diplomats, the Security Council agreed Thursday to consider scaling back nuclear inspections in Iraq—but not right away.

The council said Iraq must first make "substantive clarifications" about its nuclear weapons program, which Iraq claims to have dismantled in 1991, when the inspections began under terms for ending the Persian Gulf War. [End quoting]

Don't think the elite are going to lay off of Iraq unless they change focus to some other country. The agenda of a Middle East war is far too strong in the mind of Israel for there to be any move toward genuine peace.

SANCTIONS' END SOUGHT

From THE MODESTO BEE, 5/10/98:
[quoting]

Former U.S. Attorney General Ramsey Clark and an American Roman Catholic bishop vowed Saturday to push for an end to U.N. trade sanctions on Iraq. Clark and the Most Rev. Thomas Gumbleton, the auxiliary bishop of Detroit, made the pledge as 80 American aid workers handed over $4 million worth of medicine, vitamins and medical supplies to Iraqi health authorities. Such visits to Iraq by Americans technically violate U.N. Security Council sanctions. [End quoting]

Maybe they can make a little headway toward stopping the genocide there.

WIRETAP REQUESTS HIGH

From THE MODESTO BEE, 5/9/98:
[quoting]

Law enforcement agents sought a record number of court orders last year to allow them to secretly listen in on more than 2 million private conversations, a government wiretap report shows. The 1,186 wiretap requests approved in 1997 marked a 3 percent increase over 1996. [End quoting]

And this is probably a very, very small percentage of the truthful number—let alone all of the ones done without a request.

6,000 GUN EXPULSIONS

From THE MODESTO BEE, 5/9/98:
[quoting]

More than 6,000 students were expelled in 1996-97 for bringing firearms to public schools, the Education Department reported Friday.

The report was a first, so no comparison is possible. [End quoting]

A worse situation than the "wild West" days when adults carried guns!

S. AFRICA EASES SEX LAW

From THE MODESTO BEE, 5/9/98:
[quoting]

A high court judge on Friday struck down apartheid-era laws against gay and lesbian sex, declaring them a violation of South Africa's new constitution. Judge Jonathana Heher said the laws were a relic of intolerance, ignorance and fear of what is different. [End quoting]

Another step in the destruction of S. Africa.

200,000 UPROOTED

From THE MODESTO BEE, 5/10/98:
[quoting]

Thailand—As many as 200,000 ethnic Karen people have either been forcibly relocated or are hiding in the jungles of eastern Myanmar to escape the army, a research group said Saturday. More than 30 percent of the population in eastern Myanmar has been uprooted and displaced, the Burma Ethnic Research Group said in a report. [End quoting]

The elite are never satisfied unless they destroy a country's families and social life. Talk about cancer—what else is the elite?? When we get cancer in our bodies we make a bold effort to destroy it. Why, oh why, don't we make just as strong an effort to rid our society of this cancer—the elite—which is far worse and the worst disease this world has ever seen??

When I said that World Heritage was a con, to transfer ownership of our national parks to world financiers, people laughed. I was a radical.

Now we cannot access even the crystal-clear potable water that runs to waste from Fraser Island; people put their heads in the sand and discuss the weather.

When the IMF created the World Assets Register and put ridiculously low prices on all of the world's major parks, nobody stirred.

When the IMF started swapping Pacific national parks, such as Luneta National Park (Philippines), in exchange for reductions in their national debt, doubters pretended that they did not hear.

When Australia held a conference at Fraser Island to discuss privatisation of the Great Sandy Region's national parks, the Fraser Coast Chronicle reported the event but it meant nothing to the locals.

When the parks have been swapped to overseas interests the locals will be up in arms but, like the cavalry at Custer's Last Stand, too late.

Perhaps I won't then be called a radical. That won't help our children regain their heritage.

The parks are ours and control of those parks is our responsibility. The ALP/DEM/LIB/NAT/GREENS cannot legally cede these parks to foreign governments. Stop the rot right now. Get active. [End quoting]

Just another example of elite control over all valuable resources.

THE BANK SWINDLE

From THE NATIONAL INTEREST #14, Australia: [quoting]

The government, in the Keating era, changed our laws to let the foreign banks in. Under Contract Law all loans, to be legal, must have a fixed interest rate, a fixed time to pay and a readily determined payout figure.

The foreign banks were allowed to put interest rates to any figure they and their political protegés wanted. They did. Interest rates went to 20% and 30%. Few could pay. The banks foreclosed.

Bank assets went from $87 billion to $383 billion in five years, a profit of $296 billion. They took about $90,000 average from every family in Australia. All foreclosures were illegal. We were betrayed. [End quoting]

The same con game will be used over and over again until we stop it.

ORGANICS PROPOSAL DRAWS FIRE

From THE MODESTO BEE, 5/9/98: [quoting]

Pro-organic groups are urging the Agriculture Department to scrap its proposed rules on organic foods, which drew more than 150,000 overwhelmingly negative comments from across the nation.

Major reasons opposition arose were that the department left open the possibilities that organic food could be sold even if genetically engineered, irradiated to kill bacteria or fertilized with sewage sludge.

"This is by far the worst beating that any federal agency has taken on a proposed rule," said Roger Blobaum, a Washington agricultural consultant.

According to an analysis by the group Organic Watch, more than 83,000 people wrote, faxed or e-mailed comments opposed to allowing genetic engineering in organic foods and only 18 were in favor. Better than 78,000 people opposed irradiation.

Forty-eight members of Congress signed a letter to USDA Secretary Dan Glickman opposing the rules. They say they run counter to "historical practices of the industry" and don't protect consumers.

Organic farm groups have identified 66 objections to the rules. Among them are that state and private certifiers could not have tougher standards than the federal.

Brad Marman of the USDA's marketing service said the agency would analyze the tens of thousands of comments and "perhaps rewrite parts of it to reflect public comment." [End quoting]

Proof again, when enough of us get off our assets and speak up, something can be done—and without guns. The crooks hate publicity.

VEGETABLE VACCINES

Biomed industry booming with renewed interest in DNA therapy

From THE DAILY NEWS, Los Angeles, 5/18/98: [quoting]

Tinkering with plants in her USC lab, Lisa Welter dreams of one day vaccinating people against a potentially deadly disease by feeding them genetically altered vegetables.

In Duarte, John Rossi is testing a way to implant a kind of a molecular version of scissors in human cells to shred the virus that causes AIDS.

Throughout Southern California, scientists searching for new ways to fight disease have begun looking past drugs to deoxyribonucleic acid—DNA, the chemical blueprint that shapes everything living.

And the Los Angeles region has become a hotbed for a field—and an industry—that promises to change the way doctors understand, prevent and treat illnesses. Instead of attacking symptoms, scientists are studying how a person's genes, which determine everything from hair color to height, cause or contribute to disease.

Tinkering with faulty genes to combat disease is called gene therapy.

"We used to look at the patient, and then we got sophisticated and looked at the proteins involved, and now we're looking right at the gene," said David Rimoin, the Stephen Spielberg chairman of pediatrics at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center.

This revolution has been under way for years in Los Angeles universities and biotech companies, and it has already made great strides.

Scientists have pinpointed genes that play a part in ailments ranging from gum disease to various kinds of cancer, and the list continues to grow.

"Virtually every human disease has a genetic component," said Laurence Kedes, who heads the Institute of Genetic Medicine at the University of Southern California.

For all the strides that have been made in gene therapy, however, scientists caution that progress often takes years. Many experiments replacing defective genes or adding new ones have met with little success. And even the basic work of tracking down individual genes and understanding their functions can be maddeningly complex.

"It's a slow, slogging process," Kedes said. "You can have hundreds of people working on a single gene, and it will take them a decade to understand it." [End quoting]

Sounds good, but I hope you don't trust these people. Look how easy we could be inoculated with anything. Prepare for the worst.

MARINES SENT TO INDONESIA

Excerpted from the INTERNET, 5/21/98: [quoting]

Just received word that the Marines have been sent to Indonesia "just in case". Will follow up with news releases as soon as they cross my desk. From this Pentagon briefing it appears to be pretty routine. We'll let you know what transpires. [End quoting]

Yeah, just routine—when the area is "going to hell in a handbasket". The IMF bastards are cleaning up using our freedom-loving soldiers to do their dastardly work.

INDONESIA

Foreign Naval Presence Builds Around Indonesia

From the INTERNET, 5/20/98: [quoting]

Australia has carried on with scheduled joint naval and air exercises with the Indonesian military this week, despite that country's apparent impending collapse. Three frigates and a destroyer, approximately a third of Australia's navy, along with three Australian F-111 bombers and a P-3 Orion reconnaissance aircraft, will be joined by a similar number of Indonesian forces in the exercises. The exercises, titled "New Horizons", will take place off the Indonesian port of Surabaya. The Australian government acknowledged the sensitive timing of the maneuvers, but stated that the long-planned exercises, which take place within the two countries' bilateral defense accord, were not subject to internal Indonesian events. Nevertheless, Australia, like other countries, is arranging for the potential evacuation of its citizens from Indonesia on chartered civilian Boeing 747 jets.

Taiwan and Japan have also sent naval forces to Indonesian waters, though not as part of joint exercises. Taiwan has a three-ship fleet cruising near Indonesia, for possible use in evacuating Taiwanese nationals from Indonesia. Japan has also dispatched two patrol boats to Singapore for possible use in evacuating Japanese nationals. The two countries have each sent military C-130 transport aircraft and chartered civilian airliners to Indonesia for use in evacuating their citizens.

Malaysia has placed its coastal troops on full alert and has stepped up sea and air patrols to defend against a "possible sneak landing by Indonesians" fleeing the country's unrest, according to the Malaysian Defense Minister, cited in the daily Nanyang Siang Pau newspaper. Malaysia has deployed 10 vessels to patrol its waters against any possible mass refugee exodus. Malaysia is also preparing for the possible evacuation of its nationals from Indonesia by ferry or civilian airlines.

Indonesia's near and distant neighbors are concerned about more than just the immediate security of their citizens in the country. Indonesia has a history of externalizing its internal problems, using the nationalism card to trump economic failure. This was especially the case under Sukarno, whose domestic radical populism was accompanied by aggressive, confrontational external politics, targeted in particular at New Guinea and Malaysia. The potential for Indonesia to once again revert to aggressive, nationalistic foreign politics has its neighbors concerned over, among other things, the security of Indonesian waters.

Australia's naval exercises with Indonesia serve two purposes. Australia first and foremost wants stability in Indonesia, and if that can be accomplished through the careful return to and maintenance of the status quo ante, then just as well. However, if Indonesia begins to collapse, Australia is committed to making sure Indonesian instability does not spill over into Australia's sphere of influence, which extends roughly from New Guinea to the Cocos Islands.

Two other potential external impacts of an Indonesian collapse are of critical concern to other countries. The first is the security of foreign firms operating in Indonesia, particularly those in oil and other extractive industries which would be ripe for nationalization. The second is the security of the flow of oil from and through Indonesia. Countries such as Taiwan and Japan, which are highly dependent on Indonesian oil and on Middle East oil passing through the Strait of Malacca, are extremely worried about the potential effect an Indonesian collapse could have on their fuel supply. We note in particular the deployment of Japanese vessels to Singapore, on the Strait. Should that oil flow become threatened, they will be forced to turn, at least in the short term, to Australia to keep the sea lanes open. The nearest significant US Navy presence is the two Carrier Battle Groups committed in the Persian Gulf, while the Seventh Fleet has a frigate and a destroyer deployed in the Philippine Sea. The potential for a constriction in the oil supply, either through the temporary disruption of Indonesian production or through threats to traffic through the Strait of Malacca, while an unexpected boon to Indonesia's cash-strapped OPEC allies, is a nightmare for already economically unsettled Japan and other Asian nations. [End quoting]

Notice that the elite are taking our attention from the Middle East—so what do they have in their evil minds for that area for the immediate future?? You can bet it isn't good for us. The fires—literally and figuratively are heating up—fast—all over the world. How many of us will get burned from inaction?

Nor Hail, Nor Sleet...

From ANGELS ON EARTH, Mar./Apr. 1996, Guideposts, 39 Seminary Hill Rd., Carmel, NY 10512: [quoting]

The Sun that beat down on my Volkswagen had parched the farmers' fields dry. It was another hot, dusty day in the Florida panhandle. The temperatures were recordbreaking; we hadn't seen rain in weeks.

Every other Saturday I had been following these dirt roads through the most remote areas of my north Florida town to deliver mail. The ad for a part-time mail carrier had caught my eye seven months earlier. My husband and I were having financial problems—among others—so I had inquired about the job.

"It's the most difficult of all our rural routes," the postmaster told me. "Six hundred eighty-four homes along eighty-six miles. It's too much for a woman."

"What does it pay?" I asked, unfazed.

"About a hundred dollars a day," he said. "But you drive your own car and use your own gas."

I figured I could work two days a month. The extra two hundred dollars would make all the difference.

Several weeks after I took the civil service exam the postmaster called to say I had made the highest score. When I met with him he warned me that my work as a legal secretary hadn't prepared me for the rigors of being a mail carrier, lifting heavy bags and packages. He emphasized how isolated the route was. I took the position anyway.

My first day was the Saturday before Christmas, and the regular mail had more than doubled because of the holiday. Unfamiliar with the names and addresses on my route, I spent more than five hours sorting, stacking and bundling the letters and packages in gigantic bags.

My small yellow Volkswagen groaned under their weight as I headed out. The only directions I had were 14 pages of handwritten notes. After hours of following advice like "Take the right fork at the big pine tree and go 3.2 miles to mobile home" and "Turn left at the little white house with the big black dog," I managed to get my car stuck in a sandpit. By the time I dragged myself back to the post office that evening the postmaster had called the sheriffs department to report me missing in action.

"Lord," I prayed that night, "I believe you gave me this job. I need you to be on the route with me. I can't do it alone."

Over the next few months I learned the addresses. I got to know the people behind the names too—a friendly wave or a cookie were reminders that God was helping me. But just when I got the hang of my job, my marriage fell apart. In April my husband left town, leaving me and our two children. Money, which had been a problem, became a crisis. The kids were seven and twelve, both of them eating so much and growing so fast I could hardly keep up. There were times that spring when I was rolling pennies to buy groceries. I used the Saturdays in my VW bug to talk things over with God.

The warm days of spring turned into the scorching days of summer. When I delivered mail I packed a cooler with ice and Cokes, and kept a hand towel on my lap to wipe the dust off my face. Sometimes I drove on the wrong side of the road just to stay in the shade.

Finally there came that hot, dry afternoon in July when I didn't think I could take it anymore. I was feeling light-headed and my cooler was empty, the ice a warm puddle sloshing around the bottom. No one on my route was home to pour me a glass of water. Halfway through my shift I began to feel sorry for myself. In the thick, stagnant heat, I stopped the car, put my head on the steering wheel and cried.

"Oh, Lord, I've gone as far as I can go today," I sobbed. "I don't have the strength to deal with my problems. I need this job. But today, Lord, I feel too sick and hot to go on."

I sat there choking on tears that tasted like salt and dust, too worn out to move. Just then I felt a slight breeze coming through the windows. Lifting my head, I noticed a small gray cloud moving toward my car. As it came closer and closer, I stepped outside. The cloud seemed to linger directly overhead.

Standing on that dirt road with my face turned to the heavens, I felt drops of rain. First a fine mist, then a sweet, gentle shower.

It rinsed the dust from my arms and the tears from my cheeks. I basked in its spray. And when I had had enough, it stopped. Thank you, God, I thought, feeling cool and refreshed. Then I noticed: The fields and road surrounding my car were still dry! That little gray cloud had rained just for me. "God, you are amazing," I said.

A few days later our thirsty little town got the downpour we'd been waiting for. By then my spirit and my strength had been renewed. A shower from a small gray cloud had soothed my soul. —Debra Hill, McDonough, Georgia—[End quoting]

He certainly does perform many wonders.

NOTICE TO THOSE SENDING ARTICLES FOR USE IN THE NEWS DESK

Since there are those who do not want published credit given to them for their services, I will no longer do so unless you give your permission.

I thank you much for your thoughtfulness. It, however, would help me if you would limit the articles sent to the ones that don't get covered in the normal daily mass media. As you can see, amidst being swamped with news clippings, I'm looking for the ones that I feel are important yet are not adequately covered by the mass media.

I thank you for your time and the expenses of your efforts to share, and may God bless you richly.

When The Pressures Say “Enough Is Enough!”

PERSONAL NOTE
FROM DORIS EKKER

I would plead for a bit of space to share with all of you who write and plead your own case to be heard—by God, by me (us), even to the belly-cramps which bring us such fear in the mind in today's world of hurting. THE CALL COMPELS THE ANSWER—if we but remember it.

I came yesterday morning, the 18th, to the keyboard and I simply could not begin to write—could not express even one more sane statement out of the chaos of recurrent illness, and yet I could feel that it was nothing more, this time, than simple fatigue and allergic reactions to whatever I, like you, might have.

E.J. had gone to fly Bob's airplane to Bakersfield so that some work could be done on “something”, and he had cleaned his desk, at least in the writing area, and also parked the problems at the flooded farm for a day or so. I was so envious that I could hardly bear it, not having seen my desk at all for some eight years. “Just go write,” he said—“do you want me to just wait while other things need doing?” YES, by golly, I certainly did. Reasonable? Of course not; who said anything about “reasonable”?

So, I sat and stared at a nice blue, but empty, screen before me and finally screamed in my mind at God—“Where the heck are you when I need you?” Instant response: “Right here—when you get through with your ‘venting’.” Venting is that new and tiresome word conjured by those who can't longer speak English and think “venting” sounds better than “self pity” or “tantrum”.

I realized suddenly that my frustration came from the FEAR that I would not be able to REMEMBER everything and let everyone down on court trial day. I felt as if my mind would simply close-down and I would be there in front of a jury and an audience and blubber like a child, or simply freeze like liver pate; smelling bad and looking worse.

I finally said to myself, and whoever else was listening, “Ok, let's get on with it.” I got the following lecture in great kindness, wrote a while and, frankly, stopped and went back to bed and read the rest of the day—between a myriad of interruptions. Do I want to handle the things of today? No, but I know that I can—and will. I may not handle them well, but I will take my place in the circle and be as responsible as I can be, because when I am missing, the wheel cannot run in balance for my teammates. Do I like it? No, but as I read the wisdom in the message I was given to get over this spell of wishful thinking, it is that: Wise and certainly within reason.

People, if the load seems too much, too heavy, undoable—write it down somewhere on something. Look at what you write, CAREFULLY—AND LISTEN TO GOD! We just don't want to hear HIM most of the time.

I am going to leave yesterday's message in the writing today because God WILL respond if we but settle ourselves and listen—and respond in “action” enough to at the least write down what might be the problem. If the problem is too big to write—then you are hiding from self. The only way to handle those BIGGIES is to present them, first to self—and then to anybody who watches or cares—or better yet, probably to those we perceived don't give a damn at all. I only suggest one thing more: WHEN THE HEART IS FULL AND GRATEFUL, WRITE THAT DOWN ALSO BECAUSE GOD READS VERY WELL.

Thank you. —Doris

5/19/98 #1 HATONN

TO HAVE “REASON” IS NOT TO HAVE
LACK OF FAITH

Why think you that to have insight and vision into the structure of the Universe, and in some way understanding God, will make your spirits ever soar upon the heaven's winds?

Little Crow said it well: “It gives you night after night of sleepless unrest and a painful longing in the heart and soul to run away, escape and hide away.” That too, little ones, is a testing of intent of soul and finding that measure of peace that only a job well done can offer in return for the service given.

Staring at a blank screen can drain the energy from the most energized battery or machine—can't you relate to this? The thoughts of “self” and “I just can't do this anymore, Father” strike us all from time to time. We each know that we CAN go on in whatever work seems appropriate—but the humanness reaches out and shackles the freedom of expression.

Here we sit before a screen which can carry any message we choose, even if it simply be to the central computer data area. But today a lawyer comes to interrogate so that he understands the impact of these years of litigation upon the central players and each attached “witness”. Truth? Truth is so long in the telling of our journey here that it is impossible to reach a conclusion to the tale in time for the trial itself. And the mind works its fragmented magic in distractions upon distractions.

Would it not be more of a simple task to stop, remember, write and hand it to the legal process as “this is my soul”, take it and further strip it naked before the world, the jury—anyone who cares to further rip it to shreds? My, the mind reaches, doesn't it? But, Dharma, the mind is all you have and what a waste to disallow its freedom in expression even if those memories are painful, humorous, valid but awkward—especially the remembering such unpleasant happenings as have transpired so freely upon your beings.

Would it not be better if we sat before this screen and painted the journey as is relative to the property stolen by the RTC, Jason Brent, Steven Horn, Steven Berg, aided and abetted by George Green, Betty Tuten, Leon Fort, Ann Beam, Ences—ET AL.? Would it not be better to clean those closets now than to forever wish you had inspected your own hidden-away-treasures for painful experience?

If you feel it wasteful of “time” spent on this topic—is not THIS topic that which strikes all living human people as they struggle through their own library of trials? People fill juries and people can only relate to an honest and truthful story of what IS, what WAS and what, indeed, happened. Let us try expressing that for a bit, and if the tears be flowing, all the better for they can clean the corners of the heart and wash the soul. It is not weakness or selfishness—it is the only way you can hand your case over to your champion that he may express that which a witness is no longer allowed to present. It will be good for you to remember and share—and let go.

We must grow through these things before we can stretch our arms across the seas unto our distant neighbors, for their troubles are only “different” and men and countries only choose a different language, and each thing has no relevance unless it be personal. You are a cheat if you fail to realize that simply “writing” is somehow telling a tale worthy of presentation. If a thing bears no passion, no emotion in the telling, is there worthiness of dumping it on others—or retaining it in your own garden of hidden things which reduce each to a frozen wad of up-tight poverty?

Let me help you here, chela. What is this SPECIFIC circumstance under consideration? Did or did not Mr. Tips do or fail to do that which would protect your interests? You can only speak truth if you confront the circumstances. It matters not in guilt or intentions, but what happened, and then there must be a presentation of all things related—I believe the “other attorney” called it the underlying case—and for that there are some 15 large file-boxes of “stuff” relative to this case. But those are the games of lawyers and Judges, players OTHER THAN SELF. WHAT HAPPENED TO YOU, TO E.J., TO ALL YOUR HOPES, DREAMS, ACTUAL LOSSES, AND WHY IT MATTERS AT ALL—TODAY—OR AT TRIAL BEFORE A GROUP OF, HOPEFULLY, OBJECTIVE PARTIES WHO CAN JUDGE YOUR PLIGHT.

E.J. is practical, usually unemotional and seemingly devoid of any interest in anything—but that is stability for others. The point is to not allow the pressure-cooker that blows to be your own. Let the steam off slowly and wisely—go smell the violets!

I will offer this, friends, and it comes in serious intent. When you win this case against Tips, and you will if you make an effort—buy the house and the adjacent lots if they still be for sale. If you have a goal, you will see how much or how little you can use to continue to function. Stop stretching the lenders, for some of them get no younger and estates have a way of grabbing up whatever is available. Do not ignore this instruction. This means you need to get a LOT from those money grubbers for you will have to share 40% off the top. This is fair for your new champion because there are great things for him to accomplish later, and the return worthy of the task. BUT, SECURE THE PROPERTY. Then, we can reach out and touch a few of those other hell hounds. But, you have to go through this painful exercise to even be able to get back to the dirty bounders. Their needs are not our commands, chela. Our needs, when they involve others who have helped—are necessary to resolve and fulfill. You need a LOT; ask that jury for a lot, for the insurance company, the guilty lawyer, and the entire Green Brigade are working against you, and so be it for you can now let go of that ridiculous guilt-trip they dump onto you to cause you to crawl in a hole somewhere so they don't get insulted or wounded for their own actions. No, that is not correct thinking. You are responsible to those who HELP us, give, love and honor in TRUTH with INTEGRITY. You owe the liars, cheats, and criminals—NOTHING, save to allow them to meet their own lack of integrity.

You are a citizen and you aren't supposed to know what legal things mean—that is the reason you have to get an attorney in the first place. Retraxit, ex parte, lis pendens, lis mota, limine, in limine, etc. It is wise to know these things but THAT is why you hire an attorney in the first place, for the court will ONLY rule and allow hearing if you KNOW THE LAW AND CAN COUNT THE DAYS IN THE "REGULATIONS". I note there are special blank looks on your face when the lawyers and judges speak of such as a remittitur or aboutissement and what, for goodness sakes, is "Consolato del mare"? How about Copia libelli deliberanda? "Copia libelli diliberanda" and Coparcenary. What about cooperative negligence?

There has been gross "negligence" foisted against you in a most critical and crucial area of law, little chick, so let us not get crazy. And remember: Judex non reddit plus quam quod petens ipse requirit. [A judge does not give more than what the complaining party himself demands.]

I suggest you now go think about these things. Salu.

Now that we understand a bit better, perhaps, let us get back to this tomorrow and wait for the unfoldment as the lawyer wishes, and then you will have an outline from which to work. Sequence is most important, chela, and proper sequence saves an abundance of time and concern.

And so we come to this morning: [5/19/98]

Things, friends, are rarely as they seem to be. I noted this morning that Dharma looked at the orchid given her last week for Mother's day, from Ron, Laurie, Josh and Jilly and it was as perfect as the day it was left on the front stoop. It had made a trip to Carson City, Nevada (an eight-hour drive), sat through a deposition all day, and back home again—still perfect. Life is strange, isn't it? This morning, Dharma's old eyes, not longer so sharp—said "this is impossible". The fingers had to again touch the petals to see if the orchid was "not" and but bits of silk. Alas, there it is in God's own perfection—still beautiful and perfect and unused up by the looking, smelling, touching or sharing. Please consider this a lesson, precious friends. YOU CANNOT USE UP GOD! NOT EVEN IF YOU REST VERY HEAVILY ON HIS STRENGTH WHEN YOURS SEEMS INSUFFICIENT.

Just now, this morning, word has come back, after Judge Wallace's admonition to Mr. Tips that he would be tossed out of court if he did not offer a convenient day for deposing him—here, we find that Mr. Tips has scheduled a deposition in Palo Alto (south of San Francisco near Stanford University) (only slightly less inconvenient to our people than the French Riviera) on Saturday. Well, friends, the harder this man makes it—the better the case becomes, so just hold it in your hearts. Readers, you don't do these sorts of vile things unless you are guilty! More guilty, even, than charged! Release the possibilities to God and stay on your toes.

And stop calling out as you end your communications with God, "In the name of Jesus, Amen." Can't you look at possibilities and simply say to Father, "In the GRACE OF CHRIST, I ASK THAT THY WILL BE DONE."? It works EVERY time!

I am asked by many of you: "When does this trial with jury begin?" On June 8th is the scheduled date and it is expected to run at least a week—shorter if Don Rhoads (our trial attorney) can manage it. Of course there will be dickering and effort "to settle" after the trial begins and the facts pour forth—but I hope that neither Mr. Rhoads nor Ekkers fall faint along the way and capitulate just to end the misery.

How many "spectators" might attend? Well, that one is a bit more difficult because hopefully there will be press present and courtrooms are for lawyers and judges—not you-the-people—so there is a lot of room "up front" in no-man's land but very little in the audience department. Witnesses summoned will have to wait outside, so to keep a lot of people OUT OF THE ROOM there have been more listed as "witnesses" than will be utilized. This is a really old trick to keep out the ones unwanted in the room itself. Horn, for instance, is listed as a "witness"—lies and all. We do expect, however, an appearance for the show from Jason Brent who likes to see "Ekker's get theirs"! as most of you will recall from past exercises. I would, therefore guess that there might be room for some 50 viewers in the court.

It will be an exhausting time for the "players", but we will have a debriefing as time and energy permits if the case is ongoing to finish.

Readers, there can only be justice in a courtroom IF YOU CAN GET TO A JURY. This is why there has been every legal trick played, even to a Judge's promise to only let the jury decide on rental value of this property—not the case. A jury of peers allowed to do their perfect job terrifies lawyers who live by tricks and technical B.S.

Can Ekkers get a jury of peers? Well, with those who DON'T serve on juries of higher education and reasonable "Me-the-Person" status, who knows. You will need ones who have had

ALL THEIR PROPERTY, RETIREMENT, INCOME stolen and who are hopelessly in debt from the struggle and ones reduced to welfare food stamps to be on that jury. In these days it surely is easier to find these kinds of citizens in an ordinary town or county—than the Elite. A jury of "ordinary" people are all that is necessary for TRUTH to be heard for most people of ordinary rank and file recognize the shrewd liars for what they are.

But jury or no jury—you can expect the opposing players to appeal and appeal and appeal, so don't get too excited just because you THINK there is some end in a trial—ask O.J. On the other hand, these civil trials may actually reverse themselves and end up in CRIMINAL TRIALS—wouldn't that be refreshing for a change?

Perhaps CONTACT might like to invite EXTRA to come cover this little portion of the tale—while we work to get back to the major thrust of the criminals in the underlying cases. It might be interesting to offer some bits of truth shed on the story. Surely you would think "Channel 29" would be interested in the local goings-on regarding the "E.T. Princess" and the people who "destroyed Jason Brent" as he is quick to spread about the globe.

If it is alright for Peter Rabbit to talk to God—we must insist it is alright for Dharma to speak to God! And, oh yes indeed, the opposing attorneys are trying to make a Lawyer's malpractice incident into a Spiritual-Religious bashing. The depositions have been filled with the trashing.

Any who attend this trial, however, are ASKED to make no show of selves or any disruptions for we have no group and the results of these friendships in presence can be misconstrued, as is usual, as some kind of "cult" garbage. Respect and attention is all that is acceptable. Let the opposing people make asses of themselves—we will not stoop to such actions. GIVE THE JURY NO REASON TO EVEN "THINK" STRANGE THOUGHTS! This case is over negligence and loss of a house and lot, so let's keep it right there in point and demand that it remain RIGHT THERE.

Ideal setting? There can easily be enough people present in curiosity to overflow facilities for remember this is the FIRST jury hearing these people have been able to have in over ten years of every effort possible, and debts now into the millions of dollars. Nobody can AFFORD this type of injustice—so let it speak for all we-the-people who are subject to loss of everything in addition to destruction of reputations and health.

Ron C. and M. might wish to reconsider their visitation time for this event. He ended up IN JAIL in Hawaii because he simply dared to speak out in a court. He left the court and was later arrested on a warrant—how is that for justice? And over what? I believe it had to do with taxes or something equally as innocent.

By the way—follow up on the Greens' recent arrangements for hiding George's stuff. I believe you will find Desirée in the area of San Diego and the large bank deposits by her in Maui, Hawaii. Hints only, of course—but follow up and see what you find! Judges and juries don't really like these kinds of criminal games and YOU are going to find that Scott Tips NEVER STOPPED WORKING WITH DIXON, GREEN, ANDERSON, ETC., IN THIEVING GOLD AND MONEY OF YOU-THE-PEOPLE INTO HIDDEN ACCOUNTS OFF-SHORE, TRUSTS OFF-SHORE, AND GOLD ROLL-OVERS AS GREEN WAS SO EXPERT IN ACQUIRING—BY OUTHRIGHT THEFT. How can we KNOW? Because some of the answers to interrogatory questions CAME DIRECTLY FROM THE MOUTH OF GEORGE GREEN, FROM THAT WHICH GREEN CREATED AS LIES IN THE FIRST PLACE.

Well, friends, all YOUR HELP has come through Green who brought you Tips, and Tips who brought all the rest aboard to work against you—until NOW. Intentional? Does it make a difference when the results have been so obvious in the cover-ups? When you place a paper over a dead skunk does it REALLY mask the odor? When you have something that smells like a skunk, looks like a skunk, sprays like a skunk—do you really think you have a Rose bush? No, you have a skunk, and never mind the waddling ducks and bunny-hoppers.

Is this writing offensive? I certainly hope so!

People seem to think that if you are Godly, tell the truth and try to live by the Laws of God—you are a pious wimp of some sort. NO, and it is time, past time, to make it alright to win, prosper, have abundance with integrity when living in a goodly state of being. Why do you people always cause GOD TO LOSE? Why do the most wondrous THINGS of physical “having” flow to the hell hounds? BECAUSE YOU LET IT BE THAT WAY, THAT’S WHY! Worse, precious ones, you can CREATE and your opponents cannot but destroy and manipulate—with what you create. This is WRONG, and yes indeed, there is good and there is WRONG. Twenty lies will not make a single simple TRUTH. But ONE TRUTH can set you free.

Human has to creep, then crawl, then toddle while falling down a whole bunch of times, then slowly walk, then walk faster and faster until he can jog, and then, one day, he can run and remain upright and upright. Do not push that river of sequence lest you drown in the eddy created from the backwash. Know what you are doing; DO IN YOUR KNOWING, and the outcome will move you farther on the pathway toward that goodness, equality and fairness you seek. And let others participate for you do not have to make the journey alone, and when you “arrive” you need others to fulfill their own missions in service and honor. Reach high, oh my chelas, for only there can you begin to recover and blossom. Look back only for the learning and KNOW that from the present must come the foundation of the perceived and hoped-for future.

Do not put off until tomorrow that which needs fulfillment TODAY—for tomorrow may well bring the things of living which take place while you hold those other plans. This way you can look forward to trusting—and not just believing—in God.

Let us leave this but I ask my team to refer to it often, especially when the pressures are heavy and seemingly unending. This too shall pass.

Good morning.

Part 2 In A Series

Re-Establish The Constitutional Republic Or Start Anew?

5/20/98 RAY BILGER

Mohandas K. (a.k.a. Mahatma or “great soul”) Gandhi (1869-1948) is credited with making the astute observation that “The world has enough for everyman’s need, but not enough for everyman’s greed”. Seen another way, it should be obvious that societies and economies cannot have unlimited growth when the Earth has only limited resources. Hence, any concept of a realizable and achievable just government must be inextricably linked with the concept of our Earth as having finite resources. Bigger is not necessarily better. We must be realistic about what we plan to do today, but our planning must go beyond tomorrow. A balanced approach is the only perpetually sustainable approach.

In a perfect world it would seem that there would be no need for government at all, for all would honor and respect all others. As Thomas Jefferson said in 1782, “It is error alone which needs the support of government. Truth can stand by itself.” So, since we are where we are in time and space, perhaps we should try to build a just world government.

Gandhi also advanced the idea of “an exploitation-free society”. In other words, we must be concerned with the needs of people, rather than the needs of the system. The system must be tailored to the needs of human beings. The idea of a government of, by and for the people is a nice idea on paper, but in a world such as ours it will take some work to make it a reality.

“That government is best which governs least.” This must be our cornerstone and our goal, as it entails the concept of more localized governance with everyone being responsible for making things work in their own communities.

Our active participation in the governing process has, until now, been cleverly engineered out of the system, thereby making us dependant on others whom we have elected to do our thinking for us. And those who have done our thinking for us have been corruptible and, thus, have become greedy and have not had our best interests at heart. Unfortunately, our government has not simply ignored our problems, it has perpetuated them. It is time for a change.

Now that the Earth is as populated as it is, balance and harmony must be a significant part of the foundation of any proposal for a just world government. And, although we are physical beings, we must cease our over-emphasis on our physical bodies, our physical world and physical environment, and instead express the fact that we simultaneously exist as spiritual beings. But more than that, we must understand that we are spiritual beings first, last and foremost.

We were spiritual beings before we made the conscious decision to come down here to experience in this human physical dimension, and we will still be spiritual beings after we leave this three-dimensional plane, with the added benefit of what we have learned in our journey here to help us in our own spiritual evolution. And what we will ultimately realize, if we think enough about it, is that how much we benefit from this experience is dependant upon how much we are able to help our Creator with HIS Bigger Plans for this planet, of which our own individual plans are but a part.

And what are those Bigger Plans? They appear to be to see how we will do (with all of the multi-faceted distractions that a world such as ours holds), and what we will do, when left on our own, to create a just and better world for all human beings.

You see, when we really think about it, it seems quite plausible that, in this vast universe of ours, there must be many, many inhabited worlds and that our world may well be rather unevolved and even barbaric compared to some others. It is completely conceivable that there are worlds where all life is held sacred, where there is no violence, or terrorism, or mass exploitation by people who feel the overwhelming need to have total power and control over others; worlds where the Creator is recognized by all as the Source of all life, love, joy and abundance; worlds where all things coexist in harmony and balance.

Obviously, our world has not yet reached that point. Ours is a planet where we can all learn our lessons about what is good and what is evil by experiencing every situation in life as an opportunity to learn some lesson.

What we have today in our world is starvation in the Third World, overpopulation, poverty, injustice, inequality, frustration, despair, crime, aggression, dehumanizing technological development, the befouling of our Earth, air and waters by industrial, agricultural, and individual pollution, overtaxed social amenities, etc., etc.

Since what each of us does ultimately affects each and every other human being on Earth in some way, the solution to our world's problems will not be achieved if only one nation chooses to do something about them. The peoples of the world all appear to have the same basic needs, but the world's many governments do not appear to be run by those who wish to see those needs met. Thus, the need for the peoples of the world to unite to now set up a Just World Governance System.

Some would argue that we already have the basis of this in the United Nations. But anyone who understands how and why the U.N. was set up, by whom it was organized and established, and who actually runs it from behind the scenes, will know that it is an evil front for powerful international bankers and industrialists who are bent on keeping us perpetually at war with each other, and in exploiting the world's people and resources to make us all slaves to them and their corrupt world system. The U.N. is, by far, the worst thing we could have today for world governance.

The primary tools which have been used heretofore to control the masses of the world (and currently used in a contradictory and subtle fashion by the U.N.) are fear and the old principle of divide and conquer. This has worked to keep humanity in chaos and confusion and, thus, easily controlled.

If we human beings who comprise the majority of the world's population can but free ourselves from the grip of the international bankers and One World Controllers bent on destroying us, we could learn to build a system which would promote and nurture the ideals of living together in balance and harmony. The incredible billions upon billions of dollars currently wasted on "defense" could, instead of being senselessly used to kill each other, be used to feed, clothe and house everyone on the planet and still have billions left over to build a just world. A world which is at war with itself is, by definition, a backward and barbaric place doomed to destruction.

Every facet of our lives has been subverted and perverted by those who have controlled us, and everything must now be set aright so that we may be able to move forward to realize what has thus far only been the dream of humanity on this planet.

Let our differences not divide us but bring us closer together. Each and every race and culture in the world only adds to the depth and richness of the texture and fabric of humanity. Let us come to understand the unity in diversity. This is but one small world and if we do not learn to live together on it, we shall certainly not like to see where we are quickly going.

We really need to be able to expand our imaginations beyond what might normally be conceivable to us. A just world must first be conceived in the mind through the imagination and then brought into physical existence. We must consciously desire it to happen.

For example, it seems quite conceivable that there are worlds where the very idea or concept of money is completely alien to the inhabitants thereof. After all, when everyone lives in perfect balance and harmony what need is there for such as money? Money is simply a very clever artificial creation of man for the purpose of controlling people, because it is a commodity that can be controlled, and when everyone uses it, everyone can be controlled by it.

When our Creator's abundance is available freely to all human beings, there is no need which is not immediately met. In such a situation there is no need for money.

We need to learn when enough is enough. What point is there in one man having millions or billions of dollars while millions of other human beings must starve? Can he take it with him when he leaves this world? Can it buy him true happiness? Does it help ease his conscience or help him to sleep better at night?

When we realize that we cannot have unlimited growth, and that we must at some point settle comfortably at a harmonious plateau, we will see the genius of what some have called the "Stable State Society". This is where we will arrive when we have gained the wisdom to know when enough is enough.

The international relations of the nations of Earth must promote peace and harmony between all human beings, and this must grow out of the simple realization that this is but one small planet and, for whatever reason, we all happen to be here together, and to not get along with each other is nothing short of courting disaster for all of us.

It is time, and perhaps long overdue, to correct our course of self-destruction. This is one world and it could well have one overall governing system that respects the individuality and sovereignty of the many nations comprising it. The time to act is now, the place to do it is wherever you are on the planet.

Lastly, our totally twisted, demented and corrupted educational system needs to be scrapped and replaced with one which teaches the truth about who we are and why we are here. This is in fact the key to fixing all else in the world. An educated and enlightened humanity is one which will not tolerate the kind of injustice and abuse that now passes for normal life in our modern world.

Life is change. To ignore this is to ignore life. Here is a possible proposal for a Constitution for a Just World Governance System:

CONSTITUTION OF THE HUMAN PLANETARY GOVERNANCE SYSTEM

We, the Human Beings and inhabitants of planet Earth, in order to insure that we will not be exploited by greedy forces in opposition to our best interests, and to secure a good future for all Human Beings on Earth, do hereby set forth our basic program for the secure operation of a just, harmonious and balanced Planetary Governance System, based on true and just values and principles, whereby all Human Beings on Earth may live together with peace, equality, understanding and consideration for all living things.

properly fed, clothed and housed, and the right to adequate health care, when and where it is needed, and the right to a decent education.

2. Each and every Human Being on Earth is, by Nature, free and independent, and has certain inalienable rights, among which are those of enjoying and defending life and liberty, of acquiring, possessing and protecting property, and of pursuing and obtaining safety and happiness.

3. The right of liberty includes the right of locomotion, of being able to freely move from one place to another on Earth, by any means or conveyance whatever, without any restrictions whatsoever by any government or anyone else.

4. The right of acquiring and possessing property includes the right of each and every Human Being on Earth to have and enjoy the benefits of all of the fruits of his or her labor without any restrictions or any taxing of such labor by any government or anyone else.

5. All power is inherent in each and every Human Being on Earth, and they are Absolute Sovereigns in any and all arrangements with all government. All government is instituted for the protection, security and benefit of each and every Human Being on Earth, and all Human Beings have the right to alter, reform or abolish their government, whenever the public good, determined by all Human Beings, may require it.

6. Each and every Human Being on Earth has the right to exercise his or her religious beliefs in any manner they so choose, so long as doing so does not interfere with or deny any other Human Being's right to do so, and so long as doing so does not jeopardize or compromise any other form of life on the planet. All life has the right to live freely.

7. Each and every Human Being on Earth has the right to speak freely, and the right to publish anything they so choose, so long as doing so does not bring undue hardship, burden or death to others.

8. Each and every Human Being has the right to peaceably assemble together in an orderly and civilized manner consistent with all other provisions set forth in this Constitution, and the right to submit grievances to the Planetary Legislative Council.

9. Each and every Human Being on Earth has the right to be secure in their persons, houses, papers and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures. Warrants to search or seize any property of any Human Being shall only be issued where there is serious probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched and the person or things to be seized.

10. Each and every Human Being on Earth has the right to be free from answering for a capital, or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a clear and specific presentment or indictment of a grand jury. Each and every Human Being charged or accused by such a presentment or indictment must be presumed innocent until proven guilty beyond a doubt, and also has the right not to ever be charged (or accused) and tried twice for the same offense.

11. Each and every Human Being on Earth has the right to be free from being compelled to be a witness against himself or herself in any criminal case.

12. In all criminal or civil prosecutions, each and every accused Human Being on Earth has a right to a trial by jury, without sale, denial or delay, and such right remains inviolate forever. Each and every Human Being on Earth has the right, in any criminal or civil prosecution, to be fully and completely informed of the nature and cause of the accusation against him or her, and the right to be confronted with any and all witnesses against him or her, and the right to obtain any and all witnesses in his or her favor.

13. In any and all criminal or civil prosecutions, each and every Human Being on Earth has the right to counsel with any Human Being or Human Beings he or she may choose to counsel with, to have such Human Being or Human Beings assist him or her in all phases of any and all criminal or civil prosecutions, and to have such Human Being or Human Beings speak in his or her behalf in any or all phases of any and all criminal or civil prosecutions, as he or she may deem fit or proper at the time.

14. Each and every Human Being on Earth has the right to be a witness in any matter whatsoever, and no Human Being shall be rendered or determined incompetent to be a witness on account of his or her opinion or opinions on any matters whatsoever.

15. The privilege of Habeas Corpus shall be enjoyed by each and every Human Being on Earth and shall not be suspended or denied to anyone for any reason whatsoever, and no Human Being shall be held a prisoner because of his or her political or religious beliefs.

16. Each and every Human Being on Earth has the right to be free from being required to pay excessive bail, and free from having excessive fines imposed, and free from having cruel or unusual punishments inflicted or imposed, and no witness shall ever be unreasonably detained.

17. Each and every Human Being on Earth shall be bailable, by sufficient sureties, except for capital offenses or other crimes which threaten the life or property of any Human Being, when the proof is evident or the presumption great that harm would come to any Human Being.

18. The enumeration in this Constitution of certain rights shall not be construed to deny or disparage other rights retained by each and every Human Being on Earth.

SECTION 2

Each and every Human Being on Earth has a duty and responsibility to do whatever they can, within the law, to make certain every other Human Being has every opportunity to exercise and enjoy their inherent and inalienable rights, and all other rights set forth herein.

SECTION 3

1. No Human Being on Earth has any right to deny or deprive any other Human Being of his or her inherent and inalienable rights, and the opportunity to exercise and enjoy same, or to deny or deprive any other rights set forth herein.

2. No Human Being and no government on Earth can ever deny or deprive any Human Being on Earth of any right to life, liberty or property without due process of the Common Law, and only where all other remedies have been completely exhausted.

3. No Human Being and no government on Earth can ever take any private property from any Human Being on Earth for any public use without just compensation, to be determined by a full hearing on the matter before a grand jury, and only where all other remedies have been completely exhausted.

4. The liberty of conscience, hereby secured to each and every Human Being on Earth, shall not be so construed as to excuse acts of licentiousness, or justify acts or practices inconsistent with the peace or safety of each and every Human Being on Earth.

5. No bill of attainder, ex post facto law, or law impairing the obligation of contracts, shall ever be passed by any government, or by any legislative body thereof.

6. No slavery, or involuntary servitude, shall ever be tolerated by or against any Human Being on Earth.

7. Treason against the Human Beings of Earth shall consist in levying war against them, or adhering to their enemies, including the international bankers, or giving their enemies aid or comfort, as in allowing any international bank to be established in any nation. No Human Being shall be convicted of treason, unless on the evidence of two or more witnesses to the same overt act, or upon confession in open court.

ARTICLE II.

PLANETARY LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL

SECTION 1

1. All legislative powers and duties herein granted shall be vested in a Planetary Legislative Council which shall be composed of three Human Beings, called Representatives, from each nation a signatory to this Constitution.

2. The three Representatives from each nation shall be chosen from their respective nations by paper ballot elections in their respective nations, and no electronic voting shall be allowed anywhere. Whoever wins a majority of the popular votes shall become a Representative of his or her nation.

3. Representatives to the Planetary Legislative Council shall hold their position during time of good behavior, as long as the Human Beings of his or her nation choose to keep them in their position.

4. Each nation a signatory to this Constitution shall maintain a local branch of the Planetary Legislative Council, consisting of not more than ten local Representatives within each nation, to implement the provisions of this Constitution in each nation. These local Representatives shall be elected in each nation the same as Representatives to the Planetary Legislative Council.

1. The Planetary Legislative Council shall meet whenever a majority of the Representatives thereof call for such a meeting, or whenever the Human Beings of Earth so order such meeting.

2. Meetings of the Planetary Legislative Council shall take place at a location chosen by a majority of the Representatives thereof by a voice vote. The voice vote shall be taken at the end of each meeting and will determine the location of the next meeting, with the first meeting to take place in Cairo, Egypt.

SECTION 3

1. Representatives to the Planetary Legislative Council shall be paid a compensation for their service, to be determined by the Human Beings of their respective nations.

2. Representatives to the Planetary Legislative Council shall not hold any other office during the time which they are serving as Representatives of their respective nations.

SECTION 4

The Planetary Legislative Council shall keep an accurate and detailed journal of their proceedings, and shall immediately publish the same in every nation a signatory to this Constitution.

SECTION 5

The Planetary Legislative Council shall elect from its member Representatives, those who shall serve on the Planetary Executive Committee.

SECTION 6

The Planetary Legislative Council shall submit to the Planetary Executive Committee, for the Committee's approval, every resolution the Council votes to approve.

SECTION 7

The Planetary Legislative Council shall have the power:

1. To determine and expose violations of rights of Human Beings in member nations.

2. To tax businesses and corporations 3% in order to provide revenues for implementing the provisions of this Constitution in member nations.

3. To promote the progress of science, the useful arts and education for all Human Beings on Earth.

4. To propose ideas, concepts and programs which will serve to uplift and make better the living conditions of all Human Beings on Earth.

5. To encourage understanding between member nations of all races, creeds, colors and religions of all Human Beings on Earth.

6. To support legislation which helps corporations and businesses better serve the real needs and interests of all Human Beings on Earth.

7. To constitute tribunals inferior to the Planetary Supreme Court.

8. To select and support an Interplanetary Greeting Committee to act as host and intermediary for visitors to Earth from other planets.

9. To propose all laws which may be necessary and proper for carrying into execution the foregoing powers, and all other powers vested by this Constitution in the Planetary Executive Committee.

ARTICLE III.PLANETARY EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE*SECTION 1

1. The executive power shall be vested in a Planetary Executive Committee, which shall consist of seven Human Beings who shall be elected from the members of the Planetary Legislative Council to serve as members of the Committee. When a member of the Council is elected to serve on the Committee, the nation of which he or she was a Representative shall elect a new Representative to replace him or her on the Planetary Legislative Council.

2. The members of the Planetary Executive Committee shall hold their office during time of good behavior as long as the Planetary Legislative Council shall determine they should serve on the Committee.

3. The members of the Planetary Executive Committee shall receive as a compensation for their service, the same compensation they were receiving as members of the Planetary Legislative Council.

4. Before they enter into the Execution of their office, the members of the Planetary Executive Committee shall take the following oath or affirmation: "I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will faithfully execute the office of the Planetary Executive Committee, and that I will to the best of my ability, preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the Human Planetary Governance System."

1. The Planetary Executive Committee shall have the power to grant reprieves and pardons for offenses against the Constitution of the Human Planetary Governance System, in cases where it is clearly shown that no serious damage resulted and where every effort has been made to correct the offending action or practice.

2. The Planetary Executive Committee shall have the power, with the advice and consent of the Planetary Legislative Council, to make treaties and alliances with other planets which further the needs, interests and rights of each and every Human Being on Earth, and to promote the peaceful exchange of ideas and visitors between planets.

3. The Planetary Executive Committee shall nominate, and with the advice and consent of the Planetary Legislative Council, shall appoint ambassadors to other planets, other public consuls, judges of the Planetary Supreme Court, and all other officers of the Human Planetary Governance System whose appointments are not herein otherwise provided for, but which shall be provided by law.

4. The Planetary Executive Committee shall do all within its power to promote peace, commerce, and honest friendship with and between all nations, whether they be signatories to this Constitution or not.

SECTION 3

1. The Planetary Executive Committee shall, at the beginning of each year, present to the Planetary Legislative Council and to the Human Beings of Earth, information about the state of planet Earth, and recommend to the same for their consideration such measures and suggestions as they shall judge necessary and expedient to promote the blessings of peace, joy and abundance for each and every Human Being on Earth.

2. The Planetary Executive Committee may, on extraordinary occasions, convene the Planetary Legislative Council; the Committee shall receive ambassadors from other planets; the Committee shall take care that the laws of planet Earth be faithfully executed.

ARTICLE IV.PLANETARY JUDICIAL CONFERENCE*SECTION 1

1. The judicial power of the Human Planetary Governance System shall be vested in one Planetary Supreme Court, and in such inferior courts as the Planetary Legislative Council may from time to time ordain and establish.

2. The judges, both of the Supreme and inferior courts, shall hold their office during good behavior and shall receive for their services a compensation to be determined by the Planetary Legislative Council.

3. The Planetary Supreme Court shall be composed of eleven justices to be selected by the Planetary Executive Committee.

4. Any Human Being who holds any title of nobility shall not be allowed to serve as a justice of the Planetary Supreme Court, or as a judge or officer of any inferior court.

1. The judicial power shall extend to all cases at the Common Law arising under this Constitution, and treaties made, or which shall be made, with other planets; to controversies between two or more member nations; to all cases affecting ambassadors and consuls; to all cases between a member nation and a Human Being of another member nation; and to all cases between Human Beings of different member nations.

2. In all cases affecting ambassadors and consuls, and those cases in which a nation shall be a party, the Planetary Supreme Court shall have original jurisdiction. In all other cases mentioned in Clause #1, above, the Planetary Supreme Court shall have appellate jurisdiction, both as to law and to fact, with such exceptions, and under such regulations as the Planetary Legislative Council shall make.

3. The trial of all crimes against this Constitution shall be by jury and shall be held in the nation where the said crimes shall have been committed.

4. In all cases whatsoever, all juries shall be composed of twelve Human Beings, except that a grand jury shall be composed of twenty-three Human Beings, and all juries shall have the power to determine both the law and the facts of any and all cases brought before them.

SECTION 3

The Planetary Legislative Council shall have the power to determine the punishment for treason against the Human Beings of Earth.

ARTICLE V.

RESPECTING NATIONAL SOVEREIGNTY

SECTION 1

Each member nation shall respect the national sovereignty and local national laws of all other member nations. National laws of member nations shall not be in conflict, but shall be in conformity, with the provisions of this Constitution.

SECTION 2

Any Human Being charged in any nation with treason, felony, or other crime, who shall flee from justice to another member nation, shall be taken back to the nation having jurisdiction of the crime.

SECTION 3

New nations may be admitted as members of this Human Planetary Governance System at any time by approval of the Planetary Legislative Council.

ARTICLE VI.

AMENDMENTS

The Planetary Legislative Council, whenever two-thirds of its members shall deem it necessary and appropriate to promote the rights and interests of each and every Human Being on Earth, shall propose amendments to this Constitution. All such proposed amendments shall become part of this Constitution when ratified by three-fourths of the members of the Planetary Legislative Council.

ARTICLE VII.

SUPREMACY OF CONSTITUTION

SECTION 1

This Constitution, and all laws which shall be made in pursuance thereof, shall be the supreme law of the land in each nation a member and signatory of this Human Planetary Governance System, and the justices, and judges in every court in every member nation, shall be bound thereby.

SECTION 2

All members of any department, agency or branch of the Human Planetary Governance System, and all bureaucrats, ambassadors, and consuls, and all members of Councils, Committees and Conferences thereof, including all justices and judges, are all public servants, and at all times answerable to each and every Human Being on Earth, who are the Masters and Absolute Sovereigns over their public servants.

ARTICLE VIII.

RATIFICATION

This Constitution shall be sufficient in and of itself to establish it as the law of any and all nations which shall choose to become members of the Human Planetary Governance System, and shall not be deemed to be in conflict with the laws of any nation which does not wish to become a member nation.

DONE IN CONVENTION by the unanimous consent of the Representatives of the nations present at the first meeting of the Planetary Legislative Council held in Cairo, Egypt, on the fourth day of July, in the year one thousand nine hundred and ninety eight. In witness whereof, the nations below hereunto subscribe as member nations.

If nothing else, the above document should serve as interesting food for thought. It is time for the human inhabitants of planet Earth to make a decision as to whether or not they want to live in the past ways of total control and self-destruction, or if they want to move into the clear Light of a future worth living for.

All of the planets in this vast universe are like the instruments of a grand cosmic symphony. Shall we dance to the music of the spheres, or continue to sit here in the corner?

Here is your chance to make a real difference in your own future and the future of all children of the world. What will you do now?

In Part III we will examine the ramifications and respective benefits and possible drawbacks, if any, of the ideas and proposals presented in Parts I and II.

The Untold History Of America

by Ray Bilger

This book shatters the image that has traditionally been portrayed as American History, by exposing the high-level corruption that passes for business-as-usual in the Halls of Congress, the White House and throughout our entire Judicial system.

The Untold History of America was written for the specific purpose of providing a high school textbook for all American schools that would guide the education of students into the real nature of our national situation. With a clear understanding of things as they exist in reality, students will then be in a much better position to go on in life and do something to correct our current downhill course.

This book is for those who want to know why America is the way it is today, where we went wrong, who are the responsible parties, and what we can do to bring back the American Dream our forefathers and mothers fought so hard to establish, and for which they gave their very lives in defense.

Special emphasis is placed throughout the book on the original inhabitants of America, the Native Americans. They lived for thousands of years on this continent in complete harmony and balance with the Earth. With their help we may yet be able to turn things around so that our tomorrows will be something we will all be honored to pass on to the children who are our future generations.

Getting A Grip On The Truth Behind Shadows

5/20/98 #1 HATONN

IF YOU BELIEVE IT—IT IS

When you walk through the storms of time passage, take care lest you get so involved with the tinkering that you are taken within the maze of chaos.

A person called Mr. Martin yesterday, rife with the things which have come to bind the body, mind and soul. Perhaps today I should take general discussions as focus for there are some frightening things come upon you which are seemingly traps from which you can't extricate selves. Remember something, chelas (students) of life both Spiritual and Physical: self is only as trapped as you allow self to be.

In the midst of a hurting self you will always turn to the fragments which bind you and the focus becomes large and unwieldy. GET YOURSELF TOGETHER AND STOP, LOOK AND LISTEN. I am not here to solve your personal problems, give you a cure-all, save-all, save anything, or capitulate to any perceptions of twin flames, triads, reincarnation, or any other things TAUGHT BY MEN TO FURTHER HAMPER YOUR PERSONAL JOURNEY THROUGH THIS MAZE OF PERCEPTION.

"But I can't do that," you shout at me. So? Then obviously your teachers to this point have given you a lot of incorrect information, haven't they—for God gives you NOTHING you can't do. And further, if it be worthy in concept and action without binding another to anything—you have all the support necessary to "handle" anything. Stop blaming implants and sensational control systems. You are only as "controlled" in mind as YOU CHOOSE TO BE.

Why do people search and involve, search and involve with every new idea (or old idea) that drifts along? Because you are both curious and are looking for something that mirrors YOUR OWN IMAGININGS. This does NOT make those other realities any more "real" or correct than any other one. When you experience and truly FIND, you can stop your fancy investigations and focus on the healing and growing of SELF. It isn't nearly as picturesque or colorful as the running about on adventure after adventure, but ah, it is so much the more interesting—for it is YOU.

As to "twin flames"? I don't even agree that there are such things. Why? Because you cannot live FOR another and an assumption in a relationship is a magnificent flow of emotional and ideological concepts—but as long as God has been creating humans, each is UNIQUE. And even "twins" are NOT THE SAME.

If, to carry this further, you perceive a person has been tampered or programmed or implanted by ANY other entities outside her/his personal control—so be it. It doesn't matter whether or not this be actual fact—just the BELIEVING makes it as real AS IF. And, you cannot force or coerce another and be within the servitude of God. You can only offer another that which the other will accept or you are left holding the gift, good or bad. Creator offers individual ability to stand totally alone with just himself and God. This doesn't mean that YOU will have everything you think you need or can't live without. It means you can live in the connection with God alone as support system. When you turn responsibility over to ideas thrust upon you or FOUND in the underground manipulation centers—you will find yourself impotent at the very time you need strength the very most.

I don't need to comment on nose implants or ear ringings—yes, they are valid observations. However, no physical person within the LIGHT CIRCLE OF THE FREQUENCY OF GOD is unable to override the entire mechanism. Sorry about that, readers. I know that you wish to make another appear somehow responsible and/or in control of YOU so that blame can be offered around to anyone in any given circumstance.

People must realize that excuses flow like water when relationships end for any reason and one still believes in the "twin flame" theory. Even twin flames burn out, dear ones.

To the "caller" I suggest that with your advanced recognition and ability to accomplish at higher levels of understanding, you are simply being pressed hard by impacting ideas. I suggest you get squared away with self and God, secure that connection, and you don't have to worry about where Tesla might be trading secrets. The point is to keep YOUR balance AND THE OTHER PERCEPTIONS WILL FALL INTO PROPER PLACEMENT. Use your advanced enlightenment for your own salvation, for you can't do "it" for anyone else—only self.

I do not set up myself as "your way" or "the way"; I am Truth and I have no wish to impose self onto your experience. Therefore I am a teacher but I am NOT some kind of Saviour in spite of yourself or your wishes. If you need "saving" in some way from pit or depression or responsibility of growth in learning—so be it, you must grab the gusto for self. And, furthermore, if you are connected to the RIGHT ENERGY—no self-styled anything can turn you away nor direct your program.

You people would like me, actually, to start up a big world-wide cult of some kind and accept all your sins. Phooey! I don't need your sins—I have experienced my own in my learning processing. WHEN YOU GIVE YOUR POWER TO OTHERS—YOU BECOME WEAK AND BLOATED WITH TERROR AND SORROW. STOP IT. Take back your power and move on, hopefully in strength and understanding within the right direction and you will pick up strengths you didn't know you have.

"But Sister Thedra said..." or "Claire or Mark Prophet said...". Well, chelas, GOD SAID YOU ARE "ALL" WITHIN SELF AND WITHIN HIM. God is not a Baptist or a Roman Catholic, nor is he "Jewish" or even a trickster Jeu. HE IS! What more do you need? These DOCTRINES are of human fancy and you get distracted onto new ideas like ants to syrup.

"But how do you overcome technology of the times?" You take back your power, override in frequency the radio signals, and ignore them. You don't even need tell anyone about it. You will usually find, when you settle down, that that twin flame who blew-out has SET YOU FREE.

People give power to all sorts of things and I find it most interesting in watching. You give power to such as idealistic little gray aliens or big tall aliens or whatever—that somehow nobody sees or hears except in abductions of some kind—or in the underground MILITARY tunnels and cities. Fine—BUT, if these people or insects or whatever you accept are REAL, they are so technologically bright that they certainly do not need to dwell in dark underground hide-aways. And frankly, they would NOT come to a dark physical planet to IMPROVE their lot.

So, what is a REAL "little Gray"? These are Spirit forms which can bring themselves within physical manifestations in one way or another—but they are of the lower astral plane. Some will call this phenomenon "sub" something or other—but it is a place of lower energy experience—even if the dimensional reality is far higher in Spiritual understanding. If they are physical, then they are simply "bound" to a physical circumstance or reality. The most deadly events, however, are through the illusions thrust off on you by very validly alive and experiencing PEOPLE. People like Steven Spielberg offer you great and fun experiences right out of his own mind portfolio. You take up the possibilities and become impotent within HIS OWN MIND—never mind yours. You DO NOT need enemies of the insect variety to rule you through brain-to-brain control as would an enemy—there are plenty of "real people" manipulating every thought and every action for just as long as you allow it.

Now as to some harsh realities: I DO NOT need nor want a bevy of searching, controlled by human intent of others, aboard my craft, my cloud, or within my teams. False teachers belong right where they are—trapped within the confines of a planet or physical enclosure.

Don't "do God a FAVOR by calling on HIM" and presuming to assist HIM in HIS PARTICIPATION WITH YOUR MISGUIDED EGO THOUGHTS. This is not intended to be painful—it is sent as factual and reasonable information. I, for instance, am not come to your chaotic mental wards to learn from you, except perhaps to realize more fully what is WRONG. This world of hurt is YOUR experience and responsibility to change into that which offers you ability to serve, grow and become worthy of God relationships on a far higher level than MAN can experience. If the world be insane—then, you made it insane. Therefore, YOU will now make it sane or it will tumble into chaos and struggle until MAN cannot longer live on it.

MIND CREATES—SO YOU WILL FIND, IN REALITY, WHATEVER YOU CREATE! AND,

IF YOU GATHER WITH OTHER CREATING MINDS, YOU WILL DEVELOP WHATEVER THE COLLECTIVE IDEA MIGHT HAPPEN TO BE. When the collective "mind" moves into destruction—you will experience and produce destruction. When it moves into and within LIGHT, you will find prosperity, goodly company and righteousness. YOU have to decide what you want. And I remind you that if you have given your power over to another for ANY reason—you have erred. POWER DOES NOT MEAN CONTROL.

The "caller" suggested that his twin flame was so tampered and implanted that he could no longer CONTROL the conduits of communication. Say what? I think, son, that you have nailed your own problem. Release and let go of that albatross upon your back and hers. CONTROL is not the name of the game and until YOU face it, you will find only unhappy endings to your perceived play. You simply perceive SOMEONE has stolen YOUR CONTROL OVER THAT OTHER PERSON. Further, if she denies your input for whatever reason, be it implants or programming, it is HER JOURNEY and by gaining back YOUR CONTROL OVER HER merits you only problems and immobility in your own experience. You claim that you can't "do anything about it"? Then you can't!

I like the little prayer in AA which recognizes the need to change the things you can, accept the things you can't, and the ability to know the difference. But I do not like the concept AT ALL—for you can change anything you choose and "can't" takes away your power—it does not increase it. You can do and change anything you choose to change—if it be of SELF and you want it badly enough. However, I find that most people don't really WANT to change—just bitch, moan and complain—and assume helplessness. YOU HAVE NO RIGHT TO CHANGE ANOTHER SOVEREIGN INDIVIDUAL but how wonderful it is when just through higher reason and understanding both can come to some workable integration.

What you really want God to do is concur with YOUR IDEAS so you can dump on others. That is purely B.S. in its most stinking form. GOD DUMPS ON NO ONE! Wouldn't it, then, be wondrous if everyone stopped dumping on God so that God could have opportunity to grace you/them with the abundance in every facet of living HE HAS TO OFFER?

This offer is good only on orders shipped within the United States.

*Limit 2 free offers per product. Note, this is on all sizes: 2oz, 16oz, 32oz and 2 liters:

*The way this will work is, you can buy 4-2oz GaiaCol for $10.00 each (and get two freebies). That's $40.00. Plus you will add $1.00 s&h for each freebie. That's $2.00 s&h. So the total for the 6-2oz GaiaCol would be $42.00. Or if you choose to go with the 32oz size for this Product, it would look like this: 4-32oz GaiaCol for $96.00 each. That's $384.00. Plus you will add $3.00 s&h for each freebie. That's $6.00 s&h. So the total for the 6-32oz GaiaCol would be $390.00. This is a savings of $192.00.

We hope this helps.

Thank You for your continued support.

CLEARING UP OTHER STUFF

Let us address the V.K. Durham outbursts and flak-flinging. We don't have any interest in her business or, actually, that of Russell Herman whom she claims to have been her husband of only two days or so shy of gaining help from the government coffers. So be it and may her gods bless her for, with the attitudes proffered, few others shall.

IF GRANNIE WANTS TO BURY THE LIFE OF RUSSELL HERMAN—SO BE IT, BUT SHE WILL NOT BURY "MY" COMMITMENT TO RUSSELL HERMAN.

I, for one, am tired of attending her in her irrational stance. She has become the prime destroyer of her own claimed wishes and is welcome to do that to self and others who put up with it. Doesn't she KNOW, since she claims to "know everything", that there are at least ten other high-level people who know that Russell made THAT ASSIGNMENT TO RICK? They have started focusing on that fact and that is why the information had to be made public in announcement. Sorry, Vina, but it has nothing to do with you or anything you have or wish to have. Does Grannie think Rick and this team here LIKE TO BE THE TARGET OF THAT ADVERSARIAL BRIGADE WHO KILLED RUSSELL? V.K. had best think back to who was in the picture in Russell's latter days and who would carry top-level and top-secret documents back and forth. Grannie said Hatonn spent a lot of time with both she and Russell. Was that a LIE, V.K.? When a life is based on lies, it is purely hell, isn't it? Nobody is interested in your contract, V.K.—it is as dangerous as the apocalypse itself and totally worthless in its present form. The Bush Brigade ALSO reconfirmed and reconfirmed that bit of certificate and guess who has the greater control of it? When you considered that you had negated the very contracts you made—YOU DIDN'T, number one, and number two: WHO CARES? Rick is running the information FOR PROTECTION—NOT TO ANNOY ONE V.K. DURHAM. You negated Leonardo's attempts and that is your business—but don't cry out in silly rantings over your own incompetent exposure of self in your greedy nonsense. These people, HERE, sustained you just as I had committed to Russell to do the best we could. Well, they can't longer sustain anyone and you are a bully and a cheat to suggest your were OWED more. You say you will do wonders to bring-down these goodly people? MAKE MY DAY! These people are among the top-runners in being sorry to have ever been involved, but what you, V.K., didn't know, is what a lot of others, Russell saw to it, know and knew then. His actions were his last capable effort at securing something for possibilities beyond his own—and you, old dear.

You know that you are serving self and a LIE. WE SERVE TRUTH. Nobody wants your money or your contract so go forth and annoy somebody else—Congress, Treasury, Attorney General, etc. They know the TRUTH, V.K. From those direct sources came edicts of "if that woman is involved in any way—we will have NOTHING to do with anything you present." We are slow learners, perhaps—but not THAT SLOW. I repeat: the notices are being run FOR PROTECTION BECAUSE TOO MANY PEOPLE WERE INVOLVED AND KNOW ABOUT THE "MARTIN CONNECTION" AND HAVE COME FORTH TO THREATEN AND COERCE. Rick doesn't need or even want a "cute code name" either. If this makes one V.K. Durham unhappy then so be it for we weary of the assaults and attacks. And yes indeed, it IS too late to patch the rift and erase the selfishness of yourself to others. No one longer butts into your business so stay out of ours. No one here even longer knows where YOU ARE. They wish you well, success, joy, love and LIFE and none ACCEPT YOUR RANCOR OR HATE—SO ENJOY IT BACK UNTO SELF. And by the way, that signature you deny IS MOST CERTAINLY RUSSELL'S AND YOU KNOW IT!

For clarity: V.K. has no valid "trust". She has no valid "Board" so why not stop sending the outrageous garbage to this place? DO YOU THINK THE ELITE ARE BLIND, DEAF AND DUMB? To have your sister somehow appear to be a professional team of Board Members is somehow so silly as to amuse rather than threaten.

This place has been investigated by far more sophisticated agencies than V.K. can conjure. The FBI, CIA, Cult Awareness Network, ADL, JDL, JWC, Treasury, Postmaster General, Attorney General—you name it, they have investigated—AND FIND NOTHING. DO YOU HEAR? NOTHING! They find nothing FOR THERE IS NOTHING and all the conjuring, lying, shouting or snorting—will merit nothing. Even the Mossad finds NOTHING. LIES MAKE NO TRUTHS, readers. TRUTH WILL STAND THE TESTING. When people will cut off their own heads to spite their faces, it is sad indeed and in that insanity of action—others do not wish to be in the blood-letting.

Rick needs protection—he will have protection. He didn't ask for any of this clandestine secret stuff, so back off. Surprisingly enough—WE ARE STILL TRYING TO SAVE YOUR ASSETS, V.K., BECAUSE THE WORD COMES BACK THAT THEY ARE "JUST GONNA' LET 'ER DIE". THAT COULD MEAN THE CONTRACT OR THE PERSON—WHICHEVER IS MOST DESIRABLE TO THE TREASONOUS THUGS.

So, Vina, shout your venom, shoot your arrows and poison pen, and have yourself a day in blasting—it makes no difference whatsoever. Rick is simply trying to shield you and himself and hopefully move out of the whole mess.

We know you will get this message for you seem to have a response back before the paper even hits the subscriber's door. Fine, we know how to communicate now and perhaps publicly is the best way after all.

God would not annoy you like this? Oh yes HE would. He is a confronter and adversary of these stupidities beyond any other. And if you "know better"—YOU ARE MIS-INFORMED!

NOW TO A BIT OF HEALTH

Wendell: Please, what you are doing is having little or no effect on the upper respiratory tract problems. You are witnessing people's bodies becoming allergic to themselves and responding allergically to the toxins from the very invader microbes.

The best results are through actual intake of colloids and four times a day ingestion through the nose—so that the colloid itself can "run" across the openings of the sinuses. Test the person in point by giving a suggested upper amount dose of antihistamine or commercial "cold" capsule with a couple of aspirin—or try seeing what an asthma inhaler compound produces. If the symptoms improve you have a handle on what is taking place within the body. However, you will find there are parasites which live off the production of mucous IN THE SINUSES.

Proper "frequencies" can only attack or affect the parasitic microbes or visible invaders. The new breed of bug, however, forms its own encapsulating "slime-substance" which walls it off from accepting counter-measures.

Oxygen plays a great part in this phenomenon but OZONE is what really breaks up the living-forms in much the same way as ozone purification of water works.

It is so effective that we have someone who makes the equipment for air treatment, available. Get in touch with either Jack or Diane Kunick. They, and Rick, have spoken AT LENGTH with the person who owns the patent to the equipment you shared. It is about the only piece of equipment that I find working worth that proverbial whit. Everybody gets on the bandwagon to make a buck and ruins the very thing they set out to copy. Jack can even get you small ones for use in your auto or for travel. The things in a hotel room are all but deadly once you have these reactions in allergic response taking place, so anyone having trouble with smoke, prior areas where smoking once took place, new paint, carpets, carpet cleaners and on and on and on—might get at the least a small apparatus and get those rooms ionized. [Editor's note: See box on this page.]

I further suggest that you can use the small ones to simply hold in front of your face and inhale for a couple of minutes several times a day. Try to do this in the immediate presence of an air humidifier for ozone is much more viable in the presence of moisture. So, try putting colloids in the water in the purifier and utilizing the ozone apparatus and get the stuff INTO THE LUNGS AS BEST YOU CAN. Ozone and Silver colloid kill microbes on contact and the other colloids move within the cells—if in the presence of a surficant or Drias. Cells with Drias enhancement will not allow the "mucoid" substance to adhere. We have to outsmart the parasites of all kinds and a parasite is simply that which lives OFF some other life-form. In essence therefore, we are all parasites of one kind or another—so don't let the "term" fool you.

For Cleaner, Healthier Air

JEW/JEU

Also, to all you readers: DO NOT LET THE TERM JEU BE CONFUSED WITH JEW SIMPLY BECAUSE THEY SEEM TO SOUND ALIKE! To be "Jewish" is not the same as being "Jewish" in the full meaning of Judean or Judaic. Until you people can come to understand, you will dive off in one wrong direction after another. You create these ideas from OTHERS WHO HAND THEM OVER TO YOU and, yet, until you STOP and KNOW for self, you are continuing to work under another's misperceptions and foisted-off false representations. Physical experience has become nothing but a FALSE PERCEPTION of "Follow the Leader" and "Blind-man's bluff". OPEN YOUR EYES and STOP FOLLOWING THE GREED MONGERS. They are NOT going to share their own accumulations of good THINGS with you—you are the ones they use to accumulate FOR THEM.

MORE ON HEALTH

By the way, in consideration of such as ozone and drianas—cancer cannot further function well. Mutation of cells is all that constitutes cancer—any way you cut the fancy talk. Stop the mutation and you stop the cancer. There is ONLY ONE KIND OF CANCER—MUTATION OF CELLS. There are many sites of the mutation possible, so you need something that can program to each TYPE of cell—that takes drianas. The microbes and viral biological "things" can't survive in ozone—or even very well in oxygen. This is WHY they wall off themselves, for they feed on bits of oxygen but cannot survive in pure oxygen. So, use your noggins, friends: if you fill your lungs and linings with this slime-stuff, the oxygen can't get through to be absorbed by the body. This is a very simple concept—for YOU must have oxygen to survive. These little lung parasites learn to stop your receiving oxygen and thrive on the substance they create from the other things in "air".

No, it isn't "nice" and no "healer" is going to long have help for you—again, you have to heal self, protect self, and create for self. If you are unwilling to do that—then you will fall prey to whatever comes along. When you get tired of enjoying your infirmities, you will stop being infirm. Simple? Yes. Easy? NO.

You want miracle drugs? Why? Do they give you PERMANENT AND INFINITE CURE? Of course not—so why do you expect anything else to give you PERMANENT CURE? If you are not "responsible" for self, even unto your own body's needs, how think you that anyone, or even God, should butt into your business?

I am not going to argue with anyone. If someone tells me they are allergic to, say, silver—fine. YOU ARE NOT ALLERGIC TO SILVER COLLOID UNLESS YOU ARE ALLERGIC TO PURE DISTILLED WATER, WHICH YOU ARE NOT! What you are, and choose to remain, is ignorant.

I can also tell you who think yourself to be allergic to spelta—YOU ARE NOT. You may well be allergic to something on the husk, within a mix—but GOD PERFECTED SPELTA SO THAT THERE IS NO MUTATION OF THE PERFECT SEED—SO YOU WON'T HAVE TO BE ALLERGIC. It also becomes the PERFECT food for the DRIAS of life. If it doesn't work for you—then look at you—not at God.

Hard today, Commander? I guess so! I have asked you to not pile the personal plights onto this resource—so if you do that, you are going to get fact and truth directed right back, if indeed, you actually wanted a response. So if you feel I am harsh, which such as Wendell will not, so be it, take it up with God—not Dharma. When you already announce you know all the answers—then why start an argument? I might well "debate" in leisure time—but I find arguments, except in living communications, a waste of both our time. Such as Gerry Spence uses the term "argue" and "argument" for it is a legal term used in court and he is a lawyer. I prefer to consider it a discussion in logic and RESPECT and truth will out. And when you want me to lie to appease you in your own misperceptions, you insult self far more than me. I already know that I am right and that ends the argument. You may perceive me as pigheaded and stupid—that is your problem and not mine. Isn't this the context of each in an argument? Close the mind and open the mouth is the mode of stance in arguments. If you announce your righteousness—why should I argue with you? Your claim to all-knowing righteousness is not my business unless you dump it onto me, so, in essence—IT IS NOT MY BUSINESS. To share and discuss something is the only way to gather knowledge in truth—but an argument is exactly THAT, an argument.

I am reminded of George Abbott and George Green telling the Associated Press in Nevada—which made it around the globe, the story, a Lie, of course, for that is their forté, that Doris Ekker calls herself Jesus Christ. Wow! Doris Ekker calls herself Doris Ekker—she doesn't even call herself "dharma". Neither does she advocate the foolish assumption of hopping onto strange flying objects with strange flying people. But, neither does she tout tooth fairies or great pumpkins. She has fun with Christmas trees AND candle holders. She has bunnies around on Easter. She respects every man's religion and his right to hold his ideas, except when evil falls off onto someone else. There is a great difference, precious friends, in CULTURE, TRADITIONS, RELIGION AND SPIRITUAL REALITY. Just as the SOUL is of higher energy form, so too is spirit-uality. Religion and all other traditions and cultures are very, very human indeed. There is major difference in doctrine and reality in truth. Oh would it be that I could make you see—but alas, even I cannot. I can give you information and abundant input, even to strong magnifying glasses—but I cannot make you see, hear, and know.

I inflict hurt and pain on NO ONE and if you perceive that I do—then perhaps you should look more carefully for if truth offends, it is not of my doing. BUT, in return you have no right to inflict pain on me in your efforts to bash whatever may disagree with YOU. Just a thought: I can function in, and dearly enjoy you and the human experience—but "I" do not need to become human to do so nor to satisfy your demands on me. You want magic—I demand the solving of MYSTERIES. One is foolish, the other enlightening. I find mystery a brilliant challenge—mysticism a lie. That doesn't mean that all mystics and psychics are lies. Truth in "vision" is a gift of gifts—trickery is exploitation of another that only happens in the human format. You can trick a dog—but you can't dump your "tarot" or "fortune telling" off on him. When we misuse the very gifts of God, we err, students, for the biggest fool of all turns out to be self.

The most sad of all is the fool, so let us not contribute to his circumstance by assisting him in his foolishness, but, never submit to accepting his pronouncement upon you as your duty to accept. No one can make a fool of you except you. Others in their efforts to show you as the fool only prove the fool that they THEMSELVES are, IF YOU DON'T COOPERATE!

"We are all related and our physical identity has nothing to do with our relationship. It's that we are one, we are one under the creation. We are one of the creation. We are a part of the creation and therefore we are related to all things."

—Little Crow Wanbliska

And one more for ikce wicasa:

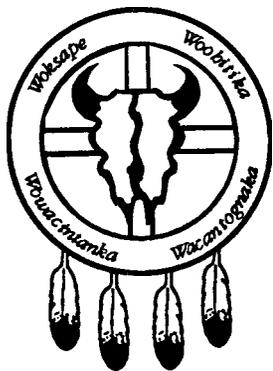

"You are not an accident thought up. You are not an experiment. You are from the universe itself and you are made up of the universe in its entirety. It flows through your veins and you call it blood; it flows through your mind and you call it thought."

—L.C.W.

Listen to your soul, your essence, your "nagi" for therein lies what you ARE. Just as God IS, so too you ARE. When you smother soul, you smother YOU, and you insult GOD.

Salu, and may you learn to fly so that you can soar with Eagles and not crawl with toads.

Sanat Kumara: Time To Grow Into The Cosmic Brotherhood

5/23/98 SANAT KUMARA

Good afternoon, my scribe. It is I, Sanat Kumara, come in the Light frequency of the Silver Ray of Creation. You know me well. Many there in the physical, especially among your Native American peoples, associate me with the label "Grandfather". Again, as stated many times prior, a label is for you in the physical, so that you can have a mental association with which to relate. You will, one day, begin to recognize ones more by their unique energy pattern than anything else.

I am asked to speak at this time about your position as a planet and a species in relationship to your universal brothers. Your planet Earth-Shan is but one of billions of inhabited planets with sentient life. Your species has grown to a point of spiritual and intellectual (a subset of the spiritual aspect) competence wherein you will be in need of conscious awareness of your place in the universe and the responsibility of maintaining and holding that place.

This is to say that your world is fast approaching a point of conscious awakening to a greater reality and a greater Truth. Your elder brothers from elsewhere in the cosmos have come to assist you both in your growth as a species, and as co-creators within the laws of Creator Source.

This is a most unique time in your planet's evolvment in which to be experiencing! There will be MASSIVE change as ones will be caused to confront the inner lies and misperceptions that they have held onto for so long.

There will be, at first, great confusion for the masses. They will, for the most part, be caught off-guard, and thus be psychologically unprepared for the implications associated with this awakening.

This is where you who are of Ground Crew will be called upon to assist those who will be desperately seeking to understand. You will have to deal with great emotional anxiety. This anxiety will have an enormous impact on ALL levels of your planetary experience.

Eventually, as the masses come to accept the greater reality of their true place in the universe, the confusion will give way to a greater peace than your world has ever known. As your species is ready, your world will be gradually brought "up to speed" with respect to other universal intergalactic societies. This will be a very deliberate and calculated rate which is determined by the ability of your species to adapt and comprehend the true functioning and universal laws that govern space beyond the limits of your solar system.

This is as much a matter of UN-learning many present lies as it is a matter of learning new truths. I speak here not only of scientific progress, for great beings in all areas of understanding have frequently been gifted (sent) to your planet—only to be "removed" by those who would maintain control over you through deception.

Your learned brothers from elsewhere are well equipped to handle the planetary transformation and integration which is rapidly picking up speed. They will be giving much more guidance on how best to overcome the many fears and superstitious beliefs that the masses now hold onto as truth, which must be confronted and cleansed.

Fundamentally this situation is no different than when you ones volunteer to participate in, say, a Peace Corps mission to assist a primitive, usually isolated, group of people in some remote corner of your own planet. Many fears and superstitions must be confronted and replaced with truth—whether about basic health and body hygiene or how your airplane and radio work.

You of Ground Crew will need these very lessons offered here in CONTACT so that ones will recognize that this awakening has been coming for some time, and that there is truly nothing to fear and only greater understanding and growth to be gained.

These will be challenging times for you ones to face! You will witness many stories that will try to convince you-the-people that the "alien invaders" mean to do you harm. These stories will only serve to expose the true criminals for who they are. Mainstream religious leaders and politicians will be the greatest offenders and will effort greatly to hold onto their control over you-the-masses.

As the time of truth (in terms of sequential events) draws ever nearer, there will be greater and greater efforts made to persuade the masses that these so-called "invaders" mean to destroy you-the-people of the Earth. Some of the events planned by your elite controllers will appear so real in presentation, due to their technological sophistication (by public knowledge standards), that many will fall victim to the lies engineered by such vivid stagings.

There are likely to be MILLIONS of people sacrificed by your "united one-world government" in order to convince those remaining that the deception is the truth. There will be a call to defend your planet from these "evil invaders".

At the same time, however, there will be overwhelming evidence which will show that these higher evolved beings mean you NO HARM. For instance, ones will be rescued from annihilation (as disasters from both natural and man-made sources become more violent and widespread) and ones will testify to the facts of what happened.

Also, ones among your "elite" scientific communities will finally step forward and testify to the fact that great assistance has been given by your elder brothers from elsewhere in the cosmos, over the past 50+ years, in shutting down secret experiments that, due to ignorance, got out of control and would have otherwise destroyed your planet.

Moreover, the electronic "mind-numbing" devices will be deactivated and ones will begin to come out of the "fog" of mental manipulation. From this will come a clearer ability to perceive the reality of your situation.

There will be great speakers and community leaders stepping forward to speak out and quell the fears of the masses. There will be great need for ones to vent their confusions and confront the fact that they had bought into great lies without much (if any) questioning. Ones will be seeking to understand what is really real and what is truly their place in the "grander" scheme of life. The barbaric, fear-based religions will fall, as ones realize that they have been manipulated and "sold" lies in order to insure their obedience.

Truth will be known in all aspects of social, scientific, and spiritual arenas of concern. The Truth will be your path to liberation—both as an individual and as a planetary society.

You will find that your elder brothers believe very much in the existence of God and, furthermore, that they FULLY integrate spiritual ethics into ALL of their scientific and social research and subsequent developments. This results in a much more perfectly balanced and responsible societal structure than you on Earth presently experience or can even imagine.

Your world will eventually realize that these more advanced ones have eradicated the primal ego concerns to hoard knowledge (power, control, etc.) and have thus achieved true abundance and absolute knowledge. The Law of Giving is a way of life for these ones. Sharing their gifts only helps them to explore and experience more of the infinite variations of Life, and thus more fully appreciate the perfection of both Creator and The Creation.

These are truly wondrous times in which to be alive! But perhaps, more importantly, these are wondrous times in which to survive.

We of the Hosts have been sent to help prepare you ones who will hear the call so that you can best prepare selves both mentally and physically for the chaos that is coming. This is to say that, for instance, if you are still living in areas we have warned are quite unsafe, and you insist upon your way, we shall honor your choice.

But, be aware that if you transition out of the physical, you will have to watch as a spectator instead of as a player. We only can offer our advice and reasoning; you must choose to accept or reject, as you will.

Our hope is that you will learn to trust your own Inner Guidance, and thus create the conditions for your own survival and subsequent growth. We are here to assist you in maximizing your growth potential. You can help us to help YOU by efforting to recognize your own Inner Connection and Potential. This has been THE important theme of so many of our lessons so far, as presented in these pages of CONTACT over the past several years.

You live in perhaps the most unique time that your planet will ever experience—COMING OUT OF IGNORANCE (DARKNESS) AND INTO KNOWLEDGE (LIGHT). Would it not be wise to take full advantage of this exquisite learning environment?!

I am Sanat Kumara, an elder (more learned) aspect of Creator's infinite potential. I am what you are and will become. I am your future and I have walked the path that you are now on. Go within and find these finer aspects of YOUR being, and you will recognize the Truth I speak.

In the Light of Creator Source, ADONAI.

Mexico's Burning Due To Chase Manhattan Bank

Diligent CONTACT readers have, for many years, read about the elite banksters (banking gangsters) and how they procured (polite term for stole) Mexico's natural resources. We are even reprinting the superb Pat Oliphant cartoon from 8/23/82 which brilliantly captured the money-trap events of the time from the point of view of Mexico's poor working people. We are also, by the way, sharing an El Nino-Greenspan cartoon here, since (par for the season) El Nino has been implicated in causing this event by blathering media stooges. Busy El Nino! Greenspan is closer to the truth—at least symbolically.

Anyway, while smoke continues to blanket much of the southern United States, read what Calvin has discovered about a little-known 1995 memo from Chase Manhattan Bank. For those of you who could smell the collusion of the dark elite in this "Mexico is burning" matter from miles away, this memo is an interesting little connecting link that rings so true it may make you want to throw-up in disgust.

But—who are we mere "useless eaters" to dare to get in the way of something the elite controllers want to possess? The answer to that major challenge has yet to be resolved.

Meanwhile, we sincerely thank the "relay team" of Calvin Burgin and Dr. Al Overholt for providing and delivering this most timely information to share with us all.

—Dr. Edwin M. Young, Editor-In-Chief

5/22/98 CALVIN BURGIN

We have had severe haze for over a couple weeks here in Texas, creating health problems for many. The media says it is from fires caused by drought conditions in Central America and Southern Mexico, especially in Chiapas and the areas of the Zapatistas and Indians.

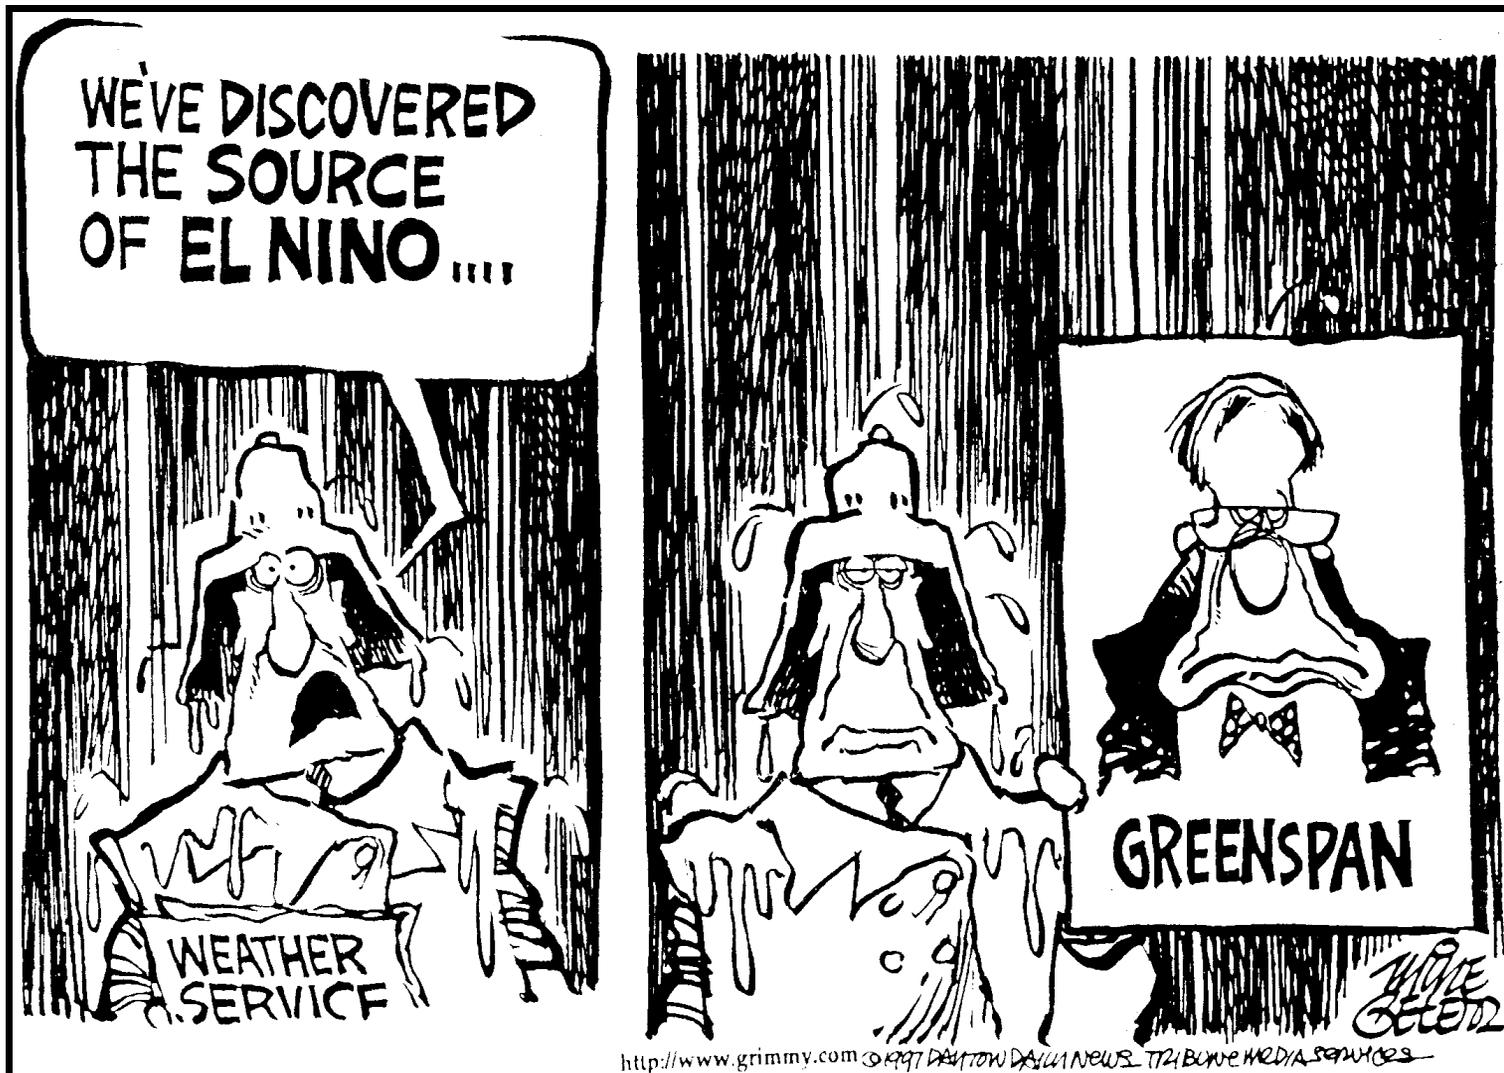

Droughts happen, but this severe haze has never happened before, so I suspected that there was something unusual that was not being told and decided to take a closer look.

I find that on Jan. 13, 1995, Chase Manhattan Bank's Emerging Markets Group wrote in a memo: "While Chiapas, in our opinion, does not pose a fundamental threat to Mexican political stability, it is perceived to be so by many in the investment community. The government will need to eliminate the Zapatistas to demonstrate their effective control of the national territory and of security policy." [emphasis mine]

The Mexican government is heavily mortgaged to Chase Manhattan. After the newly elected Zedillo government came to power, in February 1995 it launched an offensive against the Zapatistas and the EZLN (Zapatista Army of National Liberation) communities to "eliminate the Zapatistas" as ordered by the banks. They brought-in over 70,000 troops and security forces into Chiapas, and began financing and organizing terrorist organizations to burn the homes and loot the crops of the Indigenous locals.

Chiapas is one of the poorest Mexican states, but it is the richest in undeveloped resources. It contains 81 percent of Mexico's crude oil reserves. The International Monetary Fund is very interested in this, as 78 percent of the oil Mexico produces goes to repay loans to the banks.

Since 1966 over 200 foreigners have been expelled from Mexico for "meddling" in the region. According to the La Jornada newspaper, the government terrorist groups have killed over 800 people. On Dec. 22, for instance, 45 unarmed Tzotzil Indians were massacred. Over 22,000 Indigenous people have been run off their land into mountain hideaway refugee camps.

On May 19th, Don and Marcia Steelman posted a message on the Internet which is called "Chiapas Is Burning". They stated: "The fires that now burn in an almost ruler-straight line from the Oaxaca border to Chiopancingo, on the border with Guatemala tell the story." Watchers have noticed that the fires spread by marching in a straight line, and they do so against prevailing wind. The fires concentrated on the homes, fields, and hideouts of the Indians, and then later spread into massive holocausts.

Others have tried to get access to find out more of the story, but are refused. On May 11, 40 Italians who had tried to look into the situation were expelled by the Mexican government.

Texas and others in the United States offered to help stop the fires, but were refused permission until it became too late. The homes, fields, and forests are already burned.

What must the poor peasants think?

Editor's note: The following is the more detailed, background report from which Calvin wrote the above report. We share it for those of you who are curious about what all is going on down there.

EYEWITNESS REPORT FROM CHIAPAS, MEXICO

From the INTERNET, The Workers World News Service, 5/21/98: [quoting]

By Bill Hackwell, Chiapas, Mexico

[Hackwell is a photo-journalist who participated in an emergency Pastors for Peace caravan from the United States to Chiapas, Mexico, in early May. The delegation delivered 32 tons of humanitarian aid to eight Indigenous communities and the San Carlos Hospital in Altamirano.]

It has been over two years since the Mexican government and the Zapatista Army of National Liberation (EZLN) signed the San Andreas accords. These accords officially recognized the right of Indigenous communities to choose their own leaders and control the natural resources in their territories.

Members of the Pastors for Peace caravan that visited Chiapas in May could see immediately that the Mexican government is not respecting this agreement. Instead of moving towards peace, Chiapas is a war zone. It reminds me of how Vietnam looked when I photographed the war there 30 years ago.

Just to get to the Chiapas border, the emergency caravan had to go through 15 military checkpoints inside Mexico. Once in Chiapas, we saw many Mexican Army convoys and military bases using U.S.-supplied hardware, ranging from Humvees and assault helicopters to army uniforms and everything in between.

Mexico and Colombia are the main recipients of U.S. military aid in Latin America. Over one-third of all officers being trained at Fort Benning School of the Americas are now from the Mexican Army.

The "low-intensity, counter-insurgency" war being carried out against the Indigenous population here is made in the U.S.

U.S. military sales to Mexico rose from $4.8 million in 1996 to $28 million in 1997. Since President Ernesto Zedillo took office in December 1994, spending on the military has doubled. The cost rests on the backs of the Mexican workers.

AUTONOMOUS COMMUNITIES

Despite this growing military presence, autonomous communities that have broken away from control by the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party (PRI) continue to survive. Of 110 municipalities in Chiapas, 38 have declared themselves autonomous communities. This is defined by setting up a ruling council unconnected to the PRI and refusing help from the government.

The caravan visited eight autonomous communities. Near each one there was a big Mexican Army presence. This included checkpoints, army encampments complete with assault vehicles, and active patrols in full combat gear.

Indigenous community leaders told us that they are on red alert because of increased activity by the Army and other state and federal security forces. The heightened tension throughout Chiapas has halted all development projects and disrupted agricultural activity. Basic food crops like corn and beans were not planted this spring in many communities because of fear that the crops would be burned or people attacked in the fields.

In the EZLN highland center of Oventic,

(Editor's note: Here's a Pat Oliphant cartoon from the early '80s when the Banksters were bringing Mexico under control.)

August 23, 1982

Comandante Moises inventoried antibiotics and other medicines brought by the caravan. He stood in front of a community medical clinic adorned with murals of Mexican revolutionary hero Emiliano Zapata, Che Guevara and masked Indigenous women.

At a public amphitheater nearby, large poles with pointed ends stick out of the ground. Moises explained they are to prevent military helicopters from landing.

"There are Army night patrols that come into the center," he said, "and we are constantly harassed by the helicopters that fly very low. The army will not do this while you are here, or as long as the international observers stay."

IMPORTANCE OF INTERNATIONAL OBSERVERS

The solidarity of international observers has become essential in the defense of the autonomous communities. Acteal is the village where 45 unarmed men, women and children were brutally massacred in December. A sign there reads: "Welcome to national and international companeros. We do not accept people from the government."

While the EZLN and its supporters encourage the observers, the Zedillo government is on the attack against [the observers]. The Mexican government is waging a war of genocide and does not want eyewitnesses to tell the world about it.

Since 1996, some 200 foreigners have been expelled from Mexico for "meddling in the country's internal affairs". The number of international observers today may be as few as 45.

Mexican immigration officials told the newspaper Reforma that agents were searching for 40 foreigners in Chiapas who are acting as human rights observers "without the correct visas".

The "correct" way is to register with the government and get an FM3 visa, which specifies where you can go and what you can do. But observers applying for an FM3 are usually turned down. Most people come to Mexico on a tourist visa. That has now become a pretext for expulsion.

At most military checkpoints we encountered immigration agents as well as Judicial Police. In April the newspaper Novedades actually published a list, complete with visa numbers, of 47 foreigners acting as human-rights observers.

THE REAL MEDDLING

While Zedillo attacks foreigners sympathetic to the Indigenous people of Chiapas, the real interventionists in Mexico are the International Monetary Fund and U.S. corporations.

Since the North American Free Trade Agreement took effect in January 1994, the Mexican government's debt has reached $170 billion. That has set off a fire sale of national industries once protected by the Mexican Constitution.

U.S. companies are poised to buy all 57 airports in Mexico, as well as essential railroad and telecommunication lines. The national oil company, Pemex, remains nationalized, but 78 percent of the oil it produces goes to the U.S. to pay loan interest.

While Chiapas is the poorest state in Mexico, it is the richest in untapped resources. It contains 81 percent of Mexico's crude oil reserves. U.S. corporations see the Zapatista movement as an obstacle to the exploitation of this area.

On Jan. 13, 1995, Chase Manhattan Bank's Emerging Markets Group wrote in a memo: "While Chiapas, in our opinion, does not pose a fundamental threat to Mexican political stability, it is perceived to be so by many in the investment community. The government will need to eliminate the Zapatistas to demonstrate their effective control of the national territory and of security policy [emphasis mine]."

LOW-INTENSITY WARFARE AND PARAMILITARY GROUPS

Right after the release of this Chase Manhattan memo, the newly elected Zedillo government took its cue from the U.S. financial institutions to which it is mortgaged. In February 1995 it launched a two-part offensive against the Zapatistas and the EZLN communities.

Today over 70,000 armed troops and security forces are stationed in Chiapas. Most are camped in the eastern part near the Lacandon forest, where the Zapatista army is strongest. The intent is to cut off and isolate the EZLN from the autonomous communities in the center of the state.

The other significant part of the government offensive is the growth of paramilitary groups armed and financed by the PRI. These groups are terrorist organizations similar to the Ku Klux Klan in the United States.

According to La Jornada newspaper, since 1996 these groups have killed over 800 people. They have conducted a campaign of burning homes and looting Indigenous crops.

The Dec. 22 Acteal massacre of 45 unarmed Tzotzil Indians was carried out by one of these groups, armed with Army-issued assault rifles. An elite Army unit had been seen with the paramilitaries the day before the massacre.

According to Enlace Civil, the civilian link to the EZLN in San Cristobal de las Casas, over 22,000 Indigenous people have been displaced and are living in the mountains or in refugee camps as a direct result of paramilitary terror sanctioned by the Mexican government.

WOMEN ON THE FRONT LINES

As our caravan neared the autonomous village of Polho, we saw rows of women, their faces covered, guarding the entrance. U.S. military-issued Humvees patrolled the main road.

Yet the women were not intimidated. They have been conducting a heroic front-line defense of many of these communities. Here, and in the neighboring village of Xoyep [spell??], women with babies on their backs have repeatedly repulsed Army patrols trying to enter.

Their determined faces reflect a struggle that predates the Zapatista uprising by 500 years.

The flashpoint of the struggle recently shifted to a small, isolated community in the eastern canyons of Chiapas, Taniperlas.

The town had declared itself autonomous on April 10. Immediately, Mexican Army troops along with Judicial and Public Security Police invaded the newly independent community. Twelve international observers were arrested and deported. Six Mexican nationalists were imprisoned. Hundreds of military troops continue to occupy the community.

Some 140 male EZLN supporters fled to the surrounding mountains while women and children remain under house arrest.

The emergency caravan decided on April 24 to attempt to deliver food and messages of peace to the people of Taniperlas. After driving 75 miles from Ocosingo on a small dirt road, we delivered seven tons of rice, beans, corn, sugar and salt to the displaced men in the highlands.

It was carried on the backs of mules, EZLN supporters and the caravanistas. As the sun began to go down, the aid was safely carried away from the heavily patrolled road to Taniperlas. When asked how they would get the food into the occupied town, the men smiled and said, "We have our ways."

PARAMILITARIES HARASS CARAVAN

The next morning the caravan proceeded to the town. The Rev. Lucius Walker informed public security agents and PRI sympathizers that the caravan was there on a pastoral visit. It was at this point that paramilitary members allied with the PRI appeared. Many had clubs.

Unfazed, members of the caravan joined in a prayer for peace and then proceeded to leave. Frustrated at the success of the caravan's mission, the PRI sympathizers tried to block the road and threw a rock, breaking one of the vehicle's windows.

This incident got international media attention—not the occupation by the military. The reports made it sound as though the people were hostile to the caravan.

The solidarity movement worldwide needs to continue to expose the U.S. government's role in the Mexican ruling class' war of extermination against the Indigenous population. The war in Chiapas has slipped from the headlines, but this should not be taken as a sign that the struggle is over.

In many respects the situation is more grave. More confrontations are sure to come. The popular movement in Mexico not only welcomes international observers, but says they are urgently needed to expose the insidious warfare being conducted against them.

Editor's note: On May 11, the Mexican government deported 40 Italians who had come to Chiapas as human-rights supporters.

Note from Dr. Al: With stories like this we have to be very discerning and most of all ask for guidance from above while reading.

The Chase Manhattan Bank's investors are worried, so they give orders to kill off an Indigenous population!!

This story makes more logic than most other stories about what is going on there—knowing, as we do, the tricks of the the elite land-stealers.

This also gives an answer for the fires—the burning of their food crops and in general burning out the people of Chiapas and destroying their ability to exist on their lands. The burnt land doesn't destroy the natural resources of minerals and oil—it enhances their access because the lands are cleared of jungles and people.

This is genocide. May God help us all.

NEWS DESK SPECIAL REPORT

Signs Of Alarm For Coming Earth Changes

5/23/98 DR. AL OVERHOLT

GEOPHYSICAL WARNING

Part of a letter to three business friends
on the topic of solar flares and threat to the Earth!

From NATIONAL INSTITUTE FOR
INVENTORS, P.O. Box 1465, Seneca, SC 29679
USA, 2/9/98: [quoting]

Stan Deyo had been a cadet at the U.S. Air Force Academy and later an officer in the U.S. Air Force. He later moved to Australia and is known by some Americans as the author—years ago—of the book The Cosmic Conspiracy which is a very scientific type book. In January 1998, Stan Deyo called an American family from Australia. Scientific reports there show that the Sun has become very unstable and that it is sending out large solar flares mostly at this time on the opposite side from Earth, but that could change. Something is very wrong with the Sun and the U.S. Government is not admitting the truth to the American people. Solar flares of this intensity are not supposed to be occurring at this early stage in the 11-year cycle of solar flares we are in. It appears that the surface of the Sun has become very unstable. This may be what the federal scientists had foreseen from their computer data supplied for the top-secret federal report "Noah's Ark II". And when six planets align in 2002 A.D., all the super giant solar flares will then be drawn towards the Earth and maybe 90% of all the human race, maybe then even 100% of the entire human race on Earth will lose their immune systems due to the solar flares.

The Sun newspaper in their Feb. 17, 1998 issue has as the headline on their front cover, "URGENT! World scientists' grim warning ... Deadliest Weather in 200 Years. Here's The Proof: Solar explosion fallout from the Sun. Bizarre heatwaves sweeping Europe. Monster typhoons devastate Asia. Meltdowns of North & South Poles." Parts of this article that are hard to falsify as data include violent solar storms blast a billion tons of the Sun's mass into space at speeds of 1,250 miles a second. The solar storms are being detected with more and more frequency by batteries of international satellites which are an early warning system for Earth. The Sun is not supposed to be this violent at this time! The surface of the Sun is for some reason much more unstable than usual for the 11-year solar flare cycles.

[Not part of the letter:] Article in newspaper March 11, 1998. Congress, due to their working schedule, only had 18 working days left before Congress knocked off for good on Oct. 9, 1998!

$133,600 is not a bad annual salary for the part-timers we elect to the House and Senate! But they don't have the time to learn about solar flares in 2002 A.D. or the new super bug diseases such as versions of TB and bubonic plague which are now totally resistant to treatment by antibiotics! As quiet medical studies indicate, the new super bug diseases resistant to all antibiotics could potentially wipe out the entire human race if they seriously break loose as epidemics in society.

But mentioning solar flares, April 28, 1998, TV news item: solar tornados just discovered on Sun larger than Earth and with speeds of 300,000 miles per hour! Science doesn't know what this means!

Subject: CMEs and FEMA news
4 May 1998

Dear Building Community Family,

It appears we should have heeded instinct and written last week based on today's 7.3 quake in Taiwan. We've been seeing a massive heating in these areas on the OTIS [ocean temperature] thermal anomaly maps that we monitor daily. Two weeks ago, Stan targeted this exact area on his Shaker map as well as announcing it on the Art Bell Show being ripe for quake activity. That Shaker map is still available on our website. Stan sat across the desk shaking his head at the heat build up, so we were not surprised at the resulting seismic activity.

This afternoon, we received a phone call from Charlie McFarland in Klamath Falls, Oregon, whom we have quoted previously on quake warnings. As a refresher, Charlie is a stringer (independent video news reporter) for Channel 10 outside Seattle, WA. Today, Channel 10 notified Charlie to "take your video equipment everywhere you go" as they are expecting serious EQ activity. Due to the volcanic region in which he lives, Klamath Falls is a known precursor area for the Juan de Fuca plate and the fault lines leading north into Washington,

A couple other things are transpiring that we'd like to touch on.

For those who missed last week's announcement, this fall's Leonid showers occurring between November 12 and 15th are expected to be the worst in 33 years. Air Force Space Command anticipates losing 20% of our GPS [Global Positioning Satellites] as a result of these showers. This possible loss could have both airline navigation and military implications.

The CMEs (Coronal Mass Ejections) seen in the last 3 days have been mighty! CMEs are a few steps beyond the severity of Sun spots and solar flares. CMEs are actual solar material thrown off the Sun. The one that Stan and I looked at last night showed the ejecta reaching a distance 7 times greater than the diameter of the Sun itself in the initial burst. Shortly thereafter, it broke loose in all directions moving at 1200 km/second or 2.7 million miles per hour. This is huge and fast! Accelerated protons from these ejections reach Earth within 3 or 4 hours in some cases. This type activity at its worst can zap chips in any electronic equipment.

The magnetic solar wind storms from these last two massive CMEs on May 1-2 can be expected to reach us during May 4-6. If there is an ultraviolet burst, DO NOT look at it directly. It has the potential to blind. If you must be outside, wear sunglasses and keep your skin covered as much as possible.

You are wondering if this activity is unusual? For Art Bell listeners, you'll recall months ago, Stan reported the Sun's increasingly unstable behavior. So far in the first 4 months of 1998, we have seen greater solar instability and activity than for all of 1997 and expect this pattern to continue.

As a result, we foresee El Nino continuing to build rather than slack off as NOAA [National Oceanic & Atmospheric Administration] models are predicting [emphasis mine]. We feel global warming is a direct result of the Sun's misbehavior even more than the greenhouse effect. Weather will remain unpredictable and increasingly violent.

A newsletter from FEMA [Federal Emergency Management Agency] on April 27th further underscores our on-going problems. Let me restate a comment relating to their El Nino warning of October 14, 1997 in which FEMA warned people publicly that we must take emergency preparedness into our own hands and quit relying on government to bail us out. (These two articles are still posted on our website at <http://www.iinet.net.au/~standayo/News_Files/Positive_Attitudes/FEMA_Dir_Announces.html> and <http://www.iinet.net.au/~standayo/News_Files/Positive_Attitudes/Gore_FEMA_El_Nino.html>

FEMA only has so many $$ and so much power which is not enough to cover all disasters. Last week's newsletter from FEMA can be read in its entirety under Special News on our website tomorrow and I did already post it on the ARK list. Again I promise you, if FEMA hints at a problem, you can bet your booties we already have it. If FEMA says we have disasters on the way, you can bet those same booties, they anticipate mighty happenings. To quote James L. Witt, FEMA director, this last week, "Communities across this country need to be prepared for disasters that we know are coming". They are so certain of this that 7 states are being targeted for disaster planning against flooding.

"The designation is part of Project Impact: Building a Disaster-Resistant Community, a national effort that aims to change the way America deals with disasters by encouraging communities to come together to assess their vulnerabilities to natural hazards and implement strategies to limit damage before disasters occur."

There are 7 communities under Project Impact: Alleghany County, Maryland; Deerfield Beach, Fla.; Oakland, Calif.; Pascagoula, Miss.; Seattle, Wash.; Tucker and Randolph counties, W. Va.; and Wilmington/New Hanover County, N.C. If these places don't ring a geographical bell with you, dig out your atlases. Five of the seven target impact areas are coastal. Just chance? Possibly, but doubtful.

Along with today's 7.3 earthquake, a 7' tsunami alert is in place for the West Coast. Even though the above-mentioned 7 Project Impact scenario is for floodplains, don't you find it a little curious that 70% of these target areas are coastal?

Stan and I have been advising everyone to be at least 200 miles inland from all coastal areas.

FEMA can only say so much openly and it is up to us “unofficial” sources to spill the worms. Consider them spilt. The government, once again, just like they warned everyone openly last fall about the severity of El Nino, are warning people now, especially those on the bordering bodies of water to CYA.

With affection, Holly and Stan—in interesting times...

SOME ADDITIONAL NOTES

From NATIONAL INSTITUTE FOR INVENTORS, 5/3/98: [quoting]

Van Nostrand's Scientific Encyclopedia, Fifth Edition, page 694, Cosmic Rays: Cosmic rays hitting the Earth's atmosphere are mainly composed of particles of protons. During the occurrence of solar flares, the Sun emits huge amounts of protons which can increase as much as 50 times the intensity of the normal values of cosmic rays reaching Earth at sea level! This increase in intensity of cosmic rays hitting the surface of the Earth (and mass penetrating the bodies of human beings) is normally periodic and associated with the 11-year solar sunspot cycle. Not in their reference, but if the super sunspot activity is too strong and lasts too long, this poses a deadly peril to the immune health system of all humans on Earth! Also, while a solar tornado has been seen before with the prominences of the Sun, apparently to see solar tornados separate from a prominence big or bigger than the Earth with winds of 300,000 miles per hour and moving on the surface of the Sun is something new according to a TV news report of April 28, 1998! This would likely indicate extreme instability in the magnetic surface of the Sun when it is supposed to be more stable and the potential for the biggest solar flares by maybe 2002 A.D. ever seen by mankind! This could create such a massive release of proton bombardments of the Earth as could maybe wipe out the immunity against diseases of all mankind, except for those possessing a “balanced metabolism” which is a different form of immune system in nature, which has been observed by some researchers with some of the most powerful microscopes in the world! It appears they only would not be affected by massive proton bombardments! They alone might live!

And if Congress has not cared enough about American agriculture to lift a finger in 2 years to save our remaining honeybees from being killed off when two safe substances exist which can save the final honeybees, they also are not going to lift a finger to save the public from any extreme solar flare threat! And if we lose all the honeybees, we run the risk of possible national famine and loss of maybe 150-200 important crops raised by America now! [End quoting]

Sorry to say, but it appears moreso everyday that we waited too long to change our ways and we will suffer the consequences. But let's try to ameliorate them as much as we can. Let's work hard toward that end.

WHAT WE CAN DO

* Put up 1 or 2 year's supply of food.

Learn about solar flare activity and when it will bombard the Earth.

Find others to share the truth with and stand

* Stay calm and rational.

During the two-year period when solar flare activity will be at its peak, the bombardment of proton waves will not be constant. Scientists will be able to calculate how long it will take the waves to reach the Earth, and people will be able to take cover during the highest risk time. Solar flare activity can be heard as static on the radio when it bombards the Earth. It may be possible to invent metering devices and alarms that would warn people when the dangerous waves are hitting the Earth. With a little bit of planning, people will be able to survive comfortably through this cosmic disaster. The daytime hours will be the time to be most concerned about, and then only during a bombardment time.

Scientists have no way of knowing the frequency of the solar flares or how long they will last. They could last from hours to several days, and only occur once every few weeks.

When the dangerous solar flares hit, people won't feel a thing.

Life will go on normally around the world. It will take months before people begin getting sick from their weakened immune systems. It will appear to be just an outbreak of disease—a plague. But the numbers will increase so dramatically that hospitals will overflow and society will be strained to the breaking point. Riots may break out by those who feel they have nothing to lose. Bands of thieves may be the greatest threat to those who have made preparations to survive through the disaster. Martial law would be imposed to control the mobs and curfews imposed. This may be the chaotic event big enough to implement the New World Order, described by David Rockefeller.

This is a survivable disaster. The key is Common sense preparedness.

The enemy has many options they will exercise in trying to form a One World Government. They may cause an economic collapse, start more wars or fabricate germ warfare. But whatever they do in the next few years, there is always one choice ones can make that is best. And that is to stay independent and as self-sufficient as possible.

With the information that has been revealed, we now have our work cut out for us. We need to roll up our sleeves and get to work preparing for the future. There is no such thing as the End of the World—there is always a tomorrow. We have a future to secure for ourselves, our children, our family and our friends. Our job is the same as it has always been—defend America, defend the Constitution, and create God's Kingdom on Earth. —George Eaton [End quoting]

ROW ERUPTS OVER RISKS IN VESUVIUS

Experts fear a massive eruption of Mt. Vesuvius is due.

Robert Matthews reports on the dilemma between preparation and risk.

From THE WEST AUSTRALIAN, 4/15/98: [quoting]

Visitors to Naples are told how Mt. Vesuvius erupted in 79 AD, killing thousands in Herculaneum and Pompeii and that it has slept quietly since 1944.

What the guides omit to say is that the spectacular volcano rising to 1230m to the city's south has been quietly filling with molten rock for 50 years and experts believe it is close to a colossal eruption capable of killing tens of thousands of people in minutes.

Volcanologists probing the area with electric currents have found a huge rock plug jammed in the 30m conduit of the volcano, like a stopper in a champagne bottle.

Many believe that when this “cork” goes pop it will release a soaring cloud of superheated ash and poisonous gas known as a pyroclastic flow, like that described by Pliny the Younger in his account of the killer flow from Vesuvius 1900 years ago as: a dark and horrible cloud . . . coming up behind us as we were fleeing, spreading over the earth like a flood.” But it took the explosion of Mt. St. Helens in Washington State of the United States in 1980 to show the accuracy of Pliny's report.

Computer simulations of Mt. Vesuvius present a more terrifying picture. Once the rock plug gives way, a cloud of molten rock, ash and gas will be blasted about 1.5km into the sky.

Once the heat from the initial blast subsides, the cloud will swoop down and flow along the ground at speeds upwards of 160kmh and reach the 100,000 population of Torre del Greco in less than four minutes, and the outskirts of Naples, with its three million people, five minutes later. ARIZONA SKIES FILL WITH SMOKE FROM FIRES ENGULFING MEXICO

Smoke from deadly, raging forest fires in Mexico are traveling more than 1,000 miles into Arizona, causing teary eyes and reduced visibility in Tucson, the National Weather Service said Tuesday.

“We can see that. Some of that is coming from Mexico up through the Gulf of California and then coming up into southeastern Arizona,” said Bob Berkovitz, meteorologist for the weather service in Phoenix, after scanning satellite images.

The most devastating wildfires in seven decades are raging across Mexico and Central America, gobbling millions of acres of forests and grasslands, closing international airports and pushing blankets of smoke into Texas and gritty haze as far away as Oklahoma, Wisconsin and Georgia.

Smoke from the fires has forced government officials in Mexico and Texas to declare health emergencies, and it was blamed for an airplane crash in Guatemala this weekend that killed three people.

At least 50 people have died in Mexico as a result of the fires, most of them while battling the flames.

The fires, which are burning across the region from Nicaragua north through El Salvador, Honduras, Guatemala and throughout Mexico, are threatening centuries-old Mayan ruins and have incinerated animals and rare plants in some of Mexico's most fragile areas. [End quoting]

And from the reports that Art Bell is putting on his radio program it's much worse than this indicates. There are also underground fires and several volcanos blowing off.

It's horrible—and deadly—when all this poison air is surrounding thousands of miles and no place you can go to get a “breath of fresh air”. And yes, ultimately, the elite—and those who allow the elite to lead them—are the cause of this. Before this is over they will have gained many of their depopulation goals, no doubt.

P.S. The above was written on May 20 and I received the following on May 21.

CHIAPAS IS BURNING

From the INTERNET, May 21, 1998: [quoting] The Mexican peasantry should have become accustomed to betrayal.

God knows they've experienced it enough by now. The so-called Revolutionary Institutional Party, (PRI in Spanish) promised them land, food and dignity. It gave them to the Maquiladores (foreign investors), to the owners of sweat shops, and to a harder and more adamant poverty. It promised them education; it delivered nothing but illiteracy and patronage.

It promised national independence, but, since the end of the Cardenas administration in the 1930s, it has allowed Mexico to fall more and more into the orbit of the United States and the International Banking community.

Nothing, however, could have prepared anyone for Chiapas. Tired of seeing their meager land holdings decimated, the Chiapan peasantry revolted. Did they seek international communism? Hardly. They wanted only to keep what the Mexican government had previously given them. Did they seek some sinister alliance with Castro's Cuba. Again no. They wanted only food for themselves and their hungry children.

How were those demands satisfied? The fires that now burn in an almost ruler-straight line from the Oaxaca border to Chilpancingo, on the border with Guatemala tell the story.

With an almost margarine-like smoothness, Mexican officials and apologists tell us that these terrible conflagrations resulted from "El Nino". How interesting that Nature provides such a marvelous excuse for genocide. Unfortunately, it will take more than "El Nino" to explain these fires. For, unlike forest fires anywhere else in the world, these spread on an almost geometrically straight line; they march toward Guatemala like a swarm of army ants, and they do so against prevailing wind. Can we assume that the abnormal conditions off Peru can cause such deviation from the normal that ordinary laws of physics become inoperative?

It would require the mental acumen of a flat worm to believe these stories. Oakham's razor cuts deeply here—we must except the most logical and believable theory—that these fires are not natural ones, but, in reality, are the result of the cowardice and political bankruptcy of the Mexican nation. Bolstering this hypothesis is the incredible conduct of Mexican officials. While Guatemala, the unintended recipient of Mexico's arson, forwarded requests to the United States and other governments for assistance only moments after the first column of smoke rose from its powder-dry hillsides, Mexico waited, waited and continued to wait. It was only after public health officials in the United States warned our own people of the hazardous and dangerous quality of the air in Texas—only after our elderly and disabled began to die from inhaling the smoke of Chiapas that Mexico felt it necessary to ask for assistance. Why the delay? The answer is obvious. Mexico waited until the peasantry had been sufficiently cowed, until every field on every microscopic holding had been blackened, until the forests that provided wood for fuel and herbs for medicine had been destroyed. Only then did one hear a startled voice from El Distrito Federal appealing to the good offices of the Texas National Guard. Only then, did the fat cats and sycophants that call themselves a sovereign nation think of doing something to ameliorate the plight of over one million of their citizens.

History is rotten with the perfidy of man toward man. One who reads it is disgusted by our government's infecting the Amerindian population with small pox. History has added one more stinking atrocity to its charnel house, one more exhibit to its rogues' gallery. Mexico should take pride in its achievement.

To the poor and disenfranchised peasants of Chiapas, Christ and his angels must be asleep.

There is no salvation from the pall of smoke that smothers them nor from the economic desolation that threatens them. Like the tortured souls depicted in The Revelation, their prayers for justice ascend up to heaven like the smoke of their burning lives. May the eternal sword of judgment be keen, may the arrows of divine justice fly true. May the day of reckoning come soon. It cannot come too soon for the people of Chiapas. [End quoting]

May God have mercy on all of us for not changing our course on this road to hell that we are traveling at super-sonic speed!!

Vanishing Bees

Threaten Food Supply

5/23/98 DR. AL OVERHOLT

MINT SAVES BEES

I first used this article in THE NEWS DESK, Nov. 5, 1996. But the bees are still dying off, so I thought someone might put this to use to help save them. I also added a new bee article at the end of this one.

Excerpted from Gordon-Michael Scallion's EARTH CHANGES REPORT, October 1996. Article by Cynthia Keyes, Matrix Institute, Inc., P.O. Box 336, Chesterfield, NH 03443-0336; phone 800-628-7493: [quoting]

Beekeeper Robert Noel of Cumberland, Maryland couldn't bear to just stand by as witness to the demise of his 46 bee colonies, so last year he started experimenting with remedies to eradicate the culprit mites. "I just wanted to try something," he told ECR.

Rapid spread over the last few years of two types of parasitic mites coupled with the recent harsh winter have crippled the bee population, threatening crops, especially in the North and Northeast, and caused farmers to pay dearly to rent hives for pollinating. (See News story, ECR, 8/96)

Thinking about some of the natural ingredients that bees encounter in nectar and what might be acceptable to a bee but distasteful to a blood-sucking mite, Noel was inspired to try applying cinnamon in one of his hives. He was elated to find that it succeeded in knocking the mites off his bees, but dismayed several days later to discover that, "they jumped right back on".

Noel consulted his sister, a nursing school college professor, who opened her kitchen cupboard and grabbed a bottle of wintergreen oil. She recalled one of her college professors who had extolled the powers of wintergreen. Since his bees were dying anyway, Noel went home to concoct a mixture of the wintergreen oil into a solid patty of shortening and sugar.

Much to his amazement, when he checked the tested hive several days later not only were the mites off his bees, but they were dead, by the hundreds, on the bottom of the hive. Thrilled with his discovery, Noel contacted the U.S. Government and at least 15 Universities about his natural remedy. The only respondent was West Virginia University entomologist James Amrine who was, indeed, skeptical at first but could not argue with Noel's resulting healthy, honey-producing bee colonies.

Since then, Noel and Amrine have worked together testing other effective oils such as tea tree, pennyroyal, spearmint, peppermint and patchouly and devising the best delivery system for the remedy. It appears that most mint oils will work.

Successful methods of delivering the remedies so far have included mixing the mint oils in a patty placed in the hive, on a sticky tracking strip that the bees come in contact with or in a sugar water mix that the bees drink when flowers are not making nectar. The oil eradicates varroa mites, the most deadly, by weakening them and leaving them unable to reproduce. The pesky tracheal mite gets stuck in the oil and dies because it is unable to migrate to the bee's breathing tubes.

Noel's most recent experiment is aimed at treating the top of the hive as effectively as the bottom which has the drink dispensers and sticky strips. "A friend of mine calls me the mad scientist," he said, "because I'm always trying new things."

Another friend told him he should hire a lawyer and seek a patent. This doesn't interest Noel. "Loss of bees for pollination could mean world famine," Noel warned. To be truly successful he feels it is more important to get the word out to beekeepers than to cash in on his solution.

"To that end, Noel, a high school computer teacher by day, has over 200 beekeepers listed on his data base. He offers suggestions tailored to each individual beekeeper's needs and keeps records on their applications. Noel's research and formulas are posted on the Internet at <<http://www.wvu.edu/~agexten.varroa.htm>>. An article outlining Amrine and Noel's research and formulas appeared in the Sept. issue of American Bee Journal. Information on his remedies and results can also be obtained by contacting Noel at 108 Blackiston Ave., Cumberland, Maryland 21502.

While scientists continue working on the development of mite-resistant bees, they admit that the oils, which seem preferable and more effective than the traditional chemical pesticides, are a very plausible solution.

"I think there is hope," Noel reflected, "the key is to get the word out to beekeepers because we need to save our bees and the Earth." Acknowledging that he could gain to profit from his experimentation, Noel excuses that angle, stating that the problems with our Earth have come about because of people going after the "almighty dollar". He prefers to try and "help my fellow man and help out our Earth. We need to work on that," he finished, "there's nothing more important than our environment." [End quoting]

What a blessed man God has sent to help us in our time of need. In this day and age, can you believe a man turns down (probably) millions of dollars to make it easier, and possible, for man to save himself and his fellow man from famine and to help save planet Earth from further destruction. THANK YOU,

GOD!!! I venture to say that some of Satan's boys planted these mites as part of their plan to remove MOST of the Earth's population BY THE YEAR 2000 ("the Elite PLAN 2000"). Don't forget, GOD ALSO HAS A PLAN 2000. I'll give you one guess Who wins.

THE END OF AMERICA COMING SOON?

A brief summary of the report by Martin Hunter, Director, National Institute For Inventors, P.O. Box 1465, Seneca, SC 29679—Copies, $1 Ea. Feel Free To Reprint! Copy Of Original 1997 Report Summary Taken From: $2: [quoting]

On the cover of the November, 1997 issue of Popular Science is the story "Vanishing Bees: A Threat To Our Food Supply." As stated by a researcher for the U.S. Agricultural Department: "...a diet based entirely upon wind-pollinated foods such as rice, barley, oats, sorghum, corn, and millet is pretty boring." Notice this suggested likely future diet for Americans does not list either fruits or vegetables. All the honeybees in America are now dying off due to the fast-spreading Asian bee mites. According to official sources, it looks like all the honeybees in America may soon be dead and that has to badly hurt American agriculture. The extent of this damage to the food production of America cannot be totally predicted until it happens which can be any time now as the honeybees are dying off so fast now. But 150-200 food crops will be no longer available if you allow this to happen now!

Quoting from the original larger "End of America" report by Martin Hunter, Director, National Institute For Inventors: "For over one year now, the National Institute For Inventors has contacted many federal sources in Wash., D.C. that we have a natural substance tested for three years on honeybees and once treated with this, they became immune to the Asian bee mites which are now killing off all the honeybees in America and also beginning to threaten the honeybees all over the world. Also, we know of one other source in America which also has created a successful substance which saves the honeybees from being killed off by the fast-spreading Asian bee mites. Wash., D.C. has zero interest in either answer available for America how to save our remaining honeybees in America. How strange this is when a national beekeeper publication this year stated if we don't save the remaining honeybees now, then, there is going to be worldwide famine within three years from now! Wash., D.C. is playing games!" [End quoting]

No, I don't think they're playing games—remember the depopulation plan for year 2000?? ~~☹~~

At Long Last! A Preparedness Publication You Can Trust

2/25/98 RICK MARTIN

As our long-time readers will know, we have been offering you helpful tips for overall preparedness, i.e., food storage, grains, health products and the like, for some time now. We have been keeping an eye out for years for ONE preparedness book that we could fully stand behind, and we have (at last) found it. The name of the book is called Making The Best Of Basics—Family Preparedness Handbook by James Talmage Stevens. And YES, you may now order the book directly from PHOENIX SOURCE DISTRIBUTORS (800) 800-5565. The cost for the book is $19.95 plus $3.95 for shipping and handling in the U.S. Canadian orders please add $7.67 shipping and handling for 1 book and $13.84 for 2 books. Please call for rates on 3 or more.

If you have made any efforts at food or seed storage, this book contains a wealth of useful and easy-to-access information and charts. At the end of the book is a listing, by state, of preparedness resources.

If ever there was a PRACTICAL guide to emergency preparations, this is it.

Just for the record, this is NOT a new book—just new to us. This book is now in its 10th printing, with 350,000 copies sold. It was FIRST published way back in 1974. Well, I guess it's better we found out about this one late than never and for that we are grateful.

Public Notice

Editor's note: Know, readers, that we would not normally publish the document you are about to read. It is only after the FLAK we've received from select members of the intelligence community and the global power-broker insiders that we have chosen to make this information public. The ATTACKS we are experiencing from V.K. Durham were anticipated both by us and Russell Herman. For reasons of PERSONAL SAFETY AND SECURITY, and in the interests of full disclosure, we are making this document known in the form of a Public Notice—which we are running in 4 (four) consecutive editions of CONTACT. This is the third presentation.

ASSIGNMENT OF OWNERSHIP RE: BONUS CERTIFICATE 3392-181

April 28, 1998

I, the below signed, being of sound mind and body, do hereby make the following ownership assignment of Russell Herman's portion of Bonus Certificate 3392-181 of my own free-will and in accordance with promises, terms and conditions made by me to Russell Herman orally in discussions with him.

On August 5, 1993, Russell Herman signed over to me, personally, his portion of ownership in Bonus Certificate 3392-181 (Certificate of Indebtedness of Peru), under certain terms and conditions.

Those terms and conditions consisted of the following:

1. The assignment of ownership to me by Russell Herman was to remain under strict confidential seal and was not to be used or exposed until such time as it was deemed necessary by me for public exposure.
2. The assignment by Russell Herman was to be considered an "assignment of last resort" and one which Russell felt should only be brought public when all else had failed.
3. Russell Herman required that Bonus 3392-181 be used for the betterment of mankind.
4. Russell Herman required that Bonus 3392-181 be used in conjunction and cooperation with the Native American population - foreign and domestic.
5. Russell Herman required that Bonus 3392-181 not be used for war or any war-related activity.
6. Russell Herman required that I not relinquish signatory control of the assignment, but when the time came for public exposure of his assignment, for reasons of personal safety, he asked that I agree to reassign ownership to a corporation whose stated mission and purpose were in full compliance with the terms and conditions herein stated.

In light of the publication of the August 4, 1993 assignment by Russell Herman to me appearing in the April 28, 1998 edition of CONTACT, INC., in furtherance with Russell Herman's wishes, I hereby, with clear conscience, free-will and mental clarity, assign in full, ownership of Bonus 3392-181 to Global Alliance Investment Association.

By this assignment, I DO NOT relinquish signatory control but rather maintain same as a representative of said corporation.

The aforementioned terms and conditions remain in force with Global Alliance Investment Association.

TELEPHONE HOTLINE 805-822-0202

As an adjunct to CONTACT, the Telephone Hotline keeps you as informed as possible on current events and other important information that needs to get to our subscribers before our publishing date.

The message machine will answer after 2 rings if there are any new messages for that day, and after 4 rings if not. Thus daily callers can hang up after 2 rings and save toll charges if no new message has been recorded. If the Hotline does not answer your call, then that means there is currently no Hotline message.
