Elite's Gold Tactics Won't Stop G.A.I.A.

9/26/99—#1

GOD HAS NO SECRETS,
MAN JUST PAYS NO ATTENTION

Hatonn—How many books have “we” written? How many are yet unpublished? How many hours of recorded tapes are there from us—or even me alone? It has been a very prolific period of a dozen years.

We published until there were no funds to continue, so there are some 100 volumes, perhaps more, sitting prepared for the printing; but people became interested in their own needs, and so the “word” that everyone claims to want to “get around the world” had to go on hold. I always find that excuse given by such as Ed Young and George Green to be interesting—they simply wanted “their” words to get to the four corners of the globe. Is it not ever thus?

You will, however, get a good picture of NOW and the Divine Plan if you but read the Journal called The Divine Plan. You want prophecy? It's in there. You want to know WHERE? It's in there and, no, you don't need anyone else confusing your minds with mystical clouds—because life is for experiencing. God does not keep information from you—you just don't bother to get the information.

I find you latching on to things we wrote and published anywhere up to the beginning, 12 years ago, being run past you again by some seer, and you pour over it like new information. I see things which are unfolding today that you treat as shocking uncovering, while SPOTLIGHT reported them, in detail, a decade ago.

Until you can see or hear a thing for yourself, you cannot be bothered—is the new mentality of the 30-second time slots. And in those time slots you are trained like Seaworld Seals.

GOLD

What about, for instance, GOLD in your scheme of things? You continue to spew about the “love of gold”, while you yourself are doing atrocious things to one another, while you grab, yea even take, that which is another's for yourselves and call it “God's command”.

No, friends, I do not buy your tales of woe over material gain in another, while I have to watch you literally steal from another and then lie about it. Gold just “is”. Moreover, it only has the value placed on it by the Power Elite. However, it is STILL the only commodity which can change your world in this day. Satan rules you on Planet Earth, and that is WHY he has stashed YOUR gold away from you, for without it as a standard for your exchange currency—you have no stable world. It is a commodity, which is still plentiful enough to serve the purpose and yet rare enough to have the value necessary for being a standard of measure for currencies.

It is important enough that through manipulation and outright theft, and then presenting lies about the entire holdings, you can have a world brought to its knees and totally enslaved.

The Plan of that old New World Order was to corner all the available gold, stop new production when the right levels of production were reached according to “their” estimation, in order to maintain total control, and then put the world back on a Gold Standard—and thus was created the Global Plan, the hidden wealth and the grab for all hard assets.

The people, for instance, of the U.S. were DISALLOWED BY LAW from cashing in their dollar notes for gold after the Federal Reserve took over. The paper was no longer an exchange guarantee against hard reserves. BUT FOREIGNERS COULD CASH IN THEIR PAPER FOR GOLD! It was structured deliberately so that all gold would go abroad, to Israel after 1948, in billions-of-dollar increments. So, as a currency reserve, you ended up with NOTHING. YOU END UP WITH NOTHING NOW! YOU HAVE A BUNCH, OR VERY FEW, PIECES OF WORTHLESS PAPER, PAPER WHICH IS NOTHING BUT AN IOU ON SOMETHING THAT HAD NO BASIS IN THE FIRST PLACE—OR LAST PLACE. THERE IS NOTHING TO BACK CURRENCY! There has been nothing in the U.S. to back currency since 1913, and the U.S. has basically been under Martial Law since the early 1930s when, and oh yes, this is so, the U.S. declared itself bankrupt.

Now, in the aftermath, you get nothing but Pig Poop! Even if you could read the ridiculous documents being dumped onto your senses, you wouldn't be able to figure it out—JUST KNOW THAT IT IS TOTAL ROT, TOTAL LIES, EXCEPT FOR THE ABSURD THINGS YOU SEE GIVEN AS FACT, THAT APPEAR ABSURD BUT ARE NOT. SATAN AND HIS TEAMS ARE FROM THE KINGDOM OF CONFUSION, AND YOU HAVE FOLLOWED THE PATHWAY OF DR. RUTH: “IF IT FEELS GOOD DO IT!”—WHILE YOUR WORLD FELL.

Right now the world economy is about to topple. Even those brilliant, manufactured agencies used to garner wealth and destroy nations, are offering you the most insidious garbage and, as an example, I can offer you one of the more absurd.

As you surely know, the United Kingdom (UK) (get that title carefully in mind, readers)—that is England in the REAL world and the seat of Power in still a lot of what is controlled by England and called the Commonwealth or Great Britain—is in the process of selling off gold. There is such a disturbance over the management that there are, this week, G-7 meetings, IMF meetings and you-name-it meetings, but WHERE IS ALL THE GOLD? Certainly there are GREAT SHORTAGES in reserves, in vaults, and those who have bought gold find that most often there is none around to collect.

And what is the claim today by the UK and the irritation of the IMF?

Here is a good example sent for our attention, and it is too good to fail to use for a lesson in economics—and see how long YOU could get away with this payola game. Only the slave-masters can get away clean with this subterfuge and quintuple-speak. But worse, note the prices offered as fact.

[QUOTING, emphasis added, from THE TIMES—LONDON, 9/20/99:]

UK GOLD SELL-OFF TARNISHED BY IMF

By Paul Armstrong

GORDON BROWN, the Chancellor, will be obliged to back an embarrassing compromise deal at the International Monetary Fund (IMF), after the US Senate spurned his plan to sell IMF gold.

The new proposals come as the gold market waits nervously for tomorrow's UK Treasury gold auction. The second planned bimonthly sale of 25 tonnes [880,000 ounces, worth $224,400,000] is part of a programme to ditch most of the UK gold reserve.

IMF officials have now drawn up plans that effectively revalue its gold stock, avoiding any necessity to sell it. The change will leave the UK as the main enemy of developing countries that mine the precious metal.

Their lobbying succeeded because the IMF sale was meant to provide a fund to defray debt of the poorest countries but had a worse effect on many of their export earnings.

The new proposals will enable the IMF to use its gold reserves to relieve Third World debt without flooding the depressed market for the metal. As a result, much more aid might be financed. [H: Anyone already barfing? No? Well you will within, surely, the next three paragraphs.]

Finance ministers will study at least two ideas before next Sunday's meeting of the IMF's Interim Committee, which Mr. Brown now chairs, in an effort to win critical support from the US Congress.

The scheme most likely to be adopted by the IMF, would see countries that are due to repay debt to the IMF—buy the gold at the market price and give it back immediately as a means of repaying the debt.

FOR POLITICAL REASONS, IMF GOLD IS VALUED AT ABOUT $45 (£27) AN OUNCE COMPARED WITH THE MARKET PRICE OF $255. SO THE SCHEME COULD GENERATE AN ACCOUNTING PROFIT FOR THE IMF OF $210 AN OUNCE. THE SURPLUS WOULD BE INVESTED AND THE INTEREST USED TO FUND DEBT RELIEF. [H: Really?]

An alternative scheme, approved by Japan, INVOLVES THE IMF SELLING SOME OF ITS GOLD TO CENTRAL BANKS, ON THE CONDITION THAT THEY COULD NOT SELL IT INTO THE MARKET. AN IMF BUYBACK GUARANTEE WOULD BE NEEDED TO AVOID THIS RISK.

The idea of selling about 300 tonnes [worth $2.7 billion, the interest on which, at 7%, yields $188 million “for debt relief”] of the IMF's gold reserves—drastically to cut Third World debt—was the brainchild of Mr. Brown. The Treasury said he remained committed to the plan but was open to alternative means of achieving the debt reduction objectives. [H: By the way, that sum of money wouldn't even start to pay a pittance of the debts of these countries.]

The Chancellor has already been blamed for the slump in the price of gold. Since the Bank of England announced that it would sell 415 tonnes, the price has tumbled from $290 an ounce, cutting the value of the world's gold reserves by 12-percent and shrinking the base for world credit. [END OF QUOTING]

Ah, but here is another cutie out of Never-Never Land: [QUOTING, emphasis added, from THE DAILY TELEGRAPH—LONDON, 9/14/99:]

CITY: ROTHSCHILD IN U-TURN ON GOLD RESERVES SALE

NM ROTHSCHILD, one of the City's oldest merchant banks, apparently made a U-turn yesterday after it attacked the Government's policy of selling more than half of Britain's gold reserves through open auctions.

Clive Turner, a Rothschild director, told the BBC's Today Programme that it would “cause far less disruption in the price” if the gold was sold through the twice-daily gold price fixing, which is run by Rothschild and provides the benchmark for the world gold price.

Mr. Turner seemed to overturn Rothschild's previous policy, which has been to support central bank auctions in principle. Last summer, Helen McCaffrey and Ric Simes, two of the bank's senior economists, wrote in a report: “What the market needs now is the announcement of an orderly and transparent strategy regarding gold disposals.”

They quoted approvingly Robert Guy, another Rothschild director, who said in a speech: “Gold auctions have the merit of being both practical and transparent. The mechanism of official gold auctions has been tested and proven.

“This is not a theoretical concept—it is one rooted in the precedent of the IMF and the US Treasury gold auctions in the late 1970s.”

However, Mr. Turner said last night that he had been “quoted out of context”. He said: “I was not questioning the openness of what the Government is doing, I was just saying the fix is a viable alternative to auctions. Selling the gold—bit by bit, on a daily basis—would cause much less price volatility than the bi-monthly auction of 25 tonnes. I was not questioning the auction method or saying they shouldn't make the sales.”

Yesterday was the 80th anniversary of the price fix, STARTED AFTER THE FIRST WORLD WAR [H: Note: Rothschild's baby.] Gordon Brown has been under fire since he announced in May that the Bank of England would sell 415 tonnes of its gold.

[END OF QUOTING]

So, can YOU now tell what is taking place? No, you cannot! You can't, because you don't know WHAT IS TAKING PLACE IN ANY TYPE OF REALITY IN ANYTHING, AND THE ELITE HAVE PLANNED IT VERY CAREFULLY TO BE EXACTLY THAT WAY.

Why would I think that there can be agreements around the globe which integrate “our” Plan? Because the way it is going, theirs is going to totally COLLAPSE on itself. The massive Elite Power Plan 2000 is in great hurt and disarray. You are dealing with brains that have controlled for so long that even the people working for the system don't have the vaguest idea of what is taking place, for they have been trained right out of any common sense, and they actually have come to believe you can build a house on air.

Facts are that you could build a house on air—but the minute you turn off the energy supply that pumps that air—wow! Wouldn't you rather have a building built on a foundation of solid rock, or gold bars, than on an air cushion?

You see, the Elite will tell you that this air foundation will cushion your building in case of Earthquake. What they don't tell you is that the power supply is usually the first thing to fail in a bad quake. And of course, I am speaking of extremes. Facts are that hydraulic systems, air “bags” and fluid (water, even) systems within a building's foundation could save the building—but corruption of inspectors, payoffs to officials, etc., stops forward positive motion.

Won't our method have corruption? Of course, that is why the delay in upstart—while the corruption-mongers get their corruption rip-offs determined.

But, we have an advantage politically: GOD IS NOT BOUND BY SOME CALENDAR DATE—THINK ABOUT IT. ONLY YOU, MANKIND, HAVE TIME CONSTRAINTS!

THOUGHT is the solution; CAREFUL THINKING! ACTION IS THAT WHICH RESULTS IN ACTION FROM ANY THOUGHT, GOOD OR BAD. Consider it.

Humbling The Oil Cartel: Water As Fuel

9/22/99—1

Hatonn—I wish to change the layout style in the paper just a bit, please.

At the opening line of a writing it might read: “Soltec—”, “Hatonn—”, “Germain—” and at the end, “dharma”.

This is because I am going to call in my higher teams now and Dharma is just going to have to do the receiving. We will welcome Joseph but we have to have totally dependable input in every instance.

There is simply not time for these people here to handle everything and the paper writing, but we will free Dharma—E.J. will have to take up the slack. We’ll work our way through this period of time. People mean well, but we have recognized this type of communication lack, after the fact, more regularly than finding ones who pick up and move forward. IT IS CALLED “LIFE”.

For you who weary of Ekkers’ continual disappointments and reports of help—only to have things go otherwise—perhaps it makes the “understand” flow more readily.

But for you in the home-team offices, please realize that Ekkers not only have the Watchers with which to contend, but also a court TRIAL (Jury) to get return of books or funds from Green—in just a few weeks. The Tuten thing is alive and biting, and the Texas thing is simmering along. This is TIME CONSUMING. So, my suggestion is that you go back into those books where Soltec wrote about quakes, etc., and let’s run whatever looks interesting to integrate with the moment.

Along with everything else, the “Watchers” are still pounding on something about arranging for a Federal Grand Jury Indictment waiting for Ekkers. It may not be so, but certainly Cort Christie of NCH used that as a reason for his actions to move (or distance) himself from association with the Institute. The corporate books of the Institute (Phoenix) have been missing, since George Green exited California with the gold he took and moved his operation to Carson City, Nevada.

The mischief-makers, in addition, are using the rundown as suggested by Jason Brent for harassment of the Ekkers—letter already published, and to further harass would be their mode of attack—they have tried it before, and there is absolutely no reason to believe “declared enemies” wouldn’t do the same again, and by Cort’s presentation there is a statement that they “turned Ekkers in...”.

WE WILL, HOWEVER, NOT JEOPARDIZE OUR PROJECTS TO REACT TO A BUNCH OF B.S. HARASSMENT, WHICH, AFTER SIX YEARS, HAS MERITED US NOTHING BUT HEADACHES, AND DELAYS AND MORE FINANCIAL OUTGO. DO WE EXPECT BETTER COURT TREATMENT NOW?

There are 110,000 books (Journals) MISSING and said destroyed. This was AFTER the Judge had ordered them to NOT BE SOLD BY GREEN, ET AL. At Green’s own pricing, that amounts to well over a million dollars. He has owed, since 1990-2, over $150,000 in loans taken from the Institute and this has been validated in a Nevada court. That requires another $150,000 interest for these years, in addition. Now, adding to that, Green took with him packages of KNOWN gold coins from David Overton, sent to the Phoenix Institute, but taken by Green and moved to Nevada and buried in Green’s back yard. He took more gold than that, but some of it was recovered because he couldn’t hide it.

We also have proof of diversion of funds, through Green, intended for the Constitutional Law Center, as worked out between Green and Gary Anderson through a Colorado bank account, while Gene Dixon was head of the Law Center and officed in the same suite as was Gary Anderson. There is PROOF of all these things and still the contempt continues. Do you ever expect true satisfaction? Do you ACTUALLY think George Green is truly going to have to pay for those books or meet that obligation on the loans? He has twice filed bankruptcy to bury the misdeeds and never even bothered to STOP selling the Journals through his “finger” corporations, through Grant Megan, Desireé and Mark Williams. Do you truly expect to COLLECT? All you can probably hope to get is some kind of a Judgement against Green, and what is that worth, in actuality?

Green is a self-described millionaire (at least 4-1/2 million $$$); he was also a founder of the Institute and has been referenced as perhaps owning the Institute. Missing corporation record books and stock ledgers sustain that possibility. He would cover that as tightly as possible because, otherwise, he is 100% responsible for any debts of said Institute. Is this yet making sense to any of you?

Green, et al., have done everything in their power to get that Institute into Receivership, so they could claim whatever they wish to claim, and Green wouldn’t have to pay his due-and-owing loans for the books, or produce the books. He also thinks he AND HIS ATTORNEYS would have access to assets, and he would get the gold he stole in the first place. This is UGLY, readers, and you have a whole new staff of WATCHERS working against YOU and helping Green, even to lying and themselves stealing—three corporations yet, and those do not mention the prior corporate books taken by Tuten, or secretly changing agents three times, clandestinely and unlawfully, to capture Shari Yount’s assets.

Well, we will think carefully about these things. Doris Ekker resigned as Secretary—or anything other than a visiting Board Member (not even listed) of the Institute—when the Board fell apart from other fraud of its President (Mr. Ence) and other impropriety, so that the brunt, again, fell to E.J. Ekker; and it will be noted that already he was not the President (Rod Ence was the President during that period of time). Nora Boyles was the Secretary. A Board of Advisers was assembled, so that all meetings could be OPEN and conducted with witnesses. This was accomplished right up to Nora Boyles’ death this year.

Now, records have been thieved right out of the files. Also, all of the legal records have been gone through by Rick Martin and Gail Irwin-Martin-Cortright, having been in Karen White’s office, adjacent to Martin’s office. How much is missing from those files? There is no way to tell as, at the end of April, Mrs. White moved out of Tehachapi, without forwarding address.

So, did dirty work abound? Indeed, for how else did the “Mouths” get all the documents they claim to have in their possession?? THEY (Rick, Gail, Ed, etc.) claimed they got them from Karen and Kathy—and some more were snatched out by Charles Neil. Nasty stuff? Yes, indeed.

Think carefully, and weigh carefully each of your positions, for there is yet to be an accounting—plan on it.

I think you will find that these cheapos are badly using even Jason Brent in their childish arrogance. His information was used, as sent to George Green. He was never contracted for services and, even if people disagree with Jason Brent—THIS IS BOTH TACKY AND MIGHT EVEN MERIT JUDGE BRENT TO RETALIATE AGAINST THESE APPARENT BLACKMAILERS AND PERSONALLY CORRUPT “WHORE-MONGERS”, AS THE SAYING MIGHT GO. THESE OBSERVATIONS ARE OBVIOUSLY BACKED UP BY MORE RECENT ACTIONS, CLAIMS AND VANDALISM—NOT TO MENTION, HARD EVIDENCE OF PHYSICAL DAMAGE INTENT TO A “HUMAN” TARGET, WHERE DEATH WAS THE INTENT. YOU DO NOT SHOOT SOMEONE OFF A MOTORCYCLE GOING OVER 70-MPH, IF YOU DON’T INTEND BODILY HARM—IT IS CALLED ATTEMPTED HOMICIDE. Neither do you turn on water—full force—INSIDE a chicken house, without intent to KILL THE CHICKENS. A little vandalism? How about laying out rifles in an open barn, calling the TV and media and then LEAVING THE BARN DOOR OPEN for any child to stumble through? Mr. Bilger was on the TV interview, as was Jan Dominick, so it had to be intentional. Mr. Bilger said he feared another Waco-type incident—??? He was the ONLY one even near that farm, so this has to be “hype”, for it was so imbecilic that even the police were annoyed by the foolishness. Two of the rifles were antiques and the rest belong to Rick Martin and/or Charles Neil.

Well, THEY are now the recognized “cult” in the area, so just about anything else they do along these lines is going to merit them a lot of headaches.

I ask that our team of business associates be very careful for safety reasons, and weigh everything carefully, so that there is no reference in any negative manner to any of our associates.

Our main thrust TODAY is how to get aid through to the cities in Taiwan—ASAP. This quake is in the Philippine dooryard, and there should be 25 ways to go to succeed with aid, BUT—the political row between China and Taiwan is in the way, as usual—and this is also WHY there was a massive quake in the first place—and so, it has been hit and strike. E.J., STAY PUT, PLEASE, AS INDEED, THERE WILL BE MORE MAJOR PROBLEMS IN GREATER SOUTHEAST ASIA. Your hotel should stand, even if it is very old. Stay right where you are. If the larger building to your vacant-lot side topples, only a bit of the top would be able to reach your side of the Gilarmi. The Tuscan should stand but would topple to Ayala, or to the street behind. It would probably stand also.

And believe me, they are NOT after YOU. Just maintain attention and caution and WATCH THE VOLCANOES. Mayon or Pinatubo should blow or shake a lot before the BIG ONE hits—but the time may well be short, so get secure the minute you feel movement! The safest place in your apartment is in the extra bath.

If you are at the mall, for instance, get out from under skylights, glass walls or doors and get to a support frame if possible—even under escalators is a good, substantial place.

There is reason to be alarmed over construction of the major high-rise buildings in the Philippines, because the corruption is so incredible—know that those buildings, under a hard shaking, will be greatly damaged structurally. It depends on the magnitude and duration of shaking.

There is no need to tremble in terror, however, because there are other places far more appropriate to pushing around than where you are located.

The circumstances in “political” Malaysia are festering and will likely be disciplined, as well as Indonesia. The nerds have been able to get the UN troops and ships into the area over East Timor, and the purpose was to arrange for the “force” to be in the area, if battle lines are drawn between China and Taiwan. Taiwan isn’t going to have much “fight” left after yesterday—for a while, anyway.

And to you who asked about the “compatriot” writings in SPECTRUM: excellent! Absolutely on point, as were most of the others prior to the “take-over”. The problem is that the Editor feels a need to interpret and edit, HIS WAY—as if GOD doesn’t know what he intends or wants to say. Ed can’t seem to see that HE is the problem, not Norey and not Kali. Rick just doesn’t fit there at all—period. Let him stick to interviews, and may they all follow David and Edgar—but I also suggest that attending “everything” offered is dangerous, for Cayce was NOT 100% CORRECT ON ANYTHING MUCH. Further, you will find that Cayce did, however, warn you that the old world was NOT going to up and die at Y2K. The recent major disasters are MAN-CAUSED in EVERY instance, even if not directly non-natural. Ascension is not going to be as predicted, either, so please get with consciousness, pay attention and you will be startled at how well we can get through this promised apocalypse prophecy.

What about Oracle and parasites? Right on, extremely and urgently important. The information is exceptionally good, and thus, it would seem that Oracle might stop spending his time “STOPPING” whatever Ekkers might be building, and attend such service unto mankind—as parasite control of the fluke variety—and allow us to get on with our mission. There is, for goodness’ sakes, a need for everyone and everything.

Carol is GIFTED but has been misled—and I’m sorry, Kali, but Ed just isn’t the high-level etheric teacher he wishes to be. He could be and perhaps shall be—but not until he can recognize other than himself. A writing from a MASTER needs no editorializing as rendered, by rewriting by a human editor. If that is necessary—then write a paper filled with Editorials, so he is responsible, and stop plugging into everyone else’s business. He seems to report that Carol was a good receiver because of his teachings—NO, SHE WAS A GOOD RECEIVER “IN SPITE” of his constant, and overwhelming, guidance and input. Her article was excellent and addresses a very important topic: All of you, in one way or another, are being drugged to death while the parasites and microbes eat you alive.

Once parasites or mutant microbes get into the brain and nervous system, it is over, unless you get rid of them—period. And, if Oracle has a better Mayan tonic for getting rid of parasites than Dr. Clark’s, or ours—please, go for it—it is an urgently needed process. IT IS TIME WE WORK TOGETHER AND STOP THE FIGHTING AND BELITTLING, BECAUSE IT IS NOT DIVIDE TIME—IT IS SHARE WHAT WE HAVE TO THE BEST OF OUR ABILITIES, TIME.

Can Dr. Ed’s ego stand criticism? No, not yet, for he still tells you he has no ego problem. So be it. However, to take another’s property, even to share, is not OK in any form whatsoever. All you need do is LOOK at the paper to see that it is a plagiarized document in every way and shape. And, as for the WATCHERS? Well, simply distancing selves—as if this is some “watchdog” group—is truly foolish in the way it is being handled by Spectrum and, specifically, Dr. Young. He KNOWS EXACTLY who is doing the stupid antics, which are now beyond “distancing” because of the ACTIONS taken by ones of that “group” of two or so. If he is not alert enough to KNOW WHAT IS TAKING PLACE, THEN HE IS CERTAINLY NOT THE PERSON TO BE GUIDING, EDITING AND TEACHING YOU THE WAY TO GOD!

AND, do we try to hide things like this writing from “them”? No, we welcome them to read all of the e-mail, and it seems a shame they have wasted so much time and energy on silly kid-games, because the journey in front of us is so wondrous. No one needs drumming-out of the corps, nor out of the house, by the so-called cleaners—can’t people simply CLEAN OUT THEIR CLOSETS? BUT IT IS TRULY IMPOSSIBLE TO DISTANCE ONE—FROM ONE’S SELF! FOOLING ONESELF IS THE SICKEST KIND OF REFUSAL TO SEE OR HEAR. You can discount me, Hatonn/Aton, and you can discount dharma, Ekkers or Maggie Thatcher—but it makes NO DIFFERENCE, unless you clean up SELF. And if you are too ashamed of SELF to identify “self”, then so be it, for perhaps you receivers should look carefully at self and realize how badly you are being had—by human, two-legged power-persons. When YOU allow ANYONE to tamper, edit, editorialize, or opionate in the middle of your writings—YOU ARE WRONG. This entire thing began from editorializing, WITHOUT KNOWLEDGE, in the middle of the Teacher’s presentations, as ASSUMED AND INTERPRETED (WRONGLY, INDEED), LONG AGO.

An Editor has pages and pages to editorialize, and an Editor (uninvolved) might well comment prior to or AFTER an article—but when the Editor has proclaimed himself to be the Alter-ego of the very Speaker, and interpreter FOR THE RECEIVER—you have a bad show, if nothing else.

By the way: EVERYBODY KNOWS THE CONNECTION OF SPECTRUM TO “THE WATCHERS” AND THE BILIOUS GAMES-PLAYERS—SO YOU LOOK EVEN MORE RIDICULOUS WHEN YOU ACT AS IF YOU CAN WRITE “FOR” GOD AND DON’T EVEN KNOW YOUR OWN TEAM IS DESTROYING YOUR CREDIBILITY AT EVERY TURN!

Why does CONTACT present continuing information and reference to our DECLARED enemies? Because we HAVE NOTHING TO HIDE, NOTHING TO COVER, AND NOBODY TOO PROUD OR SCARED TO IDENTIFY SELVES. WE WELCOME ANY REBUTTAL IN THE OPPONENTS’ PAPER, FOR PUBLIC REBUTTAL—BUT HIDE-AND-SEEK CONTINUES TO BE THE WAY OF THE GHOSTS AND GHOSTWRITERS. UNTIL YOU LEARN THE DIFFERENCE, YOU WILL HAVE THAT OLD CONFUSION, AND THAT HEARTBREAK OF WHATEVER ITCH PLAGUES YOU.

FUEL FROM WATER!

OK, chelas, bear with me a bit longer on personal matters, for I want to offer a segment from a writing out of the Philippine paper. I don’t want to editorialize on the topic, but I will point out the validity of the process of which we will share. I ask, Teri, that this gets to Bob J.

and, in addition, with this note: Please get a little, “water” “heater”—not the type that works by coil, as in a heater, but one that works through mineralization in the water, etc. I think Bob will see an amazing possibility for use with his combustion motor. ENJOY!

No, you do not need “heavy water” for this process—just water from a stream or any faucet on a “hard water” day.

These are the ways in which you start reclaiming your world, people: Clean up the money supply, and then get control regained from the oil cartel, gold cartel and diamond cartel—yep, those diamonds make the best (silicon-type) computer chips. You can upgrade your own “diamond”, by adding liquid “chips” right from OxySol. These are the FUN things, and these are the things upon which Dr. Young could make incredible contributions, without tromping through the drudgery of little, country-monthly publications. Science is his talent, not practicing psychiatry without a license—which WILL get him into more trouble than can be fathomed for, regardless of distancing—HE IS CONSIDERED THE LEADER OF THAT GROUP, AND THAT GROUP IS IDENTIFIED, FEDERALLY, AS A CULT. THAT IS A FACT, NOT A GAME.

I recognize Federico D. Pascual, of the Philippines, for sharing this information. I will offer no further input as to the “how”, what, why or when of this process, because the less you know, the more apt our own approach is to be DIFFERENT and enough different to not be impounded by such as Volvo, who is refining this inventor’s product.

[QUOTING:]

ANSWER TO OIL CARTEL: WATER-POWERED CAR!

There is a direct solution to the problem of rising costs of gasoline and other oil products used by motor vehicles.

The solution is to stop using gasoline for motor engines and thereby bring down the oil oligopoly and all the leeches clinging to it.

Incredible as it may seem, FILIPINO inventor Daniel D. Dingel, a former NASA engineer who has several fantastic money-saving inventions to his name, has a gadget that makes a motor car run on water!

Strictly speaking, the car does not run on water itself, but on the hydrogen gas extracted from plain water by his invention, a mini-reactor, attached to the car engine.

We (F.D.P.) inspected last Sunday his water-powered car, a red Toyota Corolla whose gas tank had been disconnected.

Under the hood, there is a box-like gadget the size of a car battery, covered with a clear-plastic case through which one sees water—the fuel. There is a gadget, Dingel calls it a reactor, immersed in the water.

When the ignition is on, the reactor in the box runs and the water percolates. Bubbles rise in the water and break at the surface. The water molecules (H<sub>2</sub>O) are continuously broken down into their hydrogen and oxygen components.

The hydrogen, which is lighter than oxygen, rises and goes to a pipe leading to the internal combustion chamber of the engine. The oxygen goes into a slightly smaller pipe, also leading to the combustion chamber.

In the chamber, the two gases are ignited by the usual spark plug, causing an explosion and moving the engine’s piston as in the conventional, gasoline-fed engine.

Dingel has installed in his car an auxiliary reactor, a smaller version of the first reactor, performing the same function of producing hydrogen gas. When the engine’s

RPM (revolutions per minute) reach a certain high level, he said, the auxiliary reactor works and contributes to making the engine's performance more efficient.

A gallon of water that you get for free anywhere, he says, can take you 500 kilometers. Compare that to special gasoline, costing P13.37 per liter, that can take you from six to eight kilometers to the liter only.

The prototype cost Dingel only around P1,000 to fabricate. How's that for economy?

Dingel says that his invention can use any water, although he said hard water is preferred to distilled water. Tap water with traces of chlorine will do also. In fact, if one needs water when out in the countryside, he can scoop clear water from any stream. The residue can be drained later without much trouble.

There have been earlier experiments worldwide on using water as a source of hydrogen to run combustion engines. Many of them worked, but they were not viable. Nor have they been found suitable or practical for hooking up to a regular car engine.

One surprising aspect of the Dingel reactor is that it uses only the usual 12-volt car battery to run it. In the more sophisticated processes of extracting hydrogen from water, an ultra-high temperature of about 5,400 degrees Fahrenheit is needed.

While other experiments abroad are on the high-technology level, Dingle's approaches are more basic. One is tempted to add intuitive.

His reactor has not been patented. Asked if this was because he did not trust the patent office, he recalled instead, reported cases of inventors submitting their gadgets to the patent office, leaving them for assessment and coming back days later, only to be told that a similar invention had been patented.

He is looking for somebody he can trust to help him patent his invention worldwide, without risking its being pirated at the patent office.

On the prospects of earning billions from an invention, he says he wants to use the money for paying off the country's foreign debt. He stresses that his invention is Filipino and not the product of the ingenuity of foreigners.

When asked what college degree he has, he says he completed Grade 6—in the Philippines. This is probably true, but we learned that he had been sent on special studies abroad, has trained extensively, has demonstrated his theories in foreign laboratories and has worked with the US National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Dingel has a similar invention—a marine engine that runs on seawater. Imagine motorized watercraft drawing their fuel from an endless supply of seawater!

Many foreign visitors go to his place showing interest in his inventions. Volvo, manufacturer of marine engines, heard about Dingel's invention and sent an emissary and some technical men to look at it.

Result: Volvo is paying Dingel a substantial amount monthly, on agreement that he would not give or sell his invention to any other person or entity. Volvo is reportedly refining the Dingel invention and is planning to unwrap it for the market around 2002.

The effects on the world and on civilization of a motor vehicle running on water are mind-boggling.

We told him that his invention might even cost him his life, but the 60ish Dingel just shrugged off the thought.

But seriously, why would the oil-producers in the Middle East, for instance, allow such a thing as a Dingel contraption to knock down their multibillion-dollar racket?

[H: Well, pretty soon there is going to be massive death from pollution from those gas machines. That kills everyone and not just the poor people. However, prior to that problem, there will be the masses of people without transportation in places such as Manila, Philippines, and all around the Third World Nations, where they must use old cast-off buses, jeepneys, etc. from WW-II days—pouring filth and pollution like a sticky fog on EVERYTHING. So, you wouldn't have to put the services out of service, for you could simply SWITCH FUEL SYSTEMS and go right on with the old derelicts—but at least they would stop polluting. Perhaps a focus could be turned to brake systems and general safety measures, belts, etc., rather than just keeping the junker motors running. Just a thought! There will be other, better THINGS to use petrol products for producing: plastics, fabrics, building supplies and other wondrous things, which would also save the natural resources of the globe. For instance, the expectation is that the Philippine forests will be nude in ten years! It would seem worthy to start thinking of the positive things and stop the insanity. With this method, there is not even need for solar power and there is NO POLLUTION AT ALL! You don't even have to use sunscreen to use it.]

If combustion engines—such as those in the family car and public buses—suddenly stop using gasoline and diesel and switch to good old water, that would make the Arabs' oil wells irrelevant and drag them back to tending their camels in the desert.

[H: Well, there are other wondrous things abounding through this step up. You could afford cheaper electricity, because you could power the generators with water. You could power osmosis plants for cleaning up salt water for kitchen use, and use the very seawater with increased heat potential from the residue of the desalinization system, as well. LIFE COULD BE VERY GOOD, PEOPLE, IF YOU WOULD SIMPLY SAY NO TO MORE DESTRUCTION AND DEMAND THAT WHICH IS RIGHTFULLY YOURS.]

The idea of hydrogen as an alternative fuel, even for spaceships, has sparked endless research. But much of the applied research for earthbound engines is on making pollution-free power cells, something like [running] the household on the car battery.

Dingel's invention does not store the hydrogen in a cell, but directly feeds the gas into the motor engine, much like a spray of gasoline is injected into the engine's combustion chamber in a regular car.

Read this condensation from a related report of Mark Jaffe. of The Philadelphia Inquirer:

“Take a Ford Taurus and an Apollo mooncraft, and smash them together, and just maybe you end up with the automotive holy grail—a car that zips along without polluting.

“Well, just maybe. The product is a hydrogen-powered car that uses an absolutely non-polluting fuel and an electric motor for power.

“Utilizing space technology, the hydrogen car doesn't rely on combustion. And it has hardly any moving parts.

“But wait a minute. Before running out to trade in the family gas-guzzler for a hydrogen-power roadster, know that the prototype's price tag was $180,000. Cheaper than a Maserrati, but not cheap.

“Nevertheless, a host of auto makers—including all three American manufacturers, Japanese producers Toyota and Mazda, and Germany's Daimler-Benz and BMW—are experimenting with hydrogen technology.

“It is potentially attractive,” said Brad Bates, manager of the alternative fuels program at the Ford Motor Co. ‘It is worthy of study...But I think that a hydrogen-powered personal transport, the way you or I think of it, is still decades away.’

“Hydrogen—an odorless, colorless gas—is the lightest and simplest of all the elements in the universe. A hydrogen atom has a nucleus containing a single proton that is circled by a single electron. (An atom of uranium has a nucleus with 92 protons and 146 neutrons, surrounded by 7 shells containing 92 electrons.)

“Hydrogen is also highly volatile and flammable. It has been used to power rocket engines and make devastating bombs.

“But it is not the combustible nature of hydrogen that the fuel cell harnesses. Rather, it is a basic, electrochemical reaction that scientists have understood for more than 150 years.

“Electricity can be used to split water molecules into their basic components—hydrogen and oxygen. This process of running electricity through a solution to separate materials is called electrolysis.

“In 1839, Sir William Grove demonstrated that if electrolysis was ‘run in reverse’—that is, if hydrogen and oxygen were combined to make water—the process would release electricity.

“This is what a fuel cell does. The hydrogen fuel is fed into one end of the cell, where it comes in contact with a PLATINUM plate. The platinum acts as a catalyst that helps break down hydrogen atoms into positively-charged ions and negatively-charged electrons.

“The electrons are then screened-out using a substance called an electrolyte. The ions can pass through it; the electrons cannot. All the electrons are collected and sent through a wire. That stream of electrons is electricity, which can be used to power a motor. The wire eventually is routed back to the cell, where the electrons, ions and oxygen combine to make water—the fuel cell's only waste product.

“It was not until NASA began searching for onboard power supplies for its Gemini and Apollo spacecraft that hydrogen fuel cells became a true, applied technology.

“In space travel, traditional internal combustion power is not feasible. Fuel-cell technology is efficient; the fuel is light, and there is no heat or waste gas to deal with. In fact, fuel cell technology is sometimes called ‘cold combustion.’”

[END OF QUOTING]

So, just who might be Mr. Pascual? An EDITOR, doing his proper job! So be it.

Now, E.J., I want you to think back to the topic of being unable to see anything stashed under a covering of that which contains “platinum”—Hummmnn!?? So, you HAVE plenty of the product, even if you didn't go for the far more simple “conversion” method. You can also get results if you colloidalize the metal and minerals, so that you have integrated water for fuel of whatever has the best, suitable, power production. My, my, now isn't this far more fun than chewing on one another's throats—even you WATCHERS? I do, however, suggest you keep right on “watching”, because we are going to produce a BETTER WAY, in every aspect of what is considered “living” support systems.

Thank you, Dharma, and keep your eyes and ears open, and heed “warnings”, no matter how they seem to come.

Mount Mayon Explodes, 8.1 Quake Hits Taiwan

By Doris Ekker, 9/23/99

Ekker here, briefly—well, what the heck, probably not, actually, “briefly”. Every day, in almost every way, I find our guidance both abundant and overwhelming. Yesterday, for instance, is proof enough that we can trust His warnings.

You will note that in yesterday’s aftermath of the terrible quake in Taiwan there was a warning to us personally about what to watch for and what to expect. Before we got up today we had the first PROOF! Mayon volcano BLEW. It didn’t just “erupt”, there was an “explosion” that nobody seems to understand, and the geologists say it is not an eruption but (????). Let me share the article on the front page of The Philippine Star.

[QUOTING (emphasis added) from The Philippine Star, Thursday, September 23, 1999:]

MAYON EXPLODES

LEGAZPI CITY—Mayon Volcano spewed reddish ash in a SUDDEN EXPLOSION yesterday, sending residents of nearby Albay towns into panic and forcing the evacuation of 2,000 villagers.

A SHARP BANG WAS HEARD AS THE VOLCANO SHOT A MUSHROOM-SHAPED PLUME OF ASH ABOUT SIX KILOMETERS INTO THE AIR AT ABOUT 11:45 A.M., WITNESSES SAID.

HOWEVER, THE PHILIPPINE INSTITUTE OF VOLCANOLOGY AND SEISMOLOGY (Philvolcs) WAS QUICK TO ALLAY FEARS OF AN IMMINENT FULL ERUPTION.

“This is a slight explosion, not an eruption,” Philvolcs chief, Raymundo Punogbayan, said in Manila. “We cannot say definitely if it will lead to an eruption.” [E-E: Is this some kind of insanity, or what? We have “clients” with major operations in current use and major additional plans for expansion—on the side of that volcano. It is not so very far from Manila as to be quite unnerving, if nothing more. Oh, well—.]

Punogbayan noted that there was no indication of any threat from the ash, nor were there signs of volcanic mudflows. He believes that a considerable amount of water may have come in contact with hot materials in a vent leading to the volcano’s crater, causing the steam explosion. [E-E: This is not getting any more comforting, readers; even the story is incredibly and totally NUTS! Worse, EVERYONE knows it is a cover, and as the saying goes: “OIP” (only in the Philippines). No, I think it is OOTG (only on the globe) called Earth. But it gets worse:]

“We have been expecting sudden explosions there. There is still no need to worry, but I have already instructed TEAMS IN THE FIELD TO MONITOR THE SITUATION IN THE AREA,” he explained.

Disaster officials said there were no immediate reports of deaths or injuries.

Mayon, one of the country’s most active volcanoes, has been exhibiting signs of increased activity since May, including an intermittent, faint glow and a slight increase in sulfur dioxide output from its crater.

Famous to tourists for its perfectly symmetrical cone, the 2,462-meter volcano last had a full eruption on Feb. 2, 1993, killing at least 78 people and affecting 50,000 others.

[E-E: Ok, now they are going to fix it—:]

Cedric Daep, chief of the Provincial Disaster Management Office, said all residents within seven kilometers from the volcano’s crater were being evacuated.

GAS MASKS HAVE BEEN SENT TO PEOPLE LIVING IN STO. DOMINGO AND MALILIPOT TOWNS WHERE MOST OF THE ASH FELL, he said.

Albay Gov. Al Fracise Bichara said the volcano also belched burning rocks that ignited bush-fires along a gully on Mayon’s eastern slope, far from villages.

He said at least 2,000 people were being evacuated to school shelters. The villagers could return once the volcano stabilizes, he explained...[END OF QUOTING]

Oh, well—!

And what is the biggest picture on page one? Oh, Erap Estrada (the President) dancing with his wife (last of seven) in Argentina.

At least Nero fiddled while Rome burned—Erap just does the Two-Step, or over here, the joke is the Cha-Cha. This is a joke on the push to “reform” the Constitution (called “CHArter CHAnge”).

There are some worse things (on the front page), but even I would not want confusion in anyone thinking that GCH would tell such tales.

And if we go back to the topic of earthquakes, I find it pretty distressing. The front page of the paper here, on Wednesday, read: “1,700 killed in Taiwan’s worst quake in decades”. That was yesterday, while the only reference today was that perhaps this would cause better relations between Taiwan and China. Geeze! I mean, the next breath was that “...in spite of everything, China was sending $150,000 in aid to Taiwan...” Those ocean fault-lines come right through the Philippines, and the deepest ocean trench in the world is off the Philippines. But impending doom didn’t cause Erap to head on back home like the hurricane caused Billy to run home to weep over the Americans. Is there something wrong here? Now Erap is over in the U.S., we are told, probably checking on “documents of some kind”.

We are told the IMF is in town, and everyone involved is hanging like streamers, waiting for Erap to return to meet with, ta-da, guess who!

Someone called about 20 minutes ago to say they had been to two banks, and both were awaiting approval when Erap gets back and, when asked if a meeting could be set up, they said, “Oh yes, but Mr. Estrada and the bankers will have to go to Mr. Ekker’s place, because they don’t go anywhere...”. Meanwhile, our Muslim professor was on the phone, asking E.J. about status, etc. He was back in Mindanao, and E.J. said “there isn’t anything to do but twiddle our thumbs...”. Sharif interrupted for an explanation as to how you twiddle thumbs, and I nearly choked to death in laughter, coughed up the bottom of my lungs and generally nearly drowned in my own tears pouring down my face, as E.J. explained to Sharif how you put your fingers together and twirl one thumb, or both thumbs, around each other. So, Sharif was headed off to twiddle his own thumbs and would call back.

Then you settle back and there it is:

“Close to 1,700 people were killed and 3,900 injured as the strongest earthquake in nearly a century rocked Taiwan yesterday, sparking a desperate rescue to free hundreds buried alive.

“Barely a building was left untouched in the worst-hit areas, as a quake of up to 8.1 on the Richter scale brought high-rise flats crashing to the ground in the early hours.

“The town of Puli, nearest the epicenter in central Taiwan, reported 98-percent structural damage.

“More than 1,000 after-shocks of up to 6.8 on the Richter scale were recorded in the 12 hours after the quake, officials said.”

So now it is reported that 100-percent of those buildings are destroyed, and the city will be razed.

I don’t know, friends, but it appears we are in deep yogurt, and the worst news of all is that it was reported that “...there were sharp blasts or explosions and flashes of intense light streaks BEFORE THE QUAKE!” It went on to be said that the assumption was that it was simply transformers blowing—“or something”.

And how did they handle all the dead bodies? “Peng Pai-hsien, Nantou magistrate, said corpses were left on the roadside ‘since the morgues are full’. He asked for refrigerators and body bags to be donated.” How many extra refrigerators do you have or, for that matter, body bags lying around the house? I believe this is going to get serious before it gets “over”.

The next thing glaring back from the paper was the Editorial cartoon, noting “Earthquake Run”. It runs from Colombia, to Turkey, then to Greece, and then to Taiwan and right to a building with a Filipino on top, in his straw hat, while the building shivers with the fault line at its feet and on the side it says: “RP structures”. Pete could do a good one with this without much effort, because all the places are just total rubbish heaps, while the building with the Filipino has a very distressed face and trembling feet. It isn’t worth $7.50 to send, however.

And then came the focus Editorial [QUOTING]:

A TRAGEDY IN TAIWAN

Filipinos were transfixed but not alarmed when a powerful earthquake rocked Turkey last month, leaving 15,000 people dead. Early yesterday, a stronger quake rocked Taiwan, toppling buildings and plunging many parts of the island into darkness. By afternoon yesterday, 1,100 people had been reported killed, and the death toll was expected to rise as thousands more remained trapped in collapsed buildings. Experts warned of thousands of aftershocks in the next two weeks. The quake, measuring up to 8.1 on the Richter scale, was strongest in the mountainous area of Nantou, about 150 kilometers southwest of Taipei.

That’s too close for comfort in this quake-prone archipelago. The Philippines sits on a major fault, and two trenches and lies along the so-called Ring of Fire, a zone that encompasses some 540 historically-active volcanoes around the globe. A major quake that struck Luzon in 1990 not only toppled buildings but also caused structures to sink as the ground liquefied. A mountain in Zambales that wasn’t even included in the list of volcanoes in the Ring of Fire erupted in 1991, permanently altering the landscape of Central Luzon.

CHIEF VOLCANOLOGIST RAYMUNDO PUNOGBAYAN WARNED YESTERDAY THAT A QUAKE AS DEVASTATING AS THE ONE IN TAIWAN CAN STRIKE THE PHILIPPINES AT ANY TIME. HE

ALSO WARNED PEOPLE WHO ARE SETTLING ON LAHAR (LAVA ASH)-COVERED LAND IN CENTRAL LUZON THAT THE SOIL IS PRONE TO LIQUEFACTION, MEANING THE GROUND COULD SWALLOW UP THEIR HOMES IN CERTAIN CASES OF SEISMIC ACTIVITY. THERE IS NO SUCH WARNING SO FAR IN METRO MANILA. BUT YOU DON'T NEED EXPERTS TO TELL YOU THAT MANY BUILDINGS IN THE NATION'S CAPITAL ARE STRUCTURALLY WEAK AND COULD BE DAMAGED OR DESTROYED BY A STRONG EARTHQUAKE.

Newer buildings have installed safeguards against quakes, although even modern technology can't guarantee that a structure is 100-percent earthquake-proof. Some of the weakest buildings are located in the most densely-populated areas, such as the student dormitories in the University Belt. They get a perfunctory inspection after every major earthquake, but only a few get upgraded to comply with safety standards. The quake in Taiwan should remind the government that buildings and structures in Metro Manila must be regularly inspected for structural safety. [D: Oh sure! What a dream!] [END OF QUOTING]

Then, on the same page: [QUOTING:]

SRI LANKA'S FEMALE TERRORISTS EMERGE AS MACABRE WARRIORS

Colombo (AFP)—When almost an entire hamlet was massacred in Sri Lanka, it was not only the images of children chopped to death that shocked people but also the knowledge that the butchery was led by women...14 members of his family were cut to death...“I heard voices in Tamil (language),” Premasiri said. “I could hear women saying something in Tamil. Then I heard them smashing the furniture, then the screams.

“After a while, the screaming died down and I heard the Tamil women laughing, as if they had gone mad. I came out only after I heard Sinhalese voices, several hours later.” [END OF QUOTING]

If the world hasn't gone mad, then someone explain all this to me. This is going on in the world, and God's self-proclaimed kiddies back home are shooting and trying to kill my son, steal everything I ever hoped to hold, drown the chickens on the farm that isn't even ours, after setting us up for indictments, terrorist focus and you name it—and yep, some of this by beautiful ladies old enough to surely know better. Some doing this in the name of honor and God—IN FRONT OF THEIR CHILDREN! AND I'M SORRY, I DON'T FIT ANY MORE. AND NO, WE WON'T STOP BECAUSE PERHAPS, JUST PERHAPS, WE CAN CHANGE A FEW THINGS.

Everything has its incredibly funny side and, indeed, even the simple things are humorous: A lady we are expecting this evening—who says she is authorized by the FED to buy our Peruvian bond—just called to say she would be late because the color-coding on her car won't allow her to travel in Metro Manila until 6:00 p.m. E.J. said that sounds like what they started in Athens—to save the ruins from pollution.

Now, we don't know this person, who is also an “authorized” lawyer, but number one: There is NO Peruvian Bond, and she is obviously so uninformed as to not realize that the FED already tried to buy the damned thing and so did Bush. She sent word last night with another visitor that the Fed wanted to buy the “bond” or whatever and to see if she could meet with Mr. Ekker. Oh, what the heck—nothing else to do except 50 more assignments, and after all—Erap isn't back yet, and I never mastered thumb-twiddling. Surely, if we don't get the “Big One”, we will keep you posted. I have no hope that if there is even a 1.2 temblor that the mail, e-mail or phones would be working and with all the volcanoes erupting—no hope of getting through on smoke signals. If it's not one thing, it's always another.

Now that the UN has moved in—in military force—to E. Timor, it is noted that the entire place is burned to the ground, and EVERYTHING has to be “built from scratch”.

I'll tell you, though, this paper is full of it—or full of something. [QUOTING AN AFP (same as AP) article:]

MILLIONAIRE CLAIMS TO HAVE FOUND IDEAL LIVING CONDITIONS

Perth, Australia—An Australian millionaire walked out of the desert yesterday, three months after he and 74 followers launched a bizarre social experiment, proclaiming he has found the ideal living conditions for humanity.

“More vital to mankind than flight or even the Moon landing, this breakthrough could signal an end to the violent society that we have been subjected to for so many years,” millionaire James Salerno said.

And the breakthrough was?

“Well, it's not that simple,” Salerno said, but it all has to do with the “commonality” of the human condition, without giving any specific details.

“I think it has been the consistency with which humans go through the same problems and conflicts which has been the most important thing,” he told reporters.

“I believe now that, from this research and from previous research done, we have the most advanced knowledge of what we call natural human nature.”

Salerno's project was originally scheduled to last six months, but will end on Sept. 30 because, Salerno said, he had achieved his aim earlier than expected.

But the social experiment has been plagued by problems since he and his 74 volunteers set up camp June 1, about 70 kilometers from Kununurra, in Western Australia's northwest, under the banner “Project Research 2000”.

Only about 40 of the initial volunteers remain in the camp where they have been growing their own food and even formed their own government with Salerno acting as a “social adviser” in times of conflict. [D: Three months? What did they grow? Radishes? I do know a few people I would like to send on such an expedition to the “outback”, but they are all too lazy and luxury-oriented. Or perhaps I am just a poor-sport basket-case, because I got tired of being ripped-off, stolen from, lied about and, in general, trashed, for not PROVIDING WELL ENOUGH!]

Ill health forced several participants to withdraw with some needing hospitalization for illnesses ranging from chronic gastroenteritis and infected sores to asthma and appendicitis. [D: Yep, been there and done all that.]

Several of Salerno's volunteers were injured in a car crash about four weeks ago, which forced one to withdraw with a serious neck injury. [D: Neck injury? Whiplash? Well, the next thing will surely be the lawsuit!]

Natural disasters have included a grass fire that swept through the campsite and destroyed the tents and personal possessions of three participants, and snakebites were also reported. [END OF QUOTING]

I need to close this nonsense but I note that on the same page, “HEALTH/SCIENCE—WORLD”, there are actually some good topics: “RESEARCHERS FIND NEW PROTEIN THAT BLOCKS CANCER BLOOD VESSELS”—excellent and should be shared.

“SPACECRAFT COULD USE HUMAN WASTE FOR FUEL: Future spacecraft could find an alternative energy supply in the crew's human waste, NEW SCIENTIST magazine said...” And oh, yes, it is a space agency, NASA, sponsored project.

Then there is this one: “LASER TREATMENTS CAN HELP ANGINA PATIENTS—STUDY”.

Then, for no obvious story value, there is a picture of a man holding his baby and pet monkey. The story line under the picture says: “A man holds his baby and pet monkey in Phnom Penh. The monkey, which has been with the man for two months, could be sold for $20. Cambodians consider the monkey brain a delicacy.”—(AP)

And then a really BIG one: “CANNABIS: KILLER WEED OR HOLY HERB?”

That one is so breath-taking that I shall hold it in and report first thing tomorrow. I just don't have the advantage of some people with access to the Internet. But this is, after all, THE PAPER in the Philippines—you know, the Los Angeles Times, or better still, the Washington Times.

I just keep repeating to myself—between tantrums: basket case, basket case—basket case.

This “pot” tale is of a man who gave up “wine writing” to take up “Cannabis Culture”. Sounds to me like he might still be in his bottle. There is a section on “marijuana insanity”, and perhaps while I am in a Basket-Case stupor from over tantrumizing, some others I know might well be “watching” through “marijuana insanity”? Not so far-fetched, is it? We ALL know, now, don't we, kiddies? It sort of snorts with soul-mating and plunking-for-God, doesn't it?

Now, while on the dirty end of the thought-waves: THE leading Editor-Publisher of this esteemed paper does exceptionally good writings, and Rick, Charles and E.J. met with him, Max Soliven. He is on the Estrada trip to everywhere East, like New Zealand, to APEC, and on to L.A., etc. He couldn't hold his tongue, or typewriter as the case is: He wrote that New Zealanders were incredibly wonderful and the places were spotless, gentle and wonderfully done-up for guests. So it was noted that there was no trash, no graffiti, etc., anywhere around, until the last day and then, on the broadside of a beautiful building, was the spray-can art. He said he knew he would pay dearly “in the morning”, but he asked that people (for this is a family newspaper) put the kids to bed before reading, but he couldn't keep this to himself for, after all, it was there for all the world to see.

I won't name New Zealand's “lady” prime minister, but she is not very popular—sort of a Janet Reno; and New Zealand is hurting really bad, and millions were spent on these politicians, so someone was fed up: “XXXXXX XXXX has blown off New Zealand, and she has blown off Clinton—but she didn't swallow!” And I swear—it was right there in print in THE paper. And the world needs Viagra? What the world needs, it appears to me, is a new world, with fresh, clean minds and a desire for wondrous things.

P.S.: Our Plan is being presented at the upcoming meeting of ASEAN, where all the nations in this area of Southeast Asia are gathering to consider it, among other things. I do not believe that hope is gone, nor the possibility of goodness. But we obviously have to get rid of the rot among us or clean it up.

Please, don't blame this on Hatonn/Aton/E.J.—or anyone remotely resembling anything other than the proverbial “Basket Case” having an afternoon tantrum—because her PARTNER shot her in the back with a howitzer.

May the best buildings stand, including mine.

It is a good day!

Love, E-E

Nothing Can Be Done Without Hope

9/25/99—#1

DORIS HERE, PLEASE:

I have come back to the top of this writing because I don't want any of those WATCHER NERDS TO MISS THIS LITTLE BULLETIN.

We are accused bluntly and in the middle of a writing to Norey, by Ed Young, who claims the things we write in CONTACT are "preposterous". Preposterous? Read on.

[QUOTING:]

TO DORIS AND EJ

THIS IS JUST TO NOTIFY THAT ANNAMIE HAS DECIDED TO "LEAVE" US AT MIDNIGHT ON THE 9-19-99. (It was an important number for her).

WE THANK HER FOR THE LESSONS—PAINFUL AS THEY WERE AND ALSO FOR OFFERING HERSELF AND HER KNOWLEDGE TO OTHERS, UNTIL HER LAST BREATH.

WE SEND HER LIGHT AND LOVE FOR HER JOURNEY AHEAD.

REGARDS (C.)

[END OF QUOTING]

Well, there you have it, in its worst form: Annamie was one of those "Rick Martin Soul Maties". I hope you do not think me crude or cruel—BUT, I HOPE SOMEBODY STUFFS RICK MARTIN'S VIAGRA AND DINGUS WHERE IT BELONGS OR TURNS HIM OVER TO MS. BOBBIE! "Preposterous" information? HOW DOES "DEAD" SOUND TO YOU GUYS? Perchance it bothers no one else—but it bothers this old tantrum-tossing basket-case a whole heck of a LOT! And Gail, baby, get yourself checked out, and certainly check your condition at the end of October, and SEE A DOCTOR REGULARLY. An ounce of prevention is BETTER than a pound of cure—for there is no cure.

If this seems mean to you readers: GOOD! "Mean" is a soft word for what I really feel at this moment. Doris.

GOOD MORNING, MANILA!

Hatonn—And, for you in "Heartbreak Hotel": May your compatriots and "enemies" have mercy. And no, to you who think otherwise and wish to dump a load on "hotel" dwellers—this is called the Gilami, not "Heartbreak". And for inquiring minds: Check the "cradle call" rolls along about late October or November. And never mind buying that old "I couldn't have...". It was either a lie from onset or a lie now! There really is no place to run and no place to hide—FROM GOD!

The next thing that usually happens, however, is a name-change, so that nobody can legally find the boulder!

Am I trying to tell you something? Yes, lying gets you into REALLY BAD TROUBLE over

The first of the prime lies told to women is: "I am fixed so that I can't...!" CONSEQUENCES of some activities. But, for a bunch of inquiring minds, the puzzlement is not so disconcerting as events come to happen. It is a difficult time, especially for those who first practice deceit, cunning, and intent of some type of revenge, blame and/or efforts at destruction of your "declared enemies"—instead of good judgment and discernment.

Some will actually have major appearance changes, which will be most notable, and other puzzlements will fall into place—which are hard to miss.

Watching, drowning chickens, and other tricks of the adversary—will NOT cover the actual deeds—incubating. Shape-shifters? Well, some will shift shapes but no, not as you would expect from the Satanic players—so WATCH THOSE BABIES AND CHILDREN AS YOU HEAD FOR THE HOLIDAY OF HOLIDAYS!

Some people simply HAVE NO CONSCIENCE and cannot see beyond that which is impact on SELF—this is called "narcissism".

To you who have held to Truth and Hope during these "trying" times and realize that both human aspect AND SOUL have been "tried", remember: "Optimism is the faith that leads to achievement." Nothing can be done without hope. And remember the pronouncement of Peter: "In HIS great mercy he has given us new birth into a living hope." And KNOW: Actions, not words, are the true characteristics of INTENT.

The SPECTRUM groupie wants to distance itself from (or pretend to not know) the "WATCHERS"? DON'T DELAY, FRIENDS: GO HAVE A FRIENDLY INTERVIEW WITH THOSE WATCHER WATCHERS. Demand an open meeting with recorded interviews. Demand that Rick, both Bilgers, and Gail be present. First, "describe" the people carefully, for I believe that if you get any "mother" present, you are going to get a shocker. So, take all your group around there, including Diane, on that interview and ask some down-and-personal questions—in that friendly way that they say they interviewed you. You will get your answers before you ever have that interview, because—remember the "conferences" demanded by Ron Carlson, etc.? You don't need to be aggressive or nasty—just record and have witnesses to all phone calls, publications, note-taking and observations.

A couple of really good "observationalists" in the medical field would be Bart and Merle, and both would be good for a "friendly interview" regarding these matters. Some diseases have been going on for at least six months and certainly would show symptoms or side-effects. Why do you think some parties are keeping such low profiles as to live "out of town—Tehachapi"?

Do "I", Hatonn, seem to know too much? What is "too much"? I can assure you of one thing—my scribe is far enough away from hometown to NOT know anything, so let us just leave it right there, for we have other games to play and fish to fry.

GOLD IN THEM-THAR HILLS

How many of you readers know that there are some mountains in the Philippines called "Sierra Madre"? Yes, same as those in the other parts of the world and Mexico, etc., by the same name and always, it seems, the tales go on and on about gold. Well, yes—there are also those tales of El Dorado—God and "The Brothers". So, we can leave the tales to mythology for the moment. However, KNOW that THE New World Order and the NEW WORLD ORDER are two very distinctively different "orders". However, BOTH are based on the same mythological commodity, real or imagined.

And yes, indeed, that is why we are focused on the Philippines. It is also why the major world factions are into the act of trying to gain dominance over supplies of gold, etc. This is why you now have a Jewess as President of Switzerland, the Israelis trying to get the gold reserves (already stolen and relocated) and the battle lines are being drawn in about thirty directions. And of course, the 12 Tribes of Israel have their oars in the water paddling like crazy, while the 13th Tribe is trying to corner the governments of the globe—and by and large, Russia is miffed off, China is miffed off and so goes the story of intrigue.

I find my own team, which is supposed to, by consideration of others, know everything—is continually amazed.

They just simply had no idea that, since 1995-96, there have been open accounts set forth dealing with our assets and even known as the "Global Account"; and the "paper" had, has, and will continue to have "AAA" ratings—and no, a bank needs no other backup from anything, bank or otherwise.

Who recognizes the assets? Everybody, especially those in the Banking quarters like Union Bank of Switzerland, the U.S. Treasury and the Central Bank(s)—all of them, WORLD WIDE.

So, who will win? God and THE PEOPLE! That was always the way it was structured, and then the Serpent People got involved, right down through the unexpected ones. Bush, Baker, etc. were expected to be involved—but the "other" faction is the one dealing NOW.

So, what is taking place now? Well, I won't say, but the circle has closed and I don't want my people to know anything more about it. There is work afoot to get you some bit of "relief" through a private, personal loan, unconnected to anything in the ongoing negotiations. This is for total protection.

And, all of you who watch to gauge where "projects" might be in the funding stages—there are not yet any funds free for anything. That is simply the way it IS, and if impatience gets the better of your good judgment, so be it. We don't want to interfere with "doing good business", but neither will we be PUSHED one inch into doing anything out of proper sequence—not one iota.

Are things being uncovered that are surprising? But of course! And because of that, we will probably focus on things that might seem unrelated but, since nothing is unrelated to anything else—pay attention. The “basket weavers” have always been at their craft. However, let us see how “up” on possibilities you might be in consideration of world events.

We can offer you some simple articles out of SPOTLIGHT, and we can pick at random, but let’s consider the most recent, since that is the one in front of us:

[QUOTING:]

SWISS CLAIM $40 BILLION WAS STOLEN

By Gregory Douglas, Spotlight

“Forty-billion dollars stolen from U.S. taxpayers is only the ‘tip of the iceberg.’”

[H: Yes, indeed, we are going to help SPOTLIGHT in a massive way as soon as we can do so and that should be pretty soon. We will also turn our massive support to Ron Paul. The adversary has tried to destroy the voices for freedom and they will not be silenced!]

What international law-enforcement agencies now call the biggest criminal, money-laundering scandal in history has its roots in official Washington idealism and Russian criminal greed.

What American investigative officials term the tip of the iceberg of theft, graft and corruption appears in the investigations into the activities of the once-reputable old Bank of New York. In spite of very high level attempts on the part of the Clinton administration to suppress it, the entire iceberg is slowly surfacing.

Initial reports of “possibly $2 million” in laundering money has grown to “at least $40 BILLION”, according to Swiss and American investigators, many of whom have revealed inside details, on condition of strict confidentiality. [H: Yes, I would bet on that.]

Much of the documentary information about this wholesale theft has come from Swiss banking sources and has been made available to members of the American media. Almost none of it has been used.

Critics contend the thrust of the media is to downplay the identities of the players in the massive criminal operation in the Russian Republic and in the United States.

The bulk of the billions involved are American taxpayer dollars, most of which were aggressively sought by the Clinton administration, pushed through a Congress kept ignorant of the insolvency of Russia and distributed to eager hands in Russia by the International Monetary Fund (IMF) and the World Bank.

This money, ostensibly intended to assist a new, free Russia, was intended for the benefit of the Russian economy in general and the people of Russia in specific.

What happened in fact was that a pervasive group of Russians, with ties to Swiss banks and Israeli intelligence organs, managed to use the money to gain control of major blocks of former Soviet business concerns.

Instead of using the money to rebuild the shattered socialist economy, this clique of young businessmen proceeded to sell off the assets they acquired and ship the money out of the country as quickly as possible.

Although initial American hopes for a rebuilding of a free Russian economy were quickly dashed, the flood of looted money flowing into the United States through Western banks was not unwelcome in administration circles.

The official posture was that great success was anticipated for the prospect of a new Russian free market just around a mythical, and ever distant, corner.

Critics contend members of the Clinton administration quickly became aware of the immense flood of stolen money being laundered into the United States.

Efforts to pump more money into Russia are, as of this writing, still being frantically endorsed by Treasury and State Department officials, in spite of an extensive number of highly negative reports from American, British and Swiss government agencies and financial institutions.

A significant amount of stolen money entering American banks has found its way into the pockets of top U.S. officials. Vice President Al Gore has been one of the most powerful advocates of the Russian bailout programs.

Gore has gone to great lengths to ignore and suppress any public criticism of its dismal failure. Critics say the vice president cannot copy Clinton’s eager solicitation of Red Chinese intelligence-agency money, so he has turned, instead, to his friends in the New Russian criminal oligarchies.

The present criminal scandal also has three major points to its composition. The first point in this triangle of immense theft and corruption is in Moscow, the second in Washington and the third in Tel Aviv.

The Swiss have become increasingly angry at the American Jewish community for its savage extraction of money from the country. The Swiss are, quite simply, engaging in “payback” by investigating the criminal activities of Russian and Israeli financial entities in their country. [H: Remember that the Communists ARE the Jewish elements (Bolsheviks) that started Communist Russia!]

The Russians are outraged that money intended to rebuild their shattered economy is being looted by what they call “internationalist” thieves. [H: And when Russia gets mad—the world shakes in its boots—or haven’t you noticed?]

Leaks from American sources stem from a growing disgust on the part of honest U.S. law-enforcement agencies at the growing, criminal activities of those who now control the governments of the three nations.

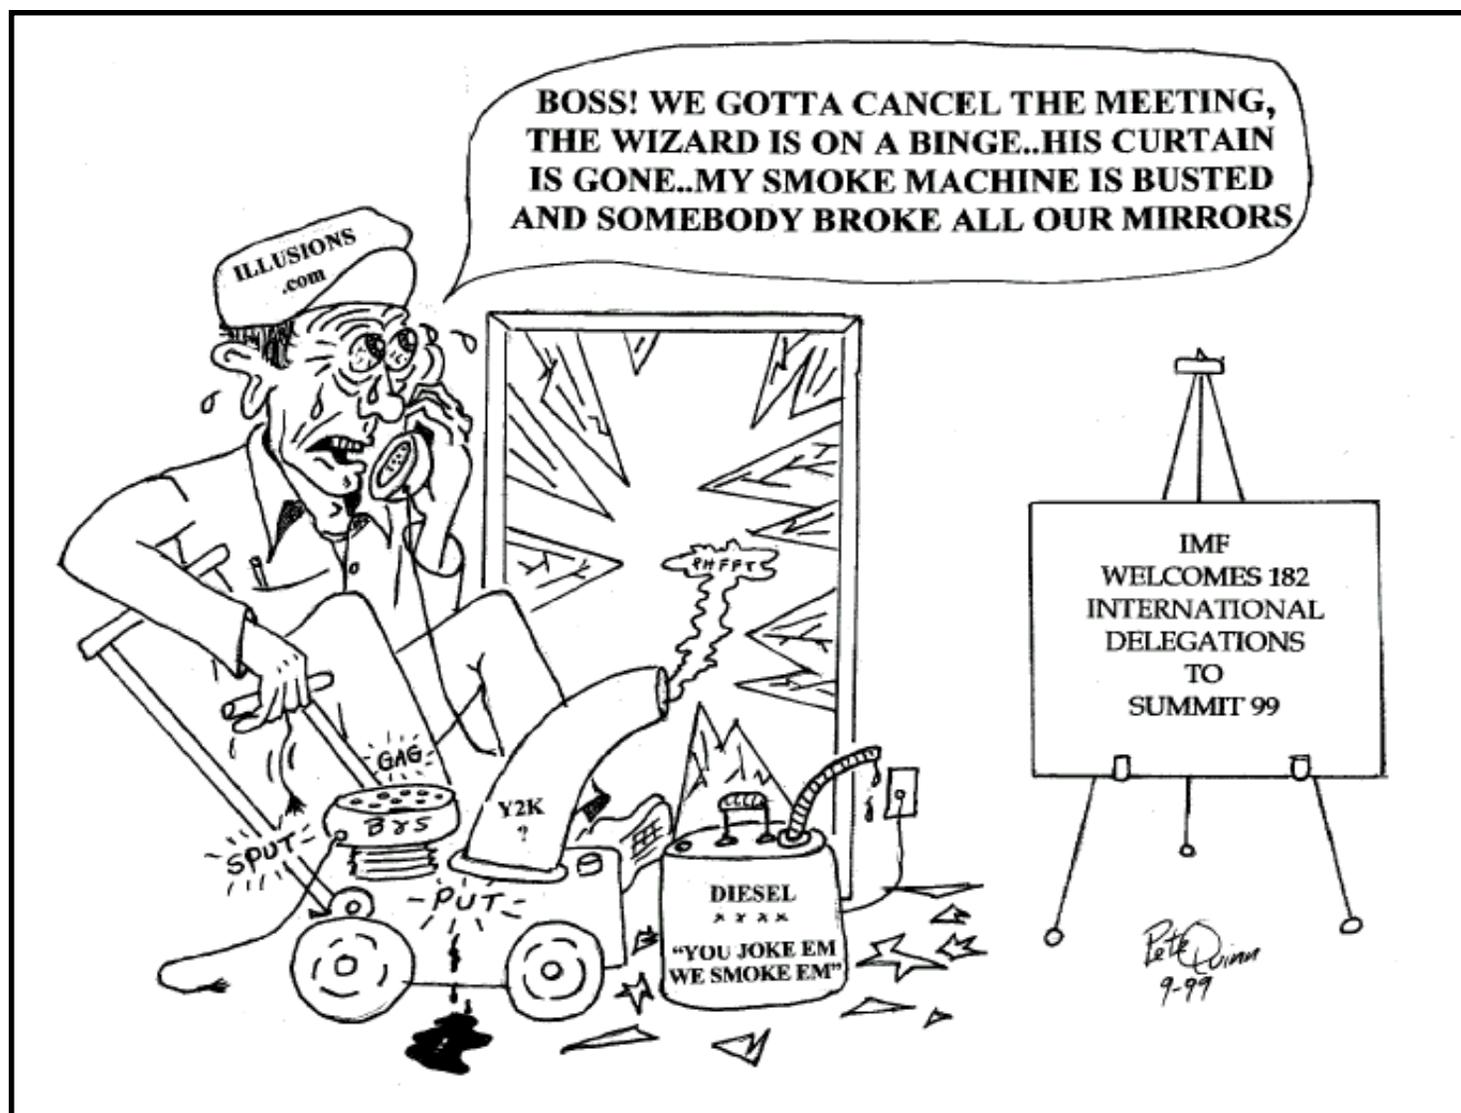

[END OF QUOTING]

[Doris:] I can’t write more right now—I feel a bad case of “basket” coming on!

Light and Love, indeed, to Annamie and we all KNOW that God walks right along beside us here, and THERE.

I am sitting as the song runs through my brain: “Walk on, walk on—you’ll never walk alone.” They played that at my nurses’ “Capping” when I won the honors a thousand years ago, and they played it at my son’s funeral, and it is always THERE when the way seems hard and we feel all ALONE. No, Annamie, you were never alone, precious one, and we honor you. WE ARE ALL TO EACH, A SOUL MATE, FOR IT “CAN BE NO OTHER WAY”. SALU!

PHOENIX UNDEAD— THE MONTAUK PROJECT AND CAMP HERO TODAY

Part Two

In this five-part series, John Quinn—who runs Newshawk, a genuine, insightful, Internet, e-mail-based news service—provides us with an amazing update on the situation at Montauk today.

PART TWO—CORROBORATIVE INFORMATION AND TESTIMONY

THE PHILADELPHIA EXPERIMENT, VALLEE, “DUDGEON”, MARSHALL BARNES AND THE DEBUNKER DEBUNKED

Jacques Vallee, a fairly well known and “credible” UFO researcher, whom, I discovered several years ago, has had substantial and verifiable links to intelligence/military agencies in the U.S., going back 30 or more years (in other words he was a high-level spook and disinfo agent who was recruited from France, and worked with J. Allen Hynek and other spooks/scientists for Air Force Intelligence and similar groups; initially at the Batelle Institute near Wright-Patterson AFB in Ohio), published a report in 1994, which purported to totally debunk the Philadelphia Experiment and show that it was a hoax.

The problem is, Vallee’s article itself was complete and utter bullshit, utilizing as its primary source one, “Edward Dudgeon”, some phony with absolutely no credibility, who has been conclusively proved a liar—and thus, by extension, Vallee has been so proved as well. The person who busted these clowns is named Marshall Barnes, an independent researcher who, in addition, has heavily and thoroughly investigated the Phoenix Project from Philadelphia all the way through the Montauk Project, and has found SOLID evidence to support many of the major claims being made about Phoenix—as well as scientific data and so forth—which prove that many of the claims are quite possible.

Vallee and Bernhard Haisch, editor-in-chief of the Journal of Scientific Exploration, which published Vallee’s article and has refused to disclaim or otherwise back off it, have become the targets of an ongoing private investigation focusing on them having promoted research fraud. Proof which shows Jacques Vallee’s article to be an outright fraud has been made public by Barnes, leaving no room for doubt that the world-famous UFO researcher was an active participant in an official cover-up effort.

Barnes shows irrefutably that there was, on the part of the Navy and other government agencies: 1.) a strong agenda to make a ship both radar and sight-invisible; 2.)

knowledge of the physics by which this can be done; and 3.) possession of the technology by which this physics could be applied in the field.

Apparently, these facts are so disturbing to the “powers-that-be” that they have, in desperation, engaged or coerced two well-known scientists into perpetrating a bizarre act of deliberate scientific debauchery; risking their names and reputations, and those of any organizations they may belong to.

The so-called Dudgeon reportedly told Vallee, “Your book, Revelations, was wrong about making the ship invisible to radar: the Germans hadn’t deployed radar at the time...”. Dudgeon is referring to the summer of 1943. Without any question whatsoever, the German navy had radar on their ships before WWII. There is information, posted on a website at <http://www.cnd.net/~kais/navy/raiders.htm>, which provides hard, factual data regarding the Nazi’s development of radar. By scrolling down to the third and fourth paragraphs under the heading, “The Pocket Battleship, Admiral Scheer”, one can find information on how these same radar systems were used with devastating and deadly effect against Allied ships and crews. The so-called Dudgeon’s comments on this point, as on so many others, are utterly worthless drivel.

As for the entire issue about Dudgeon’s “credentials” and papers which supposedly support his contention that he was even in the Navy at the Philadelphia Yard during this time—the “papers” he showed Vallee are completely insignificant and prove nothing of the sort. In fact, not even Vallee has said anything about seeing any hard documentation/confirmation of these critical elements of Dudgeon’s story, and Dudgeon, as we see, is untrustworthy at best. Vallee doesn’t even describe what kind of “identification” papers he saw. Who really knows if this so-called Edward Dudgeon is even Edward Dudgeon! In light of the following evidence of his blatantly untruthful testimony, this issue of his real identity becomes especially significant.

One of the main points which Dudgeon (or whoever) and Vallee make, which they say gives lie to the claims about the Philadelphia Experiment, has to do with the dates of the shakedown cruise for a number of vessels. Dudgeon claims that the Eldridge accompanied his ship, the DE 50, U.S.S. Engstrom and two other ships on shakedown together during the first week of July. Surprise! The Navy’s own official records for the Eldridge show that the ship wasn’t even launched until July 25, didn’t receive its commissioned crew until August 27 and then didn’t go on its shakedown cruise until September. It was within the period of time between July 25 and August 27 that a skeleton crew could and would have been used in the clandestine experiments, as they would not be listed as the official commissioned crew and thus, any tracing of them would be pretty much impossible. Barnes says, “I assure you that these dates are accurate because they reflect the same information that I got from three different published, official, Navy, ship-record sources, as well as other books that have quoted the same records.”

At this point, Vallee’s article and the “testimony” which make up the bulk of it are shown, clearly and unarguably, to be the complete garbage that they truly are.

Why then, and at whose direction, have editor Bernhard Haisch and his Journal of Scientific Exploration refused to issue a disclaimer regarding this work of outrageous fraud and in fact continue to publish it on their web-site and doubtless elsewhere, also? Very good questions but most likely also rhetorical ones. Undoubtedly relevant is the fact that Vallee, for one reason or another, deemed it desirable to have his report “reviewed” and obviously censored, or “cleared”, by one, “Vice-Admiral William D. Houser”. Hmmm...

Very interesting, as well, is the fact that apparently a false connection was made by Dudgeon between the “St. Elmo’s Fire” phenomenon and the witness descriptions of the visual phenomenon observed during the Philadelphia Experiment; that is, that the phenomenon, in fact, does more than just impart to a ship a greenish, glowing aura—due to the coronal discharge—but can also have the effect of rendering the ship relatively invisible to sight, and presumably to radar, as well.

However, this claim only came up in a summary of Vallee’s “research” into Dudgeon’s claims and on a TV interview of Dudgeon by Vallee, and is not mentioned in the article itself, which was reviewed by the Vice-Admiral. St. Elmo’s Fire was mentioned by Dudgeon only as a disinformation ploy, to provide a false explanation for any bizarre conditions noted by a number of eyewitnesses regarding the condition of the USS Eldridge. No mention was made in the printed article to the effect that St. Elmo’s Fire can also result in invisibility—something much more significant from a defense or “covert operations” point of view than some greenish glow—and which, if true, would indeed, logically have a direct relation to the Philadelphia Experiment technology itself.

If this were really true, then there WOULD be a scientifically valid way to make a vessel or other object invisible—by merely replicating the effects of St. Elmo’s Fire! Thus, the Vice-Admiral would have advised Vallee to remove this material from the printed article, regardless of the fact that Dudgeon’s yarn about St. Elmo’s Fire is false, and was only originally offered at all as a way of explaining the other accounts, which attest to the ship becoming invisible.

A POSSIBLE PERSONAL LINK

I have had a number of personal contacts with Preston Nichols, a few with Peter Moon, and I have conversed with both of them on the phone many times; and with Al Bielek, several times. Nichols did a “Reichian” (according to methods developed by Wilhelm Reich) energy reading on me during our very first personal meeting, and he concluded that there were extremely strong indications of a personal involvement in the Montauk Project on my part. This reading was, however, somewhat cursory and incomplete, because at one point I became intensely emotional about something related to my childhood and my family—feelings which definitely seemed to be connected to the entire business.

Although we were not able to pursue it at the time, I felt distinctly that, along with whatever else had been going on with me personally in relation to the Project, the entire matter had a sizable and negative, though hidden, effect on our entire family and was responsible for a certain amount of emotional turmoil, pain and disruption. This is all a subjective impression—at this point in time I have no hard evidence to back up that aspect of things. Nichols felt that my skills in communications could have been utilized in dealings with ETs; he also picked up from my energy patterns that I had several implants, and that I had been used in time-travel experimentation as well. Other definite indications of some kind of direct personal involvement in some aspects of the Montauk Project were discussed in my first report on the project. Other strongly suggestive memories, impressions, vivid dreams and experiences of mine, most of which material is covered in Part 4 of my initial report, “Montauk Air Force Station—Active Or Not?”, indicate a definite likelihood of some type of connection to, or involvement with, the Montauk Project on my part, very possibly beginning at a rather young age.

My trip to eastern Long Island in the summer of 1998, which included a number of side trips to Montauk, showed a possible link between the underground facility at the WWII Navy submarine base on Montauk’s Fort Pond Bay and some peculiar experiences of mine as a child, during the time my family began vacationing right up the road from this area, in 1959 and 1960.

This relates to an exceptionally vivid dream/nightmare, one I can remember to this day, from when I was 5-6 years old. Not the standard fare of goblins or monsters threatening to gobble one up: this dream presented, it would seem, a scenario more along the lines of what “Dr. Jonas”, in the movie Conspiracy Theory, described as the focus of his “work” as a “research” scientist for the CIA in the field of mind control, as part of the well-known MK-ULTRA program—which was terminal sensory deprivation. There is a strong factual link here to the ubiquitous and repugnant “dean of modern psychiatry”, Ewen Cameron, and his MK-ULTRA experimentation at McGill University and Allen Memorial Institute in Montreal, Canada during the 1950s and 1960s. Cameron—who had made no secret of his slavering admiration for the monsters and butchers of Bergen-Belsen, and indeed for the entire Nazi movement in all aspects—rightly viewed his psychotic and brutal “work” for the CIA and other agencies, as a continuation of the experiments carried out by the Nazis upon their millions of helpless, human victims. Circumstantial evidence and a number of personal accounts indicate that similar operations were, in fact, also being conducted on Long Island, probably at Camp Hero, Fort Pond Bay Naval Base in Montauk, and at Brookhaven Labs during this time period, perhaps involving Ewen Cameron himself.

The main image in this early-childhood dream was of being naked, freezing cold, and huddled on the floor of a featureless, cement cube or “box” of some kind, perhaps 12-15 cubic feet; the atmosphere was chilly and very damp. My terror increased substantially when I observed that liquid of some kind was beginning to enter holes in this cube, and the implication was that, at some point, I would drown. Naturally, I woke up screaming from that one. An interesting point is that my family did not own a TV and our trips to the movies were fairly infrequent. At that age and at that period of time, I can’t imagine where or how I could have “picked up” or otherwise appropriated such a terrifying image from any conceivable source.

The memory of this dream experience, as noted, has stayed with me since that time, and now that I am aware of the Montauk Project and related operations on Long Island at the time I was growing up there, I’ve wondered if perhaps this dream was a psychic bleed-through of some horrific event actually experienced by me. Interesting then to notice—on my recent trip to the old WWII Navy submarine base at Fort Pond Bay in Montauk—an old concrete cube about 12-15 cubic feet in dimension right at the shore line, obviously some structure related to the submarine pens on the bay here. This is less than a half-mile from the hotel on Fort Pond, which is where my family began vacationing on eastern Long Island, when I was about 6 years old. Hmmmm...

OTHER CORROBORATIVE INFORMATION

Michelle Guerin—who has uncovered within herself, buried memories of some very traumatic and significant events at Camp Hero and nearby Ditch Plains—has provided the following information on a number of points concerning the Montauk Project and related issues (Michelle has a web-site detailing some of her Montauk experiences—<http://members.aol.com/nymush/sands.html>).

“Preston Nichols states in his books that he worked for ‘BJM’ (note: ‘BJM’ = ‘AIL’), a well-known defense contractor on Long Island. While a pseudonym has been used for the company in order to protect himself from possible lawsuits, I have a friend that did, indeed, work with Preston, at a well-known defense contractor on Long Island.

“I have an uncle that is very familiar with the area around Montauk, as he spent most of his summers there, from childhood through adulthood. Up until 3 years ago, he owned a home in Montauk. My uncle has some very unusual memories concerning something that happened at the camp when he was younger. At the time, his family summered at a campsite near Camp Hero. Due to an impending hurricane, the residents of the campsite were evacuated to the base. All of the children were housed in a separate building, on the second floor. During the night, he woke up and recalled seeing a face at the window and was mesmerized by the eyes. He’s never forgotten this. Remember, he was on the second floor! He only related this story to me after I told him of my own experiences at Montauk.

“My cousin (his daughter) then told me of her memories of Montauk. Every summer when they arrived there, for about a two-week period, she would experience an unusual “sensation”—she would feel depressed, uneasy and lethargic, for no apparent reason. Then she said it was as if she would get used to the sensation, and it no longer bothered her. She had never mentioned this to her family until I started to ask about Montauk.

“I myself have been to Montauk and can attest to the strange ‘vibes’ there. My psychic antennae seem to be most affected in an area near the location of the Sage radar dish, along a stretch of an isolated road known as Old Montauk Hwy. We had been able to verify (through the use of an EMF detector), anomalous EM readings in that location.”—© Michelle Guerin

I got a very noteworthy e-mail from a woman in the New York area, regarding the fateful day of August 12, 1983, when the major phase of the Montauk Project “crashed and burned”. Judith wrote to me as follows: “I live in the tri-state area, so your article interested me. I did some research at the New York Public Library a couple of months ago on the Philadelphia Experiment—supposedly the ship which disappeared-reappeared in Montauk, August 1983—I was living in Manhattan at the time, and I clearly remember a late-night news broadcast about this ship reappearing and the reporter saying the base was totally closed; nobody could get in to check it out. But, I could not find anything in the local newspapers about it from 1983. What I DID find was that the entire midtown area in Manhattan lost ALL electrical power at about the time the ship was supposed to have shown up. The subways were virtually stopped. The outage was so severe as to have crippled midtown for an entire three-four days before it could be restored. I seem to remember this, too, back in 1983. There is no mention in the papers about WHY this occurred.”—Judith

Several other individuals from the New York/Long Island area with whom I have spoken also recall seeing a spot on local news about the military vessel, which appeared mysteriously off Montauk Point for at least a few days that August.

The following, written by Stephanie Chesler, was posted by Ellie Crystal on her web site:

“I read with great interest your material about Montauk in the Universal Updates. I grew up in a small town called Port Jefferson on Long Island’s north shore, about half-way to Montauk from the city. My father worked with a division of Grumman Aerospace, on top-secret projects that involved the Navy, and I remember our neighbors often told my mother that the FBI had come around the neighborhood to ‘check’ out my father’s activities in the community. I remember him speaking about rumors of an underground base at Montauk.

“My neighbor across the street was a scientist of some sort, who worked with the government. He never revealed to me exactly what he did, but he had some very complicated electronic apparatus in his garage that I was fascinated with. I babysat his children twice a week, and I would always take a peek in the garage after I had put them to bed. When I questioned him about the purpose of the instruments, he blew me off with a wrong answer. I knew enough that he was lying, as I was keenly interested in science at that time, having won first place in the High School Suffolk County Science Fair two years in a row.

“The other strange thing was that they were definitely under some kind of guard or surveillance that my neighbor was completely aware of. There were frequent visits by unmarked cars parked in front of their house, always with two men in the front seat. Very weird for a quiet, suburban neighborhood!! My father was told it was government-job related, not to worry about it. When I was in my sophomore year at school (1976-77), my neighbor hurriedly asked me to watch his children for a weekend, while he and his wife looked for a house to relocate to in Montauk. They told me they had bought a pharmacy there. The move was completed in less than two weeks. Strangely, though, when I drove to Montauk to return a book I had borrowed, the family had vanished! There was only one pharmacy in Montauk at that time, and they had never heard of my neighbor. I never saw them again.

“Another interesting thing was that I frequently did see a greenish glow in the sky, always on cold winter nights in the direction of Montauk. I wouldn’t say it was a beam, but it was definitely localized in certain areas of the sky. When I told my science teachers that I had seen this occur, they told me I was imagining it, as we were too far south to observe an aurora-borealis type of sky.

But I know, my family and I saw it!

“Here is the strangest story of all. My family frequently went to Wildwood State Park just east of Shoreham. I remember always passing a small sign, on a metal-fence gate, off what was then a two-lane road, that read ‘TESLA Research Station’. On this particular day, my family decided to take a walk on the beach, which is composed of pebbles, not sand. I lagged behind at quite a distance, picking up beautiful pebbles and looking for frosted sea glass. All of a sudden I froze, as I sensed a “wall” of energy enveloping me. It had moved rapidly from off the Long Island Sound, heading from the north to south. I didn’t like it at all, and somehow I felt trapped. I seemed to move in slow motion, as if thick honey had been poured over me. When I screamed to my family for help, my screams seemed to bounce back at me as if deflected by some invisible wall. They never even looked at me. But I was struggling with all my might to break free of this energy. I was very cold and sobbing, and my heart was pounding very quickly. I ran toward my family, with a huge effort, and I felt a resistance, sort of like traveling through a wall of very thick jello, then a pop as I began to more easily run, like a devil was after me. My father looked up in a panic when he saw my state, and he told me they hadn’t seen me at all for the last few minutes. After all was said and done, my “adventure” was chalked up to an overactive imagination. I was told I read too much, and I was actually teased quite a bit about this incident.

“Well, there are some of my wild stories!! I never did figure out what happened to me on the beach at Wildwood, but my family can tell you I never went to that section of the beach again!”—© Stephanie Chesler

Christine Oliva wrote to me with some very intriguing recollections of her childhood on Long Island, with a father deeply involved in covert government / military projects and a knowledge of the underground at Montauk, as well as her own experiences working at numerous defense contractors on Long Island herself.

“I was wondering if you are aware that there are underground tunnels leading from AIL to who-knows-where? I suspect that the tunnels lead to Montauk and also Brookhaven Labs.

“I grew up on Long Island—my father was involved with black projects for many years during his career as an electronic engineer, mathematician, designer and inventor. He was definitely involved with the manufacturing of microchips and helped to design one so that it could go into some of the spaceships that we sent to outer space. All of the work he did for our government was top-security cleared; his history follows from WWII, with Nazi technology.

“Not to get off the subject of AIL, I worked there, among other places, and my work was also security cleared, although not as high of clearance as my father’s. AIL is a priority on my mind because of the extensive interrogation I got there from the persons doing the security clearances; these people definitely were not your average guy-on-the-street. They looked mean and acted very cold; I felt as if I were being inspected under a microscope.

“This was the first time I felt like this while being cleared for security. I will never forget it. They asked the most ridiculous questions, expected me to remember my grandparents’ histories and asked me, also, if I could remember more than that, regarding my family’s history.

“After I passed their interrogations (seemed like hours for me! and their staring at me was very uncomfortable), I had to go for drug and other medical examinations, in order to satisfy their qualifications. These people were not playing around!

“After a few months working at AIL, there were rumors that there were many stairways, leading to secret doors, that lead to underground tunnels and parts of the building you could not get to, unless you knew how and where they were. It was as if there was another part of the building hidden away from everyone else.

“One day I was approached by a fellow whom I did not know well; he started talking about these secret entrances. I now feel as if he was testing me out for some reason. I acted surprised at what he was telling me, because I was! I had heard rumors before but thought they were just that. He asked me if I believed what he was saying, and I sort of doubted him (I am the type of person who does not fall for rumors easily), and when he saw the doubt on my face, he asked me if I would like to see what he was talking about. I said to myself, something was wrong here, who was this person? Why was he approaching me with this information? And why didn’t he care if he got caught? The red flags were thrown up for me! I followed my intuition that danger was near. I felt very uneasy and angered that he would suggest such a thing to me, knowing very well how dangerous it was. I said to him, “No thank you,” and didn’t he realize the dangerous situation he would be putting the both of us in? He laughed and said, ‘Oh, come on, nothing is going to happen!’ I said, again, “No thanks” and walked angrily away. I know he was not lying! And I still cannot figure out why he chose me, among all of the rest, to tell this to, and to try to persuade me to go along with him. I can only thank God that I did not follow him out of curiosity.

“So there is my story about AIL, and the underground tunnels and secret doorways to who-knows-where. Again, my gut feelings say that most of Long Island has these underground tunnels leading from military outposts, electronic manufacturing facilities, military airports, etc. I believe that Brookhaven Labs is also intertwined, underground, with the rest.

“I now know that because of working at the places I did, and the type of work I did, I was definitely controlled in some way, since childhood I might add, and I suspect that ELF waves were used on me and who-knows-what else. My memory has been definitely affected. The time sequence is a mess for me, remembering those years. In other words, I can remember important events but not the sequence in which they occurred—very frustrating, to say the least. Everything is scrambled for me.”

A further message from Ms. Olivo revealed the following:

“OK, first of all, I had no idea that Nichols worked at AIL too! Amazing! Who knows? I probably brushed shoulders with him and didn’t know it. Or at least my mind won’t let me remember it! I am hoping that my father, being old now and probably retired, won’t care anymore. I am, of course, not on speaking terms with him, sad to say, because I know within my heart, he knows a mouthful and more! He definitely knows about alien technology. He said some very important things to me about it when I was very young, and now when I reflect back, alien technology was his forte.

“My father did some really awful things to my deceased mother and me while I was growing up and later on. This included brainwashing, hypnosis, and God-only-knows what else he did in his laboratory in our family’s basement home. I do believe that the phenomena that took place during those years were due to his meddling around down in the basement of our home with all kinds of equipment, radars, oscillators and generators. I know for a fact that the company he worked for, Loral—located in Vermont and then Long Island—loaned him all of that equipment; some of it was way too expensive for him to buy on his own, and why would he when the company gave him all of it.

“He would go to his regular job in the daytime, and then come home to continue his job in the basement. This went on for thirty years, and the last time I saw the basement, he had added computers that he built himself to do God-knows-what. Even though my father being as such, he is still my father, and I haven’t come to the point yet in revealing his name to anyone. For some reason I still feel protective of him, but if there were someone I could really trust, I guess I would reveal his name, as long as I was kept updated to what was found concerning him, given the truth and guaranteed that no harm would come to him. I wouldn’t even mind someone asking him questions, but he is tight-lipped, believe me. Now that all of this stuff has come out, he might not be.”—© Christine Olivo

THE SAGE STORY

I think there is a good chance that most or all of the SAGE radar sites were deliberately chosen to coincide with geomagnetic hot spots, earth-grid power points, or something along these lines, and that (most) SAGE sites have had a connection to mind control all along; in other words, I consider it possible that the SAGE system had at least a twofold agenda going since its inception, or soon after. Nearly all military installations have been constructed on earth-grid power points; in particular, those constructed in this century.

It wouldn’t surprise me if some of the other SAGE radar sites are used in Montauk-type operations as well. At a SAGE location in Germany, it was observed that many of the people in the adjacent town seemed to be “under the influence” of EM/RF mind-manipulating transmissions; San Francisco area researcher and author Ken Wells, Jr. informed me that there is a SAGE radar site close to San Francisco. (All SAGE radar-dish sites were constructed with at least four levels of underground directly underneath the supporting tower structure itself.)

When the Phoenix operation pulled in to Montauk Air Force Station, they weren’t exactly strangers to the Air Force there, and, in fact, base personnel related to the new arrivals, data they had amassed on how the SAGE transmissions caused some very definite effects on personnel at the base; which varied, depending on the particular frequencies being transmitted by the SAGE dish. (One gets a good idea exactly what kinds of “effects” these were, further ahead in this report, in the section entitled “More Weird Tales Of Montauk AFS”).

THE AIR FORCE AND THE (MYSTERIOUS) MONTAUK BASE

Important information about the Montauk base—as well as some exceptionally intriguing anecdotes—come my way from a former Air Force radar technician/engineer named Bob Tidwell.

Bob was briefly stationed at Stewart AFB, an installation otherwise noteworthy for the fact that it has, without doubt, figured significantly somehow or other into the (lower) Hudson Valley UFO phenomenon. Many black NSA choppers seen at or near the sightings of the giant boomerang (and other craft) were traced to Stewart by investigators, during the course of this years-long series of UFO sightings—unsurprisingly, long after Stewart’s “official” closure.

Tidwell has some pertinent technical information regarding SAGE and other radar systems. He also notes that it was highly unusual for a SAGE site to be situated so close to the shoreline—virtually all other sites he knows of are much further inland. He specifies a few other instances of incongruities and anomalies regarding the equipment used at Montauk AFS. Additionally, Tidwell’s information shows how Stewart was used as a staging area for operations at the Montauk base and probably as a paper-trail cover for Montauk as well.

The following material is from a number of e-mails sent to me by Mr. Tidwell:

“These special sites were referred to as SAGE sites, which is very misleading. SAGE (Semi-Automated Ground Environment) actually refers to the manner in which radar and communications information was automatically routed from all radar sites to a central Control & Command center. Most locations also had an associated “ground radio” site that would allow C&C to communicate with whatever intercept aircraft were currently in that particular area. This specialized system involved the setup of multiple communications paths and new protocols to ensure that all of this information would reach C&C. This new technology would later evolve into today’s World-Wide-Web. I don’t know why these sites themselves were referred to as SAGE, unless it was a ploy to draw attention away from the manner in which our radar sites communicated with C&C.

“The Air Defense Command constructed most of these sites in the 1950s, but most were decommissioned in 1969 and 1970 because of the new airborne-radar aircraft, which overcame the curvature problem without having to use the lower frequencies. Some sites that were in sensitive areas remained open as late as 1980.

STRANGE GOINGS-ON

“I can positively say that this site (Montauk Air Force Station) was in operation, in some manner, as late as 1972. This was verified to me by a personal friend a few years ago. He was serving submarine duty in the area and was leaving for extended sea duty within a few days. He and several shipmates were on shore-leave on Long Island and were looking for a beach area to have one last beer party before shipping out. One of the guys suggested the old Montauk Base, as it was deserted, and they could get drunk and spend the night on the beach without getting into trouble.

“They were able to enter the base area OK—the main gate was open and in disrepair—so they started looking for a good place to party. When they came to the location of the radar site, they discovered a shiny new security fence, and they were immediately surrounded by armed security police. They were then escorted off base and told to NEVER COME BACK (emphasis added).

“It has been suggested to me by several persons during my investigations that Stewart AFB was acting as a staging and transfer center for Montauk. Stewart certainly had connections to the electronics and radar schools at Keesler AFB in Biloxi, Mississippi. I, myself, was given orders to the 1st Air Force at Stewart. When I questioned my orders, I was told that Stewart was, indeed, my correct destination and to consider my orders secret, even though this was never officially stated on paper. I’ve been told that certain personnel were being brought into Montauk through Stewart, in order to eliminate a paper trail leading BACK TO MONTAUK (emphasis added).”

This last comment is very interesting to me, because I have heard the same kind of thing from other sources and this practice may, in fact, be continuing presently. In fact, in 1996, while combining a visit to my family in East Hampton [Montauk is in E. H. Township] with my ongoing investigation into the project, I overheard at a supermarket some comments made by the two guys in front of me (one in particular was especially talkative—almost in a nervous fashion) to the checkout girl. This fellow was saying that he and his companion had just arrived in the area and, in fact, had orders to report to Montauk! (Obviously there is no overt military facility ON THE MAP anywhere in this area these days). His decidedly more taciturn buddy grunted in a discouraging way—like, “shut up dude,” but blabbermouth kept on obliviously, to the effect that they had come in “through New Jersey” (as if to provide some paper-trail cover), in order to be stationed at Montauk. After they left, I inquired of the young lady about their comments, adding, “What branch of the military has an active installation at Montauk?” She replied animatedly, “Yeah! That’s just what I was wondering!”

If I had to hazard a guess as to which branch of the military these guys were in, I would say Navy. I definitely didn’t seem to get an “Air Force” vibe. Also, as they were both pretty chunky—I would think they were probably officers of one degree or another!

Tidwell continues: “I remember the trip up there and the trip back, but the few days that I was there are only a blurred memory. I remember showing my orders to the guard at the main gate and being directed to a location that was away from everything else. There was a small, one-story, barracks-like building that had been converted into office space.

“I went in and presented my orders. There were only three people in this building: a female secretary, a First Sergeant and a Captain. I remember then being told to go outside and police the area (pick up cigarette butts), while they checked my orders. Looking back now, this memory seems very absurd—having a new person walking around, picking up trash in a dress-blue uniform.

“After what seemed like an hour, I was called back in and told to go into the Captain’s office. He informed me that my orders were a mistake, and that I would be reassigned to another location. He had my new orders on his desk, already typed out, except for the new location. The nearest location would have been Buffalo, but the Captain simply asked me where I wanted to go (this is unheard of in the military). In a daze I said, ‘Back to Alabama’. He then took my orders out to the secretary and returned a few minutes later, with the Alabama location typed in. He never called or checked with anyone to OK this, and I never checked in with the base personnel office, which is standard practice. They seemed pleased to get me out of the area.

“One of the things that seemed to trouble them was that I had gotten married a few months earlier and had brought my wife with me. I vaguely remember being there about one to two weeks, and I had even rented a place to live. I also have vague memories of shopping on the base, although I don’t remember anything else about the base. Also, why would I be there that long if I had gone in and was told that I wasn’t supposed to be there? So, I loaded up my car and drove back to Alabama. I spent the next year at the Dauphin Island radar site (I found out later that this was one of the most sought-after assignments), until it closed.

“We were again asked to fill out the dream sheets for reassignment. After the site closed, the personnel began leaving for their new assignments. After a while, the base commander called me into his office and wanted to know why I was still there and hadn’t left yet. I informed him that I hadn’t received my new orders yet. They started checking and appeared to be experiencing some confusion. At one point, I was asked if I had been getting my paychecks OK.

“The next day I was called into the Commander’s office, and laying on his desk were my new orders with the new assignment location blank. I was again asked, ‘Where do you want to go?’ The nearest location that was still active was North Charleston, S.C., so I requested that. He took the orders out to his secretary and returned a few minutes later with that location filled in. Back then I didn’t question any of this strangeness. I just told myself that I was being extremely lucky.

“I spent my remaining two years at North Charleston. While going through my out-processing physical, several doctors were very interested in my knees. They asked several times if I was having any trouble with them. This seemed strange to me, as I have never had any trouble with my knees in my life. I was then asked who had performed the reconstruction work on both of my knees, as they were amazed at how precisely it had been done. I told them that they were mistaken, and that nothing had ever been done to my knees. This seemed to really trouble them. Later, when I got home, I examined my knees and discovered traces of faint surgery marks on both knees. The marks are still visible today.

“After going back to civilian life, I occasionally would have a recurring dream. In this dream, I was told that I would have to go back into the Air Force and work for an additional two years. I thought that this dream might have a connection with being on inactive duty status for two years before I would receive my permanent discharge, but the dreams continued on for about 20 years. They were very vivid and were always connected in some way. I would be stationed at a strange radar site, and I worked on equipment that I was not familiar with. The site was located on what appeared to be a section of a larger base, although I couldn’t quite picture the base. It was also located near water. In the dreams, I would do normal, everyday things (besides work at the radar site), like shop in stores and ride around in my car. It was as if I were reliving another life in my dreams.

“Then, sometime in the early 90s, I noticed a book titled Montauk—Experiments in Time. The name drew my attention, so I picked up the book and started thumbing through it. My blood then seemed to turn into ice-water, for here was the location that I had been dreaming about. All of the photos and illustrations had been in my dreams, even the ones that supposedly pertained to time travel.

“I know that there wasn’t enough time for me to have been stationed there, as I was only in New York for a few days, although several people that have helped me with this (author Marc Davenport and quantum physicist, Dr. Fred Allen Wolf), insist that some form of time travel could have been involved.

“A few vague memories that have come back to me regarding my time at Stewart are: being taken to a Holiday Inn(?), to a room on the second floor, and being strapped into a chair and drugged. There is also a memory of being put on an aircraft and taken to another location. This reminds me of your mention of psychotronic devices—maybe used for mind control. Another point that has surfaced in the last month concerns the time that I was stationed at Dauphin Island. I wrote an article for my newsletter about UFO radar reports and used my knowledge of working on equipment at North Charleston. After completing the article, I realized that I didn't refer back to my experience at Dauphin Island. I then realized that I didn't remember exactly what it was that I had worked on there. I do remember everything else there, except what I was supposed to actually be working on, and probably would not have realized this had I not decided to write the article.

"As a quick note, during my investigation into sites and bases here in Alabama, I discovered that Maxwell AFB, at Montgomery, was the original NORAD Command & Control Center. I have several eyewitnesses to the fact that Maxwell has several underground levels. My investigation into this goes as far as to even show what happened to the dirt that was removed. It is still being used for research and development projects, among other things, and one of my information sources stated that the basic research for the HAARP project was conducted at Maxwell. I haven't been able to confirm this but thought that it might fit into your research."—© Bob Tidwell

Tidwell recollected an incident, which happened to a friend of his in the Air Force, around 1980. This fellow had just reported to a base in Maine, and the next thing he knew he was waking up in the Navy hospital in Boston. He was told that he had fallen and hit his head badly. He had no recollection of any such event, or what happened in between that and waking up in the Navy hospital. As fortune would have it, he was befriended in the hospital by a nurse, and when he was released, he was given some time off from active duty to continue recuperating. The nurse invited him to spend a few days with her at her parents' house on Long Island. Major and continual feelings of deja vu washed over this fellow after he arrived on Long Island, coupled with some very strange feelings about things that he felt may have happened to him during the time he was supposedly "unconscious", after his "accident".

As Tidwell put it—

"He then told me about having dreams of being stationed at an unusual site that he felt was located at Montauk Point. In his dreams, he felt as if he were an officer, because everyone would salute him. He also said that the site was a joint Air Force-Navy project of some sort."

This person became progressively more curious about what might be going on and subsequently became aware of the Montauk Project operation, which he was sure he had somehow been involved in. As Tidwell noted, the man believed, based on what he found out about the Montauk Project, that it was an operation involving both the Air Force and the Navy (as HAARP was originally). Not many people know this and I don't believe it was mentioned specifically in Nichols' books.

Tidwell also relays how his friend has to have a yearly checkup as a requirement for his disability classification. Bob writes, "Every time he undergoes his physical, he is questioned as to his medical records. It seems that he has two identical files with his correct name and social security number on each file. The other file incorrectly identifies him as a Marine Corps Captain (He was put into a Naval Hospital after his injury, not an Air Force Hospital)."

NO RECORDS OF AIR FORCE RADAR PERSONNEL FROM MONTAUK!

Bob Tidwell keeps fairly close contacts with other Air Force radar techs, and they are somewhat a specialized breed. He confided to me that, although there is absolutely no doubt that Montauk AFS exists (or existed), that it was a radar station for the Air Force and that obviously it was staffed, neither he nor any of the numerous radar techs he has contact with know of, or [have] ever heard of, anyone who was ever stationed at Montauk.

Here's what Bob had to say:

"Radar techs tend to stay in touch with each other, even after all these years. I contacted some of them and requested the names of anyone that was stationed at Montauk AFS, and at a site that I'm looking into here in Alabama that may have been similar. What we discovered was that none of us has ever heard of anyone that was ever stationed at Montauk, before or after 1969. This is very odd, in that we are usually able to track down people from sites all over the world. There are major web sites devoted to us radar techs, but nobody can remember ever hearing of anyone that admits to being stationed at Montauk. We put out feelers everywhere and came up completely blank. The radar site was there, no question about that, but the people that were stationed there are like ghosts. The same is true for several other sites that I am looking into.

"We did find out that when Montauk closed in 1969, and was reopened through TAC [Tactical Air Command], that this was most unusual, and it also suggests to us that the site was being used as a cover for something else. I did find out, though, that Montauk's military connections after 1969 were being made through Hancock Field in New York. Hopefully this can be of use to you."—© Bob Tidwell

MORE WEIRD TALES OF MONTAUK AFS

Information which strongly suggests that some most unusual things were going on at Montauk Air Force Station in the late 1950s and early 1960s, comes from a fellow whose father was an Air Force Colonel and Assistant Base Commander at Mitchell Air Force Base, in central Long Island (he wishes to retain anonymity). Periodically, personnel from Montauk AFS would come to Mitchell for R&R. These fellows caused considerable consternation and distress to personnel at Mitchell due to the peculiar, bizarre, dissociative and generally loony behavior exhibited by just about all of them. Among other oddities, a number of the men became totally lost and disoriented, though they had not gone very far at all from the central base area. The group from Montauk was monitored closely and constantly by their commander. Something seemed seriously out of whack with the entire group, and the Mitchell commander was asked by other Mitchell personnel to have the Montauk group leave before their R&R tour was over. This was in the very early 1960s, and the number of these kinds of occurrences prompted this colonel to conclude that something was, indeed, amiss at Montauk AFS, and to drive out to Montauk a number of times with his son in the interest of attempting to find out what was going on at the Camp Hero location.

Even though this phase of the Phoenix Project—now known as the Montauk Project—had not yet "officially" gotten underway, let's not forget that Camp Hero has had a reputation of being a "psych" base, pretty much throughout its entire existence, shortly after the land was legally stolen from its Montauk Indian owners around 1910. In other words, it has always been a center for experimental, psychologically-oriented or -based (i.e. intelligence) government projects. Nichols indicated that there were some indications that, even before the Montauk Project commenced, there were ties between Brookhaven Labs—with its considerable (ex)-Nazi scientist contingent—and the Montauk Point base on a major earth-grid power point, with its connections to the preexisting underground, and a significant, well-established, pro-German (Nazi/Aryan) community in the Montauk area.

On top of this, there is some very strong evidence that Montauk (Camp Hero) was the site of some weirdness with psychedelic drugs in the mid-60s. As Peter Moon noted, there is almost certainly a link to Timothy Leary and Richard Albert of Harvard during this period of time at Montauk Air Force Station. A base building—which had a number of rooms painted in full-on psychedelic style, circa 1967-68—were found and videotaped by Preston Nichols with a video crew at Montauk Air Force Station.

A Mrs. Sneed, of Sag Harbor, visited Montauk AFS in 1980 and related to me her experience there. She was with a friend and on legitimate business for her husband, a retired military man. The trip was pursuant to certain consumer goods and other items being made available to veterans at a major discount and obtainable at the PX of any nearby military base. Mrs. Sneed had with her the letters/documents of authorization. Montauk AFS was the closest base to them, so that's where they went (Let's not forget, however, that Montauk Air Force Station was officially decommissioned and closed 11 years prior to this; of course, the reality was that it was NOT closed and, naturally, many people in the area knew this obvious fact).

Strangely (or not!), they were treated with extreme brusqueness, suspicion and rudeness, first by guards at the entrance to the base, then by other base personnel and officers called to the scene by the guards, all of whom attempted in every possible way to deter the women from entering the property, despite being shown the official authorization numerous times.

Mrs. Sneed refused to back down, having made up her mind not to have undertaken the 50-plus-mile round trip for nothing; and seeing no good reason why the desired items should not be made available, according to the terms of the authorizing document she presented.

Finally, the women were admitted and escorted directly to the PX, with vehicles directly in front and in back of their car. They were not allowed to stop or slow down. Although the base itself did seem to be unusually quiet on the "surface"—judging solely by the reception they'd received—there was obviously something rather "important" and secretive going on there.

Mrs. Sneed stated that there were air-vent stacks protruding from the ground all over the place. She told me she felt very strongly at the time that substantial underground activity was taking place at the Montauk base and, in fact, she commented on this to her friend. Mrs. Sneed stated that, though she and her friend couldn't possibly be any threat in any imaginable way to anything (legitimate at least) that was going on there, they had people standing right next to them when they went into the PX and were escorted right back to their cars and right off the base. According to Mrs. Sneed, everyone they encountered was acting very strangely, downright creepy.

"LADY THAT CAME TO VISIT"

In Memoriam:

"One" of those first to introduce the "Word" to S. Africa

On the 19th of September, 1999, with a mixture of great relief and sadness, we bid farewell to our dear friend, Annamie Cardwell-Gardne: relief, because after years of pain and suffering, she's now returned to from whence she came; sadness, that she went never (consciously) knowing why it was she never could find that for which she sought so desperately. She came close numerous times—only, like so many, to be led down "the primrose path" that is illusion—the illusion that she'd found "it all" time and again, only to discover the emptiness in what she so hoped to be the Truth and purpose of this life, for her soul growth.

Perhaps Annamie tried too hard, sacrificed too much, in her quest. She certainly gave 100% and more of herself to whatever the cause of the moment, be that cause helping another or offering herself as a human guinea-pig in the cause of healing. This was exemplified these last 6-and-more years of her short life, as she battled the cancer "given" her by another, for whom she was at one time prepared to sacrifice all, only to, as already stated, find that, too, naught but illusion.

Annamie, as an intellectual, was able to think most things through to seemingly logical conclusions. She wrote beautifully upon any given subject, especially where "spirituality" as of the moment was understood. She explored the New Age with a passion, and therein lay much of her unwitting limitation, for she little realized that that which began in truth became badly infiltrated by the "other side" which is, in essence, "oh so human" and thus delusionary in both essence and in fact!—for it is based on the self-same illusion set deliberately to ensnare mankind. These are the same delusions which have so recently led other—at one time, equally dedicated—souls so devastatingly astray. And you know of that of which we speak.

Annamie was, too, a teacher and a musician of no mean talent. Many are the children who came to understand the essence of the "note", through her dedication to helping them understand music and its underlying meaning in all of our lives. Hours she spent preparing these little ones for a musical concert, when it took her all to even breathe. Ill as she may have been, she was never too ill not to see another's suffering, although far less severe than was her own, and she helped alleviate their pain, at great physical cost to herself and her own well-being. It was not unknown for her to take her car and drive to another city—ten, twenty, thirty miles away—with her 12-year-old son sitting beside her to change the gears, which she was no longer able to do. She would do this in order to get medication to—or give counseling or other help to—a stranger in distress; to the end, this was so. She will be sorely missed by those who came to depend upon her.

As now with so many of the original crew of THE WORD already another step "Home", we know Annamie, too, now sees and is fast coming to truly know, Truth in The One True Light. The Truth she so desperately tried, against all odds, to unravel whilst she dwelt here amongst us, for she has now returned to the place from whence we came—be it for good or on a refresher course. And unless we are much mistaken, the questing hearts and minds of all who "explored" alongside her and helped in the mission of unblinking, unblinkered minds, with the TRUTH as it is and not as we might WISH IT TO BE*, in our brainwashed ignorance.

Go in Light, go in peace, our friend—for you surely have paid the price and are now deserving of rest along THE WAY.

Salu, Ann Forbes—SA Crew, 21 September 1999

GREED AT CORE OF INDONESIA'S TIMOR PROBLEM

By Enver Masud, The Wisdom Fund, 9/22/99

WASHINGTON, D.C.—At its core, the problem of East Timor, and indeed much of Indonesia, has a lot to do with greed, rather than the Muslim-Christian divide portrayed in the media.

From ancient times until the 7th Century AD, Indonesia was ruled by various Hindu kingdoms, among which the Majapahit Empire became the most powerful. Sumatra was then known as the "Island of Gold", and Java as the "Rice Island".

Muslim traders began arriving in the 13th Century, and Islam spread peacefully through the islands...In the early 16th Century, the Hindu kingdom of Mataram converted to Islam...

...Then came 350 years of brutal colonial rule and exploitation. First to arrive were the Portuguese, in 1511 AD. The Portuguese were followed by the Dutch (1602 to 1799 AD), the British (1811 to 1815 AD), and again the Dutch (1816 to 1908 AD).

The colonial masters took slaves and forced the natives to grow crops for export, which resulted in famines and destroyed the thriving, inter-island trade.

By 1908, nationalist movements began seeking self-government, and Indonesia declared its independence on August 17, 1947. Sukarno, a leader of the independence movement, became president. He was overthrown in 1965 by Suharto, in a U.S.-backed military coup, in which it is reported that one million people, mainly Chinese, were killed.

When the Dutch and Portuguese formally partitioned East Timor between them in the 19th Century, East Timor remained a part of the Portuguese colony. The governor of Portuguese Timor, in 1974, granted permission for political parties, and five emerged.

Said to be lacking popular support, Fretilin—seeking independence from Indonesia—resorted to terror. Civil war broke out and, on August 27, 1975, the governor and Portuguese officials abandoned the capital, Dili. The U.S.-armed-and-trained Indonesian military entered East Timor to stop a civil war.

Fretilin, supplied with arms from the Portuguese army arsenal, declared East Timor independent. The four other parties in East Timor declared their independence and integration with Indonesia. East Timor became the 27th province of Indonesia, but this claim was not recognized by the UN.

Rich in natural resources, Indonesia's primary problem is the equitable sharing of these resources. Foreign interests, and internal corruption, add to the inherent difficulty that, while Java is Indonesia's most heavily-populated island, many of the resources are located in less-populated islands.

According to former U.S. Ambassador to Indonesia, Edward Masters, Indonesia did more in 35 years to develop barren, infertile East Timor than Portugal did in four centuries.

Indonesia allocated development funds to East Timor at a rate six times the national average...By 1994, East Timor had 600 elementary schools, 90 middle schools and three colleges...there were 10 hospitals and nearly 200 village health centers built...500 km of hard-surfaced roads...and the number of Catholic churches in predominantly Catholic East Timor quadrupled under Indonesian rule

But Fretilin continued to resist Indonesian rule, and offshore oil discoveries made matters worse.

"Australian oil technicians say that the Timor seabed could yield some of the world's most productive oil fields," reported the Multinational Monitor. A treaty was signed in 1989 by Australia and Indonesia. This Timor Gap Treaty came into force in 1991 and is due for review in 2031. Australia desperately needs this oil, and massive revenues are said to flow to both governments. Independence for East Timor would likely give it a larger share of these revenues.

The division of natural resources is also at the core of secessionist movements in Aceh, Irian Jaya and in the neighboring Philippines.

On Aceh, in 1971, Mobil Oil discovered one of the world's richest onshore reserves of natural gas, estimated at 40 billion cubic metres...Mobil Oil is reported to have caused massive environmental damage and is said to be linked to the Indonesian military's land seizures, bombings and massacres.

On Irian Jaya, military repression and massive environmental damage has been linked to Freeport McMoRan, a Louisiana corporation.

In April 1967, Freeport McMoRan became the first foreign company granted an operating permit following the 1965-66 U.S.-backed coup that installed General Suharto. Former U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger is credited with having introduced company officials to President Suharto. It is reported that Mr. Kissinger sits on Freeport's board, earning $500,000 a year, and Freeport also retains his law firm, Kissinger and Associates, for a reputed $200,000 a year.

In 1999, Freeport McMoRan received approval to almost double production, which will increase land seizures and environmental damage. With reserves valued at $40 billion, the Freeport project is the largest single GOLD deposit in the world and the third largest open-cut copper mine...

...The media publish reports about "Muslim" violence in Mindanao but not the reasons for their frustration.

And similarly, in East Timor, the violence has little if anything to do with Muslim-Christian enmity. Christians live in peace with Muslims in West Timor and elsewhere in Indonesia. Greed, the greed of corporations, government officials and individuals, is at the core of the problems. The religion card is used to divide, rule and exploit the people and the land—just like colonial rulers did in earlier times.

[JR: We now know the selection process the U.S., UN, IMF, WB and NATO use to “invade” a sovereign nation for “humanitarian” reasons. Once this One World Government’s greed-team targets a small nation for “multinational acquisition” to control its rich assets, they covertly create dissension, usually through religious or economic conflict. Then political insurgence and slaughter are orchestrated to publicly justify intervention. TIMOR is an ideal situation and identical to Kosovo, which is also a small nation’s province but has the largest mineral deposits and mining in Europe. Has the established media informed you of these facts? Are you beginning to see the bigger picture?]

US “FACING INSECURE FUTURE”

By Carol Giacomo, Reuters, 9/17/99

The U.S. is expected to retain its pre-eminence as a world power during the next 25 years, but Americans will become less secure and face the likelihood that many will die the victims of terrorism on home soil, a study says.

The Pentagon-funded study also concluded that, during the next two decades, the United States’ military superiority “will not entirely protect us” from threats; dependence on foreign energy sources will grow, and some important nations—left unnamed—could “fragment or fail”.

“Although a global competitor to the U.S. is unlikely to arise over the next 25 years, emerging powers—either singly or in coalition—will increasingly constrain U.S. options regionally and limit its strategic influence,” it said.

The U.S. would have “limited ability to impose our will, and we will be vulnerable to an increasing range of threats against American forces and citizens overseas, as well as at home.

“States, terrorists and other disaffected groups will acquire weapons of mass destruction...and some of them will use them.

“The most serious threat to our security may consist of unannounced attacks on American cities, by sub-national groups, using genetically-engineered pathogens.”

The study, by a panel chaired by former senators Warren Rudman, a Republican, and Gary Hart, a Democrat, described the world confronting the U.S. in the new millennium.

The experts cautioned that while “the American moment in world history will not last forever”, for the foreseeable future, U.S. leadership in the world was of paramount importance.

In the financial area, the panel concluded that the economic future would be more difficult to predict and manage.

While global economic growth would continue overall, “serious and unexpected economic downturns, major disparities of wealth, volatile capital flows, increasing vulnerabilities in global electronic infrastructures, labor and social disruptions and pressures for increased protectionism will also occur.”

The panel also concluded:

*An economically-strong U.S. was likely to remain a primary political, military and cultural force through 2025. It would remain “the” principal military power;

*Much of the world “will resent and oppose” the U.S., and reliable alliances will be more difficult to establish and sustain;

*World energy supplies will remain largely based on fossil fuels, and U.S. “dependence on foreign sources of energy will also grow over the next two decades”;

*Weapons of mass destruction will proliferate, making the maintenance of a robust U.S. nuclear deterrent essential;

*Some “important states” would not be able to manage the challenges now emerging and “could fragment or fail”. New states, international protectorates and zones of autonomy would increase, many born of violence;

*Weapons would probably be put in space. Space would become permanently manned;

*Pressure for the U.S. to reduce its military presence in Europe and Asia would increase substantially;

*New technologies would divide the world as well as draw it together. An anti-technology backlash was possible;

*All national borders “will be porous; some will bend and some break”. Traditional bonds between states and citizens, including in the U.S., could not be taken for granted.

RARE PLANETARY ALIGNMENT IN 2000 COULD COST THE EARTH

London Sunday Times, 9/19/99

The conjunction of Mercury, Venus, Mars, Jupiter and Saturn in the year 2000 could lead to a big increase in insurance “premiums”, because brokers are taking seriously, predictions that the rare event could cause earthquakes, tidal waves and volcanic eruptions.

Lloyd’s, Britain’s leading insurance market, is turning to astrology amid fears that a planetary conjunction in 2000 could force huge payouts.

The conjunction, in which Mercury, Venus, Mars, Jupiter and Saturn will line up with the Sun and Moon, is expected to generate a collective gravitational pull that could initiate earthquakes, tidal waves and volcanic eruptions.

The alignment, which will happen in early May 2000, has long been a source of dire predictions among astrologers but has never been taken seriously elsewhere—until now. Last week, however, it emerged that DP Mann, one of the biggest non-marine syndicates at Lloyd’s, has formed a group to study such threats.

The group has asked Dr. Julian Salt, an insurance expert who specializes in assessing the risks posed by natural perils, to look at the threat from space at a seminar for its directors and underwriters. If the threat is taken seriously, it could lead to higher premiums. Salt, employed by the Loss Prevention Council, a subsidiary of the Association of British Insurers and Lloyd’s, has published his first report on the subject in which he warns that, although the risks are small, they cannot be ignored.

Planetary conjunctions occur when celestial bodies become aligned, so that they are moving in the same plane. Conjunctions involving two or three bodies are relatively common, but the last one to involve six was 6000 years ago.

There was fossil evidence that “the last such conjunction prompted earthquakes, volcanic eruptions and tidal waves,” Salt said. “There is a real possibility that the collective force of these planets—acting on the Earth’s outer crust—will cause it to slip. It could produce mile-high waves, hurricane-like winds and volcanic explosions worldwide.”

Such disasters would come at the same time as problems caused by the millennium bug—the design flaw in computer chips that is predicted to cause global malfunctions in 2000 and which is already causing concern to insurers.

Conjunctions have been linked with disasters for centuries. One of the most significant is said to be that of Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus and Neptune, which has happened seven times in 3500 years. The last, in 1812, was followed by “the year of no summer”, in which the Northern Hemisphere suffered freezing temperatures for months, which destroyed crops and led to widespread famine.

In 1962, a conjunction of five planets coincided with an earthquake that rocked the Middle East, killing 20,000 people in Iran. In Europe, flooding killed more than 600...

...Dr. Peter Smith, editor of Geology Today, said geologists would take a particular interest in the alignment. “The general theory is that the conjunction of planets in May 2000 will be capable of creating sufficient stress on our planet to cause natural disasters. I doubt that will happen.”

Chris Forbes, managing director of DP Mann, said the company was trying to decide whether such risks posed a threat to its markets or presented an opportunity to sell more insurance.

[ JR: If enough people on earth concentrated and sent positive thoughts towards this alignment the major disasters could be diverted. This, however, will not affect the increase in insurance premiums, which is inevitable.]

HONEY IS STICKY ALTERNATIVE TO ANTIBIOTICS: RESEARCHERS

CBC News, 9/20/99

TORONTO—Medical researchers in New Zealand are suggesting you can catch more “bugs” with honey than with ordinary antibiotics. The findings of a study that tested honey as a treatment against antibiotic-resistant bacteria or “superbugs” were released at an international convention of beekeepers last week.

Researcher Peter Molan and his colleagues at the University of Waikato Honey Research Unit tested honey, known by scientists for its anti-bacterial activity since the 1960s, on superbugs in the laboratory.

They found that the bacteria—resistant to other antibiotics—were as sensitive to the honey as regular bacteria.

Molan says this may be a big finding for medical personnel, who are trying to find different ways to fight the bacteria, which are constantly adapting to new drugs.

Although there have been no clinical trials to back up honey's effectiveness against the superbugs, Molan says plenty of research has been done on honey's ability to fight bacterial infection.

"There's a lot of published work, including randomized, controlled, clinical trials, where it's been shown that infected wounds can have the bacteria cleared very rapidly by using honey," Molan says.

Molan says honey works as a wound dressing because of an enzyme or protein that bees add to the nectar. When honey is applied to a wound, the enzyme produces hydrogen peroxide, a well-known antiseptic. It is released slowly as the enzyme continues to produce small amounts of the hydrogen peroxide and the wound is cleaned without any damage to the tissue.

Molan says not every variety of honey is an ideal bacteria fighter.

"We're using honey that has been selected to have a high level of anti-bacterial activity," he says.

Molan says the next step for his research is clinical trials on the use of honey against the deadly flesh-eating disease. Laboratory evidence suggests the sticky substance may be as effective at getting rid of the bacteria as the usual procedure of surgery to cut away the affected flesh.

Honey has an added bonus, says Molan, of stimulating actual healing of the wound, which reduces scarring in the tissue.

[JR: Once honey is officially approved by the FDA as a treatment against antibiotic-resistant bacteria or "superbugs", we will then only be able to get it by prescription.]

U.S. ESTIMATES 76 MILLION FOOD POISONINGS A YEAR

By Mike Cooper, Yahoo Daily News, 9/17/99

ATLANTA (Reuters)—Contaminated food may cause 76 million illnesses and 5,000 deaths in the United States every year, federal health officials said Thursday, using information from a new tracking system...

...In what it said was the agency's most complete estimate to date, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) said 325,000 people are hospitalized because of food-borne diseases in the United States every year.

CDC Director Dr. Jeffrey Koplan said the new, more precise estimates are based on a number of sources, including data from a new tracking system called PulseNet, which uses DNA fingerprinting at more than 35 laboratories to more quickly detect food-borne illnesses.

Researchers also used other surveillance systems, death certificates and published studies from academic institutions to estimate that diseases caused by food, may cause 76 million cases of gastrointestinal illness and 5,000 deaths annually.

"We're extremely pleased to have a new baseline to measure our future efforts to improve food safety. Updated estimates of food-borne illness are needed to guide new prevention efforts and assess the effectiveness of food safety measures," Koplan said in a statement.

The CDC said the number of known causes of food poisoning has increased more than five-fold since 1942, and the chance of contamination through food-handling errors has risen, as more people eat out or eat processed food.

"While the U.S. food supply remains one of the safest in the world, these new findings further support what we have said all along—the public health burden of food-borne disease is substantial," Health and Human Services Secretary Donna Shalala said in the CDC statement.

Earlier this year, the CDC said illnesses from two of the nation's leading causes of food poisoning declined last year because of food safety programs, including better inspections of meat and poultry plants.

Preliminary data from the FoodNet tracking system in five states showed a 14-percent decline in salmonella infections between 1996 and 1998 and an 8-percent decline in illnesses caused by campylobacter, the most common, bacterial, food-borne pathogen in the United States.

[JR: With much of our food products, fruits and vegetables imported today—due to NAFTA, WTO and MFN Treaties—from countries that use "sweat shops" and child labor, DDT and other banned chemicals and wash their exported produce in sewer water, there is no question we are eating contaminated foods. It is, however, good to know that the CDC has such good tracking systems to record all our deaths and illnesses due to food contamination. They must maintain an accurate score to know if they are winning their covert de-population game.]

DEADLY NEW VIRUS FEARED

SCIENTISTS SAY THE OUTBREAK WAS PROBABLY DUE TO A MYSTERY VIRUS

The Malaysian Star, 9/18/99

The deaths of at least 34 young children in Malaysia may be due to a mystery virus which causes massive brain and heart collapse, say researchers.

The children, aged five months to seven years old, died within just five months in Sarawak.

The deaths were initially blamed on an outbreak of hand, foot and mouth disease.

But all the children who died had a fever, which rapidly progressed to heart and lung failure, suggesting both their brains and hearts had been affected by the virus.

A study of patients at Sibu Hospital, where 20 of the 34 children died, was unable to identify any existing virus as causing the outbreak.

Experts examined 16 cases of children who died after developing a fever, and eight children whose bodies became paralyzed and floppy—one of the main symptoms of the illness—but survived.

The scientists had suspected an enterovirus—a common cause of diseases like meningitis and myocarditis, which causes pressure on the heart.

But they found that only three of the 16 children who died—none of the survivors—showed traces of enteroviruses.

Two children had the enterovirus associated with hand, foot and mouth disease, a common, seasonal illness in that part of Asia.

Researchers, writing in The Lancet...say hand, foot and mouth disease does not usually progress so rapidly and does not usually affect the heart.

They say that, for those who died, myocarditis was the major cause, rather than other reasons such as brain fever.

Since only three of the children showed traces of enteroviruses, they think the myocarditis could have been caused by a type of adenovirus, which they have dubbed "Agent Y".

Adenoviruses are not normally associated with life-threatening conditions. They usually only cause mild illnesses, such as colds.

They were particularly surprised to find Agent Y in brain fluid as well as heart tissue.

And they believe the fact that the outbreak coincided with a seasonal hand, foot and mouth disease outbreak suggests the agent may interact with other viruses.

They conclude that scientists have only a basic knowledge of the way viruses develop in Southeast Asia.

A similar outbreak took place in Taiwan, in 1998, and investigations there are ongoing.

[JR: The World Health Organization wrongly diagnosed the previous deadly virus in Malaysia, about 6 months ago, as a pig virus and required all pigs destroyed in an attempt to stop the spread of the virus. WHO never determined the real source.

Coincidence?

Let's just say the previous mysterious and deadly virus was at the same time the Clinton Administration, World Bank and IMF were at odds with Malaysia's Prime Minister Datuk Seri Dr. Mahathir Mohamad because he would not bow down to their economic demands, which required ownership of Malaysia's national assets to be open to foreign (international) investors.

Could this new virus have anything to do with the most recent push by P.M. Mahathir to establish a "united states" of Southeast Asia? It seems a new, mysterious virus hits Malaysia every time P.M. Mahathir defies the agenda of the NWO.]

WEED OUT SECRECY

Chicago Sun-Times, 9/20/99

The hype linking a commonly used weed-killer to cancer in dogs is turning out to be based on some questionable research. Making matters worse is that the agency responsible for that scare, tried to keep its scientific methods secret, even though the research was financed with taxpayers' dollars.

At issue is 2,4-dichlorophenoxyacetic acid, commonly known as 2,4-D. The National Cancer Institute reported in 1991 that the rate of canine lymphoma doubled where dog owners used the chemical on their lawns four or more times a year. That, naturally, frightened dog owners and brought, what else, a new government regulation. The Environmental Protection Agency required warning signs posted on lawns sprayed with the weed-killer.

This scary research, which was one of those statistics-based studies, was suspect to cancer specialists because there was no actual, physical examination of any of the dogs. Now, a new study at Michigan State University, funded by 2,4-D producers, debunks the institute's warning. The institute is sticking by its warning. But the agency's credibility is damaged by its refusal to release the original research data to the 2,4-D producers. It took the industry, using the Freedom of Information Act, 18 months to pry the data from the institute.

This is a cautionary tale because the Freedom of Information law is under constant attack. Critics, including respected groups such as the National Academy of Sciences, say the law may compromise intellectual property rights. It is understandable that scientists and technology firms would want to profit from their research. But if scientific discoveries are funded by public money, then that research should be freely available. Only research critical to the national defense should be exempt.

[JR: This reminds me of the cancer reports on ethylene dibromide (EDB), an extremely hazardous pesticide that was banned by the US Environmental Protection Agency in 1983. I am told that the producers quickly found another use for this banned EDB chemical. It is an excellent flame retardant now used in JP-8 military jet fuels. This is the leading, suspected ("officially denied") cause of "CONTRAILS" not dissipating easily, so that they spread across the skies and eventually settle on plants, animals and the skin of unsuspecting people.]

FDA APPROVES NEW ANTIBIOTIC

By Susan Okie, Washington Post, 9/22/99

The Food and Drug Administration, yesterday, approved the first member of a new class of antibiotics to treat hospital patients infected with bacteria that are resistant to all other drugs.

The medicine, Synercid, is effective against a species of bacteria, Enterococcus Faecium, that increasingly resists treatment with Vancomycin, an antibiotic that hospital physicians have used for 30 years to fight infections when nothing else would work. The FDA also approved the new drug to treat complicated skin infections caused by the more familiar staph and strep bacteria.

The FDA's action comes, as bacteria that used to succumb to familiar antibiotics, such as penicillin, are increasingly evolving new strains that cannot be killed by those drugs, making many infections harder to cure. For that reason, doctors have been urging pharmaceutical companies to develop antibiotics that work in new ways. Yesterday, they welcomed the news of Synercid's approval...

...“I would say that it's always exciting to have another option available,” said George M. Eliopoulos, an antibiotics researcher and member of the Infectious Disease Division at Boston's Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center.

At least three other new classes of antibiotics are being tested in patients, he added.

Synercid can only be given intravenously, and experts said, yesterday, that for most patients, running it into a small arm vein is so painful that it has to be delivered straight into one of the large veins in the chest or abdomen. It will cost an average of $250 to $300 per day and is expected to be used almost exclusively to treat certain seriously-ill patients in hospitals and skilled nursing facilities.

“The people whose lives may be saved by Synercid, are likely to be desperately-ill patients in intensive care units, including recipients of transplanted kidneys and livers, and those who have had recent surgery and whose immune systems have been weakened by cancer treatment,” said Peter K. Linden, an associate professor of medicine and anesthesiology at the University of Pittsburgh School of Medicine.

Such patients are vulnerable to infection with E. Faecium, a species of bacteria that lives in the human intestinal tract, and can be spread by the hands of healthcare workers and even by contaminated stethoscopes and blood pressure cuffs...Linden said about 50-percent of hospital-acquired strains of this bacteria are resistant to Vancomycin.

In studies supported by Synercid's manufacturer, Rhone-Poulenc Rorer, the drug was given to 1,222 patients with Vancomycin-resistant E. faecium infections, who had no other treatment options. Although all patients were severely ill, the drug's overall effectiveness rate was 52 percent, said Sandra Kweder, acting director of the FDA's Office of Drug Evaluation....

...More than 2 million Americans acquire infections in hospitals each year, and about 1.4 million people in the United States receive Vancomycin annually, said Bruce Lavin, associate director for U.S. medical affairs at Rhone-Poulenc Rorer. He said the company estimates that Synercid will capture 3-percent to 5-percent of the Vancomycin market and will be used primarily for patients whose infections are resistant to Vancomycin, who are allergic to that drug, or who cannot tolerate it because of side effects...

[JR: It seems that terminally-ill patients are paying for very costly, experimental procedures at $250-$300 a day. If these infections ARE contracted through health-care workers and equipment, then these treatments should be administered free to the patients...Ha Ha.]

NAME CHECKERS STILL WANT TO KNOW WHO IS JEWISH

By Richard Roeper, Sun-Times, 9/14/99

Buried in a New York Times story last week—about Viacom Chairman Sumner Redstone—was the anecdotal nugget that his father, Max Rothstein, bought the Latin Quarter nightclub years ago from Lou Walters, Barbara Walters' father.

Obviously, media-mogul Redstone has a homogenized name. When Robin Quivers mentioned this discrepancy on the Howard Stern show, Stern said, “What, is he ashamed of being Jewish?”

(The Times noted in a parenthetical aside that “Mr. Rothstein, not Mr. Redstone, changed the family name.”)

Stern, who is half-Jewish, is one of the few media personalities with the guts to comment on whether public figures are Jewish—something that shouldn't matter in an idealized world, but in the real world happens to be of great interest to an awful lot of people, for various and often deplorable reasons.

The thinking goes like this: “We need to know who's Jewish and who isn't, because of course the Jews control things through their infiltration of the media.”

Right. Just ask White Supremacist Matthew Hale.

A feature on Stern's show invites panelists to “guess the Jew”, from a list of celebrities who don't “seem” Jewish. The primary purpose is to elicit uneasy laughs—but it also serves as a social lesson. If you can't figure out who's Jewish, hmmm, maybe you shouldn't be stereotyping. Besides, what difference does it make when you find out William Shatner happens to be Jewish?

Also tackling this sensitive subject through humor is Adam Sandler, whose “Chanukah Song” is a classic. In his own goofy way, Sandler lampoons anti-Semitism by listing some Jews who don't “seem” Jewish:

When you feel like the only kid in town without a Christmas tree,

Here's a list of people who are Jewish just like you and me:

David Lee Roth lights the menorah,

So do Kirk Douglas, James Caan and the late Dinah Shore—ah,

Guess who eats together at the Carnegie Deli?

Bowser from Sha Na Na, and Arthur Fonzerelli,

Paul Newman's half Jewish, Goldie Hawn's half, too,

Put them together, what a fine lookin' Jew!

Clever. And if you're proudly anti-Semitic, do you now make a note to boycott the music of Van Halen and the films of Jimmy Caan?

In talking about this with a Jewish friend of mine—I'll resist the temptation to say some of my best friends are Jews—she told me about an Internet site called Jewhoo.com, which provides an exhaustive list of famous Jews, including such “surprises” as Alicia Silverstone, Matthew Broderick, Elisabeth Shue, Robert De Niro (his mother is Jewish), Bob Hoskins, Sean Penn, Dyan Cannon, Gwyneth Paltrow (her father is Jewish), Nell Carter, Rosanna Arquette and Natalie Portman (not her real name).

The site also lists journalists, directors and even cartoon characters who are Jewish, e.g. Krusty the Clown from “The Simpsons”, whose father is Rabbi Krustofsky, voiced by Jackie Mason. (And let's not forget Kyle and his family from “South Park”.)

So why does a Max Rothstein change the family name to Redstone? Why does Winona Horowitz become Winona Ryder?

Maybe they're just following a time-honored media and entertainment tradition...Surely Max Rothstein knew his children would have an easier time in life with the last name of Redstone. It's the way of the world.

Weirdly enough, I've been the target of occasional, albeit relatively minor, anti-Semitism—even though I'm a Roman Catholic of German-Irish heritage. For the first 25 years of my life, nobody ever asked me if I was Jewish—but ever since I've been working in the media, I've often been the recipient of anti-Semitic letters or phone calls.

After all, I've got a newspaper column, and they let me talk on radio and TV. You do that much media, you've got to be a Jew, right?

“Are you Jewish!” a drunken and quite famous media personality once barked at me in an accusatory tone. I have no idea why it was important to him. Or why it's important to so many others...the girl who plays Queen Amidala in “The Phantom Menace” is of considerable interest and speculation.

If you are anti-Semitic, I don't even know how you can watch TV, or go to the movies, or read a newspaper or magazine, what with all those Jews in power. Best if you just unplug the electronic media, close the blinds and sit there in the dark with your closed little mind.

[JR: Where did all those who now proclaim to be “Jews” (dominant in banking, entertainment, media, marketing and government) come from, when the U.S. Census does not show any listing for “Jewish” Americans? When do we celebrate Jewish Occupation Day?]

TELEPHONE HOTLINE 661-822-0202

As an adjunct to CONTACT, the Telephone Hotline keeps you as informed as possible on current events and other important information that needs to get to our subscribers before our publishing date.

The message machine will answer after 2 rings if there are any new messages for that day, and after 4 rings if not. Thus daily callers can hang up after 2 rings and save toll charges if no new message has been recorded. If the Hotline does not answer your call, then there is currently no Hotline message.
